Dear Sir: Can you tell me the reason why Convention have not been good enough to answer my letter concerning the obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river across Polopin's Island? I have taken a good deal of care to sound and measure it, and think it very practicable, and I am sure it is a matter of the utmost moment to the publick, and to this State in particular; and not a moment's time therefore ought to be lost in effecting it. Had Convention taken up the matter immediately, and applied to General Heath for aid, he would have furnished three hundred men at least, and tools to set about it. He could have done it consistent with his instructions from the Commander-in-Chief, and I had prepared the way for it; but fear it is too late now. We have been under marching orders these three days past, and only wait the directions of General Washington. Should they be to move, all is over with the river this season, and I fear forever. Had the men been employed in that business they would not have been taken from it.

General Lee four or five days ago had orders to move with his division across the river. Instead of doing so, he ordered General Heath to march his men through, and he would replace them with so many of his. General Heath could not do this consistent with his instructions, but put his men under marching orders, and wait his Excellency's orders. None have gone over yet, except Scott's brigade, which this morning moved to Haverstraw;—a strange way of cooking business. We have no particular accounts yet from Head-Quarters, but I am apt to believe retreating is yet fashionable. Yours sincerely,

George Clinton.

To John McKesson, Esq., at Fishkill.

---

ORDER TO THE ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL.

Peekskill, November 26th, 1776.

Sir: I am directed by General Heath to request you to furnish him immediately with a list of the number of tents, pots, kettles, &c., which have been delivered from the Quartermaster-General's store to General Scott's brigade and Colonel Tash's regiment of Militia. The Colonels of the several regiments are Lasher, Malcom, Drake, and Humphries. Though probably Colonel Hardenbergh, of Colonel Humphrey's regiment, may have drawn for utensils, as the regiment has been at different posts.

Your humble servant, Israel Keith, A. D. G.

To the Assistant Quartermaster-General at Peekskill.

---

STATE OF THE SICK OF COLONEL BRADLEY'S REGIMENT.

Fishkill, November 26, 1776.

The present state of Colonel Bradley's regiment is as follows: Killed or taken at the reduction of Fort Washington, the Lieutenant-Colonel, Hobby, 4 Captains, 10 Subs, 1 Sergeant-Major, 10 Sergeants, 11 Corporals, 6 Drums and Fifes, 238 privates. Colonel Bradley gone home sick;

Major Dimon at Albany. The last weekly return only eighty-eight present fit for duty. At the evacuation of Fort Lee some of them killed and taken—the exact number not yet known, at this sudden retreat, in a confused manner, without carriages; some of the well ordered to get off the sick to some place of safety, scattered over the country, at different places, and different numbers at a place; the enemy furiously advancing to Hackensack and Paramus. General Putnam and General Greene ordered the sick immediately to be conveyed into the country, to some place of safety, out of the way of the enemy. Accordingly we have collected together the sick of the regiment, together with the well along with them, came to New-Windsor, and by the direction of Colonel Frazier, after the sick being examined by a doctor he provided, came to the Fishkill, directed to Colonel Welch.

Benj'n Mill, Captain.
Dimon Berry, Lieutenant. } Present.

Behind, with part of the sick, Lemuel Benedic, Lieutenant.

N. B. Applying to Colonel Huntington on the way, he advised to get the sick over to this place.

---

REV. JOHN MASON TO ROBERT HARPER.

Peekskill, November 26, 1776.

Dear Sir: I intended to have sent you a concise dissertation upon the subject of our late conversation at Fishkill, but the constant hurry and innumerable other inconveniences of a camp life put my mind, not accustomed to these scenes, into such an unsettled state, that I was seldom in a temper for attempting this necessary service. Being still in the same situation, I can send you only a few loci argumentorum, without illustration or arrangement. These are the sacred rights of conscience and the policy of indulging even such of its scruples as appear whimsical; the solemnity of an oath, and the requisites necessary to make us feel its bounding energy; the exceptionableness of the English mode of making oath, as originating from superstition, as not containing an explicit appeal to Heaven, and as being offensive to the greatest part of the Protestant Church; the visible tendency of the Scot's mode to impress the conscience of the swearer, and to draw from him a discovery of the truth, and the sanction it receives from the concurring practice of God, angels, and the best of men in the ages of inspiration. I might add other considerations, but if these were set in a full light, the evidence against the English, and in favour of the Scot's mode of making oath, would, in my opinion, be demonstrative. I hope the honourable Convention, in settling the Constitution of this State, will at least make the Scot's mode as legal as the English. At the same time I hope they will take steps for stemming the torrent of profanity and vice, that disgraces our country and exposes it to the vengeance of Heaven, especially profane cursing and swearing, and the open violation of the fourth commandment, and that they will declare clergymen of every denomination ineligible for a place of authority in the civil department.

Next week I return to my family near Bound-Creek impressed with the melancholy reflection that my congregation is dispersed; that I have little prospect of being useful, whilst every visible source of supporting a rising family is dried up. I do not, however, despond. My all-sufficient God will provide, and will not, I hope, suffer me to be altogether useless. I am open to his direction, and wait for a call to serve him in the station of a Chaplain for the Army or any other consistent with my office. May God direct you and make you eminently useful in your present station.

I am, dear sir, your obedient servant,

John Mason.

To Robert Harper, Esq., Fishkill.

P. S. Give me leave to beseech you to urge in Convention the absolute necessity of making every preparation for rendering our river unnavigable by ships of war through the Highlands. I believe you will scarce be able to read these hasty, unconnected sentences.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, November 26, 1776.

Dear General: Notwithstanding my orders to the Colonels or commanding officers of the several regiments passed this, to repair to their respective States, and you will please to order them to join his Excellency General Washington with all possible despatch; as also the others that may arrive at Albany from Tyonderoga, sending recruiting officers to the different States they came from.

If the express that brought Mr. Harrison's letter is already returned, you will please to send the enclosed by another.

Pray urge Colonel Lewis to send up more wagons and the bedding for the garrison at Tyonderoga.

Stark's and Patterson's leave this to-day. Sloops should be provided for them.

I am, dear General, sincerely yours, &c., &c., &c.,

Ph. Schuyler.

Hon. General Gates.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, Hartford, November 26th, 1776: Present, his Honour the Governour, the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, Titus Hosmer, Benjamin Huntington, William Hillhouse, Thos. Seymour.

Voted, to accept and establish William Cone for Captain, Nathaniel Sparrow for a Lieutenant, and Gideon Ackley, for an Ensign, for a Company of householders and others, not in the Militia roll, who have formed themselves into a Company in the town of East-Haddam; and his Honour the Governour is desired to commission them accordingly.

Voted, to accept and establish Nathaniel Ackley to be Ensign of a Company of householders and others in East-Haddam; and his Honour the Governour is desired to commission him accordingly.

---

BENJAMIN BIRDSALL TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-Haven, November 26th, 1776.

Gentlemen of the Convention of the State of New-York: I think myself bound in duty to let you know the several transactions past, and the present unhappy situation I am now labouring under, in the unnatural contest between Great Britain and America. In the first of the disputes, for a just cause, I took the part of America, and continued it for a long time, through many difficult and dangerous contests against my friends, relations, and almost all sects and ranks of denominations, in particular in my own County. I was appointed one of the County Committee, and from that a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Second Battalion in our County; and while in the service of the Committee, it took me almost all my time in service with the Committee, and attending the different companies, with many adjournments to choose their officers for the Militia, I being appointed as a sub-committee for that purpose, and continued it until the whole districts were divided and the officers chosen; and was, by the request of the inhabitants, eight or ten days with a petition from the inhabitants to the Convention at the White-Plains, concerning the removing the stock from the island. In all which time I bore my own expenses and received nothing for any of the service. And as for the service of a Colonel, myself and two more officers were appointed, and ordered by the County Committee to secure all the boats on the south side, from Rockaway to Huntingtown line, which is eighteen miles distance. Seven miles I collected all the boats together and secured them by a sentry, one hundred and six in number; and if the other eleven miles distance had been as well secured, by collecting the boats together and a guard kept over them, it would have cut off the communication between our south and the man-of-war, and saved one hundred and odd hay boats that the Tories carried off to the Ministerial fleet, and sold them for their service. Well, when the quarter draft from the Militia upon Long-Island was made out, Suffolk County had the commanding officer of the regiment, Colonel Smith, in his full rank, with full pay. Now, if I know any thing about the arrangement of officers, the next in command ought to have been a Lieutenant-Colonel out of one of the three regiments of King's County, or the first or second in Queen's; but the first Colonel, John Sands, was appointed, and must take the rank and pay of Lieutenant-Colonel, and the Second Major of Colonel Rampson's regiment, in his full rank and pay, and Benjamin Birdsall, a Lieutenant-Colonel, to take rank and pay with the Captains, under command of a Second Major. The arrangements of the officers in Colonel Smith's regiment appears to me as remarkable, almost, as the conduct was bad in the Field Officers in breaking up the regiment the manner in which they did. This appointment of Colonel Smith's regiment was noticed by some certain Field Officers who had been up to Hampstead, and being acquainted with me, I was fixed upon, some few days before the King's troops landed upon Long-Island, to go through with a number of men, on the south side, from Rockaway to Huntingtown, eighteen miles distance, to destroy or secure all the boats, and bring in all the fat cattle in the lines, to General Greene, and after, in his absence, General Sullivan; which I executed without favour or affection, (and among my neighbours and relations,) until the King's troops landed upon Long-Island; and then I was obliged to press six wagons and twelve horses among my nearest neighbours, to carry down the baggage of about two hundred of our troops that was sent for by express by General Sullivan to march within the lines; and as soon as we got down within the lines, I was sent by General Sullivan immediately up about thirty miles, with a small party of men, after seventy-odd fat cattle that we left collected together. I went and brought the cattle in safe, round the north side of the island. Monday night and Tuesday morning before day the engagement began, when I took my post upon the lines, and continued till Thursday afternoon and Friday morning, sun about an hour high. By General Putnam's orders I went over to Long-Island with six boats to fetch a number of horses and other things, until the Regulars came down, fired four shot upon two of the boats a little behind; and from that I brought up the rear of Colonel Smith's regiment, (sick men from New-York without money,) which would have been left had it not been for me; which I hope may be made manifest in your presence, the three field officers and myself face to face before you, which may right many other transactions that ought not to be left in darkness.

I am now joined in Colonel Livingston's regiment, where is about sixty-eight of Colonel Smith's men. I have left a wife and six children upon Long-Island, and all I have is under the command of the King's troops. It is not in my power to relieve them. I set out with heart and hand to risk my life in defence of our cause, and I am still willing to do it. The continuance of the war is promising so fair, that I will now offer myself at your service to engage in it so long as the war may continue. Place me in my rank, give me a chance to execute my conduct, and I doubt not but it may be said there is one man upon Long-Island and in Queen's County has taken up the cause of his country from first, and has continued in it firm and steadfast to the last, for the support and protection of his family, and to the honour and welfare of his country. I have taken up a considerable of time, though with pleasure. I cannot satisfy myself in letting you know enough. I have this to consider: I am here upon the main shore, and at present at a loss. Am I under pay that will support me, or am I not? If I am not under pay, it is time for me to look out. Well, I must go to work and provide me victuals and clothes; well, I shall labour discontented, work every day for low wages; my family is near to me; I am afraid they fare bad; a wife and children is hard to part with; well, if I attempt to go to see them I am taken up, confined, and perhaps sent away or massacred. Well, what station of life am I in? If I am engaged in the cause, my mind is fixed; I know what I have to do, and I know my subsistence; I am content; my mind is bent to promote the cause wherein I am engaged. But if a man's income is extraordinary high or too low, to moderately maintain him, it will too much draw his mind and attention from the business he is engaged in.

I have wrote a long translation which I make bold should came to your knowledge. I write but seldom; excuse me if I have in any part occasioned any insult upon your Honours; it is not what I mean to do; but you are the guardians of our rights, and to you, and you alone, I have to make my address. I wish you well, and that a perfect union among you may be and continue, to the honour and welfare of America, and that you may appoint such men in our State to lead and command, that will ever dispute and defend the American ground, inch by inch, over and over again, until a final defensive war may end, and remain to us all well, and for ever more continue.

From your humble servant, BENJAMIN BIRDSALL.

---

MEMORIAL AND PAROLE OF FREDERICK PHILIPS.

To the honourable the Congress or Committee of Safety of the State of NEW-YORK:

The Memorial of FREDERICK PHILIPS, humbly sheweth:

That on the 9th day of August last, your memorialist was, by order of his Excellency General Washington, taken into custody at his own house, and immediately sent prisoner from thence to New-Rochelle, where he was closely confined under guard for eleven days, and from thence removed to the State of Connecticut. A parole (a copy whereof is hereunto annexed) was presented to him, which he signed, and agreeable thereto has ever since been confined to this town and a small district round it. That your memorialist has thus been deprived of his liberty without any particular matter being alleged against him, or even having an opportunity of offering any thing in his own defence. He therefore cannot help thinking that General Washington must have been induced to take this step in consequence of some misrepresentations.

That your memorialist has already suffered great hardships and inconveniences, and if not permitted to return home before the severity of the winter sets in, must still suffer many more, which, in his advanced stage of life and infirm state of health, he is ill calculated to undergo; but that all the personal inconveniences he has felt, and is likely further to feel if not relieved, are far from making so deep an impression on his mind as the circumstance of being separated from his wife and numerous family, and thereby prevented from superintending his own affairs, particularly the education of his children, whose tender years require the most watchful attention of a parent's care.

Your memorialist therefore prays that your Honours will be pleased to take his case under consideration, and afford him relief, by restoring him again to his liberty; or if that cannot be granted at present, that he may be indulged with leave to reside at his own house, (within such limits as you should think fit to prescribe,) under a parole similar to that which he has already given.

All which is humbly submitted to your Honours' consideration.

FRED. PHILIPS.

Middletown, November 26, 1776.

---

PAROLE.—I, the subscriber, being apprehended and sent by General Washington to the care of his Honour Governour Trumbull, in order to be kept safe, and being ordered by his Honour the Governour to reside within the limits of the town of Middletown, in Connecticut, upon my giving my parole,—I therefore do hereby engage and promise to the Governour and Company of the State of Connecticut, upon the honour, faith, and credit of a gentleman, faithfully to abide within the limits of said town of Middletown, until further orders shall be had from his Honour Governour Trumbull thereon; and in the mean time I engage and promise not to correspond, either directly or indirectly, in any shape whatever, with any person or persons unfriendly to these American States, and will abide such orders and directions as shall be given from time to time by the Committee of Inspection for said town, where I shall reside as aforesaid, as witness my hand. Dated at Hartford, August 28th, 1776.

N. B. Said party is granted to go to Wethersfield and Durham, as occasion may be.

FREDERICK PHILIPS.

---

HENRY WARD TO SPEAKER OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Providence, November 26, 1776.

SIR: By order of the General Assembly I transmit to your Honour the enclosed resolve.

I am also directed by his Honour the Governour to acquaint you that a privateer belonging to this place arrived here this morning, who took a light transport ship, being one of one hundred and thirty sail bound from New-York to Great Britain and the West-Indies, under convoy of three ships of war, and which, without doubt, is the same fleet that we received information was taking on board a body of troops at Staten-Island.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your Honour's most obedient and most humble servant,

HENRY WARD.

Honourable Speaker of the House of Representatives of the State of New-Hampshire.

[Same to Council of Massachusetts.]

---

RHODE-ISLAND ACT FOR APPOINTING A COMMITTEE TO TREAT ABOUT PAPER CURRENCY, 21 NOVEMBER, 1776.

At a General Assembly of the Governour and Company of the State of Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, begun and holden in consequence of warrants issued by his Honour the Governour at East-Greenwich, within and for the State aforesaid, on Thursday, the twenty-first day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six:

Whereas the General Court of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay, by a resolve of the 16th of this instant, November, have appointed a Committee to meet Committees from the General Assemblies of the States of Connecticut, New-Hampshire, and this State, at Providence, on the tenth day of December next, in case such Committees be by the said Assemblies appointed to hold a conference respecting further emissions of Paper Currency on the credit of any of the said States, also upon Treasures necessary for supporting the credit of the publick currencies thereof, &c.:

It is therefore voted and resolved, That the Honourable William Bradford, Esq., Colonel Jonathan Arnold, and Henry Merchant, Esquires, be, and they are hereby, appointed a Committee to meet the said Committee from the State of the Massachusetts-Bay, at the time and place and for the purposes in the aforesaid resolve mentioned: Provided, The States of Connecticut and New-Hampshire shall think proper to appoint Committees for the same purposes; and that the Secretary immediately transmit copies of this Resolve to the States of the Massachusetts-Bay, Connecticut, and New-Hampshire.

A true copy. Witness: HENRY WARD, Secretary.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Providence, November 26th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I think it my duty to transmit to you by express the enclosed copy of a letter I have this evening received from General Lee.

The ease with which the enemy may transport troops to any of the United States ought to excite us to the most vigorous efforts to make the necessary preparations to repel them wherever they may attempt a descent.

This State hath ordered a regiment to be immediately raised, to consist of six men in every hundred upon the alarm list, which will make about six hundred and eighty men; and are endeavouring to render the Militia more useful than it hath yet proved. But from the inability of the State, especially in its present exhausted circumstances, our principal dependence, under God, must be upon the neighbouring States. It gives me great satisfaction, that in case of such an event, we have the most perfect reliance upon the State of the Massachusetts-Bay.

I am, with great esteem and respect, your Honours' most obedient and most humble servant,

NICH'S COOKE.

Honourable General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, November 26, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The bearer, Major Shaw, has at length arrived here, with a few Indians inlisted into the Continental service. We are sorry he has met with no better success in this business; however, the few there are, we conceive, will be of this service if no other, to keep the tribes from whence they came in a state of amity.

The Indians when here were fond of returning back again to their families, but were informed that we had no power to grant them any such leave, but they must attend upon your Excellency; and as they made some objection to travelling so far on foot, a wagon and horses have been purchased for the sole purpose of conveying them along.

In the name and by order of the Council, I have the honour to be your most obedient, humble servant,

JERE. POWELL, President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, November 26, 1776.

Major FRANCIS SHAW:

You are hereby directed immediately to repair to Head-Quarters, at or near New-York, to his Excellency General Washington, with the Indians under your care, and make report to him of your proceedings respecting them, and take his further commands thereupon.

---

WORCESTER (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEES.

At a meeting of the Committee of Safety, &c., from a majority of the Towns in the County of Worcester, held by adjournment at the Court-House in said Worcester, November 26, 1776:

Voted, That the members inform the Convention what were the general sentiments of the inhabitants of their respective towns concerning a resolve of the House of Representatives on the 17th of September last, respecting the formation of a system of Government.

Lancaster, Princeton, Hardwick, Oakham, Rutland, Paxton, Uxbridge, Shrewsbury, Harvard, Southborough, New-Braintree, Winchendon, consented, subject to the approbation or rejection of the people.

Oxford dissented, by reason of unequal representation and brethren absent.

Sutton, Bolton, Sturbridge, Holden, Northbridge, dissented for unequal representation.

Worcester postponed acting on said resolve till the third Monday in December next, to have the voice of their brethren in the Army.

Leicester dissented, presuming the people were excluded the right of approbation or rejection.

Dudley, Charlton, objected to the present House.

Petersham, the same, and against any Council.

Brookfield consented, with right of approbation or rejection, and Government to be established by a future House.

Mendon, not to comply with said resolve.

Spencer, the same, the Court not being in a proper situation.

Templeton, Fitchburg, Douglas, objected to the present Court.

Northborough, Upton, Westborough, Ashburnham, had no resolve, nor acted thereon.

Grafton, did not act thereon.

Westminster, had no resolve, or acted thereon.

Voted, That a system of Government is necessary to be established in this State, so soon as it may be done with safety.

Whereas the honourable the Continental Congress have thought fit, with the consent, and for the safety, peace, and happiness of the American States, to declare them free and independent on the Crown of Great Britain, &c., and have recommended to said States the forming such systems of Government as may be most agreeable to their respective situations and circumstances: And whereas the present House of Representatives, to bring forward this important business, have asked the consent of the people to empower that body, with the Council, to form such a system of Government for this State: The Committee of Safety, &c., from a great majority of the towns in the County of Worcester, convened at the Court-House in said Worcester, on Tuesday, the 26th of November, 1776, for the purpose of reconciling the various sentiments of the inhabitants respecting said request, and preserving unanimity in the County; and also, considering the loose and disjointed state the people of the Massachusetts-Bay have been in for divers years past, in which time many errours have crept in and been supported with the remains of the late constitutions; that the evils are daily increasing, and in all probability will continue till a fixed and permanent form of Government be established: Therefore, to prevent (as much as in themselves) anarchy and confusion, and the undue influence or power of individuals in monopolizing incompatible offices in the hands of particular persons on the one hand, and on the other to strengthen the hands of Government against an unnatural enemy, and lay a permanent foundation for safety, peace, and happiness, for this and succeeding generations; said Convention have come into the following votes, &c., with intention to lay the same before their respective towns for their consideration:

Whereas an act passed in the late General Court, making the representation of the State very unequal and unsafe, this Convention is of opinion that the present General Court is not the most suitable body to form a system of Government for this State; moreover the business being of the greatest importance, will require more time and closer attention than can be spared by a House of Representatives, from the ordinary and daily concerns of the State:

Therefore Voted, That a State Congress, chosen for the sole purpose of forming a Constitution of Government, is (in the opinion of this Convention) more eligible than an House of Representatives.

Voted, That it be recommended to our respective towns that they instruct their Representatives to exert their influence that writs be issued from the General Court, empowering and directing the towns to choose members to form a State Congress, by a mode of representation agreeable to the last charter, and as practised in the year 1775, for the purpose of forming a plan of Government, which, when formed, to be laid before the people for their inspection, approbation, rejection, or amendment, (if any they have to propose,) and when approved by the people, that said Congress solemnly establish the same, issue out writs for convening a legislative body agreeable to said Constitution, and dissolve.

Voted, That the proceedings of this Convention be submitted to the consideration of the other Counties in this State, and request the favour of their sentiments on the subject.

Voted, To publish the foregoing in the Boston, Worcester, and Hartford Newspapers, also in handbills.

By order of the Convention:

JOSEPH HENSHAW, Chairman.

---

SILAS DEANE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Paris, 27th November, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mr. Rogers, is a native of Maryland, whom I fortunately met with in the hotel I some months lodged in. He is in Paris, finishing his education, and by my advice accepted of the office of Aid-de-Camp to Monsieur Du Coudray, and accompanies him out to America. I have received many kindnesses from him, and, confident of his integrity, intrusted him with many things to relate to you viva voce, especially should my despatches fail. He has a general knowledge of the history of my proceedings, and what I have had at times to struggle with. As he speaks French tolerably, he will, I conceive, prove a valuable acquisition at a time when such numbers of foreigners are crowding to enter your service.

I am, wishing him a speedy and safe arrival, with the most profound respect for the honourable Congress, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, 27th November, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In a former letter I mentioned a naval enterprise, which might at first appear romantick, but the more it is considered the less danger I shall be in of being taxed on that score. Admiral Montague lately returned from the Banks, where the fishermen have had a wretched season of it, in consequence of the American privateers. He left two small sloops-of-war there, of fourteen and sixteen guns. In common years they leave six or seven thousand of their labourers or fishermen there, as in a prison, through the winter, employed in taking of seals, repairing of boats, stages, &c.; these are unarmed, and ever dissatisfied to the last degree with their situation. Two frigates arriving early in February, would destroy the fishery, for one if not two years, and obtain an acquisition of a fine body of recruits for your Navy. I have conferred with some persons here on the subject, who highly approve the enterprise; but I submit it to your opinion, after urging despatch in whatever is done or attempted on that subject. The resolution of the Court of Spain, in the case of Captain Lee, at Bilboa, gives every encouragement to adventurers in these seas, where the prizes are valuable, and where you have constantly harbours at hand on the coast of France and Spain to repair to, and refit in, and where constant and certain intelligence can be had of the situation of the British ships of war, as well as of commerce. I need not add on a subject so plain, and at the same time so important, but will only remind you that the Dutch in the space of two or three years after their first revolt from Spain, attacked the Spaniards so successfully and unexpectedly in every quarter of the globe, that the treasures they obtained thereby enabled them to carry on the war. Let me repeat, that if you empower me, or any other person here, you may obtain any number of ships of war on credit from individuals, on paying interest five per cent. until paid. The King will probably have use for his; and besides, to let his go would be the same as a declaration of war, which, in form at least, will for some time be avoided.

I write on different subjects in different letters as they rise in my mind, and leave you to use as you judge best, my Sybil Leaves; and am, gentlemen, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

AQUILA HALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

November 27th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As Captain Bennett Mathews has made application to your Honours for a Captain's place in one of the gondolas now building, and as Captain Alexander Cowin and Mr. Archibald Buchanan has one nearly ready, and wants a Captain to take charge of her; and as I am well acquainted with Captain Mathews, and know him to be a good seaman, and a sober man, beg leave to recommend him as a proper person for such a place, and shall take it as a favour if your Honours should think proper to give him a berth.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

AQUILA HALL.

The honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

---

THOMAS SMYTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Chestertown, November the 27th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have not yet received any salt for curing the beef and pork you gave me orders to purchase; and unless it arrives soon the season will be over before I begin to purchase any of those articles. There is a good deal of pork to sell in this quarter, though the owners ask a very high price. You'll please to hurry over the salt intended for me. Unless it arrives soon it will be needless to attempt any purchases here this fall.

I hope the Defence is safe arrived. I have been uneasy for her safety, as she has exceeded her proposed cruise.

I am, with much respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. SMYTH.

The honourable the Council of Safety, in Annapolis.

---

JAMES MURRAY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Cambridge, November 27th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As I have heretofore had the honour of an appointment from your Board to the command of a battalion of Militia of your State, permit me to return you thanks for that mark of your esteem.

I have filled that station as long as I find it convenient under its present regulations, and must therefore beg leave to resign.

Your obedient, humble servant,

JAMES MURRAY.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

MEMORIAL FROM JOHN SERGEANT.

[Read November 27, 1776: Referred to the Committee to whom was committed the letter from Thomas Cushing, Esq.]:

To the honourable Continental Congress: The Petition and Memorial of JOHN SERGEANT, Missionary to the Mohekunnuk Tribe of INDIANS at STOCKBRIDGE, humbly sheweth:

That this tribe has been strictly connected with the Six Nations, the Indians in Canada, and more especially with several of the Western nations, for more than a century past, and has been much respected by them.

That far from desiring to remain neuter in the dispute between Great-Britain and America, they have made themselves acquainted with the merits of the controversy, and have taken an active part in our favour, inlisting their young men in our Army, while their counsellors and sachems have carefully sent belts of wampum by their messengers to the Six Nations, to the Canada Indians, and to the Shawanese, on the Ohio, addressing in such terms as they judged would have the greatest tendency to attach them to the interests of the United States. As your petitioner was their missionary, they naturally resorted to him for advice and direction, and held all their councils at his house, which has occasioned an expense to him that was disproportionate to his circumstances; but which, if the honourable Congress should think he ought to bear, he will cheerfully submit to from his earnest desire to contribute his mite to the general cause in which America is engaged. He therefore humbly submits it to your wisdom, whether it would not be for the interest of America to preserve the attachment of an important tribe, which is so well affected towards us, and so extensively connected with the other nations around us, by making provision for his continuance among them as their missionary, as his salary from England is now cut off, and as they believe that the Congress have given them reason to expect it in the speech lately made to them by your Commissioners; and your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

---

THE MEMORIAL OF MR. THOMAS DENEF.

[Read in Congress November 27, 1776: Referred to the Board of War.]

To the honourable the Delegates of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in Congress assembled:

The Memorial of Mr. THOMAS DENEF, humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist is only two days in this country to meet Mr. Romand de l'Isle, whom he finds appointed a Captain of Artillery, and under whom he has served in France, and been since employed in Martinico. He humbly offers his services to the honourable Congress, and desirous of again serving under the command of the said Mr. Romand de l'Isle. Would take it as a particular mark of favour to be appointed his Lieutenant.

All which is humbly submitted to the consideration of the honourable Congress.

THOMAS DENEF.

---

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 27th November, 1776:

Present, William Atlee, Mathias Slough, Lodwick Lowman, Henry Dehuff, Christopher Crawford, John Miller, Adam Reigart. William Atlee in the chair.

It being found difficult to provide Wagons to go with the Prisoners from hence to Elizabeth-Town, agreeable to the directions of the Council of Safety and Board of War, owing to the badness of the roads at this season of the year, the known scarceness and dearness of food for horses in the Jerseys, the Committee, that they may carry the orders received respecting the Prisoners into execution with expedition, as requested, find themselves under the necessity of offering such a price to the farmers as will enable them to undertake the journey; and therefore agree, that for every wagon and four horses and driver which shall go in the service shall be paid thirty shillings per day from Lancaster to Elizabeth-Town, where they are to deliver their loads, and from thence six days shall be allowed to return home.

---

GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Burlington, 27th November, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have directed General Williamson to order all the Militia of the Counties of Bergen, Essex, Morris, Somerset, Middlesex, and Sussex, (having myself ordered that of Hunterdon,) immediately to march and join the Army under your command, and to continue in service for the defence of this State for a time not exceeding six weeks, to be computed from the time of their joining the said Army.

The Legislature of this State has made provision for raising four battalions, of eight companies each, and ninety men, to be inlisted till the first of April, which will be carried into execution with all possible despatch.

I can easily form some idea of the difficulties under which you labour, particularly of one for which the publick can make no allowance, because your prudence and fidelity to the cause will not suffer you to reveal it to the publick, an instance of magnanimity superiour, perhaps, to any that can be shown in battle. But depend upon it, my dear sir, the impartial world will do you ample justice before long. May God support you under that fatigue, both of body and mind, to which you must be constantly exposed.

I am, with sentiments of the greatest respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WIL. LIVINGSTON.

His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. The printed copy is what I issued some days ago to our Colonels, before I knew whether there would be a necessity for their marching.

---

An Act for the raising of four Battalions, consisting each of eight Companies of seventy-six Privates, one Drummer, one Fifer, four Corporals, and four Sergeants, and officered with one Captain, two Lieutenants, and one Ensign.

The men to enter as Volunteers out of the Militia, to have a bounty of six dollars, and be entitled to one pair of shoes and one pair of stockings.

The four Battalions to form one Brigade, under Brigadier-General Williamson, and to continue in service until the 1st day of April next.

The men at liberty to inlist in any of the four Battalions to be raised in this State under the new establishment, and to serve during the war.

---

GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON TO THE SEVERAL COLONELS IN NEW-JERSEY.

Burlington, November, 1776.

SIR: General Howe, after having been presented with the fairest opportunity to come to a general engagement with the brave troops of the United States at the White-Plains, thought proper to decline a battle, and suddenly retreated towards New-York. In his return thither he invested with a numerous army Fort Washington, and by the mere dint of numbers, possessed himself of that garrison with considerable slaughter on his side, reported to be equal to the number of prisoners he took in the fortress. This being the only thing of consequence effected by the British arms during a summer's campaign, (the Americans have had the advantage in almost every skirmish,) the enemy, despairing of conquest, seems determined to plunder; and, reduced to the greatest straits for want of forage and provisions, will, as there is reason to apprehend, endeavour to make an incursion into this State to supply those necessaries. To check their progress, General Washington (whose fame is deservedly above applause) has transported a considerable body of Continental troops to the eastern parts of this State, who, with the assistance of our Militia, will doubtless be able to give them such a reception as their rashness deserves.

As the war in which we are engaged is founded on the principles of self-defence and self-perservation, and to save ourselves and posterity from the most ignominious slavery, and is therefore, on the part of America, the most just and glorious, and warranted by the immutable law of God; as we have pledged our words and honour to support the cause with our lives and fortunes, and have now an opportunity to evince to the world that such assurances were not the inconsiderate effusions of the boasting bravo, but the cool deliberations of the determined hero, now glorying in being called out to manifest his valour and avenge the indignities offered to his injured country; as the eyes of all Europe are fixed on the brave Americans, as a people resolved, at all hazards, to maintain that independence which British justice and British cruelty compelled them to adopt; as we ought not to be unwilling to do for our descendants what our ancesters have done for us, nor can be so base as to surrender, without a struggle, that inestimable jewel, liberty, to a ruffian band of mercenaries, hired for our destruction, which may be so easily preserved by those vigorous efforts, which it is in our power to make:—it is expected that the Militia of New-Jersey will not forfeit, by any unworthy conduct, the favourable sentiments entertained of their prowess; but that, ambitious of emulating the fortitude of their gallant brethren of South-Carolina, who have acquired immortal honour by repelling the enemy's attack on Charlestown, they will show, on this important occasion, a spirit becoming a people disdaining slavery, and ready to risk their lives in the cause of freedom, of virtue, and posterity. In full confidence of not being disappointed in those expectations, you are hereby directed to have the battalion under your command ready to march on the shortest notice.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Newark, November 27, 1776.

Sir: I do myself the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your favours of the 21st and 24th, with their several enclosures. The execution of the resolves has been, and will be, attended to as far as in my power. I have wrote to General Schuyler to send down, as early as possible, the troops in the Northern Department from this and the State of Pennsylvania. The proposition for exchanging Mr. Franklin for General Thompson, I shall submit to General Howe as soon as circumstances will allow me.

I have nothing in particular to advise you of respecting the enemy, more than that they are advancing this way. Part of them have passed the Passaick, and I suppose the main body that they have on this side the North River, would have done the same before now, as they are coming on, had their progress not been retarded by the weather, which has been rainy for several days past. I have scouts and detachments constantly out to harass them and watch their motions, and to gain, if possible, intelligence of their designs.

Colonel Miles, who has been permitted to go to Philadelphia for a few days by General Howe, will deliver you this, and inform you of the distresses of our prisoners, and the necessity of effecting their exchange as far as we have prisoners to give in return. By a letter from the Board of War on the subject of an exchange, they mention that several of the prisoners in our hands have inlisted. It is a measure I think that cannot be justified, though the precedent is furnished on the side of the enemy; nor do I conceive it good in point of policy; but as it has been done, I shall leave it with Congress to order them to be returned or not as they shall judge fit.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Newark, November 27th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I last night received the favour of your letter of the 25th. My former letters were so full and explicit, as to the necessity of your marching as early as possible, that it is unnecessary to add more on that head. I confess I expected you would have been sooner in motion. The force here, when joined by yours, will not be adequate to any great opposition; at present it is weak, and it has been more owing to the badness of the weather that the enemy's progress has been checked, than any resistance we could make. They are now pushing this way; part of 'em have passed the Passaic. Their plan is not entirely unfolded, but I shall not be surprised if Philadelphia should turn out the object of their movement. The distress of the troops for want of clothes I feel much; but what can I do? Having formed an enterprise against Rogers, &c., I wish you may have succeeded.

I am, dear sir, with great esteem, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Lee.

---

COLONEL HARRISON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Newark, November 27th, 1776.

Dear General: The situation of affairs on this side Hudson's river requiring that we should have the assistance of the division under General Lee, his Excellency requests that you will mention to General Scott the expediency of his brigade's continuing in service with you, for fifteen or twenty days more than they first engaged for. The importance of the measure will be obvious to General Scott, and his Excellency is well assured that his exertions will be employed to influence his troops to stay. Many advantages will be derived from it. On the other hand, their departure at this time, when the weather is so favourable to the enemy's plans, may be followed with sundry bad and alarming consequences.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

Robert H. Harrison.

The Honourable Major-General Heath, at Peekskill.

---

GOVERNOUR TRYON TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 27th November, 1776.

My Lord: The enclosed plan of Fort George, [in the city of New-York,] with the works on the lower battery and the intermediate buildings, will exhibit a plat of ground which I esteem, upon a settlement of the present war, would be extremely advisable to be secured as Crown land.

The fort, with proper buildings, might contain the King's arsenal and armory; and when all the buildings and barracks now standing are demolished, a proper esplanade might be marked out for the soldiery, and a handsome range of barracks constructed for as many men as might be thought proper for a standing garrison.

The inhabitants who claim the property in the houses and lots in Pearl street and buildings adjoining, might probably be satisfied out of the Rebel tenements within the city, upon confiscation.

By this arrangement, your Lordship will observe, the soldier would be kept distinct from the citizen, and the commercial interest of the town not in the least injured, as no docks or wharves have ever been built where the line of works border on the East and North River. All the ground within the dotted black line, from Whitehall to the North River, is proposed to be reserved to the Crown for the purposes above-mentioned.

I am, with all possible respect, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient and very humble servant,

Wm. Tryon.

Lord George Germain.

---

GENERAL LEE TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COUNCIL.

Camp Phillipsbourg, 27th November, 1776.

Sir: As the whole fate of America depends on the speedy completion of the new Army, all considerations ought undoubtedly to be postponed to this object. The officers (and indeed it must necessarily be so) are of opinion that nothing impedes the recruiting of the Army so much as the present rage for privateering; that unless this is in some measure checked, it is in vain to expect any success. I would therefore humbly refer to your consideration whether it is not expedient to lay a temporary embargo on privateers until the regiments of each State are completed. Our situation is so delicate and alarming, and the absolute necessity of the Army's being raised without delay so obvious, that you will excuse the liberty I take in proposing the only mode which occurs to me.

I am, with the greatest respect, your most obedient,

Charles Lee.

To the honourable the President of the Council of the State of New-Hampshire.

[The same to the Hon. James Bowdoin, President of the Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay; and to the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of Connecticut State.]

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL SCOTT.

Peekskill, November 27th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I received your favour of yesterday's date late the last evening, and would have wrote you an answer, but had just received despatches from Head-Quarters, and an express being in waiting to go to that place, my time until midnight was taken up in completing my letters.

I now thank you for the intelligence you have given me. As to the report of an attack on yesterday, I rather think it to be without foundation, as the express who came from Head-Quarters heard nothing of it. I have received a signification of his Excellency's approbation of the disposition of my division, and that he never meant that any troops should march from my post.

Our present situation will not allow me to send over any more troops at present, and I imagine that General Lee's division will very soon pass over. I shall order Captain Treadwell over with a field-piece, if the enemy should attempt to advance. You will secure the passages through the mountains, sending a regiment or two to reinforce Colonel Huntington. You will please to inform the inhabitants that every assistance shall be afforded them; and you are desired to prevent any abuses by the destruction of fences or property of any kind.

I wish your application to Convention may answer your expectations. Sad experience has taught me but little is to be expected from those whose time of inlistment is expired.

General Clinton will order two or three of his Light-Horse to attend you for the purpose of carrying expresses, &c.

I am, dear sir, with respect and esteem, your most humble servant,

W. Heath.

General Scott.

---

ORDERS TO CAPTAIN TREADWELL.

Peekskill, November 27th, 1776.

Sir: Upon receipt hereof you are immediately to move over the river, with the three-pounder, and a proper number of men to work it, and join General Scott's brigade, where you will remain until further orders.

I am, sir, your humble servant, W. Heath.

Captain Treadwell.

---

CAPTAIN SACKET TO ROBERT YATES.

Peekskill, 27th November, 1776.

Sir: By desire of Colonel Livingston, I have to inform you that Lieutenant Ebenezer Mott, who was appointed to our regiment, has declined serving. Joshua Drake's resignation, who was appointed Ensign to my company, Colonel Livingston informed me he had reported to you. I desired the Colonel to recommend some other person to you, to supply the place of Mr. Drake, but he told me any person I should think capable would be agreeable to him, and did not doubt a recommendation from me would be sufficient, as it was by his desire. I therefore take the liberty to mention to you Mr. Gilbert Strang, as a very fit person for an officer. His abilities render him capable of making a figure in military life, and I doubt not his exerting himself for his country's good. I should take it a particular favour to have him appointed ensign to my company, for which purpose he now waits upon you.

With due respect, I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Samuel Sacket, Captain 4th Regiment.

---

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT TO GENERAL HEATH.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York,
Fishkill, November the 27th, 1776.

Sir: I have the honour to transmit to you the enclosed resolutions, respecting a party of Colonel Bradley's regiment who lately came to this place. Several of the members have taken the liberty to advise one of the Lieutenants to repair to Peekskill, with such of his men as are fit for duty. I presume he waits for a more formal command.

We have directed a physician here to take care of the sick until your directions are received. This small village is so crowded, that it is badly calculated for a hospital, and we fear the present mode of relieving the sick will be very expensive.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Pierre Van Cortlandt, Vice President.

The Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

In Committee of Safety for the State of New York,
Fishkill, November 27th, 1776.

Whereas, this Convention is informed that about one hundred Soldiers, belonging to Colonel Bradley's regiment, from Connecticut, under the care of Lieutenant , are come to this place, without orders, some of whom are said to be sick; and application being made to this committee to provide a physician for them:

Resolved, That Doctor Graham be authorized to visit and take care of the said sick Soldiers for three days. That a letter be immediately despatched to General Heath, informing him of the above circumstances, and that he will give his directions for disposing of such of the men of the said Regiment now at this place as are in health, and for taking care of the sick.

Extract from the Minutes:

John McKesson, Secretary.

---

GENERAL ST. CLAIR TO GENERAL GATES.

Esopus, November 27th, 1776.

Dear General: Your favour of the 25th I received last night by Mr. Hughes, and immediately sent an express to New-Windsor to stop the Jersey regiments that were gone on to that place, and for which I am setting out this moment. I shall not fail to do every thing in my power to inspirit the troops; but I doubt very much they will not easily be kept together. I hope to get them to General Washington's Army, and if they once come in sight of the enemy they will be satisfied.

A report prevails that there was an action near Hackensack on Thursday last, in which the enemy were worsted, with great loss on both sides. If we have kept our ground, 'twill raise the spirits of the troops.

I wish you an agreeable journey, and am, with the greatest esteem, dear General, your most obedient servant,

Ar. St. Clair.

---

GENERAL GATES TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 6th December, 1776.]

Albany, 27th November, 1776.

Sir: I have the honour to request your Excellency to acquaint Congress that Colonel Wigglesworth returned the 17th instant to Tyonderoga with the flag of truce I sent by him to Isle-au-Noi. He brought the enclosed insolent paper, and three of our prisoners, one an Ensign (Goodlove) of Colonel Dayton's regiment, who was taken upon a scout to Oswego in September last.

Assured, on the information of Colonel Wigglesworth, that the enemy's fleet was disarmed and laid up, and their troops marched into winter quarters, and considering the miserable state of our magazine of provisions, I determined to move the Army by degrees towards Albany, to be ready to be marched thence into winter quarters, or be at hand to succour the southern Army, as occasion might require, having previously, by General Schuyler's orders, sent Brigadier-General St. Clair, with De Haas's and the First and Second Jersey regiments, to Albany. The following eight Continental regiments will be here in a day or two: Bond's, Porter's, Bedel's, Stark's, Poor's, Greaton's, and Patterson's. Vessels are providing for them here to transport them without delay to New-Windsor, and I shall propose to march them to General Washington's Army.

The ten Militia regiments under General Bricket, whose term of inlistment expires next Saturday, will march by the following routes to their respective States: Wingate's and Wyman's, from New-Hampshire, by the new road that leads from the foot of Mount Independence to Number Four; Swift's and Mott's, of Connecticut, go by Skeensborough and Bennington; Brewer's, Willard's, Read's, Wigglesworth's, Wheelock's, and Woodbridge's, march to this town, and go through the Green Woods to their State, provided the exigency of affairs to the southward does not make it unavoidably necessary to request their further service that way. I have that confidence in them to believe that, with the assistance of General Bricket, I shall be able to prevail upon most of them to embark for New-Windsor, provided the river is not closed with ice before they get here. The first of these are but just arrived at Fort George, all the boats on that lake having been hitherto employed in transporting the Continental regiments above-mentioned.

An express I have just received from Tyonderoga, acquaints me that Lake Champlain is closed with ice, as low as Three-Mile Point, so that all is secure in that quarter until the beginning of May.

As I doubt not but Congress will take proper measures to replace the regiments whose term of service expires the 31st December next, and which are now part of the garrison of Tyonderoga. The following are the regiments destined for that service: Wayne's, Wood's, Dayton's, Irwin's, Burrell's, and Whitcomb's. Dayton's is engaged until March; Burrell's till February; and the rest until the last of December. I have fixed Colonel Wayne in the command at Tyonderoga. He is a capable, good officer, and has health and strength fit to encounter the inclemency of that cold inhospitable region.

General Arnold, who is now here, is anxious, after his very long absence, to see his family, and settle his publick accounts. Should the motions of the enemy make his presence necessary below, I know his zeal for the service will outweigh all other considerations, and induce him to take the route that leads to them.

I have this instant received an order from Major-General Schuyler, to embark with the eight Continental regiments above-mentioned for New-Windsor. The vessels are some of them ready, and two regiments will embark this day.

I am, sir, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

—

GENERAL ORDERS—NORTHERN ARMY.

Head-Quarters, November 6, 1776.

(Parole, Franklin.) (Countersign, Lynch.)

The General directs that each regiment and corps cut and fetch their own fire-wood for a few days, till the Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General can collect a sufficient quantity to begin issuing that article in a proper and regular manner. Boats and axes will be furnished to those who need them for that purpose. In the mean time the guard at the wood-yard is to suffer no officer or soldier to take any wood, without producing a written order from the Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General.

Second Lieutenant Nathaniel Donnell is appointed First Lieutenant of the company of Pennsylvania Artillery, vice Lieutenant Willow, resigned.

Second Lieutenant Barr to be Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Donnell, advanced.

Mr. A. Caldwell, Conductor, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Barr, advanced.

James Barr, a soldier of Captain Hayne's company, in Colonel Whitcomb's regiment, tried by the General Court Martial, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Craig is President, on an appeal from a Regimental Court-Martial, for quitting his regiment without a discharge and enlisting in another regiment, is acquitted.

Zebedee Harman, Mate, William Pownall, Boatswain, William Tripp and Nicholas Colbert, Seamen, of the fleet, tried by the same General Court Martial for mutiny, wishing the enemy might come, and saying they would not fight against them on board the vessels, are also found guilty and sentenced—Z. Harman, Mate, to be broken and return to his former regiment, and there do private's duty; Pownall to receive seventy-eight lashes on his bare back and do duty as a private in his former regiment; Tripp and Colbert each to receive seventy-eight lashes on the bare back, and return to their duty on board. The General approves their proceedings, and orders the corporal punishment to be inflicted this afternoon; the criminals to be whipped from vessel to vessel, receiving a part of their punishment on board each.

Field Officer for Ticonderoga to-morrow, Major De Hart. Brigade Major, Ryan.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Lieutenant-Colonel Worthington. Brigade Major, Hunt.

—

Head-Quarters, November 7, 1776.

(Parole, Wilson.) (Countersign, Sherman.)

The General returns his thanks to the officers and soldiers of the First New-Jersey Battalion, who remain with the Army, for the honour and publick spirit they showed in disdaining to follow the infamous example of their Colonel, and the deluded soldiers who followed him yesterday. The General would inform them, that the drums were beat by his order, in derision of the few who had the baseness to quit their post in this time of danger.

Officer of the day for Ticonderoga to-morrow, Major Rhea. Brigade Major, Brown.

Officer of the day on Mount Independence, Major Sherburne. Brigade Major, Walker.

The batteau guard to be increased to-morrow to one subaltern and twenty-one privates. They are to place sentries at the wood-yard as well as the boats.

Head-Quarters, November 8, 1776.

(Parole, Gerry.) (Countersign, Chase.)

The Majors of Brigade will be particularly careful that the weekly returns to-morrow are complete and correct, noting all alterations since the last return, all vacancies, and absences of officers, &c.

The Colonels of Militia will likewise deliver in to the Deputy Adjutant-General at orderly time to-morrow, exact returns of their corps.

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga to-morrow, Major Butler. Brigade Major, Ryan.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Major Cilley. Brigade Major, Howell.

—

Head-Quarters, November 9, 1776.

(Parole, Grafton.) (Countersign, Cumberland.)

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga to-morrow, Major P. Frazier. Brigade-Major, Brown.

Field Officer of the day on Mount Independence, Major Hale. Brigade-Major, Hunt.

The following promotions are ordered to take place in Colonel Poor's Regiment:

Second Lieutenant Nathaniel Mc Clintock, Adjutant, vice Adjutant Parsons, dead. Ensign Colcord, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Parsons, dead. Sergeant J. Meloon, Ensign, vice Lieutenant Colcord, advanced. Second Lieutenant J. Huntoon, First Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Matthews, cashiered. Ensign Robert Pike, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Huntoon, advanced. Sergeant-Major Frost, Ensign, vice Ensign Pike, advanced.

—

Head-Quarters, November 10, 1776.

(Parole, Falmouth.) (Countersign, Norfolk.)

A vein of prodigious fine black flint-stone being discovered upon Mount Independence, the General desires the commanding officers of regiments will make inquiry if there are any old countrymen in any of their corps who understand hammering of gun-flints. Upon such a person or persons being found, he or they are to be sent to the General at Head-Quarters.

The General Court-Martial now sitting are immediately to try the officers and soldiers accused of stealing and killing Mr. Adams's bullocks. Mr. Adams and Mr. Dow, with all other evidences, are to be summoned to attend the court.

Field Officer for Ticonderoga to-morrow, Major Stacey. Brigade Major, Ryan.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Major Loring. Brigade Major, Walker.

—

Head-Quarters, November 11, 1776.

(Parole, Roxbury.) (Countersign, Cambridge.)

The following promotions are ordered to take place in the Second Pennsylvania Battalion, viz:

First Lieutenant Samuel Moore, Captain, vice Captain Craig, promoted. First Lieutenant James Christie, Captain, vice Captain Butler, promoted. Second Lieutenant Ross Currie, First Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Moore, advanced. Second Lieutenant John Craig, First Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Christie, advanced. Second Lieutenant Henry Epple, First Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Chilton, resigned. Ensign James Armstrong, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Currie, advanced. Ensign George Hoffner, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Craig, advanced. Ensign Marshall, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Epple, advanced. Mr. Abner Dunn, Ensign, vice Ensign Armstrong, advanced. Mr. James Otis, Ensign, vice Ensign Hoffner, advanced.

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga, Major Rogers. Brigade Major, Brown.

Field Officer on Mount Independence, Major Moore. Brigade Major, Howell.

—

Head-Quarters, November 12, 1776.

(Parole, Hamilton.) (Countersign, Walker.)

Lieutenant-Colonel White, Captain Patterson, Captain Ross, and Lieutenant Gordon, of Colonel Dayton's regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial held at Albany, whereof Colonel Van Schaack was President, for being concerned in the embezzlement of certain effects belonging to Sir John Johnson, the court, after due examination, were unanimously of opinion that the charge against the prisoners was malicious and groundless, and therefore acquit them with honour. His Excellency General Washington has approved the proceedings of the court-martial, and ordered this testimony of his approbation to be inserted in the general orders of the Northern Army.

No officer whatever of any corps is to recruit from the regiment commanded by Colonel Dayton.

Major Hay, Captain Bush, of the Sixth Pennsylvania Battalion, and Mr. Sickles, of the First Jersey Battalion, are appointed to settle the prices of the goods brought from Canada, that the regiments who received of said goods may be able to settle their accounts and payment of them.

The General Court-Martial of which Lieutenant-Colonel Craig was President, is dissolved.

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga, Colonel Wayne. Brigade Major, Ryan.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Major Sedgwick. Brigade-Major.

—

Head-Quarters, November 13, 1776.

(P. , Warwick.) (Countersign, Bristol.)

The First Battalion of the Pennsylvanians and the First and Second of the Jersey Battalions, to be taken off duty and prepare to embark for Fort George as soon as the batteaus are arrived that will be appointed to carry them over the lake. The commanding officers of regiments are to be answerable for any damage that is done to any of the huts or buildings belonging to their respective corps. The troops that return home should be careful to preserve every thing that can in the least degree be useful to those who remain here.

Those corps which leave the Army are to return in all their ammunition to the Commissary of Artillery.

The guards are to be lessened agreeable to a detail given to the Majors of Brigade this day.

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga, Colonel Wayne. Brigade Major, Brown.

Field Officer on Mount Independence, Major Sumner. Brigade Major, Walker.

—

Head-Quarters, November 14, 1776.

(Parole, Putnam.) (Countersign, York.)

Colonel DeHaas's battalion and the First and Second Jersey Battalions to embark to-morrow morning, at sunrise, for Fort George. The General thanks all the officers and soldiers of those regiments now upon this ground, for their readiness in complying with his request to remain three weeks for the defence and security of this post after their term of service was expired. The General in a particular manner acknowledges the good services of Major DeHart and the officers and soldiers of the First Jersey Regiment, who had the honour and virtue not to follow their Colonel to winter quarters.

Colonel Greaton's, late Colonel Bond's, and Colonel Porter's regiment, to be ready to embark for Fort George to-morrow afternoon, provided there are then a sufficient number of batteaus to transport them over the lake.

Such artificers belonging to any of the corps going into winter quarters as are willing to remain at this post until the barracks, &c., are finished, are to be permitted to do it. Colonel Baldwin, Chief Engineer, will pay and discharge them when business so necessary to the publick is completed.

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga, Colonel Whitcomb; Brigade-Major, Brown.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Colonel Phinney; Brigade Major, Hunt.

—

Head-Quarters, November 15,1776.

(Parole, Littleton.) (Countersign, Thomas.)

Captain Neilson's company of Riflemen is to be joined to and do duty with the Fourth Battalion of Pennsylvanians, commanded by Colonel Wayne.

Colonel Greaton's, late Colonel Bond's, and Colonel Porter's regiments are not to march until further orders.

Colonel Stark's, Poor's, and Reed's regiments, will be ready to march to-morrow morning, at eight o'clock, to the landing at Lake George, where boats are provided to transport them over the lake.

Field Officer of the day to-morrow morning for Ticonderoga, Colonel Woodbridge.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Colonel Wyngate. Brigade Major, Walker.

—

Head-Quarters, November 16, 1776.

(Parole, Chase.) (Countersign, Carroll.)

Any non-commissioned officers or soldiers inlisted from the regiments who are engaged to serve until the last of December, are not to have furloughs before their present term of service is expired; but any who are inlisted from the ten regiments of Militia, whose term of service expires the last day of this month, shall immediately thereupon receive furloughs from the commanding officer of the regiment they engage to serve in for one month from the date of said furlough. This is to be a standing order not to be departed from.

A General Court-Martial, taken from the two brigades on the Ticonderoga side, to sit to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock, at the President's house, for the trial of such prisoners as shall be brought before us. President: Colonel Wood. Members: two Field Officers and ten Captains. An Adjutant and Orderly Sergeants from the two brigades to attend alternately.

Field Officer of the day to-morrow for Ticonderoga, Colonel Dayton; Brigade-Major, Brown.

Field Officer for Mount Independence, Colonel Wyman; Brigade-Major, First Brigade.

After Orders.—James Witherspoon, Esq., is appointed Major of Brigade to Brigadier-General Maxwell, and is to be obeyed as such.

—

Head-Quarters, November 17, 1776.

(Parole, Lynch.) (Countersign, Franklin.)

Colonel Greaton's, late Colonel Bond's, and Colonel Porter's regiments are to march to-morrow morning to Lake George, where boats will be provided for their immediate embarkation.

Captain Joseph Bloomfield is appointed Deputy Judge-Advocate of this Army.

Colonel Wood being unwell, Lieutenant-Colonel White is appointed President of the General Court-Martial in his place.

Field Officer of the day for Ticonderoga, Colonel Woodbridge; Brigade-Major, Ryan.

Field Officer on the Mount, Colonel Swift; Brigade Major, Walker.

—

Head-Quarters, November 18, 1776.

(Parole, The Congress.) (Countersign, Independence.)

The following regiments are to hold themselves in readiness to march and embark at Lake George as soon as boats can be provided for that purpose:

First division: Patterson's, Phinney's and Beadel's.
Second division: Read's and Wigglesworth's.
Third division: Wheelock's and Woodbridge's.
Fourth division: Brewer's and Willard's.
Fifth division: Swift's and Mott's.

The sixth division, consisting of Wingate's and Wyman's, to march by the shortest and best road to the State of New-Hampshire.

Colonel Anthony Wayne will immediately take the command of the remaining regiments, Light Infantry, Artillery, Artificers, &c., which are to compose the garrisons of Ticonderoga and Mount Independence.

Michael Ryan, Esq., is appointed Brigade-Major for the garrisons of Ticonderoga and Mount Independence, and to be obeyed as such.

Colonel Wayne will immediately order Major Persifer Frazier, Captain Thomas Moore, and Captain Bunner, to appraise, on oath, all the articles of clothing in the garrison of Ticonderoga, belonging to the United States, and order the same to be delivered to George Measam, Esq., Commissary-General of Clothing, taking his receipt for the same, which is to be delivered to Colonel Wayne, to be by him sent to the Treasury Office in Philadelphia, pursuant to an order of Congress

The clerks of the different dry goods stores are to attend upon this occasion.

Captain Talbot and Lieutenant Erwin have permission to be absent from the regiment.

WILLIAM EDMISTON TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, November 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I must request you will be so kind as to procure me leave to go to General Howe, on my own private affairs, and I will return at any specified time. I have the more reason to expect this indulgence, as I was not taken in arms, nor acting against the States of America, and more especially as the conduct of the King's Generals, viz: Howe and Carleton, has set so good an example, by suffering Generals Thompson, Sullivan, Waterbury, with numberless other officers, who were all taken in arms, not only to return to their own private affairs, but to remain there until an exchange can take place. These matters considering, I therefore flatter myself you will do every thing in your power to obtain my request; as you are very sensible that my interest is suffering, and that the legislative body of these Colonies cannot, nor do not, mean to levy war against individuals, but against the united body of the British nation.

I have the honour to be, dear sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WILLIAM EDMISTON.

---

HENRY QUACKENBOSS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Albany, November 27th, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of a resolution of the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, bearing date the 9th October last, I have purchased sundry goods agreeable to the enclosed bill of parcels, and shall be glad you favour me with the amount which accompanies the enclosed bill of parcels.

Your order respecting the delivery of said goods shall be punctually observed by your humble servant,

HENRY QUACKENBOSS.

Honourable President of the Convention for the State of New-York.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, November 27, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Colonel Trumbull delivered me your favour of yesterday's date. If the masters of sloops will not freely take down the troops, Colonel Lewis must make use of coercive measures to oblige them, for the service must not suffer through the ill-timed wilfulness of any person whatever.

Five hundred barrels of flour were still left at Fort Edward on the 24th, and I fear very little is gone since, as many of the wagons are come away, and none gone up. If the garrison of Tyonderoga suffer for want of a proper supply, the blame will fall on Colonel Lewis, as it is his business, not mine, to forward provisions.

As my presence is much more required to the northward than anywhere else, I cannot go down at present. As General Chevelier de Fermois will probably be up before I shall set out for Philadelphia, and as you are anxious to go with the troops, you will please to embark with the last of them.

I am, dear General, very sincerely, your most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Honourable General Gates.

---

PROVIDENCE (RHODE-ISLAND) TOWN-MEETING.

At a town-meeting of the town of Providence, legally warned and assembled, on the 27th day of November, A. D. 1776, Colonel Jabez Bowen Moderator.

Whereas the General Assembly at their last session passed an act ordering a regiment of men to be immediately raised for the defence of the State, to consist of six men out of every hundred throughout the State able to bear arms, and directed that town-meetings should be called to carry said act into immediate execution; and this meeting being assembled for this purpose:

It is Voted and Resolved, That this town will immediately raise forty-three men, including officers, being their quota of the said regiment, pursuant to said act of Assembly.

And as an encouragement to the men immediately to inlist into said regiment:

It is Voted and Resolved, That every person who shall inlist himself as a private soldier into the said regiment pursuant to said act of Assembly, shall be allowed twenty dollars as a bounty, and that the Town Treasurer be directed and empowered to hire the sum of two hundred and fifty pounds for this purpose.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Newport, November 27th, 1776.

SIR: I sent an officer with my orders to take up and bring on board the fleet some deserters who inlisted out of the Army, and received their month's pay; and he took up seven at Warwick, and brought as far as the fulling mill, where a number of the inhabitants got together, and took the men away from him. The names of the men taken away are as follows: John Joyce, John Allen, Benjamin Howard, Abel Bennet, George Burgess, Wm. Jafres, and Job Bridge. And the following men have likewise deserted: Benj. Weldale, Joseph Braymour, Arthur King, Deerfy Spraigue, Daniel Fones, Wm. Chadseg, David Retph, and William Jocklyn.

I make no doubt but your Honour will give the necessary orders to have them taken up and sent on board the ships. If you will please to let me know if you will give orders for the above purpose, you will oblige your humble servant.

I send you by Creetman two officers in the service of George the Third, which you will order taken care of as you think fit.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island, at Providence.

---

Narrative of Mr. LAMONT'S Observations during the time he was a prisoner in MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, viz: from the 22*d of* SEPTEMBER till the 21*th of* NOVEMBER last. Mr. LAMONT commanded a ship from GLASGOW.

Upon the 6th of November two Continental men-of-war lay at Newport, Rhode-Island; the one carries thirty-six twelve and eighteen pounders; the other thirty-two nine and twelve pounders, nearly manned, with every thing else on board fit for the sea, which they were to scour of the English frigates. Between that place and Providence, I was told there were upwards of fifty privateers, of different force and burdens, but chiefly small. From Plymouth there are ten small privateers, and a brig called the Independence, of fourteen guns, belonging to the Province.

There sailed from Boston, in the months of October and November, at different times, about forty privateers, amongst which was the ship Zachary Bailey, formerly of London, now the Boston, of twenty-four guns; she sailed about the 1st of November upon her cruise, which was intended betwixt Cape Finisterre and Madeira. She took under her convoy the ship Hope, Lumsdale late master, who was taken with powder and stores for the British Army, and a large brig, both of which were loaded with fish and lumber for the French West-Indies. About this time arrived a sloop and brig, belonging to this Province, from Cape Nichola Mole, with molasses and rum, each of which had a French as well as New-England master on board, with several French officers for the Continental Army; and near this time also arrived a French sloop with warlike stores, and another at Newbury; these were cleared for the Island of St. Peter, as well as the other two.

About the 20th of October the Boston, a thirty gun frigate, came round from Newbury to Boston, to fit out under the command of Captain McNeil; she was navigated by thirty English sailors, whom they impressed for that service only; about one hundred New-Englanders embarked in this ship; the French officers bore some command, and one of their independent companies acted as marines. Soon after, her guns were shipped on board a sloop, and sent round to Newbury, to be put on board another Continental frigate finished there, to carry thirty-six guns, which is daily expected in: she fits out at Boston.

Out of Newbury, Beverly, Salem, and Marblehead, are several privateers upon a cruise, besides the Massachusetts, a Provincial brig of sixteen guns, six-pounders, commanded by a Captain Souter. At these places a great many others are fitting out, viz: at Beverly, the Alfred, formerly of Bristol, to carry twenty guns; at Salem, a brig built for one Campbell, but seized, when launched, as English property; this brig is to carry sixteen six-pounders; with many other small privateers, sloops, and schooners, of eight, ten, and twelve guns. At Boston, a ship, formerly the Britannia, was burnt down to the wale, but now rebuilt, and is to carry thirty guns, which are not all procured; it was said she was to go to France to finish her outfit, and afterwards to cruise in a southern latitude for Indiamen. At this place are also the Isaac, formerly of Liverpool; she is to carry twenty-four guns, which are not yet procured; and the Anna-Bella, formerly of Glasgow, taken with troops; she carries eighteen six-pounders, and was ready for sea the 20th of November, with many other brigs, sloops, and schooners. There were also fitted for a voyage to Virginia and France, the ships formerly Lord Howe and George of Glasgow, the Anna-Maria, Lady Juliana, Picarry, Earl of Errol, and Camden, of London; and two others at Salem. The Julius Cæsar, of London, Captain Uzald, who, though she mounted ten iron guns, showed eighteen wooden ones, and had twenty-seven men, all ready to engage, struck to a force far inferiour without firing one gun; she is now fitting out as a privateer, to carry eighteen or twenty guns.

The Congress, when they issued commissions for privateers, made a law, that persons taken in prizes should have their private adventure restored them. This was observed to a great many taken at first, and still is by Continental and Provincial vessels; but this act was amended by leaving something discretionary to the captors, since which they generally find some way to avoid giving them any thing; and it was resolved in Council, and recommended to the Committees, to send all prisoners into the country, as far from any post road as possible, and there, such as cannot maintain themselves are made to work for their living. Mates of ships taken, and seamen, are not suffered to depart. They say they don't impress them into their service; it is true they don't lay violent hands upon them, and force them on board their vessels of war, but take a more effectual way, which is this: they pay them what wages are said to be due them, in their paper money, on which the poor fellows set no value, but, sailor-like, spend it as fast as possible. When this is gone, they must starve unless they enter on board their privateers, which are always ready to receive them. I don't doubt several enter before it comes to this extremity, but the greater part do not.

There is another six-and-thirty gun frigate building in Piscataqua, the finishing of which was retarded by the want of iron, but they have lately got a small supply from Philadelphia, and some ready manufactured, in the Julius Cæsar, from London. I was told there were also building upon the lakes two frigates to oppose General Carleton in the spring.

I was greatly mortified in attending their Court of Admiralty in Salem, at a trial, where a prize ship was claimed by some people in the country. The counsel for the privateer produced a register taken out in the name of Lane, Son & Fraser, London, in proof of her being British property. The counsel for the claimers affirmed that the register was only a sham one to prevent her being taken by English men-of-war, and that the property still rested in the claimers. The counsel for the privateer demanded to know how any such sham register could be procured, seeing that an oath was always made, that the persons named in the register were the sole owners thereof; to which the counsel for the claimers replied, that he could get the people in England to perjure themselves, or do any thing, for money. After long disputing, the ship was decreed to the claimers, and the cargo to the privateer.

---

WILLIAM TUPPER TO THE MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Machias, November 27, 1776.

Honoured Gentlemen: The Committee of Safety for the County of Cumberland, in Nova-Scotia, have represented to us the extreme difficulties they have laboured under by means of their joining with Captain Eddy's party, and have very importunately requested all possible aid from us and every body able to afford them the least assistance. And though we do not altogether approve of Captain Eddy's going there in so loose a manner, and with so small a party, yet we are disposed to help them so far as we are able, and shall encourage all the men we can spare to go. The inhabitants of that unhappy country, upon the appearance of Captain Eddy were reduced to the shocking dilemma of being either plundered and butchered by their friends, or of incurring the highest displeasure of their own Government; the latter alternative they preferred, and now lie exposed to the rage of an abandoned Administration, of their wicked instrument. They also inform us that they have high expectations from our Court, and that Colonel Shaw will soon arrive to their assistance with a sufficient armament. We earnestly request your Honours, therefore, in your great compassion, to send them speedy relief.

We are, your Honours' very humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

Wm. Tupper, Clerk.

To the Honourable Council and House of Assembly of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

---

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, November 28th, 1776.

Gentlemen: Your favour of 7th August last, covering copy of yours of the 8th July, I received, though the original never came to hand. This letter also enclosed the Declaration of Independency, with instructions to make it known to this and the other Powers of Europe, and I received it the 7th instant, though the vessel that brought it had but thirty-eight days passage from Salem.

This letter was very far from relieving me, as it enclosed what had been circulated through Europe for two months before, and my pretending to inform this Court would be only a matter of form, in consequence of your orders, which were expressed in the style of any common affair. I certainly prefer, and must on all occasions use, simplicity of style as well as manners; but something is due to the dignity of old and powerful States, or, if you please, to their prejudices in favour of long-accustomed form and etiquette. And as the United States of America, by this introduce themselves among the established Powers, and rank with them, it must of course be expected that at the first introduction, or the announcing of it, some mode more formal, or, if I may say, respectful, would have been made use of, than simply two or three lines from the Committee of Congress, in a letter something more apparently authentick, not that either your power or the reality of your letter could be doubted. I mention this as something deserving of serious consideration, whether in your applications here and your powers and instructions of a publick nature, it is not always proper to use a seal? This is a very ancient custom in all publick and even private concerns, of any consequence; further, to keep a proper intercourse with Europe, it is by no means sufficient to write a single letter, and leave it to be forwarded when the Captain of the vessel thinks of it, or has nothing else to do; duplicates of every letter should be lodged in every port, in the hands of faithful and attentive persons, to be forwarded by the first conveyance to any part of Europe. Had this been practised since my leaving America, instead of receiving but two short letters from you, I might have had intelligence every month. Let me urge you, from the danger our affairs have been in of totally miscarrying for want of intelligence, to pay some attention to this in future. As the copy was dated the 8th July, I took occasion to observe that the honourable Congress had taken the earliest opportunity of informing this Court of the declaration of their independency, and that the variety of important affairs before Congress, with the critical situation of the armies in their neighbourhood, and the obstructions of their commerce, had prevented that intelligence which had been wished for, but the present serve to show the early and principal attention of the United States to this Court; and as their independency was now in form declared, the queries I had formerly put in consequence of my first instructions might now be resolved, and I hoped favourably. To this I was answered, unless France, by a publick acknowledgment of your independency, makes war on Great Britain in your favour, what service can such acknowledgment be of to the United States? You are known here; our ports are open and free for your commerce, and your ships are protected in them, and greater indulgences allowed than to any other nations. If France should be obliged to make war on England, it will be much more just and honourable, in the eyes of the world, to make it on some other account; and if made at all, it is the same thing to the United States of America, and in one important view better for them to have it originate from any other cause, as America will be under the less immediate obligation. Further, France has alliances and cannot resolve a question which must perhaps involve her in a war, without previously consulting them; mean time the United States can receive the same succours and assistance from France without, as well as with, such an open acknowledgment, perhaps much more advantageously. To this and such like arguments I had the less to reply, as you informed me that articles for a proposed alliance with France were under consideration, and that I might soon expect them. I was further told that the Swiss Cantons, though in every respect free and independent States for several centuries, had not to this hour been acknowledged as such by any publick act, by any one Power in Europe, except France, and that neither the Revolution in the United Provinces or Portugal, had been attended with any such acknowledgment, though the Powers of Europe in both cases lent their aid. I replied that I could not urge a formal acknowledgment so long as the same ends could be obtained, and without the inconveniences hinted at; besides, as I daily expected further instructions, would reserve myself until their arrival.

The apprehensions of the United States negotiating has done us much damage, and the interview at New-York said to have been between a Commissioner of Congress and the two brothers, however politick the step in America, was made use of to our prejudice in Europe, at this Court in particular, as it has been for some time asserted by Lord Stormont and others, that a negotiation would take place, and as far as this is believed, so far our cause has suffered, and our friends staggered in their resolutions. My opinion is, that the House of Bourbon, in every branch, will be our friends; it is their interest to humble Great Britain.

I am again haunted with Williamson, who certainly has the confidence of some well-meaning people with you, and as certainly betrays it; for he is pimping into every corner of France, to see what is doing, under the pretence of being a zealous American; and every month or six weeks slips back to London with his budget, which he unlades at Lord North's. I dare not have him attacked as a spy, as he would in such case be immediately defended by Lord Stormont, and I might be troubled to prosecute; I can only, therefore, warn you, and all Americans, against him. Yesterday it was roundly affirmed at Versailles that a letter was received in London from Philadelphia, in which it was said I had wrote advising the Congress to negotiate, for that I could obtain no assistance from Europe. You can hardly conceive how dangerous even such reports are, and how prejudicial every step that looks like confirming them.

The importance of America in every point of view appears more and more striking to all Europe, but particularly to this kingdom. Enclosed I send you the size of masts and spars, with the price, which, if it will answer, may be a certain article of remittance, as may other naval stores; but I dare not contract with the Marine, as I have no powers therefor, and am unacquainted with the rate they were usually exported to England. A wide field is opening, as the American commerce is to be free, and I have had many applications from many parts on the subject, though few are disposed to venture until the close of this campaign, which, if it is not decisive against us, our wants will be supplied another season at as cheap a rate as ever, but I trust never more on the old terms of long credit.

I am well-nigh harassed to death with applications of officers to go out for America. Those I have engaged are, I trust, in general, of the best character; but that I should engage, or rather take from the hands of some leading men here, some one or two in a number not so accomplished, cannot be surprising, and may, considering my situation, be pardonable. But I have no suspicion of any such in my department of consequence.

I have been offered troops from Germany on the following general terms: Officers to recruit as for the service of France, and embark for St. Domingo from Dunkirk, and by altering their route land in the American States. The same has been proposed from Switzerland, to which I could give no encouragement, but submit it to your consideration in Congress, whether, if you can establish a credit, as I have before hinted, it would not be well to purchase at Leghorn five or six stout frigates, which might at once transport some companies of Swiss, a quantity of stores, and the whole be defended by the Swiss soldiers on their passage? Or if you prefer Germans, which I really do not, the vessels might go from Dunkirk.

I daily expect important advices from the north, respecting commerce at least, having sent to the King of Prussia, in consequence of a memorial he ordered his agent here to show me, and to propose some queries to me, a state of the North American commerce at large.

I have presented memorial after memorial here, until in my last I think I have exhausted the subject, so far as the present time, having in my last given the history of the controversy, obviated the objections made against us, and pointed out the consequences that must ensue to France and Spain if they permitted the Colonies to be subjugated by their old hereditary enemy. It consists of fifty pages, and was, after being translated, presented to his Majesty and his Ministers, and I was assured was favourably received and considered. I presented it about two weeks since, and whether it has hastened the preparations or not I cannot say. The Ministry were pleased to say that I had placed the whole in the most striking point of view, and they believed with great justice. I could wish to send you copies of these, but I have no assistant except occasionally, and the uncertainty of my situation will not permit my engaging for any thing certain to one who might deserve confidence, and those who are deserving are but few. I would advise in concerns in this and other Kingdoms, to have very little concern with natives of Great Britain, never if to be avoided, but prefer foreigners. It is more safe and more politick. I say foreigners, but all are foreigners alike in one sense—I except Messrs. Delaps, who are, though of Irish extract, born in France, and have their whole connections here.

Bread will be scarce before the next harvest. Flour is now twenty-two to twenty-three livres per cwt., and tobacco is as I have before mentioned. And I promise myself you will not let slip so favourable an opportunity of making remittances to advantage. In expectation of your sending over frigates to convoy your ships, and of your giving some instructions on what I have wrote you of operations in these seas, I design being at Bordeaux in March, when I shall be able to give you the needful directions in any such affair; but at any rate send out a number of blank commissions for privateers to be fitted out in Europe under your flag. The prizes must finally be brought to you for condemnation, and the principal advantage will remain with you.

I have wrote largely, and on many subjects, yet fear I have omitted something. If so, must when I write again recollect, on lesser subjects.

I wish I had here one of the best saddle horses of the American or Rhode-Island breed. A present of that kind would be money well laid out with a certain personage. Other curious American productions at this time would, though trifles in themselves, be of consequence, rightly timed and placed. I mentioned Mr. Rittenhouse's orrery in a former letter, and I think Arnold's collection of insects, &c., &c., but I submit any step of this kind to your mature judgment.

Mons. Du Coudray will be with you by the receipt of this, with stores complete for thirty thousand men. The extraordinary exertions of this gentleman, and his character, entitle him to much from the United States, and I hope the sum I have stipulated with him for, will not be considered extravagant, when you consider it is much less than is given in Europe.

Baron De Kalb I consider as an important acquisition, as are many other of the officers whose characters I may not stay to particularize, but refer you to Baron De Kalb, who speaks English, and to Mr. Rogers, who are generally acquainted with them. As to sea officers, they are not so easily obtained, yet some good ones may be had, and in particular two; one I have already mentioned, the other is quite his equal, with some advantages. He was First Lieutenant of a man-of-war round the world, when Captain Cook sailed that voyage, and has since had a ship, but wants to leave this for other service, where he may make a settlement and establish a family. These two officers would engage a number of younger ones. Should they embark I send herewith the plans of one of them for the burning of ships. I submit it to the honourable Congress, who are sensible of the variety and magnitude of the objects before me, whether it is not of importance to despatch some one of its body to assist me or to take a part in his own immediate direction. I say some one of its body, as it will give dignity—rather support it in a proper manner, when you send persons known to possess your fullest confidence, and the advice and assistance of such a one in Europe would be of service to me, though he were, or I were, occasionally at Madrid or Berlin. Having obtained some knowledge of the language and an acquaintance with those in power here, as well as others, what abilities I have, which are ever devoted to my country, can be employed here to the best advantage at present; but I submit my thoughts to your determinations, and am, with great truth and sincerity,

SILAS DEANE.

—

SUPPLIES OF MASTS AND OTHER TIMBERS FROM THE NORTH, NAMELY:

Masts,

| | |
|---|---|
| Of 29 palms,* at three thousand and thirty-eight livres, | 3,038 00 |
| Of 28 palms, at two thousand eight hundred and ninety-one livres, | 2,891 00 |
| Of 27 palms, at two thousand six hundred and twenty-seven livres, | 2,627 00 |
| Of 26 palms, at two thousand two hundred and forty-four livres, | 2,244 00 |
| Of 25 palms, at nineteen hundred and eleven livres, | 1,911 00 |
| Of 24 palms, at sixteen hundred and seventeen livres, | 1,617 00 |
| Of 23 palms, at thirteen hundred and sixty-three livres, | 1,363 00 |
| Of 22 palms, at eleven hundred and twenty-seven livres, | 1,127 00 |
| Of 21 palms, at nine hundred and thirty-one livres, | 931 00 |
| Of 20 palms, at six hundred and eighty-one livres, | 681 00 |
| Of 19 palms, at five hundred and thirty livres, | 530 00 |
| Of 18 palms, at three hundred and eighty livres, | 380 00 |
| Of 17 palms, at three hundred and thirty-three livres, | 333 00 |
| Of 16 palms, at one hundred and ninety-six livres, | 196 00 |
| Of 15 palms, at one hundred and fifty-two livres, | 152 00 |
| Of 14 palms, at one hundred and twenty-three livres, | 123 00 |
| Of 13 palms, at ninety-three livres, | 93 00 |

Small Masts,

| | |
|---|---|
| Of 12 palms, at seventy-eight livres, | 78 00 |
| Of 11 palms, at sixty-eight livres, | 68 00 |
| Of 10 palms, at fifty-nine livres, | 59 00 |
| Of 9 palms, at forty-nine livres, | 49 00 |
| Of 8 palms, at thirty-nine livres, | 39 00 |
| Of 7 palms, at twenty-nine livres, | 29 00 |

Spars,

| | |
|---|---|
| Of 5 to 6 palms, from forty-four to forty-eight feet, at six livres ten sols, | 6 10 |
| Idem, from thirty to forty feet, at five livres ten sols, | 5 10 |
| Idem, from three to four palms, at four livres, | 4 00 |
| Manches de gastes, at twenty-five sols, | 1 05 |
| Logs squared, from 12 to 18 inches thick, and 18 to 40 feet long, at 40*s.* the solid foot, | 2 00 |
| Side pieces or planks of different lengths and breadths, sought for at Riga, Petersburg, and Wiburg, from 5 to 2 inches thick, exclusively, forty sols the solid foot, | 2 00 |
| Small side-pieces, of 2 inches and under, of required lengths, | 1 16 |
| From Dantzic, Hamburg, and Stetin, thirty-four sols, | 1 14 |
| Planks of 9 feet and upwards by 14 to 16 lines thick, at 34*s.* the solid foot, | 1 14 |
| Planks of less than 9 feet, at 32*s.* the solid foot, | 1 12 |

The munitions which shall be destined for the Mediterranean, and sent to the port of Toulon, shall be paid for at the same price, with ten per cent. advance.

Conditions.

ART. 1ST. The masts, small masts, and spars, shall be obtained from New-England. They shall be well selected and of good dimensions; they shall be sound, well-proportioned, straight, free from large knots and plugs, as far as possible. They shall be stripped of their bark, and shall be as recently felled as it shall be possible to find them. The masts shall be sent of the length prescribed, without being cut or shortened.

ART. 2. The masts shall be three times as many feet long as they are palms thick in diameter at the large end; and the diameter shall be taken at one-sixth part of the proportional length of the mast from the large end, so that a mast 78 feet long, which must have 26 palms diameter, shall be taken and measured at 13 feet from the large end; they will have at the small end two-thirds of the diameter of the large end; thus the masts of 26 palms at the large end will be 17⅓ palms at the small end; and the diameter of the small end shall be taken and measured at three times as many feet from the large end as there shall be palms in thickness; that is to say, for a mast of 26 palms, the diameter of the small end shall be taken at 78 feet from the heel; and so for all the others.

ART. 3. If in the measurement of a mast the small diameter and the length of the mast are not proportionate to the large diameter found at the sixth part of the mast, the said mast shall be received only for the large diameter which shall be found proportionate to the length, and to the small diameter; and the excess of masts in palms in diameter at the small end, and the excess of feet in length shall be paid for according to the rate and the usages of the ports.

ART. 4. In masts of large dimensions, of 22 palms and upwards, the deficit of 5 to 6 feet in the length, and of 1 or 2 palms in the proportion of the diameter of the large to the small end, will not cause any reduction; provided always that in the total of the cargo there are not more than one-third of the large masts deficient in proportion.

ART. 5. The masts which shall be oval at the place where the diameter is taken, shall be measured according to the mean proportion of the largest diameter to the smallest.

ART. 6. Half palms over and above the palm of 13 lines shall be counted as entire palms; and nothing shall be counted under a half palm; so that a mast which shall be 18½ palms and upwards shall be received for 19; and being only 18 palms the small progression shall be observed for the feet according to the length.

ART. 7. It shall not be required to furnish masts of 25 palms and upwards, unless they shall be found of good quality, and if they be furnished exceeding 29 palms, they shall be paid for 350 livres for each palm over.

ART. 8. The masts and other munitions, as well as the ships which shall transport them, shall be exempt from all duties formally due; and all necessary passports shall be issued to this effect.

ART. 9. The masts and other munitions shall be proved, examined, and measured, by proper officers, according to the usage of the Navy, and in the manner prescribed by the regulations; and the said munitions which shall be found to be of good quality in the required proportions shall be received in the magazines and paid for at the above prices.

ART. 10. Those considered inferiour, but which shall be proper to be applied to various useful purposes in the ports, shall be received there with the reduction and at the appraisement which shall be fixed by the officers of the ports, it being well understood that if they be appraised below their value, the furnishers shall be at liberty to take them back and dispose of them as they may think proper.

ART. 11. All defective and absolutely useless munitions shall be rejected.

ART. 12. The four deniers per livre appropriated to the Navy pensioners, shall be chargeable to the furnishers, as well as the fees for receipts and examinations.

—

CONVENTION BETWEEN SILAS DEANE AND VICOMTE DEMAUROY.

Nous soussignés, Charles Louis, Vicomte de Mauroy, Chevalier du Rousseau de Fayol, et de Sonneville, ont l'honneur de proposer leur service au très honorable Congrès des Etats Unis de l'Amerique aux conditions suivante.

*The palm is thirteen lines, making one inch one line.

Le Vicomte de Mauroy, sera fait major général de l'armée aux même appointement, prérogative et honneurs que les officiers Americains du même grade et il aura un supplement de traitement comme etranger, par lequel il s'en rapporte à la discretion des Etats.

Il luy sera fourny avant son depart de France une somme de douze mille livres, argent de France, la moitié à titre de gratification, et l'autre moitié comme une avance sur ces appointements, les dits appointement commançant à courir de ce jour.

Les sieurs Chevalier du Rosseau de Fayal et de Sonneville seront acceptés comme ses aides-de-camp, le premier avec rang de Lieutenant-Colonel, et le second avec le rang de Major, tous deux avec les appointement attribués à ces divers grades, les dits appointement commançant à courir de ce jour.

Il sera fourny à chaqu'un de ses aides-de-camp, avant leur départ, une somme de trois mille, ou au moins de deux mille quatre cent livres, argent de France, pour leur equipement, moitié à titre de gratification, moitié a compte sur leurs appointement.

Dans le cas ou les Etats Americains Unis ne ratifiroient pas en tout point le présent arrangement, que leur faix fut faite avec les Anglois à l'arrivée des susdits, ou que des pretexte possible les contraignient de revenir en France leur retour se fera sans difficulté, et les Etats leurs fourniront la somme necessaire pour la dépence de leur retour en Europe. A ses conditions les susdits dénominés promettent de servir les dits Etats avec tout le zele et la fidelité possible, de reconnoistre l'autorité du très honorable Congrès comme puissance légitime, et de luy obéir ainsy qu'aux chefs par luy commis, en tout ce qui leur sera commandé pour le service, la défence et la conservation de leur païs.

En foy de quoy nous avons signé le present. Fait à Paris, le vingt Novembre, mille sept cent soixante seize.

Vic'te Demauroy,
De Rousseau, Ch. de Fayolle.
De Sonneville.
Silas Deane, Agent for the most honourable the Congress of the United States of North America.

Received of Silas Deane, at Paris, November 26th, sixteen thousand eight hundred livres on account of the above.

Vic'te Demauroy.

—

[translation.]

We, the undersigned, Charles Louis Vicomte de Mauroy, Chevalier du Rousseau de Fayol, and de Sonneville, have the honour to propose their service to the very honourable Congress of the United States of America, on the following conditions:

The Vicomte de Mauroy shall be made Major-General of the Army, with the same pay, prerogatives, and honours, as the American officers of the same rank, and he shall have in addition pay as a foreigner, which he leaves to the discretion of the States.

He shall be furnished before his departure from France with the sum of twelve thousand livres, money of France, one half thereof as a bounty, and the other half as an advance of his pay; the said pay commencing to run from this day.

Messrs. Chevalier du Rosseau de Fayol and de Sonneville shall be accepted as his Aids-de-camp, the former with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and the latter with the rank of Major, both with the pay apportioned to these ranks, the said pay commencing to run from this day.

There shall be furnished to each of his Aids-de-camp, before their departure, the sum of three thousand or, at least two thousand four hundred livres, money of France, for their equipment, one half as bounty the other half on account of their pay.

In case the American United States should not ratify in the whole the present agreement, [or] should they have made peace with the English on the arrival of the aforesaid persons, or should they, from any pretext possible, constrain them to return to France, their return shall be accomplished without difficulty, and the States shall furnish them the money necessary for the expenses of their return to Europe. On these conditions the aforesaid persons promise to serve the said States with all possible zeal and fidelity, to recognize the authority of the most honourable Congress as a power legitimate, and to obey it, as well as the officers by it appointed, in all that shall be ordered to them for the service, defense, and preservation of their country.

In faith whereof we have signed the present. Done at Paris, the twentieth November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six.

Vicomte De Mauroy,
Du Rousseau, Chevalier de Fayolle.
De Sonneville.
Silas Deane, Agent for the most honourable the Congress of the United States of North-America.

Received of Silas Deane, at Paris, November 26th, sixteen thousand eight hundred livres, on account of the above.

Vicomte Demauroy.

—

maryland council of safety to the board of war.

In Council of Safety, Annapolis, November 28th, 1776.

Gentlemen: Your letter of the 19th instant we have received, and in consequence thereof have given directions for marching the prisoners as soon as possible, in order that an exchange may take place. We have likewise ordered the accounts of expenses incurred to be furnished us, and you may depend upon their being transmitted to your Board immediately after we receive it.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants.

On behalf of the Council:

Dan. of S. Thos. Jenifer, President.

The honourable the Continental Board of War, at Philadelphia.

—

thomas sparrow to maryland council of safety.

Cambridge, November 28th, 1776.

Gentlemen: Major Thomas Muse was dead and buried before I reached Cambridge. I delivered the letter (which was directed to him) to the Committee. Captain Joseph Daffen, one of the Committee, has offered to act in that business, if you, gentlemen, should approve of him.

I have a great prospect of success, having had many good men for the service offered. Could do nothing, not having the money, nor knowing, if I had it, what to advance, the last proceedings of Convention not being in this County.

I am, with the greatest respect, your humble servant,

Thos. Sparrow.

The Council of Safety of Maryland.

—

william harrison to maryland council of safety.

Georgetown, Kent County, 28th November, 1776.

Honourable Sir: I had the pleasure before I left our American camp, which was on the 19th instant, to receive a line from you, a favour which I am extremely sorry I could not before this acknowledge. At the time I received it, I could not procure the necessary materials for writing to you, ink and paper being then not to be had on any condition; and since that time I have been endeavouring to get to Annapolis, where I expected to have had the satisfaction of conversing with you on the situation of our Army, &c.; but I have been unexpectedly disappointed on that head, as I have not been able to lay my hands on Captain Veazey's papers, which concern the publick. They made my business to Maryland. They would have made my principal business to Annapolis, could I have received them in time from Veazey's father, who, through mistake, has got them. I wrote for them immediately on coming down, and Colonel Veasey wrote me in return that I should have them as soon as he received them from Apoquimini, where they were with his son's baggage; however, as the time for which I have leave of absence is nearly out, I must hasten back, though with the prospect of returning immediately, when I hope I shall get the papers, and wait on the Council with them.

The occurrences which we experienced before the 9th instant, from the date of my last to you, I make no doubt you have been well informed of; the principal one I need only mention to you, which was the battle at the White-Plains. In this affair, as in too many more of a similar nature, our Generals showed not equal judgment to that of the enemy. We were badly disposed to receive the attack of the enemy's small-arms, and unfortunately much exposed to their artillery, which flanked us so heavily as to render the post tenable but a short time. The matter was ended by a confused and precipitate retreat on our part, with the loss of ninety men killed and wounded, including in the number four officers—Captains Scott and Bracco killed, Lieutenants Waters and Goldsmith wounded. Of the above number forty-six of our regiment. I forgot to say that Colonel Smallwood was wounded slightly.

Since the engagement of the White-Plains, you hear we have been unfortunate enough to lose Fort Washington, a capital stroke against us, in my opinion, as we shall soon find it very difficult to keep up a communication between the Northern and Southern Provinces. Had we been able to hold the fort during the winter, we certainly should have been able to stop the river in such a manner as to be impassable to shipping in the spring. We could also have built other forts on the Jersey side of the river, which would considerably aid and assist the forts we already have; but, alas! we must no longer think of holds and fortresses on the North River.

There are, I hear, various opinions respecting the taking Fort Washington; some think it was too easily surrendered, others say our men behaved well, and that it could not possibly be helped. I have not been where I could hear any thing respecting the order of our men at that place, the only intelligence I have is in a letter from an officer of our corps. He tells me that the greatest part of our men engaged the enemy one mile at least from the fort, at the stockade or rear line, (described in my last to you;) that while they were engaged there a considerable body of the enemy passed over the Spiten Devil, or Harlaem creek, and, by a quick movement, possessed themselves of all the passes between our men at the lines and the fort; the consequence was that they surrendered immediately. There were, I make no doubt, other movements of the enemy to the northward of the fort, as per newspapers, but he mentions to me nothing more. It seems the garrison consisted of upwards of two thousand men. I am surprised, then, that they would leave the fort at any rate. It appears to me to have been rashness to have left it at such a distance as they did. It requires little foresight to know, that as General Howe had his whole armament at hand, he would make a vigourous effort, if any at all; and as he was furnished with conveniences for passing Harlaem creek, was it to be thought that he would confine his attack to one place? However, I am undertaking to judge perhaps without having the truth of things. This I think very certain, that it would have taken five thousand instead of two thousand men to have defended, against General Howe's Army, the lines which it is said our men attempted to defend.

I am now on my way to camp. Where I shall find it God knows! If any thing worth your notice comes within my observation, I shall write you with pleasure.

I had the pleasure of seeing two of the honourable Commissioners from this Province at Philadelphia, Messrs. Hanson and Chamberlaine; but as I had made a resolution before I saw them not to engage again in the service, I had little conversation with them on the subject of appointments. I thank you kindly, sir, for the favourable opinion you have of me, expressed in your last. I wish it may ever be more in my power than it now is to confirm it.

I am, honourable sir, your most obedient servant,

WM. HARRISON.

---

COLONEL WHIPPLE TO MESHECH WEARE.

Philadelphia, 28th November, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have a resolution which Congress wish may be executed as soon as possible. What quantity can be procured in New-Hampshire you are a much better judge of than I can be; but I am sure the Army will dispense with all that can be obtained. I could wish to be informed of the success of the resolution transmitted you some time ago for procuring clothing. I hope every exertion will be used to furnish the soldiers with these necessary articles.

Colonel Bartlett can inform you of the state of the Army when he passed through it; since which, I have no reason to think there has been any alteration for the better with respect to clothing. The disposition that the State that I have the honour to represent has hitherto discovered, leaves me no room to doubt that proper measures will be pursued to effect these purposes, as well as completing her quota of the new Army.

General Howe is on this side Hudson's river with eight or ten thousand. It's thought by some that he intends to march this way; if so, I flatter myself we shall give a good account of him, as proper dispositions are making for his reception.

Accounts from abroad are very favourable, though of such a nature that I am not at liberty to communicate them. We have nothing to do but to keep a sufficient Army in the field to oppose that of the enemy one campaign more, and it's over with them.

I am, with every sentiment of respect, your most obedient servant,

WM. WHIPPLE.

Honourable Meshech Weare, Esq.

P. S. My colleague is now confined with the small-pox, but is on the recovery, and I expect will be out in a very few days.

---

Philadelphia, November 28, 1776.

At eleven o'clock this forenoon, a very large and general town meeting was held in the State-House yard. The members of the General Assembly and the Council of Safety were present, Mr. Rittenhouse, Vice President of the Council, being in the chair. The intelligence which has been received of the probability of General Howe having it in contemplation to invade this State, was laid before the citizens, and they were informed that the Congress requested the Militia of the City, and several of the Counties, and part of the Militia of each of the other Counties, to march into New-Jersey; the people expressed their cheerful approbation of the measure by the most unanimous acclamations of joy ever observed on any occasion, and the Militia are ordered to be reviewed to-morrow, at two o'clock in the afternoon. General Mifflin addressed his fellow-citizens in a spirited, animating, and affectionate address, which was received by them with marks of approbation which showed their esteem for, and confidence in, the General.

---

ADDRESS TO THE ASSOCIATORS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The time is at last come in which the salvation of this country depends upon the exertions of the individuals of this State. The enemy have collected their strength, and are determined, if possible, to spend this winter in Philadelphia. For Heaven's sake let all disputes about frames of Government subside for the present, or we shall be obliged to receive a Government from the sword of a proud and successful enemy. The Congress, the Council of Safety, and the Generals of our Army, call us to arms. The Heights of Charlestown and the Plains of Abraham, made rich with the blood of our countrymen, call us to arms. The honour we have lost by the reduction of Long-Island, New-York, Fort Washington, and Fort Lee, calls us to arms. Let us recollect the many resolutions we have entered into to support our liberties with our lives and fortunes. The eyes of the whole world are upon us. All the freemen that are to exist in the world to the end of time are interested in the controversy; nay, God himself, although for wise and just reasons he delays our deliverance, is not indifferent to the struggle.

For God's sake, then, let us not dishonour our country, human nature, and our God, by a shameful surrender of our liberties. Let us remember that our enemies are now approaching upon that ground on which they can receive no protection from their ships, and on which, too, we have always anticipated success over them. What apology shall we make to our brethren in Massachusetts-Bay, Virginia, and South-Carolina, who have driven the royal banditti from their coasts, if we suffer them to get possession of the vitals of the continent? Such an event would render the name of a Pennsylvanian as infamous as that of an ancient Cappadocian. But there is more than infamy in the evils which now threaten us. Jails, dungeons, racks, and gibbets, are now before us. No age, sex, or character, can protect us from the insolence and rage of our wicked internal and bloody-minded external enemies. Arise, then, my dear countrymen, and let us "play the man for the cities of our God." Our houses and our fields, the inheritance of our ancestors, or the dear-bought fruits of our own industry, call us to the field. Our wives, our children, our aged fathers and mothers, call us to the field. They now look up to us with weeping eyes for safety, and expect salvation only from the instrumentality of our swords. Come on, my dear countrymen! let us go forth in the strength of the God of armies to meet our enemies; and let the words of the inspired prophet sound perpetually in our ears, "Cursed is he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully, and keepeth back his sword from blood."

HAMPDEN.

---

COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Burlington, New-Jersey, November 28th, 1776.

SIR: Near three months ago, I laid before the Committee of honourable Congress appointed to form and regulate the new Army, my intentions of relinquishing the office of Adjutant-General at the close of the campaign. The reasons I then assigned, and which I should intrude upon your time to repeat, appeared to me so weighty that I conceived it a duty to the publick and myself to represent them in the earliest and fullest manner.

As the season will not admit of further military operations, (unless the enemy should attempt an incursion into this Province to harass and distress us, in which case I shall most cheerfully devote myself to any further service,) I beg leave to enclose the commission, with the highest sense and warmest acknowledgments of the favour done me.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOS. REED.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM WOODBRIDGE, NEW-JERSEY, DATED NOVEMBER 28TH, 1776.

Having intelligence last evening that the enemy had advanced near the town of Second River, (four miles from Newark,) we were ordered to be under arms early this morning. About seven o'clock the retreat began, and after a very tedious march we arrived at this place at sunset. We hear the enemy were on their march towards the town soon after we left it; their numbers we do not exactly know. We are informed that there are seventeen regiments and thirty-six pieces of artillery; but with all this force they make their approaches very cautiously, and seem willing to wait till we evacuate a place rather than to drive us from it.

We march for Brunswick to-morrow, where we shall wait for the assistance we expect from this Province and Pennsylvania. If we receive none, or but a little, the horrours of war will, I fear, be transported nearer home than is consistent with the safety of America.

---

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabeth-Town, 28th November, 1776.

SIR: Having understood that it is resolved by Congress to form a regiment, consisting of four battalions, to be furnished with officers of approved merit, I beg leave to recommend for preferment Lieutenants Nathaniel Burwell and Mathew Smith, of the First Virginia Regiment. They are of respectable families, have served ever since troops were raised in Virginia, and both as officers and gentlemen have on all occasions merited the regard of their superiours in command.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most humble servant,

HUGH MERCER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

---

GENERAL MERCER TO LORD STIRLING.

MY LORD: Major Ross attended a British officer to their advanced guard, which is at the Six-Mile Run from Brunswick. About fifteen fires were at that place. The conversation tended to show the intention of the enemy is to proceed immediately to Philadelphia. General Howe joined the Army to-day. By two women who escaped from the enemy and came here to-day, it should seem that General Howe had a considerable reinforcement with him, and they talked of marching from Bound-Brook, as well as from Brunswick, by different roads. Mr. Reid, who conducted the British prisoners to General Howe, brought the officer with him, whom Mr. Ross conducted back to his camp.

I have the honour to be, your Lordship's obedient servant,

H. MERCER.

To the Right Honourable the Earl of Stirling, Brigadier-General.

---

Christian Hutman left Brunswick yesterday afternoon, two o'clock. Was there but a few minutes. Saw the town was full of British troops. The Hessians he did not see. Was told they were in rear.

William Hunt was also there; went up one street and come down another; saw every house was full of red-coats; cannot tell their numbers; was informed that the Hessians were at Bound-Brook. Saw no cannon, but understood they were on other side the river.

Nicholas Hooper was also there at the same time, and says much the same.

Betty Miller, wife of Jeremiah Miller, of Colonel Miles's Second Battalion, says she left Brunswick yesterday afternoon; the British troops in Brunswick; Hessians on the other side—in the whole they said some six, eight, and others ten thousand; that General Howe arrived at Brunswick the day before yesterday; that they expected six thousand more to arrive yesterday evening; that they had intelligence of General Lee's approach with eighteen thousand; that a part of General Howe's Army was gone somewhere, in order to surround us; that they all talk that they will quarter this winter at Philadelphia; that General Clinton is sailed, some say to Carolina, others to Philadelphia; that their cannon are partly at the barracks and part on the other side of the bridge.

Abram Sleight was in Brunswick yesterday, till three o'clock, p. m. Numbers reported about eight thousand at and near that place; more between that and Elizabeth-town, to the amount of twenty thousand; that General Howe was arrived; that the Rebels should not quarter this winter at Princetown or Trentown, for that they would drive them out; that sixty days would be allowed for them to make their submission. He saw two field-pieces on the George Road; had no opportunity of seeing what was about the barracks.

Major Hendrickson says a ship loaded with rum, wine, sugar, and other stores belonging to the enemy, is drove on shore at Deel Beach, near Shrewsbury; that Colonel Hendrickson with his Militia have taken care of her and the cargo.

---

EPHRAIM BLAINE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Kittaning, 28th November, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I find provisions will be very expensive to lay in at this post, the roads are so exceeding bad to it, and many waters in the way, will occasion great difficulty in laying in a sufficient quantity of flour, and there will be an additional expense of slaughter-houses, repair in the store house, stuff to hew out, and barrels to make. I have purchased a quantity of beef and pork, and am daily engaging flour.

The cash I received is far short from being sufficient to procure a stock of beef, pork, and flour. Have drawn an order in favour of Captain John Boyd, upon your Honour, for four thousand dollars, which please pay him; which sum he is to forward me by first opportunity; and am, honoured sir, with due respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

EPH. BLAINE.

To John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

---

GOVERNOUR TRYON TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 28th November, 1776.

MY LORD: It is with the most singular satisfaction I have the honour herewith to transmit to your Lordship copies of the Addresses of the City and County of New-York, and also of King's and Queen's County, to the King's Commissioners, testifying their wishes to return under the King's peace and Government.

The dissolution of the Committee of Suffolk County and the Committees of the several townships in the same, with the revocation of all their proceedings and orders under the Congress, was effected at my particular recommendation to them for that purpose; copies of all which are herewith transmitted. When the pressure of the Rebel Army is removed from this Province, I have the strongest expectations that a like spirit will be adopted through the Colony.

On my reviewing, the 4th instant, while with the Army, such part of the Militia of Westchester County as was within the protection of the King's Army, and which amounted to upwards of five hundred men, I found them impressed with a loyal disposition to Government; but from the vicinity of the Rebels, and the uncertainty of the Royal Army giving them continued support, I could not think it expedient at that time to invite them to take up arms, or to petition the King's Commissioners, as either measure at that period would on the removal of the troops bring down instant destruction to their properties and families; indeed, what with the conflagrations of the Rebels, and the marauding of both armies, the inhabitants of that country are reduced to great distress.

I must beg leave to offer my congratulations to your Lordship on the repeated and honourable achievements of the British and Hessian troops. Another campaign, pressed with equal vigour, I trust will restore tranquillity and union to the British empire.

I am, with all possible respect, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient and very humble servant,

Wm. Tryon.

Lord George Germain.

---

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 28th November, 1776.

My Lord: I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatches of 11th, 12th, and 21st June, four different letters of 22d August, enclosing one to Sir Guy Carleton of the same date, and his Majesty's warrant of 22d June, respecting appointments to vacancies in this Army; I received them by the Perseus and Diamond, on the 22d and 23d of October.

Truly sensible of the honour which the King's approbation reflects upon my past conduct, I humbly beg your Lordship may express to his Majesty the fullness of my gratitude for so flattering a mark of Royal condescension, with the strongest assurances that I shall invariably continue to exert my utmost abilities in the execution of his Majesty's commands, and for the interests of the service with which I am intrusted.

Give me leave at the same time to return my unfeigned thanks for your Lordship's extreme politeness in communicating this most acceptable testimony of his Majesty's pleasure.

I am, &c., W. Howe.

---

INTERCEPTED LETTER TO SIR GREY COOPER.

New-York, October 28, 1776.

Sir: On the 25th of September I had the honour of writing you, merely from a sense of gratitude, as I am sensible I cannot communicate any thing material from here, and know you receive intelligence from the first and best source. Willing, however, to contribute what I can, I would say that I have lately enjoyed an opportunity of seeing and examining many refugees from divers parts of this extended Continent of America. From these persons, their letters and documents, it appears that the subjects of the new States in the United Colonies are already so harassed, fleeced, and pillaged, by an unremitting extortion and oppression, that they are weary and sick of independency. From arms being only trusted in the hands of desperadoes and their followers, and other circumstances of bondage, they are so completely controlled as not to be capable of exerting any effort of vigour whatever. That the new levies (eighty-eight battalions) cannot be raised, even with the aid of compulsion; that the Congress paper bills are debased beyond the rate of a hundred; that for some time past the Congress of Philadelphia has been very thin, and that the arch , Dr. Franklin, had lately eloped under a cloak of Plenipotentiary to Versailles. From these accounts it seems as if the tyranny now established was so perfect or violent that if left to itself must overturn. Consternation has seized the sea-coast on the approach of General Burgoyne, which strikes the sea-coast with terrour. Against all these and other circumstances of advantage, many obstacles and difficulties of various kinds and degrees are to be placed, which stubborn, perverse, and desperate leaders will not fail to improve on every occasion. Nevertheless, upon a deliberate view and consideration of the circumstances of America, in its latitude and longitude of real distress and misery without and within, I cannot hesitate in saying she must yield or be conquered. When the prospect from military action (which is fair and promising) opens, so as some judgment may be formed, I shall think seriously of returning to London, and of waiting upon you.

With the greatest respect.

Sir Grey Cooper.

P. S. The reduction of Fort Washington, and progress of the troops in New-Jersey with the Earl of Cornwallis, has struck Pennsylvania with terrour, and the guilty are fleeing from Philadelphia; of which you will receive ample and certain intelligence from others. I have received letters from Mr. Stewart, Collector of New-London, September 24th and 30th; and since, I have heard of him by an exchanged prisoner of distinction, who saw him well a fortnight ago. He leads a hermit's life, determined to wait the event; but never omits serving the captives in that Colony with discretion, where the shadow of liberty is not. Dr. Franklin is now said to have embarked from Chester, on the river Delaware, in a vessel of force, but poorly manned, destined for Martinico. He is said to have realized Congress paper into gold, amounting to thirty thousand pounds sterling. Congress paper has greatly sunk in nominal value since the King's troops entered Jersey, and in many places of that Province remote from the Army is not current at any rate. Samuel and John Adams, of Boston, are said to have embarked also from thence to Martinico.

---

GENERAL SCOTT TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp at Haverstraw, 28th November, 1776.

My dear General: I think it my duty to convey to you every intelligence in my power. In doing this I gratify my own zeal in the glorious cause, and hope to commend myself to that opinion which I shall always wish to hold in the estimate of a gentleman so well attached to it as you are.

Since I had the honour of writing to you I received an answer to the letter I wrote to Colonel Huntington, to know of him whether he wanted any aid from me, informing me that he wanted none at present, as he expected Colonel Tyler back to him in a day or two.

Upon information that about ten tons of lead were lying at Topan, I wrote to Major Clark, desiring him to convey it by land to one Smith's, on the south side of Verdridger Hook, to which place I have sent flat-bottomed boats with a guard to bring it to the ferry, just above where I am quartered. I think I saw the boats returning this day a little before dinner; but, to my surprise, I have not yet had a report from the officer of the party of his doings. I intend to send it to you unless you should direct otherwise. I therefore beg your immediate direction.

I have received an answer to my despatches to our Convention, which have produced resolves, that however the merit of my brigade may be, do me personally infinitely more honour than my poor deserts could entitle me to. They have also thanked me for my offer to serve one month longer without pay, and have sent me fifteen hundred pounds, as a gratuity to my brigade, to induce them to continue so long in the service. Upon receipt of them I paraded the brigade, published the resolves of Convention, and endeavoured by a speech to animate them to close with the terms; and to remove all suspicions that my arguments proceeded from motives of interest, I closed all by offering my month's pay as a small pittance in addition to the gratuity given by the Convention to non-commissioned officers and soldiers. The brigade having been drawn up in a circle, I left them for near an hour to free consultation, and in the interim ordered them liquor, not to intoxicate, but merely to refresh them. On my return to the centre of the circle I addressed myself to the officers, with an exhortation they would set an example to the men, and concluded with requesting those of them who chose to imitate my example to join me in the centre. Upon this, to my great satisfaction, all the field-officers but one, who pleaded indisposition, and all the other commissioned officers, except seven, joined me. I then directed the officers in their proper departments to furnish me with returns of the non-commissioned officers and privates willing to continue in the service, at twelve o'clock to-morrow. The result of the whole shall not fail to communicate.

But, sir, should the whole brigade continue, what shall I be enabled to do with them? They will be of little service unless reinforced by the Army or Militia. I am sorry that neither the promised field-piece and three Light-Horsemen are come. I want both much. Be pleased to inform General Lee, without loss of time, that Cooper, whom he sent with despatches to General Washington, has, with the despatches, fallen into the hands of the enemy, and is now confined in Hackinsack. The inhabitants of the lower parts of this County and the upper parts of Bergen County, are going to the enemy daily in great numbers—some carting for them, some going into their service, and others waiting on them for protections. The Tories insolent and numerous. These evils I might in a great measure prevent could I be reinforced.

We have accounts tolerably certain that the body of the enemy from Hackinsack downwards are about eight thousand; that the van of those have passed over Pesaick, at a fording place above Acquacknock Bridge; that our Army is increasing, lies posted on the west of Newark, near the mountains; that another body of the enemy have landed at Amboy, eight thousand; that Lord Stirling and General Beall's brigades had not yet joined General Washington, but that two southern brigades had joined him. I have constantly kept horsemen riding down towards the enemy to procure me intelligence; but I much want the Light-Horsemen for this purpose. Rest assured, sir, that I shall seek the best information and make it my business to give you repeated accounts of every thing material in my power to collect.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

Honourable Major-General Heath.

P. S. I this moment received the enclosed, and have therefore sent a written to Colonel Tyler, at Tapan, to remain there with his regiment till he receives my further directions.

---

GENERAL SCOTT TO THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Camp at Haverstraw, November 28, 1776.

SIR: On receipt of your packet, with the fifteen hundred pounds, which I have not yet had time to count, I paraded the brigade, formed them into a circle, read the resolves of the honourable Committee of Safety to them, pressed them upon the men with some arguments of my own, concluded with an offer to add the small pittance of my month's pay to the generous gratuity of the Committee. I then left them some time for free deliberation; and on my return to them, with a design to pique the honour of my officers, pressed them, by a short exhortation, to set an example to the non-commissioned officers and privates, in discovering their resolution to continue with me in the service, by joining in the centre. The scheme had so far the desired effect, that all the field-officers but one, who pleaded indisposition, and all the other commissioned officers but five, and two Adjutants, joined me. I then charged them in their different departments to exert themselves with the non-commissioned officers and privates, and to make returns to me by twelve o'clock to-morrow. What the event will be I know not; but I shall communicate it without the loss of a moment to you. In the mean time I shall withhold the money till I receive your directions; I therefore do not send a receipt for it, because perhaps I shall be so mortified as to be obliged to return it with my own hands.

But supposing my whole brigade should resolve to continue in the service, how little will it avail! I have to guard the shore, and the passes through the mountains; and have not men to spare for scouts. I want Light-Horsemen to bring me intelligence of the enemy, and more troops to send to engage the enemy's Light-Horse and curb or punish the numerous Tories in the southern confines of this County and the northern parts of Bergen County. Those villains are extremely insolent; insult our few friends, assist our enemy in their rapine, cart for the enemy's Army, inlist in their service, and go to them for protection; in short, I must have immediate assistance from the Army or Militia, or I shall have nothing to comfort me but the sense of an ardent desire to do my country effectual service.

For further news, I have none encouraging. I have this afternoon had the uncomfortable information, that an express, sent by General Lee with despatches to General Washington, has fallen into the hands of the enemy with his dispatches, and is now in confinement. It is reported, and with grounds that induce my belief, that the enemy between Hackensack and Acquacknock, consisting of about eight thousand, are now in motion to the southward, and have passed a fording place above Acquacknock Bridge. It is also said that they have landed eight thousand at Amboy. General Washington is on the west side of Newark, near the mountains; his troops increased by a junction of Militia and two brigades from the southward; but that Lord Stirling and General Beall have not yet joined them. We have a good many friends still remaining at Tupan. They should by all means be protected. I expect daily to hear of something decisive. Be assured, sir, I shall not fail to convey every material intelligence.

Permit me, sir, to conclude with the most unfeigned acknowledgments to the honourable Committee for the unmerited honour they have done me by their resolves, which I shall be studious by my future conduct to make some better title; and to assure you, sir, that I am, with all imaginable respect, their and your most obedient servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

The Honourable Chairman Committee of Safety.

---

COLONEL A. HAWKES HAY TO JOHN MCKESSON.

Haverstraw, November 28th, 1776.

SIR: I make bold to send you the enclosed account, and beg you will get it passed, and receive the money for me, and send it down by the first safe opportunity. I have often sent it to Fishkill, but never could find Mr. Sands there. The people who trusted Captain Keas with the necessaries are very impatient for their money, and I do assure you that it hurts the cause very much, and I cannot now purchase any provisions for the Army that pass through this place without advancing the cash. I must also trouble you to add for Captain Keirs what sum the Committee of Safety may think proper to allow him for his great trouble.

I am, dear sir, your very humble servant,

A. HAWKES HAY.

To John McKesson, Esq.

---

Haverstraw, 15 June, 1776.

Captain Karce to John Staples, debtor, on account of Congress—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 2 hhds. Rum, 222 gallons, at 9s. 4d. | £103 | 12 0 |
| 67¾ gallons of Spirits, at 12s. | 40 | 13 0 |
| 5¾ do. of Gin, at 13s. | 3 | 14 9 |
| 7½ do. of Rum, of Ja Waldron, at 9s. 4s. | 3 | 10 0 |
| | 151 | 9 9 |
| To 1 case of Gin | 4 | 10 0 |
| | £155 | 19 9 |

---

DR. The Convention of the State of New-York, to the Precinct of Haverstraw, in Orange County, for sundries supplied the Guards while the ships of war lay in the Bay of Haverstraw and Nyack, from the 12th July to the 21st August, 1776—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| To Samuel Yeomans, for 2 Sheep, at 18s. | £1 | 16 | 0 |
| To John Vander Voord, for 4 do., at 19s. | 3 | 16 | 0 |
| To Benjamin Benson, for 2 do., at 18s. | 1 | 16 | 0 |
| To Joseph D. Clark, for 1 do., at 18s. | 0 | 18 | 0 |
| To John Coe, for half ton of Hay | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| To Michael Vander Voord, for half ton do. | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| To the Widow Noyelles, for half ton do. | 1 | 16 | 0 |
| | £14 | 2 | 0 |
| To Potatoes | 0 | 2 | 6 |
| To 11¾ lbs. Butter, at 1s. | 0 | 11 | 9 |
| To 19 bushels and 1 peck Indian Corn, at 4s. | 3 | 17 | 0 |
| To 6 bushels and 1 peck of Oats, at 2s. 9d. | 0 | 17 | 0 |
| To 3 bushels Bran, at 1s. 4d. | 0 | 4 | 0 |
| To 3 bushels of Salt of the Widow Noyelles, at 10s. | 1 | 10 | 0 |
| To Abraham Fea, for 162½ lbs. Mutton, at 3½d. | 2 | 6 | 7 |
| To Theodorus Sneedeker, 81½ lbs. Mutton, at 3½d. | 1 | 6 | 9 |
| | 10 | 15 | 8½ |

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| To Susanna Knapp, for 40 meals Victuals, at 9*d*.. | 1 | 10 | 0 | | |
| To do., for 13 lbs. Mutton, at 3½*d*.... | 0 | 3 | 11½ | | |
| To do., for 12 lbs. Bread, at 2*d*..... | 0 | 2 | 0 | | |
| To do., for 1 Sheep, for Lieutenant Van Houten's party..... | 0 | 18 | 0 | | |
| To Boarding 5 of the Light-Horsemen 3 days.... | 1 | 13 | 9 | | |
| To Pasturing their horses, at 9*d*..... | 0 | 11 | 3 | | |
| To 136 meals of Victuals for Colonel Hay's party.. | 5 | 2 | 0 | | |
| To 121 lbs. Mutton, at 3½ of Susanna Knapp.... | 1 | 15 | 3½ | | |
| To 57 lbs. of Bread of do. do., at 2*d*..... | 0 | 9 | 6 | | |
| To James De Clark, 294 lbs. Beef, Hide and Tallow, at 4½..... | 5 | 10 | 3 | | |
| | | | | 17 | 16 0 |
| To do., 322 lbs. do. do., at 4½ | 6 | 0 | 9 | | |
| To do., for 346 lbs. do. do., at 4½ | 6 | 9 | 9 | | |
| To do., for 58 lbs. Beef, at 4*d*..... | 0 | 19 | 4 | | |
| To do., for 124 lbs. Beef, at 4*d*..... | 2 | 1 | 4 | | |
| To Jeremiah Williams, for 179 lbs. Beef, at 3*d*..... | 2 | 4 | 9 | | |
| To Daniel Voorhis, for sundries for Captain Woodhull's company..... | 1 | 12 | 0 | | |
| To do., for do. for Captain Isaac Smith's company..... | 3 | 18 | 10 | | |
| To Harmanus Tallman, for Captain Woodhull's company..... | 1 | 14 | 0 | | |
| To Daniel Vorhis, for Captain Lent's company.... | 2 | 15 | 4 | | |
| To do., for Captain Bell's company..... | 4 | 4 | 3 | | |
| To James De Clark, for Boarding men of Johnson's company..... | 0 | 12 | 6 | | |
| To Harmanus Tallman, for Colonel Hay's party.. | 5 | 8 | 8 | | |
| | | | | 30 | 1 6 |
| To Daniel Vorhis, for 10 cwt. Wheat Flour, 19s.. | | | | 9 | 10 0 |
| To do., for Lead and sundries..... | 2 | 12 | 8 | | |
| To the Widow Noyelles, for Pasture for Captain Woodhull's horses..... | 1 | 10 | 0 | | |
| To do., for Captain Selleny's company's horses..... | 1 | 17 | 6 | | |
| To Paulus Vander Voord, for a load of baggage to Nyack..... | 0 | 16 | 0 | | |
| To hiring of Horses of the Widow Noyelles..... | 1 | 12 | 0 | | |
| To G. W. Kiers, for Horse hire..... | 0 | 10 | 0 | | |
| To Cartage of Pork..... | 0 | 4 | 0 | | |
| To John Staples' account for Liquors..... | 155 | 19 | 9 | | |
| To the Widow Noyelles, for 10 lbs. Candles..... | 0 | 10 | 0 | | |
| | | | | 165 | 11 11 |
| To do., 14 lbs. Tallow, at 9*d*..... | 0 | 10 | 6 | | |
| To 31 lbs. Bacon, at 7*d*., of do..... | 0 | 18 | 1 | | |
| To 14 lbs. Lead, of do., at 6*d*..... | 3 | 10 | 0 | | |
| To 14 lbs. of do., G. W. Kiers..... | 0 | 7 | 0 | | |
| To 34 lbs. of Powder, of do., at 6s..... | 10 | 4 | 0 | | |
| To Johannes Tallman, for 60 lbs. Mutton, 3½..... | 0 | 19 | 8 | | |
| To do., for 16 Dinners for Captain Moffett's company..... | 0 | 16 | 0 | | |
| To John Allison, for the sick people..... | 6 | 14 | 6 | | |
| To charges on Burying..... | 0 | 16 | 0 | | |
| | | | | 24 | 15 9 |
| To 3 Boards, for a bread tray..... | 0 | 3 | 6 | | |
| To 1,000 Brick, at 30s., for oven ..... | 1 | 10 | 0 | | |
| To 6 bushels Lime, at 2s..... | 0 | 12 | 0 | | |
| To paid Thomas Greffferts, mason..... | 0 | 15 | 0 | | |
| To John Wilson, for 18 lbs. Mutton, at 3½..... | 0 | 5 | 3 | | |
| To Doctor Osborn, as per bill..... | 3 | 18 | 3 | | |
| To Roleff Van Houten, for 34 cwt. Wheat Flour, at 17s..... | 28 | 18 | 0 | | |
| To do., for 5½ cwt. Rye Meal, at 12s. | 3 | 3 | 0 | | |
| To do., for 2 cwt. fine Flour, at 19s.. | 1 | 18 | 0 | | |
| To do., for baking the Flour..... | 9 | 0 | 0 | | |
| | | | | 50 | 3 0 |
| To do., for carting Flour and Bread.. | 3 | 0 | 0 | | |
| To John Ryder, for 17 Dinners for Captain Moffett's company..... | 0 | 17 | 0 | | |
| To George Bainson, for 13 Dinners for do..... | 0 | 13 | 0 | | |
| To Colonel Sherwood, for 3,340 lbs. Beef..... | 55 | 13 | 4 | | |
| To Philip Servant's account for Victuals..... | 3 | 2 | 6 | | |
| To John Vanderbilt, 719 lbs. Wheat Bread, at 2½*d*. | 6 | 14 | 8 | | |
| 173 lbs. Rye ..... at 2*d*.. | 1 | 8 | 10 | | |
| To Roleff Van Houten's account for Boarding .. | 2 | 6 | 10 | | |
| To Abraham Pew, for 64 lbs. Bread..... | 0 | 9 | 0 | | |
| To Resolved Van Houten, for 3½ lbs. Butter, at 1*s*. | 0 | 3 | 6 | | |
| To Roleff Van Houten, for , at 4*d*..... | 2 | 11 | 8 | | |
| To do., for 13½ lbs. Butter, at 9*d*.. | 0 | 10 | 1½ | | |
| | | | | 77 | 9 5½ |
| To James De Clark, for a horse Express..... | 0 | 6 | 0 | | |
| To 66 lbs. Beef, of Colonel Hay, at 4*d*..... | 1 | 2 | 0 | | |
| To Arian Underdonk, for Bread and Butter for Colonel Hay's party..... | 0 | 14 | 0 | | |
| To Jacob Polhemus..... | 0 | 8 | 8 | | |
| To John Waldron, accounts..... | 3 | 7 | 0 | | |
| To Sarah Underdonk..... | 1 | 7 | 0 | | |
| To Michell Cornelson, 50½ lbs. Mutton, at 3½*d*.. | 0 | 14 | 8¾ | | |
| To 8 cwt. of Wheat Flour, of Cornelius Van Horn, at 18s..... | 7 | 4 | 0 | | |
| | | | | 15 | 3 4¾ |
| | | | | £423 | 8 8¾ |
| To Paulus Vander Voord, omitted..... | | | | 14 | 0 |

This is to certify that the above Account is just, and that I have in my possession vouchers for every article in this Account.

A. Hawkes Hay, Commanding Officer.

---

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fort Montgomery, November 28th, 1776.

Dear Sir: Colonel Snyder's regiment has left this garrison to-day, and Colonel Humphrey's regiment I expect will leave us next Sunday, as their times will then be out that they engaged for; and all the men that will be left at both Fort Constitution and this place will be but five companies of my regiment, and several of them say their time is out.

We are much in want of about thirty pounds of twenty-penny nails for to cover part of the barrack on the south side of the creek. If there is any of them in store at Peekskill, please to order that quantity to Major Pawling, who has promised me to send them up here.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

James Clinton, Brigadier-General.

P. S. I expected to have seen you here before this time.

---

FREDERICK ROORBACK TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-Windsor, November 28th, 1776.

Gentlemen: My request is to know whether the honourable house of Convention will let the house of Mr. Barclay's. I should be glad to know the conditions by the bearer, my son, as I want a place. I would have done myself the honour to have waited on the honourable House in person, but being indisposed, hope you will not take it ill I take this method. If the condition suits, I shall send an immediate answer.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your very humble servant,

Frederick Roorback.

---

MRS. MARGARET INGLIS TO JAMES DUANE.

New-Windsor, November 28, 1776.

Sir: The humanity you so eminently possess, I plead in excuse for the favour I am about to ask; which is to request you will exert your good offices, as far as you can with propriety, to procure leave from the honourable the Provincial Congress of this State for me to return to New-York, with my family and furniture, from which I have been absent near fourteen months, which has reduced me to great difficulty and distress, with three helpless infants, besides the pain of being separated from my husband in those distressing times when we have need of every friend to comfort us.

I am encouraged to make this application, as I have lately heard that several ladies that were in Jersey have been permitted to return to New-York with their families and furniture, particularly Mrs. Antell and Mrs. Barrow, which makes me flatter myself that I shall have the same indulgence, of which I, and I am confident Mr. Inglis will ever retain a grateful sense. Should leave be granted, of which I have the strongest hopes, I must also beg the permission of a sloop to carry myself and family from New-Windsor, under such restrictions as the honourable Congress shall approve.

As the winter is advancing fast, I must beg you will let me have your answer as soon as possible.

Please present my best compliments to Mrs. Duane.

I am, sir, with great respect, your very humble servant,

Margaret Inglis.

To the Honourable James Duane, Esq., at Fishkill.

---

WILLIAM MILLER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Harrison's Precinct, November ye 28th, 1776.

Gentlemen: As you verbally ordered me to get the records of this our County, and them secure in some safe place, I found at my return that John Thomas, Jr., Esq., had been so thoughtful of the security of the County, as to apply to General Wister for a guard, and go down to New-Rochel and take the records into his care, and give his receipt. Now, gentlemen, the records is at Mr. Thomas's, and at his risk, as he had no order. He, as well as I, desires some written order may be sent from your body respecting the said records, and you may depend it will be complied with.

A matter has lately turned up which I am a stranger to, and desire your advice; which is, in what manner an executor is to be qualified to take an estate into their hands and dispose of it, as there is no court of probates in this State; and as I have been appointed an executor to an estate which has much need of settling, would desire your directions as soon as conveniently you could give it; and in so doing you will do justice to the estate, and greatly oblige, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

Wm. Miller.

To Colonel Pierre V. Cortlandt, President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT TO GENERAL HEATH.

November 28th, 1776.

SIR: The Convention of this State, impressed with a sense of your politeness and attention to them, have directed me, in the strongest terms, to return their thanks for your several favours, the intelligence communicated, the anxiety you express for the better security of this State, and the success of our common cause, by obstructing Hudson's river, and preserving the important communication between the Eastern and Southern Governments. We have taken into consideration the plan suggested by Brigadier-General Clinton for obstructing the river opposite to Pollepel's Island; and conceiving it to be practicable, we are determined, with the permission of Congress, to proceed with the utmost vigour to carry it into effect. The assistance you so cheerfully and obligingly promise will be very essential, and we shall, from time to time, avail ourselves of it.

With great pleasure we received the resolution of his Excellency General Washington.

The necessity of securing the passes in the Highlands is so urgent, and the motions and designs of the enemy so mysterious and uncertain, that it would have given us infinite pain had the troops in your division been withdrawn. We entertain no doubt of his Excellency General Washington's attention to this great object; and trust that, at all events, a force will be maintained, both at the lower and the oblong pass, as well as on the western shore, sufficient to baffle any enterprise which may be formed by the enemy.

Nothing shall be wanting on our part to prevail on the troops of this State to continue in the service for one month longer. We have, upon this subject, agreed to the resolutions which we have the honour to transmit; and we are not without strong hopes that they will have their effect.

Many of our Militia have been furnished with arms and accoutrements belonging to the State; for the return of which the respective Colonels are answerable. To prevent the loss or embezzlement of those essential articles, which it is out of our power to replace, the utmost care is necessary. We have, therefore, enjoined Lieutenant-Colonel Hardenburg, by this opportunity, to deliver all the publick arms in the hands of his battalion at this place on the dismission of the Militia, and to communicate this injunction to such of the other Field Officers as are chargeable with publick arms; and we entreat you to give all the weight to this direction which may be proper to secure its efficacy.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant. By order of the Committee of Safety,

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Vice President.

The Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, Hartford, November 28th, 1776,— Present, His Honour the Governour, His Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliph't Dyer, William Williams, Titus Hosmer, Benjamin Huntington, and Thomas Seymour, Esqs.

Agreed, on permitting Mr. Irving, a prisoner, taken by Commodore Hopkins, to go to Congress, on his parole, for his exchange or liberty to return to his family on parole, as the Congress shall see cause to order.

Voted, to assign the case of Justus Miles, a person inimical to the United States of America, to Mr. Chapman Grant, of East-Windsor, who is hereby authorized to keep and govern the said Miles, in such a manner as he thinks prudent, till further orders from the General Assembly or this Council.

Voted, to replace 4 cwt. and 3 quarters of Cannon Powder to Mr. Titus Hosmer, due to him for Powder supplied by him for use of the Lead Mines in Middletown, and to give an order on the Treasurer for the same. (Order drawn and delivered Mr. Hosmer, November 28th, 1776.)

Voted, that the list of Officers now appointed to fill up the vacancies of Field Officers, Captains, and Subalterns, occasioned by refusal of like officers in the eight Battalions to be raised in this State, for Continental service, be drawn off, fairly transcribed, and transmitted to Major-General Spencer, and that the Generals from this State, in the service, be desired and empowered, with the assistance of the Colonels, to arrange said Officers into Regiments and Companies; and in case any of said Officers shall decline to accept the offices to which they are appointed, that the General Officers aforesaid be desired to recommend other persons duly qualified to supply their places, and transmit such arrangement and recommendations to his Honour the Governour; and that they fill and deliver proper Commissions to such Officers as have accepted, or shall accept, the offices to which they have been or are appointed.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

Providence, November 28, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of yesterday by express. Am sorry to find by the contents that any of your officers have been obstructed in their duty in picking up the deserters from the ships. Shall use my endeavours to give all due assistance to the officers of the fleet in picking up their deserters. If the offenders can be found out, shall endeavour that they be brought to justice.

From, sir, your most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To Commodore Hopkins, in Newport.

---

COLONEL FRANCIS TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Dorchester, November y^e^ 28th, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: Permit me to request of you the favour of returning the honourable Board my most hearty thanks for the honour done me in appointing me Colonel of one of the new regiments now raising for the defence of these States. It will ever be my greatest solicitude to honor the station in which they are pleased to place me, and hope I may be so happy as to do real service to my country.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, your most humble servant,

EBEN'R FRANCIS.

To the Honourable the President of the Council Board.

---

GENTLEMEN: I am under the disagreeable necessity of informing the honourable Board that the non-commissioned officers and privates in the regiment which I have the honour to command will not consent to continue in the present service upon the encouragement offered by the honourable House of this State.

I am, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

EBEN'R FRANCIS, Colonel.

To the honourable the Council of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay.

Dorchester, November 28th, 1776.

N. B. It appears by the report of the officers that the men will tarry upon the same encouragement given the Militia, and will not tarry any thing short of that.

---

JOHN ADAMS TO JAMES WARREN.

Braintree, November 28th, 1776.

SIR: I had this moment, between two and three o'clock, the honour of your letter of this day's date, requiring my attendance on the honourable House of Representatives. Some particular circumstances render it inconvenient for me to set off this afternoon, but to-morrow morning I will do myself the honour of waiting on the honourable House.

Mean time I am your humble servant,

JOHN ADAMS.

Honourable James Warren, Esq.

---

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, 29th November, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The several letters you will receive with this will give you some idea of the situation I have been in for some months past, though after all must refer you to Mr. Rogers to be particular upon some subjects. I should never have completed what I have but for the generous, the indefatigable and spirited exertions of Monsieur Beaumarchais, to whom the United States are on every account greatly indebted; more so than to any other person on this side the water. He is greatly in advance of stores, clothing, and the like, and therefore am confident you will make him the earliest and most ample remittances. He wrote you by

Mr. McCrery, and will write you again by this conveyance. A nephew of his, a young gentleman of family, education, and spirit, makes a voyage to America with Monsieur Du Coudray, and is ambitious of serving his first campaigns in your service. I recommend him, therefore, to your particular patronage and protection, as well on account of the great merits of his uncle as on that of his being a youth of spirit and genius; and just entering the world in a foreign country, he needs protection and advice paternal to countenance and encourage him. This I have confidently assured his uncle he will constantly receive from you, and am happy in knowing you will fulfill my engagements on that score, and in whatever department you may fix him, that you will recommend him to the patronage of some person on whom you may rely to act at once the friendly and the paternal part.

A particular account of the stores shipped may probably not be ready by this vessel, but may go by the next or some succeeding one, as several will sail after this on the same errand.

Let me by every letter urge on you the sending in season a quantity of tobacco, of rice, and of flour or wheat. These are articles which cannot fail, and are capital ones; lesser are not to be admitted. Twenty thousand hogsheads of tobacco are this instant wanted in France, besides the demand in other kingdoms.

I think Monsieur Beaumarchais wrote you under the firm of Hortalez & Co.; if so you will address him in the same style; but as I must probably remain here until the arrival of these articles, I can regulate that on the arrival of your despatches.

I have advised these stores being shipped for some of the New-England ports northeast of New-Port first, and if failing of making a port there to stand for the Capes of Delaware, or for Charleston, South-Carolina, as the most likely route to avoid interception. I cannot, in a letter, do full justice to Monsieur Beaumarchais, for his great address and assiduity in our cause. I can only say he appears to have undertaken it on great and liberal principles, and has in the pursuit made it his own. His interest and influence, which are great, have been exerted to the utmost in the cause of the United States, and I hope the consequences will equal his wishes.

I have the honour to be, &c., SILAS DEANE.

My most respectful compliments wait on the honourable Congress. You will doubtless oblige Mrs. Trist by telling her, her husband and Captain Fowler were in good health the middle of last month.

---

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, 29th November, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have recommended several officers to your service, but none with greater pleasure, scarce any one with so much confidence of his answering great and valuable purposes, as the bearer, Colonel Conway, a native of Ireland, advanced in this service by his merit. His views are, of establishing himself and his growing family in America. Consequently he becomes our countryman, and engages on the most certain principles. This gentleman has seen much service. His principal department has been that of training and disciplining troops and preparing for action; and from his abilities, as well as from his long experience, is considered as one of the most skillful disciplinarians in France. Such an officer must be, I conceive, of very great service; and his generously confiding in the honourable Congress for such rank and appointments as they shall confer, entitles him still more to our immediate attention and notice. I have assured him of the most favourable reception, and am confident he will receive the same.

Colonel Conway brings with him some young officers of his own training, which know well the English language, and may be of immediate service in the same important department of discipline.

As Colonel Conway has been long in service, (though in prime of life,) I am confident you would not think it right he should rank under those who have served under him in this kingdom, which will not be the case if he fill the place of an Adjutant or Brigadier-General, for which I am well assured he is every way well qualified.

I have advanced him, as per receipt enclosed, towards his expenses and appointments or wages, and told him he may rely on your granting him one of the above ranks in the Continental forces. Should the honourable Congress have a new body of troops to form in any part of the Continent, this gentleman might take the direction of them to very great advantage, and may, I presume, be equally so in the station you may appoint him in the main Army.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

Williamsburg, November 29, 1776.

On Tuesday last the remains of our late amiable and beloved fellow-citizen, the Hon. Peyton Randolph, Esquire, were conveyed in a hearse to the College Chapel, attended by the worshipful brotherhood of Freemasons, both Houses of Assembly, a number of other gentlemen, and the inhabitants of this city. The body was received from the hearse by the gentlemen of the House of Delegates, who conveyed it to the family vault in the Chapel, after which an excellent oration was pronounced from the pulpit by the Rev. Thomas Davis, in honour of the deceased, and recommending it to the respectable audience to imitate his virtues. The oration being ended, the body was deposited in the vault, when every spectator payed their last tribute of tears to the memory of their departed and much-honoured friend; may we add, to whom he was a father, an able counsellor, and one of their firmest patriots. The remains of this worthy man were brought thither from Philadelphia by Edmund Randolph, Esq., at the earnest request of his uncle's afflicted and inconsolable widow.

---

Williamsburg, November 29, 1776.

On Tuesday night an express arrived from Colonel Christian, with despatches to his Excellency, advising of his having returned with his Army from the Cherokee country, after concluding a treaty of peace with Oucanastota and three other chiefs, on the part of the whole nation, in their capital of Chote, the particulars of which are as follows, viz: All captives in their towns, white or black, to be delivered up; those belonging to Virginia by the 10th of February, at the Long-Island; and such as were taken from the States of South-Carolina and Georgia, at or near Keowee, as soon as possible; besides the horses, cattle, and property of every kind they have taken from the inhabitants, or their value, to be ascertained by Commissioners on both sides, who are to meet for that purpose at the Long-Island. No white people to be entertained by the Cherokees, after they are demanded to be delivered up to the States of America. All matters relating to lands, boundaries, trade, agents, and people residing amongst the Cherokees, alliances, marching armies through their country, and building forts therein, to be wholly submitted to the Virginia State, with any number of their own chiefs, not exceeding five, to determine. War to cease, and peace, harmony, and brotherly affection to take place. For the faithful performance of these articles, they agreed to deliver up fifteen hostages, such as Colonel Christian should demand of them; to be exchanged yearly for such others as the Virginia State may require to be put into their hands.

Colonel Christian thought proper, before he set out on his return home, to make an example of three towns under the influence of a chief called the Dragon Canoe, who was the principal cause of the war; and one other, called Chilhowcy, where a white prisoner of ours was lately burnt. These he utterly destroyed, but did no other damage to the Indians, whose perfidious conduct, on many occasions, might have justified a more rigorous chastisement. It is to be hoped, however, that the Colonel's humane treatment of the savages, when he had it so much in his power to distress them, will render abortive any future machinations of such incendiaries as Stuart and Cameron to stir them up to war against the United States.

Captain Guest arrived in town this week from Colonel Christian's camp, who, we are glad to learn, has fully made appear, by sundry depositions, his inviolable attachment to his country during his residence with the Indians.

---

Williamsburg, November 29, 1776.

Three salt vessels, and a French brig from Cape François, with a valuable cargo of woolens, linens, and other dry goods, besides salt, are safely arrived at Hampton. The Captain of the French vessel informs, that there are four frigates of his nation cruising off the Cape to protect the American trade; that upwards of twenty more French vessels, with large cargoes of goods, may be daily expected at different American ports; that a large fleet of men-of-war was shortly expected at the Cape, under the Duke De Chartres; and that the French Islands were full of troops, all which arrangements render it highly probable that we may soon hear some important news from that quarter.

---

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, November 29th, 1776.

SIRS: I have this day, I believe, paid all the bills and advanced all the money for both Captains and hands for the schooner Friendship and the Ninety-Two. The sums are great indeed. They all promise they will sail to-morrow. I wish it may be the case. I have paid Captain Kelty thirty pounds, I believe for his own use and by his advice, and the scarcity of hands. I have got the mate of the prize snow to ship himself mate of the Ninety-Two, with one of the hands, and paid him the wages due, which was £32 13*s.* 4*d.* The bills brought in against every vessel, with the sailors' and captains' wages, is so very high that it really scares me every day the sums paid, and I see no way to shun it, nor do I see any chance of it growing better.

I have beef enough salted, and have the promise of pork; but what to do I know not, for the people have got to know that I have some salt which is yours, and they are threatening to put the laws down, and declare they will have the salt out. I never saw the people so desperate. I can hardly pass the streets; and you may as well reason with the wind. I cannot purchase a bushel for no person, for if any man gets more than two bushels they suspect him of making some unjust use of it. If they say much more about the salt, I will send some of it down to you. I propose to-morrow to send some more into every butcher's hand. I really wish the people had salt. Captain Martin will be loaded about Wednesday, I think; but if he sails Monday or Tuesday week, I shall think myself well off, for it is impossible to make the despatch I could wish.

I am desired to hold myself in readiness to march for New-York or Jerseys Monday or Tuesday next. If I must march, I really don't know what will become of your business, and a number of other people's; but, as my country calls, I suppose I ought to obey. As to getting more salt for you, I declare it is out of my power; nor do I think there is a man in town that would choose to put twenty bushels of salt in a warehouse at this time and it be known. I shall do my best for you.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

Honourable Council of Safety at Annapolis.

---

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, November 29, 1776.

SIRS: Enclosed you have a charge, which I have paid for two hands on board the Ninety-Two. Please let the Captain have it.

Captain Rogers I have paid for Mikell Mackenier £1 4*s.* 10*d.* Please to charge him with it, and you will oblige me. He was taken by the constable. From

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

I paid for Mikell Mackenier, 28th of the month, £2 12*s.*, for his board. So that I have paid for him in the whole, £3 16*s.* 10*d.*

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

---

CAPTAIN CONWAY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

November 29th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take the pleasure to acquaint you of my safe arrival from Martinico, in the sloop Molly. Having a long passage, twenty-two days, up as high as Point Look-Out, as the winds keep to the north so long, I knew I could not get up the Bay soon. I thought I had better send the letters by express, having one of my sailors acquainted with the road. I shall lose no time and make the best of my way with the sloop up to Annapolis. Seed nothing to interrupt my passage at the Capes.

From your obedient and humble servant,

THOMAS CONWAY.

The honourable Council of Safety in Annapolis, Maryland.

---

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN WARNER.

November 29, 1776.

SIR: We have sent Doctor Smith to take charge of the wounded men belonging to the Fly; and since the vessel is no longer in condition for prosecuting her cruise, you are to return with her into this port as quickly as you can, bringing with you the wounded men and the Surgeon now sent to take care of them.

We are, sir, your very humble servants.

Captain Elisha Warner.

---

PETITION OF MAJOR LAMB TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read 29 November, 1776.]

To the honourable Congress of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

GENTLEMEN: Although the enemy have, contrary to my expectations, liberated me from the dreary horrours of a prison, and suffered me to return to my family and friends, I am still subject to their power and controul, liable to be called upon by them to surrender myself a prisoner whenever they please, and restrained by the sacred ties of honour from drawing my sword again in defence of my country till exchanged for some officer of theirs. Extremely anxious to be relieved from this truly painful and disagreeable situation, I waited on General Washington immediately after my arrival from Quebeck, earnestly soliciting his interest with your Honours for that purpose. But as I have not yet heard that such an event has taken place, owing I imagine to the critical situation of the two armies, I take the liberty to address your Honours on that subject, humbly requesting that I may be included in the next exchange of prisoners. And as I have unfortunately been prevented by the fate of war from taking up arms again this campaign, in support of the freedom and independence of the American States, and being conscious of having done no more than my duty in my former exertions for the publick good, I can have no claim to your Honours' particular attention; yet, as I have been formerly honoured with your approbation of my conduct, and a singular mark of your confidence, by an appointment to the chief command of the Artillery in the Northern Department, I flatter myself that I have not been neglected by your Honours in the new arrangement of the corps of Artillery.

I have the honour to be, with every sentiment of gratitude, duty, and respect, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN LAMB.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Brunswick, November 29th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I this morning received your favour of the 26th. Your letters to Governour Trumbull for a reinforcement of Militia were exceedingly proper, though I doubt much whether they can be obtained, as they have suffered many inconveniences in the course of the present campaign; nor was the application to Mr. Bowdoin for clothes, &c., less necessary. I am happy to hear the men discover so much readiness to engage in the service; and that there may be no objection for want of bounty money, I have directed the Paymaster-General to advance it to such of the Colonels as apply, and who are appointed and agreed to continue. I imagine you have settled with the Commissary a plan for being supplied with provisions on your march; that will be highly expedient; I will use my exertions.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

---

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO COLONEL TRUMBULL.

Brunswick, November 29th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: His Excellency received your favour of the 26th. The warrant which it enclosed has been properly signed and delivered to the boy who brought it, that he may receive the amount of Colonel Palfrey, should he be coming this way. If he is not, and should still be at Peekskill, and you are there, I have directed the lad to deliver it to you.

I have nothing very particular to communicate to you. We left Newark yesterday morning, and in a little time after, the enemy entered; we arrived here.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

R. H. Harrison.

To Colonel Joseph Trumbull, Commissary-General of Provisions.

---

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO COLONEL PALFREY.

New-Brunswick, November 29th, 1776.

Dear Sir: The critical situation of our affairs making it necessary that every measure should be adopted that can possibly facilitate the recruiting service and raising a new army, his Excellency is willing that you should advance, from time to time, to such Colonels as you know are appointed, and who agree to serve again, such sums of money as they may conceive to be necessary for paying the bounty of twenty dollars allowed by Congress to each private who shall inlist; keeping in view that they are not to go beyond the amount which the whole bounty to a regiment will be. You will make this known to the Colonels who are within the above description, and take their receipts for whatever money they obtain, on the back of which his Excellency will sign a warrant whenever you present them. This scheme is to expedite matters.

The enemy are now at Newark, if not advanced farther.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

R. H. Harrison.

To Lieutenant-Colonel William Palfrey, Paymaster-General.

---

COLONEL TYLER TO GENERAL HEATH.

Tappan, November 29, 1776.

Dear General: I am here with my regiment, and have got away the stores agreeable to your Honour's orders. Major Clark is gone with his party this day. I have the orders this day from General Scott to tarry here till further orders. My regiment has not their baggage with them, nor their cooking utensils, which makes it very difficult to be here, but shall tarry until further orders. I believe the people in general that are friendly have got away their valuable effects. Should be glad your Honour would take the matter into your wise consideration, and give such orders as you think proper, which I shall be fond of executing.

Am in haste your humble servant,

John Tyler, Colonel.

To General Heath.

Have sent Ensign Doramme, who took three horses below the enemy's lines yesterday. The Ensign will acquaint your Honour about the affair. Thought proper to acquaint yourself concerning the horses, and send the officer.

J. T.

P. S. Purpose to keep a good look-out, &c. By the best information I can get, the enemy are making towards the southward.

---

EBENEZER LOCKWOOD TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Pound-Ridge, November 29th, 1776.

Sir: These are to inform you that I have been at Stamford this day, and was informed by several gentlemen that might be depended on, that there is but a few of the enemy's ships up the Sound, and them but small ones, thought to have no troops on board of them; and they think the enemy will not land there this year, except it be to plunder off some of their stock that may be down on their necks of land.

There was landed from a brig and tender this day a number of men at Greenwich, a place about two miles below the post-road, near Stamford, where (as was supposed) they thought to have taken off a number of sheep, but they were disappointed, for some boys drove them off, while the inhabitants fired on the enemy. The enemy soon returned to their ships. The enemy got off only four poor calves, under the cover of their cannon. A poor bargain. The ships soon went up the Sound to the east, out of sight. The men, both old and young, came down in large numbers when they heard the cannon, and from several miles back, and seemed to be in high spirits. So on the whole I think things appear more favourable than I expected in this part. Mr. Mills is to set out to come to you on Monday next. I hope to be with you about the middle of next week.

From your humble servant,

Eben. Lockwood.

Pierre V. Cortlandt, Vice President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at the Fishkills.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL SCOTT.

Peekskill, November 29th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I have received your favour of yesterday's date, and thank you for the intelligence it contains.

The lead I would have forwarded to this place. I congratulate you on the success of your application to the honourable Convention, and the probability that many of your brigade will continue with you a month longer.

I would have Colonel Tyler's regiment continue at Tappan until the stores and provisions are all moved off; after which I think it would be best for him to return to his post, though I should be glad to hear from that quarter before he returns.

I imagine that ere this reaches you the field-piece and light-horsemen will have joined you. I must desire you to be particularly careful that the arms, accoutrements, ammunition, tents, tools, utensils, &c., which have been delivered to the several regiments of your brigade, belonging to the publick, are returned before the men are discharged. You will call upon the commanding officers of the several regiments to attend to this matter, as they are charged with them in the publick books.

I am, dear sir, with respect, your most humble servant,

W. Heath.

General Scott.

---

CERTIFICATE OF DELEGATES OF TRYON COUNTY.

Fishkill, November 29th, 1776.

Whereas we are informed that it has been reported that Captain McKean and Lieutenant French had last summer discharged their company without any leave, order, or authority: We do hereby certify, that the above report is false and groundless; that the said company has been kept up in service; that we have lately seen the said officers and the company, and know, of our own knowledge, that the said company was in service on the 21st instant, when we were on our way to Fishkill. We do further certify, that the said Captain McKean and Lieutenant French are good and worthy officers, in our opinion. We further certify that Captain Jacob Sober's company is dispersed, which may probably have given rise to the report that Captain McKean had discharged his company.

John Moore,
Wm. Harper.

---

DOCTOR CHAUNCEY GRAHAM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fishkill, 29 November, 1776.

Much honoured good Sir: Though I had the pleasure of addressing you by a line on your late promotion to a Major-General, yet as I suppose my letter miscarried, I had not the honour of an answer, yet oft have inquired of your health and success, and have as often had the pleasing satisfaction to hear well of both. I should have done myself the honour to visit you before this time, had not a scene of multiplied business prevented.

I must now, dear sir, inform you that upwards of one hundred of the men under your command have fled hither from the Army in the Jersey, sixty-five of whom are sick, some dangerous, though but few, all at present unfit for duty. The Committee of Safety of this State have put them all under my care as a physician. Would therefore beg your direction and orders respecting them, which you may depend will be punctually obeyed. If any medicines can be spared, should be glad the enclosed may be sent as near as possible. I know you will excuse my freedom, and trust you will honour me with your commands, which will oblige him who is, with affection and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant. Excuse haste.

CHAUNCEY GRAHAM.

Honourable W. Heath, Major-General.

P. S. If you know where my kinsman Dr. Graham is, you will advise in your next.

---

J. TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, 29th November, 1776.

SIR: I arrived at this place on Saturday eve last, having at length the happiness to leave Ticonderoga, not with disgrace.

The troops who were ordered into winter quarters, are now embarking at this place for the assistance of General Washington, at the Jerseys. I shall attend them, and after that, perhaps come home.

General Schuyler, unaccountably to me, has been pleased to desire me to exchange offices with Colonel Lewis, Quartermaster-General. What his meaning is I am at a loss. He affects to flatter me with commendations, which I know not the meaning of. What should you think of the exchange?

My best respects attend my mother and the family, and every friend.

I am, sir, your dutiful and affectionate,

J. TRUMBULL.

Honourable Jonathan Trumbull.

December 2d. I embark to-morrow. J. T.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, Hartford, November 29th, 1776: Present, his Honour the Governour, the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, William Williams, Titus Hosmer, Benjamin Huntington, William Hillhouse, Thomas Seymour, Esquires.

Voted, that his Honour the Governour be desired to give orders to the Commissaries that have been employed to purchase Clothing for the use of the soldiers from this State in the Continental Army, to forward such Clothing as they have provided, to the Army, and deliver the same to the Quartermaster-General, or his Assistant or Assistants, or some other proper persons appointed by the General Officers, taking proper receipts; and also that his Honour be desired to give orders to have the Rum and other refreshments provided for the soldiers of this State in the Army, forwarded towards the western parts of this State; and also that his Honour be desired to write General Washington, and desire him to advise with such General Officers from this State as are near him, and point out a plan by which the resolve for supplying the soldiers from this State with refreshments and clothing at prime cost, may be carried into execution.

Wednesday, December 4th, 1776.—Colonel Dyer, Colonel Williams, and Mr. Wales, attended to do business in the Council of Safety, &c.

Thursday, December 5th, 1776.—Colonel Dyer, Colonel Williams, Mr. Wales, and Benjamin Huntington, attended to do business in the Council of Safety, &c.

---

JOSIAH WATERS TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

New-London, 29th November, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you a few days since, enclosing a letter from Captain Prince, as also a list of prisoners on board the Whitty, prison ship, at New-York. I have now the pleasure of acquainting you that a cartel is settled for said prisoners, the exchange to be upon, or as near as possible, the 10th day of December next, at Huntington Bay, on the north side of Long-Island.

This information I concluded would be acceptable to you and others the friends of those at present in captivity. A desire, therefore, in some measure to relieve their anxieties will, I presume, be admitted an apology for the freedom taken by, sir, their and your most humble servant,

JOSI. WATERS, Jun.

---

New-London, November 29, 1776.

Tuesday night last, one John Goggin, late Boatswain of the bomb-brig, (who with three other prisoners lately broke out of Windham jail,) was found on board a brig in this harbour. He gives the following account of said prisoners, viz: That the night after breaking out of jail, they, with the help of one Lewis, who was taken in a prize vessel, stole a canoe near Norwich landing, with which they attempted to cross the Sound to Long-Island, but at the entrance of the race, near Gull-Islands, the canoe overset, when all of them except Goggin were drowned. Their names are: Edward Sneyd, (late commander of the bomb-brig,) William Cook, John Russel, and Lewis.

---

JAMES JAUNCY, JUN., TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

Middletown, in Connecticut, November 29, 1776.

SIR: I use the privilege of our former acquaintance in addressing you on a subject with which you must be in some measure acquainted. It is now almost four months since I was taken, with several other gentlemen, and sent into this government. My father and mother are in the same situation, and at this place also, so that there is no one to take care of our furniture and other valuable effects, to the amount of several thousand pounds, which are at Flatbush, on Long-Island, and at Horse-Neck, Westchester. The case of our family is peculiarly hard, as I believe it is the only one of which all the individuals have been apprehended and restrained of their liberty for so long a time on a mere suspicion of being unfriendly, in support of which suspicion, also, no proof whatever has been adduced. Our case is also particular in another respect: before I was taken at Westchester, and as soon as I heard a party was in pursuit of me, I wrote to Mr. Gouverneur Morris, requesting him to inform me what was alleged against me, either with respect to my conduct in the office I held in the Colony or in my private capacity. His answer contained no intimation of any charge whatever; on the contrary, he informed me that he had communicated my letter to the Convention, that their attention at that time was entirely engrossed by several important matters which was then before them, and that as soon as they were despatched they would consider my requests, &c. I have, notwithstanding, been detained a prisoner ever since, without having any thing further in answer to what I alleged.

The favour, sir, I have now to ask of you is, that you would move the Convention that we may be allowed to return to our own homes. Our family have already suffered greatly by their removal, and they must do so more and more every day that they are detained. I flatter myself, sir, that you will, both from principles of humanity and justice, endeavour to effect our discharge, in which case I shall always properly acknowledge the obligation.

I have the honour to be, your most humble and obedient servant,

JAMES JAUNCY, Jun.

To Robert R. Livingston, or in his absence to James Duane, Esq.

I forgot to mention, that we understand that on our application being made to General Washington for our discharge, he answered that all matters of this sort were referred to the Provincial Convention.

---

Saw-Pitts, (in Rye,) Connecticut, November 29, 1776.

When his Honour Governour Trumbull recommended it to the householders in the State of Connecticut, who are not obliged to do military duty, to form themselves into companies, choose their own officers, and equip themselves for the defence of these States, a number of aged gentlemen, in the first society in the town of Waterbury, imbodied themselves and nominated their own officers, who were honoured with commissions; and when the regiment of Militia to which they belong were ordered to New-York, agreeable to a late resolve of the General Assembly, this company was the first in the regiment that marched and reached the place of rendezvous. It is now at this place, and consists of twenty-four men; their ages, added together, are a thousand years. They are all married men, and when they came from home, left behind them their wives, with a hundred and forty-nine children and grand children. One of them is fifty-eight years of age, has had nineteen children and twelve grand children; fourteen of his own children are now living. A worthy example of patriotism. Let others go and do likewise

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE AMERICAN PRISONERS IN NEW-YORK.

This may inform all persons who have friends, prisoners of war, in New-York, that Major Wells, one of said prisoners, is come to Connecticut, on his parole, to collect hard money for the much-distressed and suffering officers and soldiers. The money and letters are to be left with Landlord Betts, of Norwalk, Captain Benjamin, of Stratford, Landlord Beers, of New-Haven, Mr. Hezekiah Wyllys, of Hartford, and at his own house in Colchester; and must be ready by the middle of December, with proper directions, and they will be carefully carried, and punctually delivered.

N. B. The letters must not be sealed, nor contain any politicks.

---

MAJOR BATT TO LIEUTENANT-COLONEL GORHAM.

Fort Cumberland, Nova-Scotia, November 29, 1776.

Sir: Pursuant to your orders I marched at half an hour after five o'clock to attack the Rebels, with Captains Branson and Pitcairn's companies of Light Marines, Captain Studholm, Lieutenant Bodawain, Lieutenant Starmar, Lieutenant Connor, four sergeants, and sixty-four rank and file of our regiment. We took the right hand road, leaving Danks and Gays' houses on the left, and continued our route along the edge of the marsh, under the hill, which prevented our being seen or heard by the enemy. When there was sufficient daylight to enable us clearly to distinguish objects, we began to ascend the hill. In a short time the advanced guard heard the Indians talking at their wigwams, and finding we were wholly undiscovered, I detached Captain Branson's company to fall upon their right flank, and Captain Pitcairn's on their left, whilst I pressed forward in the centre with our detachment; but just as we reached the top of the hill I heard them beat to arms, on which the men gave a loud huzza and ran like lions. The villains fired at us from right and left of the road leading to Eddy's head-quarters, which we surrounded.

The Rebels who occupied the house darted out of it at our approach, and fired as they fled, leaving only a negro man behind, who beat the drum. We pursued, however, as fast as we could. The next house we entered was the rendezvous of their wretched committee, and owned by one Gardiner; this I burnt, with every Rebel's house and barn for six miles, including the whole French settlements at Bloody Bridge; every man belonging to which was this day in action against us. All the houses I destroyed contained the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, with numbers of spare arms; and the barns of the French were receptacles for quantities of salt provisions, flour, rice, and peas, besides grain of different kinds—circumstances which denoted mature ideas of war.

In sight of the French village of Bloody Bridge stands the settlement of Jolly Cœur, about a mile distant. After the men had taken a little refreshment, I intended to have crossed the marsh, and laid the other nursery of rebellion in ashes; but recollecting the superiority of the detachment under my command, and the correction the enemy had just received, I determined to return to the fort to give them time to reflect on their infamy and madness, to wait the operation of executive justice, and the offer of mercy and oblivion. Indeed, notwithstanding the resentment which their conduct as Rebels highly merits, I should not have added fire to the sword had they not introduced that calamity, by wickedly burning all the buildings near the fort.

Our regiment had one man killed and four wounded. The marines had one man wounded in the body; and when the doctor applied the bandage the ball fell out. The loss of the enemy cannot be ascertained. We did not search for their dead, the thickness of their cover rendering it exceedingly difficult to find them; but in the pursuit we saw two Indians and one white man, who had received the just wages of wanton and unprovoked rebellion.

The behaviour of officers and men was equal to the cause that inspired them, and the cheerfulness with which the marine light companies underwent the fatigue of the service deserves the highest encomium.

I have the honour to be, sir, with respect, your obedient and most humble servant,

Thomas Batt, Major R. F. Americans.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gorham.

HENRICUS GODET TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26 December.]

St. Eustatius, November 30th, 1776.

Sir: With this opportunity, I once more take the liberty in offering any services that may lay in my power, in contributing towards the establishment of a beneficial correspondency. With regard to your supplies, therefore, take the necessary steps, and I make no doubt but it will be agreeable. I have communicated a plan and every necessary step that may attend to an accomplishment, to Captain Isaiah Robison, who will be able to give a proper idea of matter.

I conclude, with much esteem, your most obedient servant,

Henricus Godet.

To John Hancock, Esq., Philadelphia.

P. S. For the want of money from your part, make affairs dull.

---

MEMORIAL AND PETITION OF JOHN NOBLE TAYLOR.

[Referred to the Board of War, November 30, 1776.]

To the honourable the Members of the Continental Congress of America:

The Memorial and Petition of John Noble Taylor, of the Island of Bermuda, Esquire, humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist, designing to emigrate to the Continent of America, has (until he can withdraw a considerable interest from England) purchased a location contiguous to the banks of the Mississippi.

That your memorialist was last summer bound from hence, via Antigua, to England, in the brig the Fanny, of this island, previous to his intended emigration; but was interrupted on his voyage by an American privateer and carried to Old Providence; from whence, by permission of his Honour Governour Cooke, he returned to this island on the 10th of last month.

That your memorialist still wishes to go to England, as well to put his interest there on such a footing as to be speedily withdrawn from thence, as to furnish himself with some family and other necessaries.

Your memorialist therefore humbly petitions your Honours that he may be indulged with your permission, (ratified and granted to him by your passport at the foot hereof,) as well to go from hence to England and to return here from thence with his family, dependents, and baggage, as to proceed from hence to the river Mississippi with the same and a load of salt from Turk's Island.

And your memorialist and petitioner shall, as in duty bound, forever pray, &c.

John Noble Taylor.

We, whose names are hereunder written, do certify, that John Noble Taylor, Esquire, has been many years a resident of this island, and that the facts by him in this memorial stated, are literally true; as witness our hands.

Bermuda, 1 November, 1776.

| | |
|---|---|
| Henry Tucker, | Theodore Godet, |
| Richard Jennings, | Thomas Dickinson, |
| Jno. Jennings, | James Tucker, |
| Henry Tucker, | Wm. Hall, Sen., |
| John Moore, Clk., | John Harvey, |
| | Sam'l Harvey. |

---

WILLIAM AYLETT TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Williamsburg, November 26th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I received your very obliging favour of the 12th instant, but was much embarrassed at receiving no certain instructions whether to adopt the Continental ration or those confirmed by Congress in this State under the late contracts. I waited on the Governour and Council with my opinion in writing, and also on the General, which was in both instances approved, as you will observe by the enclosed papers. I therefore proceeded, as a number of people were attending, in consequence of my advertisement, from distant parts of the country, to receive proposals, by the Virginia ration; and indeed I was necessitated (as the season of the year for laying in provisions was so far advanced and some of the old contracts nearly out) to do something, but you will observe, by a copy of the contract here enclosed, that I have reserved to the Congress the power of directing any alteration they may think necessary. My plan and reasons being fully expressed in one of the enclosed papers, to which I beg leave to refer, it is unnecessary to recapitulate them here. That part respecting laying in a sufficient stock of provisions for our five regiments, in the neighbourhood of New-York, I shall suspend (until next post) carrying into execution, taking it for granted I shall then hear further from you on the subject. I had some months ago engaged a hundred beeves and four hundred hogs, to be in readiness, lest I should not have it in my power to contract. These I have employed proper persons to barrel. The pork cost twenty shillings net, the beef two pence, and the salt for curing fifteen shillings per bushel, though I have engaged two thousand bushels at 12*s.* 6*d.*, which is not yet arrived but is hourly expected. I expected to have contracted at seven pence half-penny. Had I let the business to the lowest bidder, I believe I could have got it done at that rate for part of the regiments, but the great scarcity and high price of salt, and the apprehensions of a great demand for provisions, and the daily accounts received from the northward of our paper money declining in value, by its being exchanged for silver and gold, at from seventy-five to one hundred per cent. advance, has alarmed people here exceedingly, and upon the whole I thought it would not be sound policy to press hard to lessen the price of the ration, which I am certain I could not have succeeded in for all the troops, and that a disparity in the allowance would have operated to the disadvantage of the troops. I therefore, after much negotiation, opened my instructions to the contracting parties, cautioned them not to think of engaging but with firm resolution to comply punctually in every instance; and besides a bond taken of them, I have inserted a clause that may perpetually stare them in the face, that if they transgress in any instance, their bond, which is for fifty thousand pounds, shall be forfeited.

You will be pleased, sir, to lay these papers before the proper Board, and let me know how my conduct is approved of. I can only say, I have done for the best, and if my poor services meets with approbation, I shall esteem it the better of my reward.

I have no reason, from any offers that were made the day of contracting, to believe I could have obtained any contract for less than eight pence, as none of them were less than eight pence half-penny, until I showed my instructions; but I have other reasons to believe that one or two people would have taken each a single regiment at seven pence half-penny; but besides not liking the men so well, the expenses of wagonage (which will be saved by having the provisions at all the stations the property of one company) would have been greater than the saving a half-penny a ration on one or two regiments, besides the bad consequences to the troops, of being probably not so well fed.

I am, with great respect and esteem, dear sir, your obliged and affectionate humble servant,

WILLIAM AYLETT.

To Richard Henry Lee, Esquire, in Congress, Philadelphia.

Since writing the above have made a contract, a copy of which is here enclosed, for a hundred thousand pounds weight of bacon, at five pence per pound, two pence under what our navy agents have contracted at, and have despatched a proper person to purchase hogs for a thousand barrels pork, which, with the nine regiments contracted for, and the Eastern-Shore regiment about to be contarcted for, will, except fresh provisions, complete the preparation for fifteen regiments complete, together with a quantity beef, I have had barrels; but we must have money for this. My office was upwards of two thousand pounds in debt before the last supply came, after paying which I could only get four thousand pounds towards all these engagements, and you know, sir, this is the season for laying in supplies, and without money nothing can be done. I wish I had received a power for engaging provisions for the Eastern Army. I think the continent would have saved greatly by it, from the accounts I have of the high prices to the northward and eastward.

—

In Council, Williamsburg, November 22d, 1776.

Colonel Aylett, the Deputy Commissary of the Continental Army, having represented to the Board the impracticability of supplying the Troops with such Rations as are prescribed by Congress, which besides, if they could be procured, would not be likely to give that satisfaction to the Troops here, which may be expected from the Rations which have been usual, and which it is supposed may be furnished as cheap as the former:

Ordered, That the Governour be requested to write to our Delegates in Congress, stating the substance of the above representation, enclosing an account of the Rations allowed by this State, and recommending the adoption thereof for the Continental Troops serving in this country.

A copy. ARCH'D BLAIR, Clerk.

—

Articles of Agreement this day entered into between W. AYLETT, D. C. G. for the Continental Troops in VIRGINIA, and GEO. PURDIE, of ISLE WIGHT County, witnesseth:

That Geo. Purdie agrees to furnish the said Aylett with one hundred thousand pounds weight of good merchantable bacon, well cured and smoked, delivered at Smithfield, or some convenient landing on James River, one half of which to be delivered in April, the balance in May next; but if it should be inconvenient to said Aylett to receive it before, the whole is to be delivered in May, for which the said Aylett agrees to pay the said Purdie five pence per pound current money on the delivery. Witness our hands this 27th November, 1776.

W. AYLETT, D. C. G.
GEO. PURDIE.

—

Terms upon which the following Continental Troops in VIRGINIA are to be Victualed the ensuing year, to end the first day of DECEMBER, 1777.

The Second Regiment to commence the first day of December next. The Seventh ditto, except so many of them as are or may be stationed at York, until the 20th day of February, to commence the said first day of December next, and after the said 20th day of February, the whole are to fall into this contract, or sooner if they are removed from York before.

The Eighth Regiment to commence the said first day of December next, unless ordered to the northward. The six regiments about to be raised on Continental establishment in this Commonwealth, to commence as soon as the whole, or any part of them, are raised.

The troops to be fed two days in each week with bacon, two days with salted beef or pork, at least one half of the former, and three days with fresh beef, or other fresh provision, for every week during the continuance of this contract, at the following rates, to wit: Bacon, fourteen ounces per ration; beef or pork, either salted or fresh, one pound and a quarter per ration; mutton, one pound per ration; and one pound and a quarter of flour, or one and a half pound of sifted meal.

Butter to be provided for the sick, at eight ounces per ration, at which rate it is to be issued whenever it is convenient to the contractors to supply it, and the troops to demand it instead of the other rations.

Sugar, molasses, rice, coffee, and some wine, to be provided for the sick, and to be issued in lieu of other rations; so that the contractors be no losers by it, when ordered by the Surgeon or commanding officer.

Peas, beans, and potatoes, to be issued three times in each week, instead, or in part of flour, so long as they can be had, at the rate of two and a half bushels of peas or beans to one hundred pounds of flour, or one and a half pounds of potatoes instead of a ration of flour, if the commanding officer requires it, or vegetables in lieu thereof, so as that the contractors shall be no losers by it, (meaning the vegetables.)

Vinegar, one gill per man per week, to be issued on drawing days, in the same manner with other provisions.

Salt, one gill per man per week.

The provisions to be all good in kind; a council of officers, appointed by the commanding officer, judging it otherwise, it is to be thrown upon the hands of the contractors.

The provisions when once carried to any particular station where troops are quartered, for their particular use at that station, by order of the commanding officer, and it becomes necessary to remove them from thence, the contractors are to have the use of publick wagons, agreeable to a resolve of Congress.

The troops ordered to the south side of James River, not exceeding two regiments, are to be fed by Messrs. Baker and Hardy, under a former contract, till the first day of March next.

This contract not to extend to the Eastern Shores, or beyond the Blue Ridge of Mountains, unless it be agreeable to the contractors.

If the afore-mentioned troops, or any part of them, are ordered out of this State of Virginia, the contractors are to continue to supply them on their march through, or into any of the United States, until they meet with a proper Continental Commissary, to whom they are to resign the supplying of them, and the contractors are to be found wagons for carrying such quantities of provisions as the commanding officer shall direct.

If upon the removal of any of the afore-mentioned troops from any station where provisions are laid in, to any other station where provisions are also laid in, by any of the contractors included in this agreement, it is to be at the option of the commanding officer, whether any or how much provision shall be removed from one station to the other, or if to any other place, the commanding officer shall direct from what station the provision shall be carried, to save as far as may be the expense of wagonage.

If upon the removal of any of the afore-mentioned troops out of this State, or beyond the Mountains, or to the Eastern Shore, a larger quantity of provisions are left on hand than the commanding officer may judge necessary for those that remain, the contractors are to deliver such supernumerary provisions as are sound and merchantable to the Commissary-General, who is to pay the same what they cost, with all reasonable expenses.

If the honourable Continental Congress should disapprove of the ration herein contracted for, or direct any other kind of rations, this contract to be void, if the contractors do not choose to supply the rations that they may direct, and they are to have their provisions taken off their hands, with all reasonable expenses, as conditioned for in a foregoing article.

No excuse to be admitted for any breach of these articles, but an absolute forfeiture of their bonds to be taken for their compliance, except it should only be for a few days, and proceeding from some unforeseen accident.

The contractors to be furnished with such sums of money as may, from time to time, be necessary for the carrying on of their business. Joseph Hawkins, James Barbour, George Pickett, John Craig, Henry Field, William Robertson, Richard Hardy, and James Grigsby, do hereby agree with William Aylett, Deputy Commissary-General in Virginia, to furnish the troops mentioned in the foregoing instrument of writing, agreeable to the terms therein expressed, according to the true sense and meaning thereof, and for which they have given bond for their performance. And for which the said William Aylett hath agreed to pay them eight pence per ration, Virginia currency.

In witness whereof, the parties aforesaid have subscribed their names, this 23d day of November, 1776.

It is further agreed, that the necessary provision for the Army shall be at the risk of the contractors, except taken by the enemy in the field of battle or in garrison.

William Aylett, D. C. G.,
Jos. Hawkins, H. Field, Jun.,
Jas. Barbour, James Grigsby,
John Craig, William Robertson,
Geo. Pickett, Richard Hardy.
The firm, Hawkins, Fields, Hardy & Co.

---

King William, November 30th, 1776.

Dear Sir: Since writing the letter that encloses this, I have received your favour by our Attorney-General, with my account enclosed, and am glad to hear that the Continental officers are to be saved the trouble and expense of attending at Philadelphia to settle this account. I imagine the Commissioners will receive full instructions in what manner to proceed, and whether they are minutely to examine all the innumerable little provision-vouchers that I have already audited and settled, or only to examine my receipts, and see that the accounts are properly stated, and sums of money I have received properly accounted for. Examining and settling the accounts with the various Commissioners and contractors being principally the duties of my office, I presume that it will be taken for granted I have faithfully executed that part of my duty, for a reëxamining every provision return will employ a great deal of time, and I could have no interest in permitting impositions to take place, unless I had entered into a wicked combination with the commissaries or contractors, and under that idea no settlement would be ever final. I have all the accounts of the respective contractors fairly stated, with the number of rations issued each day, to whom, and by whose order, and double receipts to every sum of money paid, to be lodged with the accounts and vouchers to be sent to Congress, and the other to remain in my own hands. I wish you, sir, to have this matter of reëxamining the vouchers or provision returns, clearly expressed in the instructions sent to the Commissioners, as it will be a prodigious saving of time in settling my accounts; for unless I can be confided in, in respect to auditing those accounts that I have no other interest in than to see that they are honestly and fairly stated, I am a very unnecessary officer; for if the Commissioners are to reëxamine them, they might as well do it in the first instance, and save the expense of a Deputy Commissary-General; however, if it is thought necessary, I have all the returns properly arranged and numbered, and will most cheerfully go through with it, but it will take up a great deal of time. I have supposed that producing these accounts, with proper receipts for payment, would be as much as would be required of me; but it may not be amiss to reëxamine part of them, to see that I have attentively discharged the trust reposed in me; but the face of every account will show this, as there are none of them but will show the most exact scrutiny having been bestowed on them, from a number of corrections to each.

Dunmore has not yet made his appearance here, though our Governour and Council are taking every precaution to give him, if he comes, a proper reception. Many detachments of the Militia are already in Williamsburg, and I am come up to send a hundred men from this County, who are to march on Monday next. Our recruiting business is like to be retarded for the want of money. It will be well to send a sufficient sum for this purpose, for laying in a sufficient store of provisions as soon as possible. It certainly would be a great saving to the Continent to lay in a large quantity of provisions of pork and beef here, though it is almost too late now to procure beef on low terms.

I am, respectfully, dear sir, your obliged and affectionate,
W. Aylett.

To Richard Henry Lee, Esq.

I would apologize for the abundance of trouble I have given you, but when publick interest or private friendship is the motive, I know apology is unnecessary.

---

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, November 30th, 1776.

Sirs: I have a large parcel of powder, that Captain Martin brought in, that he says is for Philadelphia. Please let me know what I am to do with it. I shall have all the flour for Captain Martin delivered this day from the mills. I would be glad to know if I ought to continue the mills grinding for me, as it is some disadvantage to let them engage with other people. There are several prize vessels here. Will you want any of them? The prize schooner has some rum on board. I will give ten shillings per gallon for it all, if you can or will sell it. Please write me on this matter; the powder in particular.

From your humble servant,
Jesse Hollingsworth.

The honourable Council of Safety, at Annapolis.

---

STEPHEN STEWARD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

November the 30th, 1776.

Gentlemen: I have enclosed you Mr. Graham's letter. You will see by it I desired him to inquire of Mr. Forbes how much beef and pork he could purchase, and at what price. I only got Mr. Graham's letter yesterday. I could not answer it before you had seen it. Now I shall be obliged to you to write me whether I shall engage Mr. Forbes to purchase a quantity for the Province. I would have waited on you but am very unwell with the rheumatism. If it is agreeable to you I will send some salt, and get somebody to take care of the beef. I mean to pay Mr. Forbes five per cent. for the trouble of buying and paying for the beef and pork. I hope the guns are delivered the Captain of the Province brigs. Did not choose to deliver the small guns from the brigs till they were sold. The Jenifer lays ready rigged, and no Captain nor sailors. Its a pity your fine vessels should be lying by the walls. I wish the Province would sell the schooner to me; I would give £1,500 for her. If you want to see me for any thing please to write me, and I will come up. I shall be much obliged to you if you will get one of your clerks to buy one hundred pounds of tallow, or what they can get, and send down by the vessel that brought the guns.

I am, your most obedient servant,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

---

WILLIAM RUMSEY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

November 30th, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: Were I to consider my business, which is difficult to transact, that I must load a sloop for sea before the frost, and not an article of her cargo purchased, I am afraid it would be an insufficient reason for my not appearing before your honourable Board, because private ought to give way to publick concerns.

If your Honours are acquainted, I have large quantities of wheat at different creeks in our bay, to be brought up and carried across to Appomattox for merchants in Philadelphia; that from the difficulty of procuring craft and wagons, no person but myself can superintend these affairs. It will serve probably as an apology for my not attending.

The levy court will come on the middle of December. If I am absent a number of poor must suffer, especially as Colonel Veazey and Captain Hyland will be at Annapolis, and perhaps other Magistrates detained at home by sickness, bad weather, or other accidents.

But there may be an attack on the Delaware. If I leave the County it may be said, "He has shielded himself in the Council of Safety."

If depredations should be made by the enemy on that neighbouring State, from the vicinity, interest, and generosity of the battalion in which I am engaged, they will certainly march to their assistance, and will as assuredly expect my presence. In our present situation we want rather hearts than heads, while your Honours are at the helm.

These last reasons have more weight with me than any other; indeed, it gives me pain to decline any appointment of the Convention, or so polite an invitation from your Honours, which, if it were not for the above cogent objections, would be a mandate to your Honours' most obedient, humble servant,

WM. RUMSEY.

The honourable Council of Safety for Maryland.

---

THOMAS BOND TO BENJAMIN RUMSEY.

At an Election held at the Upper Cross Roads, November the 30th, 1776. Benjamin Amos, Captain; Joshua Amos, First Lieutenant; Abraham Williams, Second Lieutenant; Joseph Hitchcock, Ensign.

Judges, present: Charles Baker, Moses Johnson, Joseph Jones.

SIR: The above gentlemen being chosen by the company, I would take the liberty of recommending them to be as fit to fill these stations as any in the company.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

THOS. BOND.

To Colonel Benjamin Rumsey.

November the 30, 1776.

---

GENTLEMEN: I hereby desire that the commissions may issue agreeable to the choice of the people. As I was an Ensign in the company before the officers that belonged to it went to the camp, and have now made choice of me as their First Lieutenant, I am glad to serve them.

I am, yours,

JOSHUA AMOS.

To the Committee of Harford County.

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, November 30th, 1776.

SIRS: Captain John Carey is in want of a mate, as he informs me. There is a good-looking young man that came mate of a prize schooner taken by Captain Cook, that is willing immediately to enter with Captain Cary as mate, but Captain Cook will not release him without your orders. So would have you write him. I have done all in my power to get him, but it don't seem satisfactory to Captain Cook. As I have wrote you so often this way I add no more.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

He has a boy, apprentice to himself, which he expects with him. Please name it to Captain Cook. I have applied to Captain Cook in person. He says he must have your instructions. Has not seen Mr. Nicholson, the Judge of the Court of Admiralty, as yet, nor do I think Mr. Nicholson will undertake in this case. So please to be full in the matter.

---

December 1st, 1776.

SIR: If you can spare Captain Cary the mate of your prize schooner, and a boy that is his apprentice, the Council will be much obliged by your doing it.

I am, &c.

Captain Cook.

---

SAMUEL CHASE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, Saturday morning, November 30th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By a resolve of Congress of the 12th of October, 1775, "Each Captain and other commissioned officer, while in the recruiting service of this Continent or on their march to join the Army, shall be allowed two dollars and two thirds per week for their subsistence; and that the men who inlist shall each of them, whilst in quarters, be allowed one dollar per week, and one dollar and one third of a dollar when on their march to join the Army for the same purpose."

The resolves enclosed will show the allowance by Congress for recruiting. I have given you this trouble on a presumption that the allowances by Congress were unknown at the time recruiting orders issued in our State.

I am directed by Congress to call your immediate attention to their request some time ago to our Convention, to make inquiry of some Nanticoke Indians, which the Six Nations allege came into our State, and have not since been heard of, and they express fears for their safety. Be pleased to inquire of Mr. Duvall for the letter from Congress on this subject, and take effectual measures for a speedy inquiry. I should imagine the Committee for Dorset County could make the proper inquiry.

Congress have not heard from General Washington since the 27th, when he was at Newark. Young Bradford writes that our Army left Newark on the 26th, in the morning, and were at Brunswick yesterday.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your most obedient servant,

SAM'L CHASE.

The honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

The enclosed letter was delivered to me open. Our troops are perishing for the want of shoes and stockings. Can't you send some for the use of our friends?

---

COLONEL HAUSSEGGER TO RICHARD PETERS.

Branch Creek Powder-Mill, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here yesterday, about four o'clock. I found good convenience for the men to live in for some time, until barracks can be built. The guard and wagons are not yet arrived, on account of the bad road. This powder magazine is very small; it will soon be full.

I am just going to Readingtown, to see to get ten thousand feet of board to finish the barrack. Mr. Pew, the clerk of this work, is also to set out to get the scantling, &c. Sir, please to order Mr. Towers to send one dozen axes, spades, shovels, grubbing-axes, four hand-saws, two augers, six gimlets, kettles, dishes and spoons. If you please to order Captain Woolpert he will get the other articles.

A guard is here very necessary—if you please to order Captain Wolpert with the remainder of his company. So soon as an opportunity, one wagon sent here. I enclose you the draft of the barracks as are to be built immediately.

Sir, I remain by remembrance, many compliments to the rest of the gentlemen of the honourable Board. Sir, your very humble servant,

NICHL. HAUSSEGGER, Colonel.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary of the War Office at Philadephia.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE LANCASTER COMMITTEE.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, November 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It is highly expedient that the prisoners in your barracks be forwarded as fast as possible to the Jersey, in order for an exchange. The account received by Congress and intimated to this Board, of the situation of our men, prisoners at New-York, demands the utmost exertion to get them out of the hands of our enemy. We hope therefore you will send them off as fast as possible, in such manner as you shall think most expedient.

By order of Council:

DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Vice President.

To the Hon. Committee of Lancaster County.

---

First Division with Captain Henry, returned 15th December, 1776.

Wagons.

John Mandebachs, (Lancaster,) 15 days, at 30*s*. - £22 10 0 came in Sunday morning.

Philips Bushong, (Lampiter,) 15½ days, at 30*s*. - 23 5 0 came in Saturday noon, and went home with his horses, and returned Sunday morning.

Benjamin Bowman, (Lampiter;) came in Friday morning, went home with his horses, and returned Sunday morning.

Abraham Longenecker, (Lampiter;) came in Friday morning, went home with his horses, and returned Sunday morning.

Christian Frick, (Manheim,) 16 days, - - - 24 0 0 came in Saturday morning, went home with his horses, and returned Sunday morning.

John Leib, (Manheim.) 16 days, - - - - - 24 0 0 came in Saturday morning, went home with his horses, and returned Sunday morning.

---

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Would to God I had the eloquence of Cicero and the powers of Demosthenes! Would to God I possessed those irresistible abilities which in former ages animated the multitude in the cause of virtue, and spurred them on to noble deeds, which have bid defiance to oblivion, pierced through the gloom of ages, and triumphed over tottering towers and cities mouldered into dust! Freely would I exert all the force of reason, and all the influence of language, on this pressing, this important occasion. I would address you, my dear countrymen!—I do now address you, by all you hold most dear, to exert yourselves to the uttermost in this trying crisis of your affairs. What have you done? You have solemnly declared that you will not submit to be hewers of wood and drawers of water to any nation under Heaven. You have solemnly declared you will not, but through extreme necessity, yield up the fruits of your labour to the imperious hand of the spoiler. If you mean any thing by these declarations, why not exert yourselves in the determinate hour? Can any truth be more certain than this, that it is in your power by one manly effort, to cut off, or at least repel and disable, the enemies of your peace? and by that means leave your country free; leave your darling offspring free; and have your memories embalmed by the immortal blessings of a grateful posterity. Rouse, then, yourselves, ye noble spirits! Now, if ever, show yourselves to be worthy of that honour and happiness which is designed for you, if you have but the virtue to lay hold upon it. Should you now yield yourselves up to fruitless despair, or, by an ignominious lassitude, suffer your exulting enemy to cry Victory! Victory! what must be your miserable lot! You will be the objects of scorn and reproach! You will be a hissing amongst the nations, and the despised of the world. He is an American, he dare not be free, will be a proverb translated into every language. But this is not all: You will see your cities laid waste, or, if preserved, not preserved for your use, but for the use of those who toiled not in the building. Those apartments wherein you have long enjoyed all the endearing sweets of domestick happiness, will become confused scenes of the riot and debauchery of unlicensed strangers—and, shocking thought! your wives and daughters may perhaps be compelled to administer to their unruly joy! These are not the creatures of an over-heated imagination; they are but too probable realities; they are evils which you will yourselves be instrumental in realizing, if you do not now exert every possible effort to ward them off. Be not deceived; you are on the brink of a precipice; the abyss is dark and deep; an abyss of unfathomable woe! But your virtue, and your virtue only, can erect a wall of defence so firm and stable that the powers of Hell shall not prevail against it! Away, then, with all petty contests. Step forth like men—you must know, you must feel, that your cause is good. It is founded in virtue. It is founded in the common rights of mankind. Let it be supported, then, in such a manner as such a cause deserves.

Be not dismayed; your enemies are far from being invincible! What as yet are their great exploits? What their boasted triumph? They have never repulsed you with equal numbers on equal ground; they are not able to do it. If you have lost some men in this contest, they have lost more. Your resources are at hand; theirs at a great distance. Stir up yourselves, then, and chase these plunderers from your beloved country. Then, and not till then, can you call that beloved country your own. More need not be said; circumstances speak for themselves, and every incentive that called forth the spirit of heroism in every age now calls upon you—calls aloud upon you. Obey the sacred voice, and be forever free.

EPAMINONDAS.

Philadelphia, November 30, 1776.

---

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Riegart, the 30th November, 1776,—

Present: William Atlee, Edward Shippen, Lodwick Lowman, Michael Musser, Christopher Crawford, John Miller, William Bowsman, George Moore, Adam Reigart, Matthias Slough, Jacob Kriegh, Andrew Graff, Sebt. Graff. William Atlee in the chair.

The Officers appointed to guard the Prisoners to the Jerseys for exchange, represent that this severe season of the year, some liquor of some kind, either rum or whisky, is necessary for the men. It is therefore considered and agreed that they be allowed half a pint a man per day, which the officer will provide for before he sets off, and carry with the baggage-wagon, to deal out to the men. Also, that the wagoner, after their provision is out, eat with and draw provisions with the guard at the publick expense.

The Prisoners represent to the Committee that the allowance of half a ration for a woman, and half a ration for a child, agreeable to their former allowance, will not be sufficient for them on their march, and pray the sentiments of the Committee whether some further allowance ought not to be made to them. They say that heretofore many of the single men who worked with the inhabitants suffered their provisions to go to their rooms in the Barracks, which enabled the women and children to subsist, but as they shall now every one have occasion for their rations, the women and children must suffer. The Committee taking their request into consideration, are of opinion, that the honourable the Congress will not censure them for requesting Mr. Simons, the agent for the contractor, to increase the allowance for the women and children during their march, in manner following, to wit: By allowing the women a full ration, and for the children half a ration, and direct the Chairman to request that allowance be made them, and to charge the addition to the States.

There being a great number of wagons necessary to transport the baggage of the prisoners and the women and children, and the distance being so great that the wagoners cannot carry a sufficient quantity of fodder to last them to the end of their journey, and at the same time carry a proper load, it is the opinion of the Committee, that persons be appointed to go forward to provide feed for the wagoners, that they may not be detained by the way, and to superintend the different brigades and parties of wagons, as their wagon-master, on the march; and Frederick Sheffer is appointed to that service, he agreeing to execute it to the best of his abilities, and to find his own horse, and provide himself and horse in all provisions necessary at his own expense, at the rate of fifteen shillings per day; which it is agreed shall be allowed him for his trouble, services, and expenses, during this service.

*

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Brunswick, Saturday, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: I have been honoured with your favour of the 26th, and with its enclosures, by which I perceive the measures that have been adopted for forwarding a reinforcement of Militia. Their arrival is much to be wished; the situation of our affairs being truly alarming, and such as demands the earliest aids. As General Mifflin's presence may have a happy influence on the disposition and temper of many of the Associators, I shall not direct his return so long as he can be done without, and till it becomes indispensably necessary.

On Thursday morning I left Newark, and arrived here yesterday, with the troops that were there. It was the opinion of all the Generals who were with me, that a retreat to this place was requisite and founded in necessity, as our force was by no means sufficient to make a stand against the enemy, much superiour in number, with the least probability of success, and whose advanced guards were entering the town by the time our rear got out. It was the wish of all to have remained there longer, and to have halted before we came thus far; but upon due consideration of our strength, the circumstances attending the inlistment of a great part of our little force, and the frequent advices that the enemy were embarking, or about to embark another detachment for Staten-Island, with a view of landing at Amboy to coöperate with this, which seemed to be confirmed by the information of some persons who came from the island, that they were collecting and impressing all the wagons they could find, it was judged necessary to proceed till we came here, not only to prevent their bringing a force to act upon our front and rear, but also that we might be more convenient to oppose any troops they might land at South-Amboy, which many conjectured to be an object they had in view. This conjecture, too, had probability, and some advices to support it.

I hoped we should have met with large and early succours by this time; but as yet no great number of the Militia of this State has come in, nor have I much reason to expect that any considerable aid will be derived from the Counties which lie beyond this river, and in which the enemy are. Their situation will prevent it in a great measure from those parts where they are, provided the inclinations of the people were good. Added to this, I have no assurances that more than a very few of the troops composing the Flying-Camp will remain after the time of their engagement is out; so far from it, I am told that some of General Ewing's brigade, who stand engaged to the 1st of January, are now going away. If those go whose service expires this day, our force will be reduced to a mere handful.

From intelligence received this morning, one division of the enemy was advanced last night as far as Elizabethtown, and that some of their Quartermasters had proceeded about four or five miles on this side to provide barns, &c., for their accommodation. Other accounts say another division, composed of Hessians, are on the road through Springfield, and are reported to have reached that place last night. I do not know how far their views extend, but I doubt not they mean to push every advantage resulting from the small number and state of our troops. I early began to forward part of the stores from this place towards Philadelphia. Many are gone, the rest we are removing, and hope to secure.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. I have wrote to Governour Livingston, who is exerting himself to throw in every assistance, and to have guards placed at the ferries to prevent the return of the soldiers who are not discharged.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Head-Quarters, Brunswick, 30th November, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am to acknowledge the receipt of your favours of the 18th, 19th, and 23d instant, which, from the unsettled situation of our affairs, I have not been able to answer before.

That of the 18th encloses a list of stores taken in the Hancock and Adams, Continental ship, and carried into Dartmouth, New-England, with a resolve of Congress to deliver the muskets, powder, lead, and flints, to my order. As the other articles of the cargo will be full as useful to the Army as those included in the resolve, I would advise that directions be given to have the whole cargo removed from Dartmouth to some secure place in the neighbourhood of Philadelphia, and there deposited till called for. It is by no means proper that so great a quantity of military stores should be lodged with the Army, especially at present, as we know not to-day where we shall be obliged to remove to-morrow, and that will in all probability be the case while the enemy continue with a light army on this side the North River.

In answer to that part of yours of the 19th, in which you ask my advice as to the propriety of inlisting prisoners of war, I would just observe, that in my opinion it is neither consistent with the rules of war, nor politick. Nor can I think that because our enemies have committed an unjustifiable action by enticing, and in some instances intimidating, our men into their service, we ought to follow their example. Before I had the honour of yours on this subject, I had determined to remonstrate to General Howe on this head. As to those few who have already inlisted, I would not have them again withdrawn and sent in, because they might be subjected to punishment, but I would have the practice discontinued in future. If you will revert to the capitulation of St. John's and Chamblée, you will find an express stipulation against the inlisting the prisoners taken there.

I remarked that the inlistment of prisoners was not a politick step; my reason is this, that in time of danger I have always observed such persons most backward, for fear, I suppose, of falling into the hands of their former masters, from whom they expect no mercy; and this fear they are apt to communicate to their fellow-soldiers. They are also most ready to desert when an action is expected, hoping by carrying intelligence to secure their peace.

I met Captain Hesketh on the road, and as the situation of his family did not admit of delay, I permitted him to go immediately to New-York, not having the least doubt but General Howe will make a return of any officer of equal rank who shall be required.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Honourable Board of War.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON.

Head-Quarters, Brunswick, 30th November, 1776.

SIR: I have the pleasure and honour of acknowledging the receipt of yours of the 27th. General Williamson gives me small encouragement to hope for much assistance from the Militia of this State; indeed, some of the Counties, if they were willing, are intimidated from coming in, as the enemy have possession of the country. I hope the four regiments to be raised to serve till the 1st of April will be quickly full, as more dependence is to be put upon them than common Militia. The time of General Heard's brigade of Flying-Camp men, for this State, and that of General Beall's, from Maryland, expires this day; so that the Army will by that means suffer a very considerable diminution. But what is still worse, although most of the Pennsylvanians are inlisted till the 1st of January, I am informed that they are deserting in great numbers. I therefore entreat that you would, without loss of time, give orders to the officers of Militia on the roads and the ferries over Delaware, to take up and secure every soldier that has not a regular discharge or pass. In order to effect this, proper guards should be immediately posted.

I thank you most sincerely for your feelings for me at this time and upon this occasion. I will not, however, despair, but look forward with a hope that such reinforcements will yet arrive to my assistance as will enable me to prevent our common enemy from making much further progress.

I am, with every sentiment of respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To Governour Livingston, New-Jersey.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO ADJUTANT-GENERAL REED.

Brunswick, November 30th, 1776.

Dear Sir: The enclosed was put into my hands by an express from the White-Plains. Having no idea of its being a private letter, much less suspecting the tendency of the correspondence, I opened it, as I had done all other letters to you, from the same place and Peekskill, upon the business of your office, I conceived and found them to be.

This, as it is the truth, must be my excuse for seeing the contents of a letter which neither inclination or intention would have prompted me to.

I thank you for the trouble and fatigue you have undergone in your journey to Burlington, and sincerely wish that your labours may be crowned with the desired success. My best respects to Mrs. Reed.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To Joseph Reed, Esq., Adjutant-General, Burlington.

P. S. The petition referred to I keep.

Weekly Return of the First Regiment of Foot in the Continental services, commanded by Colonel Edward Hand.

| COMPANIES. | Commissioned Officers. | | | | Staff Officers. | | Non-Commissioned Officers. | | Rank and File. | | | | Wanting to complete. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Colonel. | Lieutenant Colonel. | Major. | Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Third Lieutenants. | Chaplain. | Adjutant. | Quartermaster. | Surgeon. | Mate. | Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Present, fit for duty. | Sick, present. | Sick, absent. | On command. | On furlough. | Total. | Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Privates. |
| Vacant | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Miller | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Chambers | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Green | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Parr | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Harris | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Grier | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Hamilton | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Captain Holliday | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Vacants | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Total | 1 | 1 | 1 | 6 | 6 | 8 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 24 | 15 | 216 | 40 | 52 | 22 | 4 | 364 | 5 | 3 | 356 |

N. B. Colonel Chambers and Captain Parrish absent; Lieutenant M'Connell on command; Lieutenant Matron sick, absent; Captain Smith resigned; 7 Sergeants sick, absent; 32 recruits without arms.

Brunswick, November 30, 1776.

Edw'd Hand, Colonel.

GENERAL SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, November 30, 1776.

My Lord: The service in which I have been employed since the departure of Captain Balfour, with advice of the reduction of New-York, would not allow of an earlier time to send an account to your Lordship of the progress made from that period.

The very strong positions the enemy had taken on this island, and fortified with incredible labour, determined me to get upon their principal communication with Connecticut, with a view of forcing them to quit the strong holds in the neighbourhood of King's Bridge, and, if possible, to bring them to action.

All previous arrangements being made, the Army embarked on the 12th of October, in flat-boats and other craft, and pressing through the dangerous navigation of Hell-Gate, in a very thick fog, landed on Frog's Neck, near the town of West-Chester, about nine in the morning, the Carrysfort frigate being placed to cover the descent. The presence of Lord Howe, the activity of Commodore Hotham, most of the Captains of the fleet, and of the Navy officers in general, were infinitely conducive to the King's service in this difficult movement; only one artillery boat was overset, having three six-pounders on board, which were lost, and three men drowned.

Lieutenant-General Earl Percy remained with two brigades of British, and one of the Hessians, in the lines near Haerlem, to cover New-York.

The Army remained in this situation until the stores and provisions could be brought up, and three battalions of Hessians drawn from Staten-Island, which, together with some bad weather intervening, occasioned a delay of five days.

On the 18th, several corps reëmbarked in flat-boats, and passing round Frog's Neck, landed on Pell's Point, at the mouth of Hutchinson's River; after which the main body crossed the mouth of that river to the same place, advanced immediately, and laid that night upon their arms, with the left upon a creek opposite to East-Chester, and the right near to Rochelle.

On the march to this ground, a skirmish ensued with a small party of the enemy posted to defend a narrow causeway, who were pursued for a mile, when a considerable body appearing in front behind stone-walls and in woods, some companies of Light-Infantry and a part of the Chasseurs were detached to dislodge them, which they did effectually. Lieutenant-Colonel Musgrave, commanding the First Battalion of Light-Infantry, and Captain Evelyn, of the Fourth Regiment, were both wounded; the latter is since dead, and much to be regretted as a gallant officer, but Lieutenant-Colonel Musgrave is in a fair way of recovery. Three soldiers were killed and twenty wounded. The enemy's loss upon this occasion was a Lieutenant-Colonel killed, a Major wounded, and about ninety men killed and wounded.

The part of the Sixteenth Light Dragoons that arrived with Lieutenant-Colonel Harcourt on the 3d instant, (one transport being still missing,) and the whole of the Seventeenth Light-Dragoons, joined the Army on the 20th.

On the 21st, the right and centre of the Army moved to a position about two miles to the northward of Rochelle, on the road to the White-Plains, leaving Lieutenant-General Heister, with two brigades of Hessians and one of British, to occupy the former ground. Lieutenant-Colonel Rogers, with his corps of Rangers, was detached to take possession of Mamaroneck, where the carelessness of his sentries exposed him to a surprise from a large body of the enemy, by which he lost a few men killed or taken; nevertheless, by a spirited exertion, he obliged them to retreat, leaving behind them some prisoners, and several killed and wounded.

The Sixth Brigade, commanded by Brigadier Agnew, was moved the 22d to sustain the post of Mamaroneck. On the same day, Lieutenant-General Knyphausen, with the second division of Hessians and regiment of Waldeckers, having arrived the 18th at New-York, landed at Rochelle, was ordered to remain there to cover the disembarkation of stores and provisions.

Upon the movement of the Army to Frog's Neck, the enemy detached a corps to White-Plains, and quitted their position about King's Bridge with some precipitation, leaving two thousand men for the defence of Fort Washington, extending their force behind the Bronx, from Valentine's Hill to White-Plains, in detached camps, every where intrenched; their left by this means covering an upper communication with Connecticut, as well as the road along the North River, it was judged expedient to move to White-Plains, and endeavour to bring them to an action.

Lieutenant-General Heister, with his corps, having orders to join on the march, the Army moved in two columns on the 25th, and took a position with the Bronx in front, the right of the line being at the distance of four miles from the White-Plains; upon which the Rebels immediately quitted their detached camps between King's Bridge and White-Plains, assembling their whole force at the latter place, behind intrenchments that had been thrown up by the advanced corps. The Army marched by the right in two columns towards White-Plains early on the 28th, Lieutenant-General Clinton leading the right, and Lieutenant-General Heister the left column. Before noon all the enemy's advanced parties were drove back to their works by the Light-Infantry and Chasseurs, and the Army formed with the right upon the road from Mamaroneck to the White-Plains, about a mile from the centre of their lines, and the left to the Brunx, near the same distance from the right flank of their intrenchments. A corps of the enemy was formed on a commanding ground, separated from the right flank of their intrenchments by the Brunx, which also, by changing its course nearly at right angles, separated this corps in front from the left of the King's Army. Colonel Raille, who commanded a brigade of Hessians on the left, observing this position of the enemy, and seeing a height on the other side of the Brunx unoccupied by them, from whence their flank might be galled, took possession of it with great alacrity, to the approbation of Lieutenant-General Heister, who was acquainted with this movement by Sir William Erskine. Upon viewing the situation, orders were given for a battalion of Hessians to pass the Brunx and attack this detached corps, supported by the Second Brigade of British, under the command of Brigadier-General Leslie, and the Hessian Grenadiers sent from the right commanded by Colonel Donop; giving directions at the same time for Colonel Raille to charge the enemy's flank as the Hessian battalion advanced to them in front; but there being some difficulty in passing the Brunx, the Twenty-Eighth and Thirty-Fifth Regiments, who were the first to support, passed it in a place most practicable, and formed on the opposite side, though under the enemy's fire, with the greatest steadiness; ascended the steep hill in defiance to all opposition, and rushing on the enemy, routed and drove them back from their works. These two battalions were closely supported by the Fifth and Forty-Ninth Regiments, who showed the same zeal to distinguish themselves; the Hessian Grenadiers also coming up, and passing the Brunx, ascended the height with the greatest alacrity and in the best order. This material post being gained, the Hessian Grenadiers were ordered forward upon the heights within cannon-shot of the intrenchments, the Brunx from its winding course being still between them and the enemy's right flank; the Second Brigade of British formed in the rear of the Hessian Grenadiers, and the two brigades of Hessians on the left of the Second Brigade, with their left upon the road leading from Terry-Town to White-Plains. The right and centre of the Army did not remove from their ground. In this position the troops lay upon their arms that night, and with very little alteration encamped next day. The officers and men of the British and Hessian Artillery deserve much commendation for their active services on this occasion.

The killed, wounded, and prisoners taken from the enemy during the course of this day is said to be not less than two hundred and fifty. The loss of his Majesty's troops and allies was small, as your Lordship will observe by the general return, considering the strength of the ground from whence the enemy was forced; though the loss of Lieutenant-Colonel Carr, of the Thirty-Fifth Regiment, who died the next day of his wounds, is much to be lamented.

The enemy drew back their encampment on the night of the 28th; and observing their lines next morning much strengthened by additional works, the designed attack upon them was deferred; and the Fourth Brigade, left with Lord Percy, with two battalions of the Sixth Brigade, were ordered to join the Army. These battalions having joined on the 30th, in the afternoon, a disposition was made for the attack next day; but the night and morning proving very wet it was postponed. In the mean time the Rebels having intelligence by a deserter of their danger, most prudently evacuated their camp in the night of the 1st of November, after setting fire to all the houses in and near their lines, most of which were consumed, and retired with their main force towards North-Castle, leaving a strong rear guard upon the heights and in the woods, for one mile back from their intrenchments, the possession of which was immediately taken, and the Hessian Grenadiers remained upon the ground. All these motions plainly indicating the enemy's design to avoid coming to action, I did not think the driving their rear guard further back an object of the least consequence.

Lieutenant-General Knyphausen being ordered on the 28th of October to leave the regiment of Waldeck at Rochelle, and to move with the six battalions of Hessians of his corps towards King's Bridge, took post at Mile Square and Valentine's Hill, and on the 2d of November encamped on the Island of New-York, near to King's Bridge; the enemy quitting the heights of Fordham upon his approach retired to Fort Washington. The Army was ordered on the 3d to provide three days' forage; and the next day Major-General Grant marched with the Fourth Brigade to Mile Square and Valentine's Hill; the Sixth Brigade to a bridge over the Brunx, in West-Chester, near De Lancey's Mills; and the Waldeck regiment took post at another, three miles above the former, on the same river. On the 6th the Army encamped at Dobbs's Ferry, upon the North River. When this movement was made the Rebels came down from their strong holds, burning what they had not before destroyed at White-Plains, and distressing the inhabitants by small parties in a most wanton degree. The park of Artillery moved to King's Bridge on the 7th, under a strong escort, with a detachment of Chasseurs, to join Lieutenant-General Knyphausen. Four battalions of Light Infantry, and the remainder of the Chasseurs, with four field-pieces, took post next day on the communication to King's Bridge. On the 10th a brigade of Hessians was sent as a reinforcement to Lieutenant-General Knyphausen. On the 12th the Army marched in two columns towards King's Bridge, and encamped the day following upon the heights of Fordham, forming a line with the right to the Brunx, upon the West-Chester road, and the left to the North River.

During the continuance of the Army at Dobbs's Ferry the enemy sent a large detachment over the North River, by King's Ferry, to Jersey, and were employed in intrenching at Croton Bridge and White-Plains, and building barracks at those places, and at Peek's Kill, near the foot of the Highlands, for their winter habitations. Lieutenant-General Knyphausen had for some days established his post on the York side of King's Bridge, within cannon-shot of Fort Washington, which was covered by very strong ground, and exceeding difficult of access; but the importance of this post, which, with Fort Lee on the opposite shore of Jersey, kept the enemy in command of the navigation of the North River, while it barred the communication with York by land, made the possession of it absolutely necessary. Preparations were therefore made for a general attack, and thirty flat-boats, under the direction of Captains Wilkinson and Molloy, passed up the North River on the night of the 14th, undiscovered by the enemy. Every thing being prepared, and the attack fixed for the morning of the 16th, Lieutenant-Colonel Patterson, Adjutant-General, was sent the 15th to summon the commanding officer to surrender, and to warn him of the consequences that must attend a general attack; to which he replied, he would defend himself to the last extremity. Four attacks were determined upon, the first under the command of Lieutenant-General Knyphausen against the enemy's left, on the side of King's Bridge, in two columns, formed by detachments from the Hessians of his corps, the brigade of Raille, and regiment of Waldeck. The second by the First and Second Battalions of Light Infantry, and two battalions of Guards, under the command of Brigadier-General Mathew, to land by Haerlem creek upon the enemy's right, from thirty flat-boats; which attack was to be supported by the First and Second Grenadiers and Thirty-Third Regiment, under the command of Lord Cornwallis. The third attack, intended as a feint, by the Forty-Second Regiment, to be embarked in batteaus in a creek opposite to Colonel Morris's house, and upon the left of the enemy's lines towards New-York. The fourth by Lord Percy, with the corps under his command, on York-Island, to assault the right flank of the enemy's intrenchments on that side.

The field artillery and batteries being properly disposed for the three attacks on the side of King's Bridge and Haerlem creek, Lieutenant-General Knyphausen moved forward about noon, but having a very thick wood to pass, in which the enemy was very advantageously posted, it was some time before he could penetrate; from which difficulties his corps was for a considerable time exposed to the fire of three pieces of cannon. As soon as this attack began the Light Infantry moved, and landed under a brisk fire, before and after they had quitted the boats, from a party of the Rebels posted behind rocks and trees; however, by getting up a very steep, uneven mountain, with their usual activity, they soon dispersed the enemy. The Guards, followed by the Grenadiers and Thirty-Third, landed without any loss. Intelligence in the mean time being received that Lord Percy had carried an advanced work, orders were sent Lieutenant-Colonel Stirling, commanding the Forty-Second Regiment, to endeavour to land, and for two battalions of the Second Brigade to support him. Upon which he immediatly advanced in his boats through a heavy fire, with great perseverance, and forcing his way up a steep height, which was well defended by a body of the Rebels, he gained the summit, took one hundred and seventy prisoners, and penetrating across the island, facilitated Lord Percy's success against the enemy's lines opposed to him, which his Lordship passed.

Colonel Raille, who led the right column of Lieutenant-General Knyphausen's attack, having, after a considerable opposition, forced the enemy from their strong holds, pushed forward to their advanced works, and lodged his column within one hundred yards of the fort, from whence he summoned them to surrender, upon which they readily desired to treat.

Lieutenant-General Knyphausen's column having more impediments to encounter in passing through the wood, could not join the right column until they had got up to the fort. The enemy upon his appearance, surrendered prisoners of war, to the number of two thousand seven hundred, including officers, besides the prisoners made by the Forty-Second Regiment. The enemy had three officers and fifty men killed, and six officers and ninety men wounded, in the different attacks.

Fort Lee being the next object for the entire command of the North River, and a ready road to penetrate into Jersey, an addition of boats under the command of Captain Phipps was sent by the Admiral to King's Bridge, in the night of the 17th, without being discovered by the enemy. The first division for embarkation landed next day, at eight o'clock in the morning, about seven miles above the fort, while the second division marched up the east side of the river, by which movement the whole corps, as per margin,* were landed, with their cannon, by ten o'clock, under the command of Lieutenant-General Earl Cornwallis. The seamen distinguished themselves remarkably upon this occasion, by their readiness to drag the cannon up a rocky narrow road, for near half a mile to the top of a precipice, which bounds the shore for some miles on the west side.

Lord Cornwallis immediately began his march, and had not the enemy at Fort Lee been apprised of his moving towards them by a countryman, after he had proceeded some distance, he would have surrounded two thousand men at the fort, who escaped in the utmost confusion, leaving all their artillery and a large quantity of stores and provisions, their tents standing, and kettle upon the fire. His Lordship encamped that night near the fort, making use of the enemy's tents.

The next day Major-General Vaughan, with the Light Infantry and British Grenadiers, was detached to the new bridge upon Hackinsac river, and a detachment of the Sixteenth Dragoons, under the command of Colonel Harcourt, was sent over to Fort Lee. This detachment, with some companies of Light Infantry, scoured the country on the 22d, as far as Pisaick river, and found the enemy had abandoned all the intermediate country, their advanced guard being at Aquakinunc. On the 24th, the Second and Fourth Brigades of British, and one battalion of the Seventy-First Regiment, joined his Lordship, who, leaving the Second Brigade at Fort Lee, advanced with the main body on the 25th to the new bridge. On the enemy retiring from Newark, as his Lordship approached, he took possession of that place on the 28th, and is now following them, retreating towards Brunswick.

I cannot too highly acknowledge the active services of Lieutenant-General Clinton on every occasion, the support I have at all times received from the other General Officers, and the zealous ardour of all ranks whatsoever, during the course of this campaign.

The Hessian troops, under the command of Lieutenant-Generals Heister and Knyphausen, have also exhibited every good disposition to promote his Majesty's interests, and justly merit my acknowledgment of their services.

I have the honour to be, &c., &c.,

W. Howe.

* First and second battalions of Light Infantry, two companies of Chasseurs, two battalions of British and two ditto of Hessian Grenadiers, two battalions of Guards, Thirty-Third and Forty-Second Regiments.

GENERAL SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 30th November, 1776.

My Lord: The troops being upon the eve of going into winter cantonments, I trouble your Lordship with this separate letter respecting the succeeding operation of the present campaign, and with some particulars relative to the next.

Lieutenant-Generals Clinton and Lord Percy are under orders to sail with the first fair wind to take possession of Rhode-Island, having a force exceeding six thousand rank and file, which I judge to be sufficient for the operation; and although the expedition may miscarry, from the late season of the year, yet, on account of the great importance of the object, I have hazarded the consequences of a disappointment from that cause, not doubting of success if the weather proves tolerably favourable. In this opinion I am strengthened by the cheerfulness with which it is undertaken by the two Generals to be employed, and from the little preparation the enemy has made to defend it, by the latest intelligence received.

In consequence of my expectation that Lord Cornwallis will shortly be in possession of East Jersey, I propose to quarter a large body of troops in that district, without which we should be under much difficulty to find covering, forage, and supplies of fresh provisions for the Army. The plan of the enemy, by their publick orders, is to destroy all species of forage and stock as they retire before his Majesty's troops, which I am hopeful they will not have time to accomplish; and their further design seems to be, to retreat behind the Rariton river, or perhaps behind the Delaware, to cover Philadelphia.

By the best information from the northward, I learn the Army from Canada was obliged, by the severity of the weather, to repass the lake from Crown-Point on the 5th instant, from which event, and a consideration of the difficulties that Army must meet with before it reaches Albany in the course of next campaign, it is reasonable to conclude this will not be effected earlier than the month of September. In that persuasion, I would humbly mention my ideas for the operations of the next campaign, with the force they may require, in order, if possible, to finish the war in one year, by an extensive and vigorous exertion of his Majesty's arms.

1st. An offensive Army of ten thousand rank and file, to act on the side of Rhode-Island, by taking possession of Providence, penetrating from thence into the country towards Boston, and, if possible, to reduce that town; two thousand men to be left for the defence of Rhode-Island, and for making small incursions, under the protection of the shipping, upon the coast of Connecticut. This Army to be commanded by Lieutenant-General Clinton.

2d. An offensive Army in the Province of New-York, to move up the North River to Albany, to consist of not less than ten thousand men, and five thousand for the defence of New-York and adjacent posts.

3d. A defensive Army of eight thousand men to cover Jersey, and to keep the Southern Army in check, by giving a jealousy to Philadelphia, which I would propose to attack in autumn, as well as Virginia, provided the success of other operations will admit of an adequate force to be sent against that Province.

South-Carolina and Georgia must be the objects for winter. But to complete this plan, not less than ten ships-of-the-line will be absolutely requisite, and a reinforcement of troops to the amount of fifteen thousand rank and file, which I should hope may be had from Russia, or from Hanover, and other German States, particularly some Hanoverian Chasseurs, who, I am well informed, are exceeding good troops.

By this calculation, the Army in the southern district would consist of thirty-five thousand effective men, to oppose fifty thousand that the American Congress has voted for the service of next campaign.

The enemy, though much depressed at the success of his Majesty's arms, are encouraged by the strongest assurances from their leaders of procuring assistance from foreign Powers, for which end it is understood that Dr. Franklin is gone to France, to solicit aid from that Court. I do not presume to point out a way of counteracting him; but were that effected, and the force I have mentioned sent out, it would strike such terrour through the country that little resistance would be made to the progress of his Majesty's arms in the Provinces of New-England, New-York, the Jerseys, and Pennsylvania, after the junction of the Northern and Southern Armies.

As the Army must, at all events, be much divided in the ensuing campaign, I beg leave earnestly to solicit your Lordship for an additional battalion of Artillery, for the good effects of which I can be responsible from the great terrour of the enemy on all past occasions where the Artillery has appeared. A few light six and three-pounders will also be wanted on this plan of operations.

I beg leave, at the same time, to request an additional number of officers to the Guards, who, when complete, have only three to one hundred men, whereas in some companies there are only two; and although the men behave with great spirit, yet the temptations of plunder are so great that it is not in the power of a few officers to keep the men under restraint.

The date of the King's warrant for my appointments to vacant commissions being on the 22d of June, and superseding the authority given in your Lordship's letter of the 12th of said month, I shall not presume to post to any vacancies that may happen in the detachment of Guards; neither would it be in any degree essential to the interests of his Majesty's service that I should exercise this power, since the number of officers would not be thereby augmented.

The remount and additional horses for the Light Dragoons I hope may be sent out early, as the good services they have performed this campaign, and the dread the enemy have of them, has been fully experienced upon every occasion. I therefore beg leave to request that three hundred horses, with saddles and accoutrements, may be sent out in March for this service, and I could wish to have them from Ireland, as more hardy and more accustomed to get over fences than the horses from England.

Colonel Prescot, commanding at St. Augustine, has requested to have the rank of Brigadier-General upon the American service, and knowing him to be a worthy, good officer, I beg leave to recommend him to his Majesty's favour.

I also beg leave to recommend Dr. Morris, physician, who has served this and the last campaign to general satisfaction and with great credit to himself, to be Inspector of the Hospitals of this Army. As it must be much divided in the course of this winter and the next campaign, I apprehend such an appointment in his favour will be for the interest of his Majesty's service.

I am, &c., W. Howe.

---

PROCLAMATION BY LORD HOWE.

By Richard Viscount Howe, of the Kingdom of Ireland, and William Howe, Esq., General of his Majesty's Forces in America, the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to his Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in North America, &c.:

Proclamation.

Whereas, by our Declarations of the 14th of July, and 19th of September last, in pursuance of his Majesty's most gracious intentions towards his subjects in the Colonies or Provinces of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the three lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, all persons speedily returning to their just allegiance were promised a free and general pardon, and were invited to accept not only the blessings of peace, but a secure enjoyment of their liberties and properties, upon the true principles of the Constitution: And whereas, notwithstanding the said declarations, and the example of many who have availed themselves of the assurances therein made, several bodies of armed men, in open contempt of his Majesty's proffered clemency, do still continue their opposition to the establishment of legal government and peace; and divers other ill-disposed persons, pursuing their own ambitious purposes in the exercise of a lawless influence and power, are using fresh endeavours, by various arts and misrepresentations, to alienate the confidence and affection of his Majesty's subjects; to defeat every plan of reconciliation, and to prolong the unnatural war between Great Britain and her Colonies: Now, in order to the more effectual accomplishment of his Majesty's most gracious intentions, and the speedy restoration of the publick tranquillity; and duly considering the expediency of limiting the time within which such pardon as aforesaid shall be granted, and of specifying the terms upon which only the same shall and may be obtained: We do, in his Majesty's name, and by virtue of the powers committed to us, hereby charge and command all persons whatsoever, who are assembled together in arms against his Majesty's government, to disband themselves and return to their dwellings, there to remain in a peaceable and quiet manner; and we also charge and command all such other persons as are assembled together under the name of General or Provincial Congresses, Committees, Conventions, or other associations, by whatever name or names known and distinguished, or who, under the colour of any authority from any such Congress, Committee, Convention, and other association, take upon them to issue or execute any orders for levying money, raising troops, fitting out armed ships and vessels, imprisoning, or otherwise molesting his Majesty's subjects, to desist and cease from all such treasonable actings and doings, and to relinquish all such usurped power and authority, so that peace may be restored, a speedy remission of past offences quiet the apprehensions of the guilty, and all the inhabitants of the said Colonies be enabled to reap the benefit of his Majesty's paternal goodness in the preservation of their property, the restoration of their commerce, and the security of their most valuable rights, under the just and moderate authority of the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain: And we do hereby declare, and make known to all men, that every person, who within sixty days from the day of the date hereof, shall appear before the Governour, or Lieutenant-Governour, or Commander-in-Chief, in any of his Majesty's Colonies or Provinces aforesaid, or before the General or Commanding Officer of his Majesty's forces in America, or any other officer in his Majesty's service having the command of any detachment or parties of his Majesty's forces there, or before the Admiral or Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's fleets, or any other officer commanding any of his Majesty's ships of war, or any armed vessel in his Majesty's service, within any of the ports, havens, creeks, or upon the coasts of America, and shall claim the benefit of this Proclamation, and at the same time testify his obedience to the laws, by subscribing a declaration in the words following: "I, A. B., do promise and declare, that I will remain in a peaceable obedience to his Majesty, and will not take up arms, nor encourage others to take up arms, in opposition to his authority," shall and may obtain a full and free pardon of all treasons and misprisions of treasons, by him heretofore committed or done, and of all forfeitures, attainders, and penalties for the same; and upon producing to us, or to either of us, a certificate of such his appearance and declaration, shall and may have and receive such pardon made and passed to him in due form.

Given at New-York, this thirtieth day of November, 1776.

Howe.
W. Howe.

By command of their Excellencies:

Henry Strachey.

[It was remarked, as extraordinary, that the oath in this Proclamation says not a word about Parliament, or Legislative authority, which was the cause of the war; but that it requires purely an implicit submission to the King, and to him alone.]—Rem.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON, DATED NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 30, 1776.

Our Army moulders away amazingly; many die by the sword, many by sickness, brought on by the bad provisions we have had from Ireland; others by the inclemency of the weather; and I am afraid great numbers will not see the winter over. This climate, and such provisions as we have, (for the Provincials clear the country as they go of all kinds of necessaries of life,) agree with none but those who are inured to hardships, and are brought up with the most ordinary food. I wish Government would look after the contractors, for without we are supplied with wholesome necessaries of life, it cannot be expected we shall long fight their battles.

GENERAL SCOTT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp at Haverstraw, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: By express last evening from General Heath, I received an extract of a letter from Head-Quarters to him, dated 27th instant, in which it is mentioned that your Excellency is assured of my exertions to influence my troops to continue in service with General Heath fifteen or twenty days longer.

You have doubtless, sir, been apprised by that gentleman of the reason of my coming hither. But lest it should be otherwise, give me leave to mention, that an application to him, by Colonel Hay, of this place, a gentleman uncommonly spirited in the publick cause, representing the exposed state of this part of the country by reason of the vicinity of the enemy, and the great number of Tories between this and the enemy's Army, he thought proper to consult with his Brigadiers on the subject, who advised him to throw a body of troops across the river. This measure being approved by him, he inquired what troops should be sent, upon which I offered my service with my brigade. On the 25th, in the evening, I received my orders for crossing, "to cover the stores on this side the river, and to prevent the advances of the enemy into the passes of the Highlands, should they attempt it." Early in the morning I moved, and arrived here about the middle of the day; and on inquiry found Colonel Hays's fears too well grounded. Therefore, after making the necessary disposition of the troops, and on considering that the few remaining days of service would put it out of my power to answer the end for which I came, I immediately wrote a most pressing letter to our Convention, requesting them to conjure the troops, in the strongest terms, to continue one month longer in the service, and to offer them a gratuity to induce them to do it. However, before my letter had reached the Convention, they had taken up the subject, as you will see by No. 1, enclosed, which came to hand yesterday. The Convention, however, on receipt of my letter, came to the resolves, No. 2. Upon receipt of them I paraded the brigade, formed them into a circle, and from the centre published the two sets of resolves, and in the best and most animated manner I could, urged a compliance with them. I then retired and left them to free consultation; and on my return, desired the officers, who chose to continue with me in the service, to join me in the centre, at the same time offering my month's pay to the non-commissioned and privates, as a further encouragement to them to follow the example of their leaders. All the commissioned officers present, except five Captains and subs and two Adjutants, immediately joined me. This circumstance gave me flattering hopes; but, alas, sir, I have been deceived; for upon ordering the officers to bring me in returns of those who are willing to continue, which they have done, I am convinced that I cannot retain thirty. However, I shall immediately put the passage of the letter above alluded to into brigade orders, hoping that your Excellency's application, and the short term you propose, may have the desired effect.

You will be waited upon, sir, by some of my officers with their abstracts. I am sorry to inform that the detention of their pay has been made a great handle by the leaders of the opposition. I therefore earnestly beseech your Excellency to despatch the warrants, as the men will wait till the officers return, and they are directed to ride night and day.

I take the liberty to enclose the abstracts for myself and Major Fish, on which I beg your Excellency's warrant.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

His Excellency General Washington.

—

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, } Fishkill, November 25th, 1776. }

Whereas the period of service of the brigade of Militia of this State, under the command of Brigadier-General Scott, as well as that of the detachment of Militia stationed in the Forts in the Highlands, commanded by Colonel Snyder, will soon expire; and whereas, from the invasion of this State in different parts, and the measures necessary for its protection and security, an unavoidable delay has been occasioned in the inlisting and raising the four Battalions of troops in this State for the Continental service; and whereas our merciless enemy, who have laid waste with unrelenting fury such parts of this State as unhappily became a prey to their vengeance and rapacity, have been encouraged by a season uncommonly favourable, and the hopes of the diminution of the Continental forces and the Militia, on account of the expiration of their times of service, to protract their military operations, and to proceed in spreading ruin and desolation throughout such parts of this injured country as they find defenceless and open to their barbarous incursions; and the further services of the said brigade and detachment of Militia being from these important considerations indispensable; and forasmuch as, from the present motions of the enemy, it is highly probable that all the Militia of this State will speedily be called forth into actual service; this Committee of Safety do therefore

Resolve, That in their opinion the said Brigade and Detachment of Militia ought to continue in service until the last day of December next, on the same pay and rations which have been hitherto provided for them, unless, from the situation of the enemy, they can be sooner discharged with safety.

And this Committee are persuaded that when they seriously reflect on the situation of their bleeding country, the miseries to which their friends and their families must be exposed by the further progress of their inhuman enemy, and the disgrace of deserting the service at so critical a period; when they consider that their retiring can procure them but a few days of ease, inglorious in the enjoyment and bitter in reflection, since it must invite their inveterate foes to pursue and seek them out in their very retirement; when they remember the righteous cause in which they are engaged, in common with a whole Continent, and the inestimable value of the blessings of freedom and security, for which they contend; and when, finally, they contemplate the glory which must be acquired in bravely defending their country against the hand of tyranny and oppression, their fathers, their families, their relations, and their friends, from rapine, plunder, and slaughter, and their females from indignities worse than death;—from motives so powerful; from every argument of interest, honour, duty, and self-preservation, as well as experience of their courage and patriotism, this Committee entertain not the least doubt but that the officers and privates of the said Brigade and Detachment will, with the utmost cheerfulness and alacrity, comply with this resolve, and continue to exert and distinguish themselves as brave, steady, and virtuous citizens and soldiers, and thus recommend themselves to the protection of Heaven and the regard and gratitude of their distressed country.

Ordered, That copies of this Resolution be immediately transmitted to General James Clinton and General Scott, and that the same be published at the head of every Regiment in General Scott's Brigade, and of every Company of the Detachment commanded by Colonel Snyder.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

—

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, } Fishkill, November 27, 1776. }

Resolved, That the thanks of the Representatives of this State be given to Brigadier-General Scott for his patriotick offer of continuing in service for the space of one month without pay, in order to stop the ravage of a cruel enemy.

Resolved, That Brigadier-General Scott be authorized and requested to continue in service for the space of one month, and that he be entitled to the same appointments with the other Brigadiers-General in the Continental service.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Representatives of this State be given to the Officers and Men of General Scott's Brigade for the spirit, alacrity, and perseverance which they have exercised in defence of their injured and invaded country.

Resolved, That the sum of £1,500 be given as a gratuity to the Non-commissioned Officers and Privates inlisted in this State, who at present compose General Scott's Brigade; and General Scott and the Colonels of the New-York Regiments in his Brigade are requested to dispose of the same in such a manner as they shall deem most equitable and advancive of the publick interest.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of this State transmit the said sum of £1,500 to General Scott, taking his receipt for the same.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

GENERAL SCOTT TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Camp at Haverstraw, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour of writing to you last, I have had a return of those in my brigade willing to continue a month in the service, their number too trifling to be mentioned.

Having, however, received last night an extract (a copy of which is enclosed) from a letter from Head-Quarters to General Heath, I put it in brigade orders this day, with some arguments for a compliance, which I fear will prove ineffectual, as I am informed Lieutenant-Colonel Hardenbergh and some of his men are already gone off, and many others of the brigade are in a state of motion. I have also taken care to put out in orders what I thought necessary for securing the supplies furnished to my brigades by the State. I hope the Colonels will attend to them. I expect to be at Fishkill on Monday night; for I am sure nothing less than an almighty power will hold my brigade.

I have this day wrote to General Washington an account of the steps taken by the Convention and myself to detain the brigade a little longer in the service. This I thought necessary for the justification of both. I am told with certainty, that two brigades from the other side are to cross immediately. I therefore most sincerely regret the obstinacy of my soldiers. A body of four or five thousand men to fall on the enemy's rear, would probably, while General Washington, who is confidently reported to be fifteen thousand strong, engaged them in front, night probably do signal service, especially if the following account be true, which I had from a Major Clark, who had a command of a party to cover the removal of the stores from Tapan, which is completed, and he now on his way to join General Washington's Army. It is safe for him in his march to take a detour. He is now on it. His letter to me is dated yesterday, at the New-City, at the Court-House. He says, "two persons, who made their escape from the enemy yesterday, one of whom was taken at Fort Washington, the other at Fort Lee, bring certain intelligence, that upwards of ten thousand of the enemy embarked under the command of General Clinton last Sunday, on board their transports, and sailed, the place of their destination not known, said to be Carolina or Rhode-Island, (query, if not to Capes of Delaware;) seven thousand remain at Hackensack and Fort Lee, under command of Lord Cornwallis, who is ordered to England immediately. Dunmore already gone. General Howe remains at present in New-York. A great number of the enemy were killed at Fort Washington, chiefly Hessians. Doctor Pell confirms this, who came to my quarters yesterday from Fort Lee."

The embarkation we have had an account of from different quarters. I begin now to credit it. I am well informed that the enemy are moved so far down that Hackinsack is guarded by Tories, of which this country is full, whose insolence I would have undertaken to correct, had I been able to continue in the service.

If I should collect any further intelligence, I shall, I suppose, be the bearer of it in person.

I have the honour to be, sir, yours and the Convention's most obedient servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

The honourable the Chairman of the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York.

Extract referred to—Letter dated 27th instant.

"His Excellency requests that you will mention to General Scott the expediency of his brigade's continuing in service with you, [meaning General Heath,] for fifteen or twenty days more than they engaged for. The importance of the measure will be obvious to General Scott, and his Excellency is well assured that his exertions will be employed to influence his troops to stay. Many advantages will be derived from it. On the other hand, their departure at this time, when the weather is so favourable to the enemy's plans, may be attended with sundry bad and alarming consequences."

HENRY WISNER TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT AND WILLIAM DUER.

Goshen, 30th of November, 1776.

SIR: When I got near home, I found that several of my neighbours had collected a drove of cattle together, amounting to some more than four hundred and fifty, which they had sold for the use of the American Army, and are to drive them to some place in Jersey, there to be salted for the use of the Flying-Camp.

And as it is so uncertain where our enemy will stop, or where the beef may be kept safe in New-Jersey, I have taken the liberty to suggest to you, whether it will not be best to have them killed and salted in some proper places on this side the Highlands. I have also made bold to advise that they be not drove any farther till I may hear from you on the subject. I am informed the British troops were near Newark day before yesterday. If you should be of my opinion, you had best to send immediately.

Write to Stephen Gilberd, who will be with the drove at Gerrit Miller's, in Smith's Clove.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

HENRY WISNER.

To Pierre Cortlandt and William Duer, Esqs.

GENERAL SPENCER TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp at North-Castle, 30th November, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have sent under guard to receive your direction and further determination, two prisoners, taken on suspicion of unfriendliness to these States, viz: Captain Benjamin Vermillia and John Vermillia. For particulars relative to them, I refer your Honour to the account given in the enclosed papers; and am, with great respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JO. SPENCER.

P. S. December 5, 1776.—Having delayed sending the above persons until this time, I have sent to your care a number of others also, with the above. Three of them was taken yesterday by a scouting party, viz: Thomas Ellis, Benjamin Booth, and William Patterson. They owned they had joined the enemy. I suppose were going home on a mischievous design. There is a number of others I conclude will likewise be sent forward with these. They are all supposed to be so very dangerous to these States as renders it very needful to confine them. Suppose they will all be sent forward to the Convention of this State, but that is submitted to your wisdom. I received intelligence yesterday from General Wooster, that he had discovered about seventy sail of men-of-war and transports off Merrimack and New-Rochelle, standing to the eastward with a fair wind. Their destination is uncertain, probably for Newport, as they keep under the Long-Island shore. In consequence of General Lee's desire, I have ordered the regiment commanded by the late Colonels Seldon and Gay, consisting of four hundred men, to march this day to join your command. J. S.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Peekskill, November ye 30th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours last night, dated the 27th, from Newark. You complain of my not being in motion sooner. I do assure you that I have done all in my power, and shall explain my difficulties when we have both leisure. I did not succeed with Rogers, and merely owing to the timidity or caution of the enemy, who contracted themselves into a compact body very suddenly. I am in hopes I shall be able to render you more service than had I moved sooner. I think I shall enter the Province of Jersey with four thousand firm and willing troops, who will make a very important diversion. Had I stirred sooner, I should have only led an inferior number of unwilling. The day after to-morrow we shall pass the river, when I shall be glad to receive your instructions; but I could wish you would bind me as little as possible, not from any opinion, I do assure you, of my own parts, but from a persuasion that detached Generals cannot have too great latitude, unless they are very incompetent indeed.

Adieu, my dear sir. Yours, most affectionately,

CHARLES LEE.

His Excellency General Washington, Elizabeth-Town.

P. S. I have just been speaking with General Heath, the strictness of whose instructions a good deal distress me.* I could have replaced the few I require, by men who are able to do stationary duty, but not to make expeditious marches. My numbers will in consequence be fewer than I promised.

---

GENERAL LEE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Camp Croton Pond, November 30, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The affairs of America are in a more alarming situation every day. The enemy have passed the Passaic; unless, therefore, the New-England Provinces exert themselves not only vigorously, but essentially, we are lost. General Washington has ordered me with the Continental troops over the river. This measure may be necessary for the safety of the Jerseys, or perhaps even for Philadelphia, but the hardships that the men must encounter at this season of the year will, I apprehend, prevent very considerably, if not entirely, the recruiting the new Army; and unless an Army is formed, and immediately, you must submit to the yoke prepared. If this Army cannot be formed in the mode proposed, by volunteers, which at best is a very bad mode, it follows that some other must be adopted. The scheme that I would propose is what ought to have pointed itself out at first; it is that which all countries have adopted; for when the soldiers of a community are composed of volunteers, war becomes quite a distinct profession. The arms of a Republic gets into the hands of its worst members. Volunteers being composed in general of the most idle, vicious, and dissolute part of every society, the usual catastrophe is, that they become the tools of some General more artful than the rest, and finally turn the arms put into their hands for the defence of their country, against their country's bosom. This has and must be the fate of every people who have not wisdom enough to make, and virtue enough to submit to, laws which oblige every citizen to serve in his turn as a soldier. It may be answered that your Militia is established on this principle. But your Militia, from the incompetency of their officers, or some other vice in its constitution, manifestly does not answer the purposes. I would therefore take the liberty to propose, as the Army will probably not be raised by volunteers, and as an Army so composed is at best a very dangerous remedy, that you should fill your regiments by drafts from your Militia. Let every seventh man be obliged to serve in the regular regiments for one year, and you will have an Army immediately, excellent in all respects, formidable against the external enemy, and less dangerous to their fellow-citizens.

I hope to God your Governments have energy sufficient to accomplish the point; and I hope your gentlemen of the first distinction and property have patriotism to lead the way in submitting to so necessary and wholesome a regulation. If you have not, there are only two things left to your choice: either to call in the troops of France and Spain, or submit unconditionally to the tyranny of Britain. If your gentlemen lead the way in cheerfully obeying the summons of their country, I am myself persuaded the people will cheerfully follow. For God's sake, sir, convince them of the necessity. Suffer not a spark of whatever virtue amongst you to be latent. Now is the time to call it all into action.

In this pious work, that God Almighty may assist you, is the most fervent prayer of one who is, dear sir, most truly yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To the Honourable James Bowdoin.

N. B. Our want of blankets and stores is every day more crying. I would be much obliged to you, as this scheme will be applicable to New-Hampshire, to send them a copy.

---

EXAMINATION OF TWO DESERTERS FROM NEW-YORK.

Peekskill, November 30th, 1776.

William Doning and John Beaver, both of the Third Battalion, Pennsylvanians, were taken at Fort Washington 16th instant, and escaped from New-York the 22d, testify that the enemy are making a large embarkation of troops, as is reported, for Carolina. That a number of cannon, twenty-four-pounders and downwards, were moved down to the wharves. That thirteen large transports and frigates hauled off on the 27th, and that the soldiers said they had troops on board, and that they saw troops, and frequently heard them march by the French Church, in which they were confined. That two brigades, to wit: one of British and one Hessians, were to remain at Fort Washington this winter, and one brigade in the city. That there were five or six thousand men in the Jerseys. That the talk was that they should be reinforced the next spring by a body of Russian troops, when they will give us a sweat, &c.

---

COURT MARTIAL.

At a General Court Martial, held at the house of John Mandvel, on Saturday, the 30th of November, anno Domini 1776. Present: Colonel Ward, President; Colonel Hammon, Major Woods, Captain Nuting, Captain Moss, Captain Reynolds, Captain Scott, Captain Sumney, Captain Brown, Captain Perce, Captain Hunter, Captain Barlow, Captain Pain. Captain Godwin, Judge-Advocate. President and members sworn.

Francis Looly, prisoner, brought before this court on a charge for sleeping on his post. The charge being read to the prisoner, pleads guilty. The court taking the matter into mature deliberation, and from several circumstances appearing to this court, are of opinion that the prisoner is incapable of being any service to the United States, in the capacity of a soldier, by reason of his nonage and other inabilities, do order that he be fined the sum of ten shillings, New-York currency, and be dismissed from the service.

T. WARD, President.

The General approves the sentence, and remits the fine.

W. HEATH.

---

November 30th.—Just before dinner General Sullivan arrived at General Heath's quarters; and in the afternoon General Lee arrived. He called at the door, when General Heath waiting upon him, requested him to alight; he asked if he could have a cup of tea, and was answered that he should have a good one. Upon coming into the house, before he sat down, he wished to speak in private, which being instantly granted, he told General Heath that, in a military view, or, to use his own words exactly, "In point of law, you are right; but in point of policy, I think you are wrong. I am going into the Jerseys for the salvation of America; I wish to take with me a larger force than I now have, and request you to order two thousand of your men to march with me." General Heath answered that he could not spare that number. He was then asked to order one thousand; to which he replied, that the business might as well be brought to a point at once—that not a single man should march from the post by his order. General Lee replied, that he would then order them himself. He was answered, that there was a wide difference between the two; that General Lee was acknowledged by General Heath to be his senior; but, as he had received positive written instructions from him who was superior to both, he would not himself break those orders: If General Lee was disposed to countenect them, its being done by him could not be imputed to any other person; and that he knew the Commander-in-Chief did not intend any of the troops should be removed from that post, having expressed it not only in his instructions, but also in a letter just received from him. On the letter being shown to General Lee, he observed, "The Commander-in-Chief is now at a distance, and does not know what is necessary here so well as I do;" asked if he might be favoured with the return book of the division. Major Huntington, the Deputy Adjutant-General, was directed to hand it. General Lee ran his eye over it, and said, "I will take Prescott's and Wyllis's regiments;" and turning to Major Huntington, said, "You will order those two regiments to march early to-morrow morning to join me." General Heath turning to the Major, said: "Issue such orders at your peril!" and then turning to General Lee, addressed him: "Sir, if you come to this post, and mean to issue orders here, which will break those positive ones which I have received, I pray you to do it completely yourself, and through your own Deputy Adjutant-General, who is present, and not draw me, or any of my family, in as partners in the guilt." General Lee replied, "It is right. Colonel Scammel, do you issue the order;" which he did, and Huntington communicated it to the regiments, who were now posted at the gorge of the mountains, near Robinson's bridge, afterwards called the Continental Village. Matters carried thus far, General Heath turned to General Lee again: "Sir, I have one more request to make, and that is, that you will be pleased to give me a certificate, that you exercise command at this post, and do order from it Prescott's and Wyllis's regiments." Lee replied, "I do not know that I will comply with your request." General Clinton, who was present, observed, "General Lee, you cannot refuse a request so reasonable." Upon which General Lee wrote as follows:

"PEEK'S KILL, December 1st, 1776.

"For the satisfaction of General Heath, and at his request, I do certify that I am commanding officer at this present writing, in this post, and that I have, in that capacity, ordered Prescott's and Wyllis's regiments to march.

"CHARLES LEE, Major-General."

General Lee, stepping out on the piazza, observed to an officer: "General Heath is right." Early the next morning the regiments moved from their cantonment towards Peekskill; but before they had reached it, General Lee, now ready to pass into the Jerseys, rode up to General Heath's door, and calling him, observed, "Upon further consideration, I have concluded not to take the two regiments with me—you may order them to return to their former post." General Lee took with him into the Jerseys some as good troops as any in the service; but many of them were so destitute of shoes, that the blood left on the rugged, frozen ground, in many places, marked the route they had taken; and a considerable number, unable to march, were left at Peekskill.—Heath.

JOHN McKESSON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fishkill, November 30th, 11 o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I have been so unfortunate as not to obtain General Scott's letter received this morning, from the gentleman to whom it was then committed, and therefore the extracts referred to in the enclosed resolutions are not transmitted by this conveyance. General Scott in that letter mentions his want of Light-Horse to bring him intelligence, and earnestly desires more aid of Militia or otherwise, that might enable him to prevent the disaffected from aiding the enemy, curb their rapine, and protect our friends in Orangetown and parts adjacent from insults, &c.

In the recess of the Committee of Safety, I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and humble servant, JOHN McKESSON, Secretary.

To the Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

RESOLVES OF CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, } Fishkill, November 30th, 1776. }

Resolved, That Mr. Cuyler and Mr. Duer be authorized and requested to employ such and so many persons as they shall think fit to purchase and collect three hundred Felling Axes; that they have power to impress the same where there is more than one in a family, paying the full value, or offering to return the same on or before the first day of January next; and that they advance such sums of money as they shall think necessary for the purpose, which this Committee will repay; that the Axes so obtained be delivered to General George Clinton, or his agent, taking a receipt therefor as so many Axes delivered into the Continental store.

Resolved, That the persons so employed set out on this business immediately, and return all the Axes they shall obtain this day to General George Clinton, or his agent, at New-Windsor, by seven o'clock on Sunday morning, or as soon after as possible; that in order to compensate their extraordinary fatigue, one shilling will be paid to each agent for every Axe delivered, over and above his wages and expense of carriage.

Resolved, That John Teller, John Elmendorph, Jeremiah Clarke, and Nicholas Brewer, Junior, be appointed agents to collect within one week as many Boats, Scows, and Craft as are fit for carrying Stone; that they have power to hire or impress the same, Ferry Boats excepted, permitting the owner of every Boat with sails to put one hand on board if he shall choose it, giving a receipt therefor, which receipt shall describe the Boat and specify the hire agreed for; that they be delivered to General George Clinton, or his agent, at New-Windsor, with all possible despatch; that on such delivery to General Clinton, they be respectively appraised by three reputable freeholders, and a similar receipt taken therefor by the persons delivering the same.

Resolved, That Mr. Gilbert Livingston cause the Spars and Timber purchased by the Secret Committee to be immediately rafted to New-Windsor, and delivered to General George Clinton, or his order, and that a receipt be taken therefor.

Resolved, That Mr. Gilbert Livingston be empowered to cause three tons of Iron, of one inch and a half and one inch and three-quarters thick, an equal quantity of each, or such other quantities and sizes of Iron as General Clinton may direct, to be delivered at New-Windsor as soon as possible.

Resolved, That Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Contine, and Colonel Allison, be a Committee to supply such further necessaries as General George Clinton may apply for, in order to perfect the obstructions of Hudson's River; that they be empowered to draw on the Treasurer for a sum not exceeding four hundred Pounds to defray the expenses thereof.

Resolved, That all the Troops of this State who are not, by the terms of their inlistment, confined to particular Counties, except those in the Counties of Charlotte, Tryon, Cumberland, and Gloucester, be ordered down to Fort Constitution, and be annexed to General George Clinton's Brigade, till the 1st day of January next, and that Letters be written to the Chairman of the County Committees, where the Troops are under their direction, requesting them to enforce this Resolution.

Resolved, That the Militia of Orange and Ulster Counties hold themselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning to oppose the invasion of the enemy on the west side of Hudson's River, and that Brigadier-General George Clinton issue orders accordingly; and that they march for this purpose on receiving the orders of Major-General Heath, provided such orders shall be given within one month.

Resolved, That Mr. Mechin be authorized and requested to alter and fix the Chain intended for the obstruction of Hudson's River in such manner and at such place as he may think best calculated to answer the purpose for which it was intended; and that this Committee will advance the money necessary to defray the expense thereof.

Resolved, That a copy of such parts of General Scott's Letter of the 29th instant as relates to the present situation of his Brigade and that part of the country, be sent to Major-General Heath, and that General Heath be requested to give such relief to General Scott as the particular circumstances of that part of the country may require.

Extract from the Minutes:

ROB'T BENSON, Secretary.

---

DR. GRAHAM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fishkill, 30 November, 1776.

MUCH HONOURED GOOD SIR: I wrote you yesterday that I had sixty-five invalids of your men under my care in this place, per order of the Committee of Safety of this State. I am now at the Barracks, where they lie. The Captain and one Lieutenant are now of the number, which in the whole now amount to eighty-five. You will be good enough to send me your orders. I think sundry of them had better be sent home.

I am, dear sir, your much obliged humble servant to command,

CHAUNCEY GRAHAM.

Honourable W. Heath, Major-General.

---

COLONEL VAN SCHAICK TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Albany, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: We having accidentally met, agreed to address a few lines to the Convention, begging they would take in consideration the necessity of allowing colours to the battalions raised in this State during the war, as we cannot hear that any provision is made for them by Congress; we would also beg leave to suggest to you that we are at a loss to know where we shall furnish ourselves with drums and fifes. As we conceive both these matters to be of some importance, inasmuch that we may appear at least as respectable as our neighbours, we beg your answer, with the sense of Convention upon the subject.

We are, most respectfully, sir, your very humble servants,

GOOSE VAN SCHAICK,
PHILIP CORTLANDT,
PETER GANSEVOORT.

To Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

JOHN LANSING, JUN., TO JAMES DUANE.

Saratoga, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: I find my name on the list of officers for the new levies as a Lieutenant. As it is to you and Mr. Yates I can only be indebted for this appointment, I beg leave to tender you my best and sincerest acknowledgments for your kind intervention in my favour; and though I shall decline accepting the commission, as General Schuyler has been pleased to honour me with the office of Secretary, yet I shall ever retain the most grateful sense of this, as well as the many other obligations you have repeatedly laid me under.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN LANSING, Jun.

To the Honourable James Duane, Esq.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 7 December, 1776.]

Hartford, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 15th instant, and the enclosed resolve, which will be attended to in this State.

The General Assembly, in their sessions in October last, appointed John Lawrence, Esq., of Hartford, Treasurer of this State, Commissioner of the Continental Loan Office to be opened and kept here, pursuant to a resolve of Congress; and I have now to request that the proper loan bills may be sent him by this express, that he may enter upon the execution of his office; and also that the twenty thousand dollars to be advanced to this State by order of the Committee of Congress for supplying the Army with clothing may, to save the hazard and expense of transportation, be ordered to be paid out of the first money he may receive in said office. And as we have already sent to the Northern Army clothing nearly to the amount of that sum, and have purchased and are purchasing other large quantities, I take the liberty to request the sum to be advanced and paid us on this account may be increased to thirty or forty thousand dollars, if the state of the Continental Treasury will permit.

I also beg leave to inform that the General Assembly, pursuant to another resolve of Congress, have appointed Mr. Epaphras Bull, of Hartford, Commissary of Prisoners of War in this State.

As the extensive sea-coast of this State, whilst the enemy are in possession of Long-Island and New-York Island, are eminently exposed to their descents and ravages, which may greatly disable us from affording assistance to the Army in men and provisions, I am directed by the General Assembly to apply to Congress, and request that two battalions of Continental troops may be stationed at proper places in the towns on our sea-coast, to protect them from sudden invasions. When it is considered that every man in this State, capable to bear arms, and liable to Militia duty, has from time to time in the summer past, been called to assist the Army, to the great prejudice of the State, and that our sea-coast hath hitherto been fortified and defended at our own great expense, when the neighbouring States, not in a greater danger of an attack than we now are, and for a considerable time past have been, were covered and defended by Continental troops, I flatter myself our request will appear neither premature nor unreasonable.

At this advanced season there is great reason to fear the new Army will not be raised in time, before the term of service of the present Army expires. To prevent the inconvenience that may be apprehended should this event take place, the General Assembly, on General Washington's request, have ordered four battalions immediately to be inlisted in this State, to join the Army, and serve under his command, until the 15th day of March next. The utmost care will be taken to have them inlisted, equipped, and upon the ground, before the dissolution of the present Army takes place.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

His Excellency President Hancock.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Hartford, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of your several favours of 6th, 7th, 10th, and 17th instant, and for the intelligence they contain. By the non-appearance of the enemy on ours or the Rhode-Island coast, gives us great hopes that for this winter we may remain quiet in this quarter, though it becomes us always to be vigilant. It equally affords me the most sensible satisfaction to hear that our losses are less than were at first feared, particularly those of Monday, mentioned in yours of the 6th, and wish the losses of the enemy, and among the rest of a Colonel Carr, might induce them to desist from the further prosecution of so unjust a war. Your conjecture of General Howe's intention to make an excursion on the Jersey side, before he goes into winter quarters, is undoubtedly well founded. May all his designs to distress us prove abortive.

Impressed with the critical situation the Army must be in at the departure of the new levies, I have laid the matter before the Assembly, with your own observations on that head. They have, from the necessity of the case, notwithstanding our late exertions, and the repeated drafts made upon us, ordered four battalions to be raised and marched, as soon as may be, until the fifteenth of March next; in mean time, every nerve shall be strained to engage and forward our quota of the new Army. To this purpose every encouragement and measure is taking here, and flatter myself what has been done will not interfere with the general service. Am fully sensible that the applications of the Militia for repeated dismissions, must have given you much trouble and concern; but hope in future you will be relieved in those respects. The Militia are certainly a respectable body of men; but without constant employ, they will grow impatient; but have no doubt every reasonable allowance will be made in their favour. The advance pay of twenty shillings, over and above what was allowed by Congress, which you made mention of, has been since reconsidered. The wages of the troops must at least be similar, and if any further are made them in that way, it should be general, and by order of Congress, for the reasons you mention.

The loss of Fort Washington, with so many of our brave men, is indeed a most unfortunate event. But though we are to consider and improve this, and like disappointments, as the just chastisement of Heaven for our many transgressions, yet are we by no means to despair—we are in this way to be prepared for help and deliverance. This intelligence is forwarded to Governour Cooke and the Massachusetts State, according to your desire.

I shall immediately forward all the clothing and blankets that are or can be obtained. The utmost pains are taking to furnish these and every other supply in our power for the distressed troops, for whom we most sensibly feel.

To prevent any impositions, and to encourage our own troops in future, our State has undertaken to furnish and deliver them all kinds of refreshments, not found by the Commissary-General, at prime cost. To carry this into execution we suppose a general store must be provided, a Receiver-General appointed, as also proper persons (perhaps the Paymasters) in each battalion, to receive and issue for such battalion, and some general plan formed that these supplies may be considered as under the care and protection of the Army; also pass through such hands as shall stand accountable, and at same time the pay secured and stopped from the troops in hands of the Paymaster for use of this State. I have stated the same thing to the General Officers from this State, and desired them to consult your Excellency, and obtain the proper directions for effecting the undertaking, and advise me of it, that when these stores arrive we may know how and where to apply.

I am, with great truth and esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL LEE.

Hartford, November 30th, 1776.

SIR: Your favours of the 21st and 22d instant, were duly received, and now answer, that for the reasons and events you mention, do fully concur in the sentiment, that we must very much, if not altogether, depend upon ourselves on this side the river for preventing the enemy from penetrating this way. In this view of the matter, the Assembly have ordered four battalions for march as soon as possible, properly equipped and furnished, to continue till the 15th of March next; in mean time our quota of regulars will be raising and forwarding. The most effectual measures have been taken to engage officers of the stamp you mention; much certainly depends upon it, and flatter myself there will be no further cause of complaint upon that head. The forming of officers, as well as men, is a work of time.

We have the highest sense of your zeal, vigilance and labor, for our common safety and prosperity; and in turn assure you of every reasonable exertion to aid your endeavours; we have consequently ordered a considerable supply of clothing, blankets, &c., immediately to be forwarded, and are determined, with a due dependence upon the divine Disposer of events, notwithstanding our late disappointments, and the additional loss of the fort by your name, to maintain our cause to the last extremity.

I am, with great esteem and regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

The Honourable Major-General Lee.

DR. TURNER TO GENERAL SPENCER.

Stamford, 30th November, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: We are in a most crowded situation, with the sick of the Army swarming as if there was no end to them for several days past, and continue so to do. I most earnestly recommend it to your Honour to grant discharges for the persons hereafter named, and to point out some method whereby many others may get their discharges without troubling your Honour any further at such distance from this place, their friends constantly soliciting certificates, and think it a great burden that they have to go so far, as to camp and back, before the discharges can be completed. There is not less than six or seven hundred invalids now in town, and I dare say not one quarter of them, if they were now in camp, would be of any further service this campaign.

Colonel Sergeant's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Zac. Goldsmith, | Joshua Hubbard, | Abel Blood, |
| James Linsey, | James Churchill, | John Edmund, |
| Jo. Trobes, | Benj. Leonard, | Samuel Fletcher. |
| Edward Master, | Simeon Blood, | |

Colonel Glover's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Jesse Snow, | Benj. Craft, | John Thompson, |
| Sam. Thompson, | John Ritchway, | Allen Richardson, |
| Philip Craw, | Wm. Parsons, | Enos Wilkins. |
| Jo. Ober, | Jho. Morse, | |

Colonel Prescott's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Amos Brooks, | Jed'h Felt, | Chelpy Perkins. |

Colonel Lippit's.

| | |
|---|---|
| Benoni Bates, | Amos Wood. |

Colonel Ward's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Louden Benton, | Ammi Kembal, | Wm. Rice. |
| Jo. Clark, | | |

Colonel Huntington's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Elisha Case, | Jacob Bennet, | David Mitchell, |
| Belcher Starkweather, | Eleazer Scott, | Nathaniel Martin. |

Colonel Tyler's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Israel Geer, | Nathan Tinker, | Eleazer Allen, |
| Robert Dunbar, | Simeon Saunders, | John Rundall, |
| Jere. Wright, | Ezekiel Huntly, | Abner Huntly, |
| David Palmer, | John Hambleton, | Wm. Chandler, |
| Eli Crosby, | Silas Wood, | Elnathan Hurd, |
| Aholiab Branch, | Samuel Heth, | John Cole, |
| Lemuel Waterman, | John Gold, | Zeb. Miner, |
| Elisha Fanning, | James Shipman, | Amos Miner. |
| Philip Allen, | | |

Colonel Willys's.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Daniel Goodsill, | Isaac Case, | Elijah Risley, |
| John Stillwil, | Ebenezer Isom, | Cornelius Dunham, |
| John Row, | John Roberts, | Serg't Whitney. |

Colonel Selden's.

Benj. Billings.

Colonel Chester's,

John Curtis.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. TURNER.

To the Hon. Joseph Spencer, Esq., Major-General.

North-Castle, 2d December, 1776.

The within-named persons are discharged from further service in the Continental Army this campaign.

By order of Major-General Spencer:

WM. PECK, Aid-de-Camp.

---

Providence, November 30, 1776.

Captain West, in the privateer Joseph, has taken a transport ship that left New-York in company with one hundred and thirty sail, all in ballast, bound to Europe, under convoy of three men-of-war. Captain West has also taken a Guineaman that had been captured by a Philadelphia privateer, and twice retaken by the enemy. The privateer that first took her, it is said, found a large sum of money on board, which was secured.

Captain Hacker, of the sloop Providence, in the service of the United States, in company with the ship Alfred, has taken a ship from England, bound to Quebeck, with twelve thousand suits of clothing, four thousand stands of arms, a quantity of powder, and other warlike stores, also a brig from England, bound to Halifax, laden with provisions, &c., to the amount of six thousand pounds sterling. The brig is arrived at a safe port, and the ship was left in company with the Alfred.

STATEMENT OF NICHOLAS MARTINDALE AND GEORGE M'CREE.

In justice to Captain Samuel Tucker, of the Hancock, in return for his civilities, we do hereby certify, that on the 29th day of October last we was taken in the brig Lively, bound from Air to Newfoundland, by the Hancock, in the Continental service, and brought into this port on the 13th current. That Captain Samuel Tucker, commander of the Hancock, allowed us to remain on board the Lively till her arrival here, where we was treated with all manner of civilities and good usage. Mr. Tucker he not only give liberty for Mr. McCree, the master, mate and hands of the Lively to take all their clothes and private adventures, &c., for their own particular account, but after some of the sailors had been robbed of some goods and clothes by his people, which were missing for some days, he was at the pains to search for the goods, &c., which he found and delivered, and such part as could not be found, he generously paid the full price for out of his own pocket. He likewise has been at all manner of pains since we arrived, to introduce us to such gentlemen as could be of any service to us, and has done every thing in his power to make matters as easy and agreeable to us as possible in our present situation.

Given under our hands, as witness our subscriptions, at Boston, this 30th day of November, 1776.

Commander of the Lively, NICHOLAS MARTINDALE.
Owner of her cargo, GEORGE MCCREE.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

November 30th, 1776.

SIR: We have the honour to enclose you, by order of the General Assembly of this State, the petition and plan of Messrs. Fanuiel and others, French gentlemen, together with the proceedings of the Assembly thereon, and to recommend them to the immediate notice of the honourable Congress, as the Assembly are of opinion, that the plan of those gentlemen may be adopted and improved by the Congress to the great benefit of the United States. They hope the Congress will take the matter into speedy consideration, as the gentlemen have been here upon considerable expense, waiting the success of their application, and seem desirous of entering into their service.

Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the honourable Continental Congress.

---

DANIEL SARGENT TO ELLIS GRAY.

Newburyport, November 30, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour by Mr. Spear, and have bought about one hundred and fifty hogsheads merchantable fish for eleven pounds, and eleven pounds eleven shillings a hogshead, which hope will be agreeable. You will please to send me orders what to do with it, and send the money as soon as you can, as the privateer is in, and the people will want their money.

From your humble servant,

DANIEL SARGENT.

Mr. Ellis Gray.

---

MEETING OF COMMITTEES OF CUMBERLAND AND GLOUCESTER, NEW-YORK.

Putney, October 23d, 1776.

Agreeable to the Resolves of the Provincial Congress of the State of New-York, the Committees of the Counties of Cumberland and Gloucester did meet, and proceeded and appointed, and do recommend to the honourable Congress of the State of New-York the names of the following gentlemen to be commissioned in the Ranging Companies, under the command of Major Joab Hoisington, who were sworn to the faithful discharge of their respective offices, agreeable to the above resolves, October 23d, 1776.

Before me:

JAMES CLAY, Chairman of the Committee.

Benjamin Wait, Captain; Elisha Hawley, Zebulon Lyon, Lieutenants.

Abner Seelye, Captain, in the room of Captain Day, who has resigned; Benjamin Whitney, Jehial Robbins, Lieutenants.

John Strong, Captain; Medad Benton, John Barns, Lieutenants.

Joseph Hatch, Captain; Simon Stevens, Amos Chamblen, Lieutenants.

JAMES CLAY, Chairman.

—

JAMES CLAY TO SUB-COMMITTEE OF TOWN OF PUTNEY.

Putney, September y^e^ 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Colonel Williams has earnestly requested me to call the County Committee and the Field Officers together, in order to procure arms for those that ha'nt got none, which the County Committee have already done in their instructions to our Delegates; and Colonel Marsh informs me that he was like to get a grant of money from the Provincial Congress sufficient to procure three hundred arms for the benefit of the County, and should have got them, had it not been for that letter which Mr. Philps and some others did prevail upon the Committee to send to New-York, together with some other informations they have received, which made them believe that we were a going to revolt from them; since which, they will do nothing for us until they can be assured that we have no such intent.

Now, by the advice of a number of the members of the County Committee, I earnestly request that you would call your town together, that you may know their minds as a body, or as individuals, whether they intend to revolt from the State of New-York or not: and be pleased to send the proceedings of your town to Westminster by your County Committee, at their next sitting, on the first Tuesday of November next, that the County Committee may be able to send to the Provincial Congress the minds of the inhabitants of this County in this important affair.

I beseech of you, and of every member of this community, to act candidly and uprightly in an affair of such importance as this is, at this critical time. Your compliance with the above request will greatly oblige a number of the County Committee, and your humble servant,

JAMES CLAY, Chairman.

To the Sub-Committee in the Town of Putney.

P. S. I sent a letter to the Sub-Committee of every town in the County, desiring them to meet as above-said and make returns, and but five towns met.

JAMES CLAY, Chairman of the County Committee.

—

HERTFORD COMMITTEE TO JAMES CLAY.

Hertford, October 29th, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your request of September 26th, 1776, we have called the town together to know their minds relative to the separation from the State of New-York. We find the major part for a separation on the principle of first applying to the State of New-York for it before it be carried to the Continental Congress.

AARON WILLARD,
WILLIAM GALLUP,
PAUL SPOONER,
Committee of said town of Hertford.

To Capt. James Clay, Chairman of the County Committee at Westminster.

—

STATEMENT OF JAMES CLAY.

Mr. James Clay, Chairman of the Committee of Cumberland and Gloucester, informs, that Major Hoisington, on Wednesday, the 31st day of July, called at the informant's house and read a resolve of Convention of the State of New-York, respecting the raising a number of Rangers in said Counties, and requested said Clay to send out citations to the Committee of Cumberland County, to meet those of Gloucester, the Tuesday following, at Windsor; and that he, said Hoisington, would warn the Committee of Gloucester to meet him at that time and place; to which said informant objected, observing there being twenty-two towns in Cumberland County, and many of them remote from the place of meeting, together with the great distance from Gloucester, rendered it in a manner impracticable to collect the Committees of the two Counties in so short a time. Said Clay demanded the resolves, or a copy of them, as he had not been furnished with any instructions from Convention relative to the affair; which said Hoisington refused, and urged said Clay to call the Committee, representing the pressing necessity, in such terms as prevailed on said Clay to comply with his request. Accordingly the Committee were called, and met at Windsor aforesaid, there being nine members of Cumberland and one of Gloucester. Said Clay refused proceeding on business, there not being a majority of members of the Counties, as said Clay was informed that a quorum of each Committee was necessary to transact this business, in conformity with the resolve of Convention, which resolve Major Hoisington then read, but refused to let the same lie on the table; said Hoisington at same time insisted a majority was not necessary. After the greatest part of a day's debate, in which said Hoisington took a great share, it was resolved to proceed on business. The members then present chose the said Clay Chairman of the Committee, and proceeded to appoint the officers, as is more at large in transactions of said Committee. That next morning said Hoisington insisted on said Clay's signing the warrants for the officers appointed the evening preceding, which said Clay complied with, but did not swear said officers, as he, the said Clay, did not know it was necessary. Hoisington having kept the resolution of Convention in his possession, said Clay heard it read once only during the sitting of the Committee. Mr. Clay further informs, that he asked Major Hoisington, who was to govern this affair or order those men out on duty? Said Hoisington answered, he had the ordering of them himself, and that he was under no control, but ordered them as he thought best; and that since the signing the warrants, said Hoisington had never applied for any instructions from said Committee, nor did said Clay ever understand that the Rangers were under the command of the Committee.

JAMES CLAY, Chairman.

—

MAJOR HOISINGTON'S EXAMINATION.

Being asked why he refused giving Mr. Clay a copy of the resolves, denies his ever refusing Mr. Clay the resolves, or a copy of them, and that he never refused letting said resolves lie on the table. That his reason for insisting on the Committee being called together so speedily was to expedite the raising of the Rangers, knowing the alarming situation the frontiers were in. That the Committee regulated their own affairs, and if his opinion was erroneous relative to a majority not being necessary, the Committee might have overruled it. That Mr. Clay asked what post the Rangers should occupy, and who had the direction of the places they were to be stationed. That Major Hoisington answered that Congress had left that matter with him, and that Mr. Clay asked no other question relative to that affair, and that he does not recollect the substance of what passed between him and Major Joel Marsh, and that Mr. Marsh's not accepting of his commission rendered him a person not interested; consequently the discourse which passed between them was immaterial.

—

STATEMENT OF CAPTAIN HATCH.

Captain Hatch, of Major Hoisington's detachment of Rangers, saith, that he never received any orders from Major Hoisington to raise men on any other terms than those prescribed by Convention. That the Major observed to him at the same time, if he wanted two or three men to fill up his company, he imagined there would be no risk in inlisting them for six months, as they could be replaced before the expiration of that time. Captain Hatch further declares, he has no men in his company inlisted for any shorter term than that directed by Convention; and the inlistment to which his men have subscribed is as follows:

"We, whose names are under written, do acknowledge to have voluntarily inlisted ourselves under Captain Joseph Hatch, who is raising a number of Rangers for the defence of the Counties of Cumberland and Gloucester, of whom Joab Hoisington, Esq., is Commander-in-Chief."

Captain Hatch further declares, that his men understood by said inlistment that they were not to march out of said Counties, nor to be stationed elsewhere; that the Counties of Charlotte, Ulster, Orange, and Tryon, were inserted in the above-mentioned inlistment, which were erased by order of the Major on Captain Hatch informing him he could not inlist men under such rules. At the same time the said Rangers consider themselves bound in duty, as friends to America, to go to the assistance of any invaded part of Charlotte County, in like manner as the Militia, and to return to their former station as soon as said invasion or imminent danger is over. And further, as Captain Hatch inlisted those men to remain in the Counties of Cumberland and Gloucester only, he is well apprised his men will not serve on any other terms than is above mentioned; that as soon as the apparent danger of those Counties does subside, they are immediately to be discharged. That the whole of his company were inlisted on the above-mentioned terms, and that Major Hoisington explained the circumstance in the manner above related. Captain Hatch understood from several of the Committee, that the Rangers were not to march out of the two Counties. This information was given in presence of Major Hoisington.

—

EXAMINATION OF LIEUTENANT LYONS.

Lieutenant Lyons, of Major Hoisington's detachment, being examined, saith, that Major Hoisington encouraged the inlisting of men for a limited time, and that all that passed between him and the Major on that subject was in presence of Major Joel Marsh, and that the informant inlisted thereon four men for six months, in consequence of the direction from the Major. That he cannot recollect what further passed, it being some time ago.

—

CERTIFICATE OF ELISHA HAWLEY.

These may certify, that I, Elisha Hawley, Lieutenant of a Ranging company, promise Christopher Hall shall be dismissed from the service by the 1st of March next.

ELISHA HAWLEY.

Witness: LEMUEL SMITH.

August 12th, 1776.

These may certify, I saw Christopher Hall receive forty shillings bounty, for the seven months, and no more.

Test: LEM'L SMITH.

—

CERTIFICATE OF JACOB KENT.

This certifies, that at the desire of the Committees of the County of Gloucester and sundry of the Committees of New-Hampshire, Jacob Bayley, Esq., did detain a large number of men he had engaged to make a road to Canada, after he desisted from that work, which was the first part of July, until some time in September, as guards, building forts, and scouting parties, which we thought was at that time absolutely necessary, because at that time we could not expect any other help.

JACOB KENT, Chairman pro tem.

—

MESHECH WEARE TO COLONEL JACOB BAYLEY.

Colony of New-Hampshire,
In Council of Safety, July 18, 1776.

To Colonel JACOB BAYLEY:

The Committee are in expectation that you will accomplish your desire of keeping in Continental pay, by order of General Washington, the sixty men employed by you to clear a road to Canada; and as you have thought fit to desist working on said road, that you employ them as scouting parties to guard the County. But if you should be directed to disband them, you are hereby empowered to inlist fifty men, to be under the pay of this Colony, until the first of December next, unless sooner discharged, and see that the men fairly choose a Captain, Lieutenant, and Ensign, to command them; said company, if raised, to take orders from time to time from yourself, Colonel John Hurd, and Colonel Charles Johnston, to direct their conduct. Said men to receive thirty shillings bounty and forty shillings per month wages.

By order of the Committee. I am, sir, your most humble servant,

M. WEARE, Chairman.

—

OATH TAKEN BY THE OFFICERS OF HOISINGTON'S RANGERS.

You and each of you solemnly swear, that you will faithfully discharge the trust reposed in you as officers in the Ranging companies under the command of Major Joab Hoisington, and that you will make a true and just return of your doings agreeable to the resolves of the Provincial Congress, which has now been read to you: So help you God.

Sworn October 22, 1776.

JAMES CLAY, Chairman.

—

AFFIDAVIT OF JOEL MARSH.

Cumberland, ss:

Joel Marsh, being duly sworn, saith, that soon after Major Hoisington's arrival from New-York with his commission, he, the deponent, waited on said Hoisington, being appointed a Captain under him. When in conversation he observed to said Hoisington, that he did not choose to take a commission because he thought it would be very difficult to raise men for an unlimited term; on which Hoisington answered, it would not be difficult, as he would as soon inlist some until next March as not, and give them forty shillings bounty; that by that time perhaps the war would be at an end, and the surplus of the bounty would remain to the officers; that if men were wanted after that he could raise others; and that he would risk the consequences. The deponent further saith he saw John Strong, a Captain in the Rangers, inlist a man until next March, or about that time, as near as he can recollect, and that he is credibly informed that many of said Rangers are inlisted on the same plan. And further saith not the deponent.

Sworn before me in Hertford, 14th November, 1776.

SIMON STEVENS, Justice of Peace.

—

AFFIDAVIT OF SERGEANT MASON.

Sergeant Elisha Mason, of Major Hoisington's detachment of Rangers, being duly sworn, saith, that he inlisted in Captain Waite's company to serve till the first of March next, as a Sergeant, and that he has inlisted one man for the same term. That Major Hoisington told him it was not material if some of the men were inlisted till the first of March, it being a dangerous time, and that they were immediately wanted, and that he thought others might be recruited in their stead; and that Major Hoisington assured him that he should be discharged at that time. That he asked the Major concerning billeting money; who told him there was none allowed the soldiers; that he (the Major) would supply them with provisions, which caused an uneasiness among the soldiers. That the next day after their march the Major told them the subsistence money belonged to them, and if they would give him that which was due to them for subsistence from the time they inlisted till they marched, together with that which would become due to them, he would supply them with provisions, camp-kettles, &c., during the service. That upon this Captain Waite told the men that bonds should be drawn and signed for the faithful performance, to which they agreed. That he saw a written paper given by Lieutenant Hawley to Christopher Hall, a private in Captain Waite's company, purporting that he should be discharged the service some time in March next.

ELIJAH MASON.

Sworn before me November 15, 1776.

SIMON STEVENS, Justice of the Peace.

—

DECLARATION BY JACOB KENT AND OTHERS.

Newbury, November 18, 1776.

We, whose names are underwritten, under the solemnity of an oath, declare, that on the sixth day of August last, at a meeting of the Committees of both Counties in Windsor, and Major Hoisington being requested the resolves of Congress, he gave them to the Chairman, who ordered the Clerk to read them. That being done, a motion was made whether they should proceed to appoint the officers; on which debates arose, whether they could without there being a majority of the Committees of both Counties; on which they desired the resolves to be read; and they were, several times; and Major Hoisington did not debar the Committee, or any other person present, in our hearing, the perusal of the resolves.

JACOB KENT,
JOHN STRONG,
ELISHA HAWLEY,
} Committee.

AFFIDAVIT OF LIEUTENANT WHITNEY.

Lieutenant Benjamin Whitney being duly sworn, saith, that he was present at the time the Committees of Cumberland and Gloucester Counties met at Windsor, in order to appoint the officers to the Ranging companies in said Counties, when he heard Captain Clay, Chairman of the said Committees, desire Major Hoisington to let the resolves of Convention, relative to raising said Rangers, lie upon the table for persual; upon which said Hoisington took up said resolves, and turned away without giving an answer, as this deponent recollects; and further saith not.

BENJAMIN WHITNEY.

Sworn before me, this 20th day of November, 1776.

JOHN SESSIONS.

—

STATEMENT OF JAMES CLAY.

Westminster, 21st November, 1776.

James Clay, Esq., informs, that on the 7th day of August last, Heman Allen, Doctor Fay, and Colonel Marsh, came as a Committee from the other side of the Green Mountains to Windsor, when the Committees of Cumberland and Gloucester were sitting at that place, and begged to be admitted before the Committees. Soon after they were admitted, and read several papers, some of which ascertain the boundaries they proposed for a new State, and invited the Committees to sign a paper they had prepared. Mr. Allen, at same time, told this informant that he had consulted with several members of the Continental Congress, who advised them to collect the sense of the people on the subject. That the informant asked said Allen if he supposed the Continental Congress would take up the affair at this time, in case the people did sign; that said Allen answered No, but that some members of Congress advised them to petition, for if we submitted to the mode of Government now forming in the State of New-York, we should be tied so that we could not get off in a future day.

JAMES CLAY.

—

AFFIDAVIT OF LIEUTENANT WHITNEY.

Under the solemnity of an oath, I declare, that at the time when I heard Captain Clay ask Major Hoisington for the resolves of the Congress, after his reading them over, was at a publick house, an hour before the Committee formed, in order to transact business; and it is more likely than not that he did not hear Captain Clay, as said Clay spoke very low, and Major Hoisington was on the opposite side of the table, and turning round. Further declare, that the Clerk gave me my inlistment, which was his own handwriting, and Major Hoisington sent a copy of the resolves of Congress to Westminster.

BENJAMIN WHITNEY, Lieutenant.

November 21*st*, 1776, sworn before me:

SIMON STEVENS, Justice of the Peace.

—

MAJOR HOISINGTON TO CAPTAIN DAY.

Newbury, September 19, 1776.

SIR: I have received positive orders for Captain Waite's company to go with Colonel Barret on Crown-Point road, from General Yates, owing entirely to a wrong representation of both the footing on which we are raised, as well as our neglect of publick service; and to convince him of his errour, I have sent him the resolves of the Congress, and a letter setting forth our present situation and services; likewise, wrote to him, that if one of these companies of Rangers, raised and ordered to reconnoitre the woods, must go and work at roads, that yours must do it. But my determination was, and still is, that not one of them ever shall; therefore, notwithstanding my order for you to go on that road, sent by Captain Waite, these are to desire and order you not to go, but prepare to march to this place as quick as possible.

These from yours to serve, JOAB HOISINGTON.

To Captain Elkanah Day, at Westminster.

—

CAPTAIN DAY'S AFFIDAVIT.

Captain Clay, Chairman of the County Committee, at the town-house in Windsor, being met to appoint officers for Major Joab Hoisington's department of Rangers, on the 6th of August, 1776. Captain Clay desired Major Hoisington to introduce the business. He then took out his papers, read his commission; likewise, read his orders and instructions from the honourable the Provincial Congress. After some conversation, said Clay desired said Hoisington to let his orders and instructions lay on the table for further perusal, but the Major seemed not inclined; said they belonged to him; and accordingly, as it appeared to me, with some temper, put up his orders, &c., walked from the table. Captain Clay likewise, after the Committee had proceeded to choose him, the said Clay, Chairman, objected, and said he did not see the propriety of proceeding to business without a quorum. Mr. Hoisington, as I remember, urged going on business, and said he did not look upon it absolutely necessary that a full quorum should be together, but that they might proceed, and do the business with propriety, with the members then present; and likewise, that any assistance that I lent Major Hoisington, by drawing any recruiting orders for the officers, &c., was in a private capacity, and not as Clerk, or as a member of the Committee, and at his especial instance and request.

ELKANAH DAY.

Sworn before me, this 21st day of November.

JOHN SESSIONS.

—

AFFIDAVIT OF CAPTAIN WAITE AND OTHERS.

Windsor, November 29, 1776.

We, whose names are underwritten, under the solemnity of an oath, declare, that at the time of the appointment of officers in Windsor, that Major Hoisington read the resolves of Congress, and gave them to others, who read them over several times; and Major Hoisington seemed desirous to lead the people into the knowledge of what the Congress had done for the country, and the nature of the service expected of the Rangers immediately under his instruction.

BENJ. WAITE, BENJ. BISHOP,
ELISHA HAWLEY, REUBEN DEAN.
WILL'M HUNTER,

Windsor, November 29th, A. D. 1776.

Whereas Major Hoisington requests of me, as Chairman of the Committee of Windsor, to administer the oath of Almighty God to the within-named subscribers, wherein, by strict examination, they acknowledge this to be the truth, the whole truth.

NATH'L STONE,
Chairman of the Committee of Windsor.

—

AFFIDAVIT OF CAPTAIN WAITE AND OTHERS.

Windsor, November 30th, 1776.

Whereas Major Hoisington requested of me, as Chairman of the Committee of Windsor, to administer the oath of Almighty God to the within named subscribers, Benjamin Wait and Elisha Hawley, wherein, by strict examination, they acknowledge this to be the truth, the whole truth.

NATH'L STONE,
Chairman of the Committee of Windsor.

Newbury, November 20th, 1776.

We, whose names are underwritten, under the solemnity of an oath, declare, that after the appointment of the officers at Windsor, that Major Hoisington requested of the Committee an inlistment, with the warrants, and the Clerk of the Committee drew some, and gave them to the officers appointed.

BENJ'N WAIT, Captain,
ELISHA HAWLEY,
JOHN STRONG.

—

JOHN SESSIONS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

GENTLEMEN: I here exhibit to your Honours an account of the expenditure of the money sent from Convention to defray the charges of your Committee, who were employed to inquire into the state of the Ranging companies in Cumberland and Gloucester, &c.; is as follows, viz:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| My own expense in going to Cumberland and returning to Convention, - - - - - - - - - - - - | £2 | 0 | 0 |
| Expenses of Committee at Westminster and Hanover, collecting information, &c., - - - | 17 | 15 | 8 |
| Paid an express for going to Albany, - - - - | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| Paid a man for collecting papers relative to a new State, - - - - - - - - - - - - | 2 | 2 | 0 |

Paid to Esquires Tayler and Bleeker, - - - 10 5 6
Paid to Esquire Stevens, - - - - - - - - 8 3 2

£45 6 4

Equal to one hundred and fifty-one dollars and one tenth.

Now remains in my hands (excepting a tenth) forty-nine dollars. Your Honours will please to direct how said money shall be disposed of.

From your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN SESSIONS,
Chairman of the above Committee.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York.

---

LIST OF MAJOR HOISINGTON'S OFFICERS.

Names of the commissioned officers under the command of Major Joab Hoisington, appointed and recommended by the Committee of Safety for the Counties of Gloucester and Cumberland, are as follows, viz:

Benjamin Wait, Captain. Joseph Hatch, Captain.
John Strong, Captain. Dr. Elkanah Day, Captain.
Elisha Hawley....1st Lieutenant in Captain Wait's Company.
Zebulon Lyon.....2d Lieutenant in said Company.
Eldad Benton.....1st Lieutenant in Captain Strong's Company.
John Barnes.....2d Lieutenant in said Company.
Simeon Stevens...1st Lieutenant in Captain Hatch's Company.
Amos Chamberlain .2d Lieutenant in do.
Nathaniel Whitney.1st Lieutenant in Captain Day's Company.
Jehiel Robbins.....2d Lieutenant in do.

A true list, examined by me:

JAMES CLAY, Chairman.

---

A Muster Roll of Captain BENJAMIN WAIT'S Company of Rangers, under the command of Major JOAB HOISINGTON. September 14, 1776.

| Men's names. | When inlisted. | First month's wages. |
|---|---|---|
| Captain Benjamin Wait | August 6th, 1776. | £8 0 |
| Lieutenant Elisha Hawley | do. 6, do. | 5 8 |
| Lieutenant Zebulon Lyon | do. 6, do. | 5 8 |
| Sergeant Wm. Hunter | do. 8, do. | 2 8 |
| Sergeant Sam'l Messer | do. 16, do. | 2 8 |
| Sergeant Elijah Mason | do. 7, do. | 2 8 |
| Corporal Matthew Hammond | do. 7, do. | 2 4 |
| Corporal Bezaleel Gleason | do. 23, do. | 2 4 |
| Corporal Phineas Saunders | do. 7, do. | 2 4 |
| Samuel Stone | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| Solomon Emmons | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| Simon Athorn | do. 9, do. | 2 0 |
| Ezekiel Hawley | do. 9, do. | 2 0 |
| John Heath | do. 9, do. | 2 0 |
| Jonathan Cady | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Elisha Flowers | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Eldad Hubbard | do. 19, do. | 2 0 |
| Asa Smead | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Matthew Miller | do. 27, do. | 2 0 |
| Joseph Haynes | do. 30, do. | 2 0 |
| Israel Olmstead | do. 30, do. | 2 0 |
| Ebenezer Hempstead | do. 30, do. | 2 0 |
| Jonathan Hamman | do. 8, do. | 2 0 |
| David Hunter | do. 8, do. | 2 0 |
| John Billings | do. 10, do. | 2 0 |
| Christopher Hall | do. 12, do. | 2 0 |
| Lemuel Colton | do. 12, do. | 2 0 |
| Lott Hodgman | do. 13, do. | 2 0 |
| Thomas Hunter | do. 3, do. | 2 0 |
| Moses Whipple | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Phinehas Newton | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Jacob Hall | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Eleazer Leeland | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Oliver Williams | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| John Killam | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| Aden Dyke | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| James Sanderson | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| James Call, Jun. | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| John Watkins | do. 12, do. | 2 0 |
| Sylvester Buggley | do. 27, do. | 2 0 |
| John Lowren | do. 12, do. | 2 0 |
| Nathaniel Abbot | do. 19, do. | 2 0 |
| Bliss Hoisington | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| James Call | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| Asa Call | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| William Anibal | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Isaac Hoisington | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| Zebina Curtiss | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Benjamin Tumalek | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Peal Sump | do. 17, do. | 2 0 |
| Wilde Willard | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| Lot Whitcomb | Sept'br 11, do. | 2 0 |
| John Newton | do. 11, do. | 2 0 |
| Nathaniel Page | do. 11, do. | 2 0 |
| Asa Chedel, Jun. | do. 11, do. | 2 0 |
| Thomas Freeman | do. 11, do. | 2 0 |
| Benjamin Cox | do. 11, do. | 2 0 |
| Timothy Knox | August 17, do. | 2 0 |
| Phinehas Powers | do. 25, do. | 2 0 |
| Ebenezer Howard | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| | | £134 12 |

A Muster Roll of Captain JOHN STRONG'S Company of Rangers, under the command of Major JOAB HOISINGTON.

| Men's names. | When inlisted. | First month's wages. |
|---|---|---|
| Captain John Strong | August 6th, 1776. | £8 0 |
| Lieutenant Eldad Benton | do. 13, do. | 5 8 |
| Lieutenant John Barnes | do. 13, do. | 5 8 |
| Sergeant Eleazer Andrews | do. 6, do. | 2 8 |
| Sergeant James Harwood | do. 14, do. | 2 8 |
| Sergeant Ephraim Patterson | do. 14, do. | 2 8 |
| Corporal Ebenezer Call | do. 15, do. | 2 4 |
| Corporal Samuel Root | do. 14, do. | 2 4 |
| Corporal Elisha Smawley | do. 16, do. | 2 4 |
| Andrew Powers | do. 7, do. | 2 0 |
| Ignatius Sprague | do. 15, do. | 2 0 |
| James Cady | do. 15, do. | 2 0 |
| Abijah Lamphield | do. 15, do. | 2 0 |
| Luke Lamphield | do. 15, do. | 2 0 |
| Thomas Richardson | do. 17, do. | 2 0 |
| Phinehas Rust | do. 17, do. | 2 0 |
| Oliver Rust | do. 17, do. | 2 0 |
| William Freeman | do. 21, do. | 2 0 |
| Seth Foard | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Thomas Davies | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Levi Andrews | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Noah Foard | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Rich'd Young | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Hezekiah Foard | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Samuel Crook | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Seeber Beebe | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Paul Foard | do. 14, do. | 2 0 |
| Thomas Gragg | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Hezekiah Fuller | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Andrew McAlister | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| John Sawyer | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| John Sawyer, Jun. | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| David Arwin | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Enos Sawyer | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Isaac Gragg | do. 22, do. | 2 0 |
| Seth Johnson | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| James Smawley | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| James Waterman | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Jeremiah Percival | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Elisha Brown | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| John Crary | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| John Lovejoy | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Jonathan Benton | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Joseph Havens | do. 16, do. | 2 0 |
| Elisha Waterman | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| William Evans | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| Elisha Kent | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| John Stockbridge | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| Amos Kent | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| Micah Parson | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| David Write | do. 18, do. | 2 0 |
| Robert Simpson | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Oliver Hand | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Will'm Martin | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Joshua Young | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Jesse Young | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Caleb Young | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| Ephraim Root | do. 23, do. | 2 0 |
| John Sambourn | do. 29, do. | 2 0 |
| David Weeks | do. 29, do. | 2 0 |
| Amos Palmer | do. 30, do. | 2 0 |
| Joshua Clark | Sept'br 11, do. | 2 0 |
| Andrew Lovejoy | August 16, do. | 2 0 |

---

COMMITTEE FOR ARRANGING RANK OF OFFICERS OF NEW-YORK TROOPS.

Fishkill, November 15, 1776.

At a meeting of the Committee of Arrangement for the State of New-York: Present, Rob't Yates, (Chairman,) James Duane, Charles De Witt, John Jay, Robert Harper, William Duer, Jacob Cuyler, Lewis Graham.

The Committee proceeded to the consideration of the state and rank of the Officers who served in the year 1775, and in the present year, directed their Chairman to make out a rank roll of all the Officers who have or do now serve in the State of New-York, and then adjourned until the next day.

---

November 16, 1776.

Present as before, except Mr. Jay.

A rank roll, according to order, was produced by the said Chairman, and carefully compared with the papers from whence the same was taken, and thereupon proceeded to the appointment of the Officers on the New Arrangement, having a due regard to the recommendations which the members have received from the General Officers in the Southern and Northern Armies, as follows:

| | In 1775. | In 1776. |
|---|---|---|
| Goose Van Schaick, Esq., Col. | 2d Col. | Colonel. |
| Philip Van Cortlandt, Esq., Col. | 4th Lt. Col. | 4th Lieutenant-Colonel. |
| Peter Gansevoort, Esq., Col. | 2d Major. | Lieutenant-Colonel to Goose Van Schaick. |
| Henry B. Livingston, Esq., Col. | 4th Capt. | Lt. Col. in the 2d Battalion. |

| | In 1775. | In 1776. |
|---|---|---|
| Fred'k Weisenfels, Esq., Lt. Col. | 1st Capt. | Lieut. Col. in 3d Battalion. |
| Marinus Willett, Esq., Lt. Col. | 5th Capt. | |
| Cornelius Van Dyck, Esq., Lt. Colonel | 6th Capt. | Col. of the draft of Militia of County of Albany. |
| John Huibert, Esq., Lt. Col. | 11th Capt. | |
| William Goforth, Esq., Major | 13th Capt. | Appointed a Major in Col. Dubois's regiment. |
| Christopher P. Yates, Esq., Maj. | 14th Capt. | |
| Robert Cochran, Esq., Major | | |
| Benjamin Ledyard, Esq., Major. | 33d Capt. | 2d Capt. in 1st Battalion. |

They next proceeded to the appointment of Captains, in the following order:

| | Rank in 1775. | In 1776. |
|---|---|---|
| John Johnson | 9th Capt. | 1st Captain in the 1st Battalion. |
| John Grennel | | |
| Joseph McCraken | 26th Capt. | 1st Capt. in Col. V. Schaick's Reg't. |
| John Graham | 34th Capt. | 3d Capt. in Col. Nicholson's Reg't. |
| Samuel Sacket | 8th 1st Lieut. | Appointed a Captain in Canada by General Montgomery. |
| John Davis | 11th 1st Lt. | 3d Captain in the 2d Battalion. |
| Andrew Fink | 14th 1st Lt. | Capt. in Col. V. Schaick's Regiment. |
| Elias Van Bunshooten | 15th 1st Lt. | 2d Capt. in Col. Dubois's Regiment. |
| Charles Graham | 16th 1st Lt. | |
| Aaron Austin | 17th 1st Lt. | 2d 1st Lieut. in Dubois's Regiment. |
| Samuel T. Pell | 20th 1st Lt. | A volunteer in the service. |
| Elijah Hunter | 24th 1st Lt. | Captain. |
| Benjamin Pelton | 25th 1st Lt. | 7th Captain in the 3d Battalion. |
| Thomas De Witt | 27th 1st Lt. | 3d Captain in Dubois's Regiment. |
| Cornelius T. Jansen | 35th 1st Lt. | 8th Captain in the same Regiment. |
| Benj. Hicks | He is 4th Capt. in Col. V. Schaick's Reg't. | |
| David Van Ness | 6th Captain in the same Regiment. | |
| John Wiley | 4th Captain in the 1st Battalion. | |
| William Jackson | | |
| Ab'm Swartwout | | |
| Sam'l Van Veghten | 2d Captain in the 4th Battalion. | |
| John H. Wendell | 3d Captain in the said Battalion. | |
| Gerrit Veeder | 6th Captain in the said Battalion. | |
| Richard Platt | 1st 2d Lieut. | 6th Captain in Dubois's Regiment. |
| Nathan Strong | 1st 1st Lieut. | in the 3d Battalion. |
| Jonathan Hallet | 2d 1st Lieut. | in the 3d Battalion. |
| Benj. Walker | 3d 1st Lieut. | in the 1st Battalion. |
| Edward Lownsberry | 3d 1st Lieut. | in the 3d Battalion. |
| Henry Tiebout | 7th 1st Lieut. | in the 1st Battalion. |
| Israel Smith | 4th 1st Lieut. | in the 2d Battalion. |
| Jonathan Titus | 8th 1st Lieut. | in the 2d Battalion. |
| James Gregg | 1st 1st Lieut. | in Dubois's Regiment. |
| John Houston | 17th 2d Lt. | |

—

List of Officers of the late Colonel McDougall's Regiment, who served in Canada, and are not provided for.

Captain Marinus Willet; a good officer.
Captain William Goforth; esteemed a very good officer.
First Lieutenant Aaron Aorson, of Captain Cheesman's; esteemed a very good officer.
First Lieutenant Jonathan Piercy, of Captain Quackenboss's; esteemed a very good officer.
First Lieut'nt Matthias Clarke, of Lyon's; esteemed a very good officer.
Second Lieutenant Ranald S. McDougall, of Goforth's; esteemed a brave officer—made prisoner in Canada.
Second Lieutenant John Houston, of Cheesman's; esteemed as a brave, vigilant, active officer, by General Arnold.
Second Lieutenant Daniel Gano, of Varick's; a good officer.
Second Lieutenant Garret Van Waggenen, of Quackenboss's; esteemed a good officer—made prisoner on Long-Island.
Second Lieut. Nicholas Van Rensselaer, of Graham's; Van Schaick's; esteemed as a brave, good officer.

Captain Varick's compliments. Agreeable to promise, he sends Mr. Duane a list of such New-York Officers as are not provided for, with the characters they sustained in their Regiments, as he has been repeatedly informed.

Monday morning, October 28, 1776.

For Mr. Duane.

—

A List of the Officers who served in Canada last winter, in Colonel Clinton's Regiment.

Lieutenant-Colonel, John Nicholson;* Major, Louis Dubois.

Captains.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Jacobus S. Bruyn, | David Dubois, | Ezekiel Cooper,* |
| Robert Johnston,* | Elias Van Buntschooten, | Thomas De Witt. |

First Lieutenants.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cornelius Jansen, | James Gregg, | William Martin.* |
| Philip B. Bevier, | Albert Pawling, | |

Second Lieutenants.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Evans Wherry,* | Nathaniel Conklin, | Henry Dodge. |
| Thomas Nicholson,* | Henry Vandenburgh, | |

Samuel Cooke, Surgeon; John R. Stephenson, Mate; William Belknap, Quartermaster.*

Those marked thus *, are provided for by a new Regiment raised in Canada.

Richard Platt, First Lieutenant, lately in McDougall's Regiment, recommended.

—

A List of Officers who served in the late campaign in Canada, *with their proper rank, according to the first arrangement—*Lewis Dubois's Arrangement.

Field-Officers: Lewis Dubois, Colonel; Jacobus Bruyn, Lieutenant-Colonel; William Goforth, Major.

Captains.

Marinus Willett.....2d in First Regiment.
William Goforth.....4th in First Regiment.
Lewis Dubois.....4th in Third Regiment.
Jacobus Bruyn.....7th in do. do.
David Palmer.....10th in Fourth Regiment.

First Lieutenants.

William Gilleylen.....2d in First Regiment.
David Dubois.....2d in Third Regiment.
Samuel Sackett.....2d in Fourth Regiment.
Elias Van Bunschooten.....4th in Third Regiment.
Aaron Aorson.....5th in First Regiment.
Samuel Pell.....5th in Fourth Regiment.
Thomas De Witt.....7th in Third Regiment.
Jonathan Pearse.....8th in First Regiment.
Cornelius T. Jansen.....9th in Third Regiment.
Matthias Clark.....10th in First Regiment.

Second Lieutenants.

Richard Platt.....1st in First Regiment.
James Gregg.....2d in Third Regiment.
John Houston.....5th in First Regiment.
Isaac VanWert.....5th in Fourth Regiment.
Daniel Gano.....6th in First Regiment.
Albert Pawling.....7th in Third Regiment.
Garrit H. Van Wagenen.....8th in First Regiment.
Philip D. Bevier.....10th in Third Regiment.
William Matthewman.....10th in Fourth Regiment.
James Dow.....appointed at St. John's.

Captains.

| | |
|---|---|
| David Dubois, 1st; | Philip D. Bevier, 5th; |
| Elias Van Bunschooten, 2d; | Richard Platt, 6th; |
| Thomas De Witt, 3d; | Albert Pawling, 7th; |
| Isaiah Wool, 4th; | Cornelius T. Jansen, 8th. |

First Lieutenants.

| | |
|---|---|
| James Gregg, 1st; | Gerrit Van Wagenen, 5th; |
| Aaron Aorson, 2d; | Henry Vandenburgh, 6th; |
| Jonathan Pearse, 3d; | Nathaniel Conklin, 7th; |
| Evans Wherry, 4th; | Henry Dodge, 8th. |

Second Lieutenant Daniel Gano, 1st.

Isaiah Wool, Lieutenant Fireworker, Captain Lamb's Company of Artillery.

—

General Montgomery's Arrangement.

Officers of Third Regiment of New-Yorkers that were promoted:

Lewis Dubois.....appointed Major November 25, 1775.
Jacobus Bruyn.....appointed 1st Captain Nov. 25, 1775.
David Dubois.....appointed Captain Nov. 25, 1775.
Elias Van Bunschooten.....appointed Captain Nov. 25, 1775.
Thomas De Witt.....appointed Captain Nov. 25, 1775.

Samuel Sacket, Lieutenant in Fourth Regiment, appointed Captain November 25th, 1775.

Isaiah Wool, of Captain Lamb's Company of Artillery, appointed Captain-Lieutenant thereof, November 25th, 1775.

—

List of the Officers' names of the New-York Troops.

No Field Officers.

Rev. Israel Evans, Chaplain; Andrew Taylor, Adjutant, (a good officer;) Mr. Curtis, Surgeon.

1.

John Johnson, Captain; a careful officer, but, in the opinion of his brother officers, unfit for a field officer.
Leonard Bleecker, 1st Lieutenant; not so careful or attentive as might be wished.
Theodorus Fowler, 2d Lieutenant; a tolerable officer.
Gilbert Livingston, Ensign; a young officer.

2.

Benjamin Ledyard, Captain; a good officer, fit for the Majority.
James H. Hughes, 1st Lieutenant; capable of making a good officer, but young and inattentive.
William Dunn, 2d Lieutenant; a sober officer, but rather too old.
William Munday, Ensign; a good Ensign.

3.

David Lyon, Captain; a tolerable officer.
Benjamin Walker, 1st Lieutenant; a sensible, active officer, fit to take charge of a company.
Cornelius Becker, 2d Lieutenant; too heavy and inactive for an officer.
James Bonnel, Ensign; will make a 2d Lieutenant.

4.

John Wiley, Captain; a good officer if he will continue.
John Johnson, 1st Lieutenant; a tolerable officer, but sickly.
Henry Dow Trip, 2d Lieutenant; too heavy and illiterate for an officer.
Samuel Young, Ensign; of too rough a make for an officer, better qualified for the Navy than the Army.

5.

Ezekiel Hyatt, Captain; wanting authority to make a good officer. He has deceived the Convention in inlisting the men for six and twelve months, instead of doing it for the war.
Caleb Hobby, 1st Lieutenant; Joseph Delport, 2d Lieutenant; Isaac Pienier, Ensign. These three wish to decline the service. They will be of no loss to it.

6.

Cornelius Steenrod, Captain; has committed the like deception with Captain Hyatt.
Isaac Titus, 1st Lieutenant; Benjamin Jones, Ensign. These two are unfit for the service.

7.

William A. Forbus, Captain; wishes to decline the service.
Henry Trebout, 1st Lieutenant; a good officer, fit to take charge of a company.
James Fairly, Ensign; the oldest in the regiment, fit for 2d Lieutenant.

8.

Thomas Lefoy, 1st Lieutenant; entitled to be second; oldest now in the regiment; a good officer.

*

William Tapp, 2d Lieutenant; a good officer, fit for 1st Lieutenant.
Hugh McConnel, Ensign; too careless and trifling for the service.
Lieutenant John Huston, a Lieutenant of my regiment last year; a brave, careful officer, well qualified to take charge of a company.
William Glenny, a Sergeant; will make an Ensign; a man of good education.

—

A list of the Officers in the Second NEW-YORK Regiment raised in the Colony of NEW-YORK, for the defence thereof, in the Continental service.

James Clinton, Colonel; promoted August 9th to Brigadier-General.
Henry B. Livingston, Lieutenant-Colonel. Peter Schuyler, Major.

| | |
|---|---|
| 1st Captain Daniel Griffing. | 5th Capt. John Belknap; middling. |
| 1st Lieutenant Benj. Marvin. | 1st Lieut. Zachariah Hasbrouck. |
| 2d Lieutenant Nathaniel Norton. | 2d Lieut. Henry Pawling; good. |
| Ensign Jacob Conklin. | Ensign David Hunter; indifferent. |
| 2d Capt. James Rosekrans; good. | 6th Capt. Ab'm Swartwout; good. |
| 1st Lieutenant Thomas Lee; good. | 1st Lieut. Simeon Tryon; good. |
| 2d Lt. Dan. Lawrence, indifferent. | 2d Lieutenant Eli Parsons. |
| Ensign Henry Swartwout; do. | Ensign Gilbert Livingston appointed September 1st. |
| 3d Captain John Davis. | 7th Capt. Increase Childs; mid'g. |
| 1st Lieutenant William Havens. | 1st Lieutenant John Lloyd; good. |
| 2d Lieutenant Edward Conklin. | 2d Lieut. Sam'l Dodge; indifferent. |
| Ensign Silvanus Conklin. | Ensign John Ponderson; do. |
| 4th Capt. William Jackson; good. | 8th Captain Daniel Roe. |
| 1st Lieut. Israel Smith, appointed Paymaster; good. | 1st Lieutenant Jonathan Titus. |
| | 2d Lieutenant George Smith. |
| 2d Lt. Peter Elsworth; indifferent. | Ensign Benjamin Titus. |
| Ensign Isaac A. Rosa; do. | |
| Adjutant Judah Harlow. | Doctor, Petrus Tappan; good. |
| Quartermaster Nehemiah Carpenter; good. | Mate, Van de Linden. |

Note.—The officers of the 1st, 3d, and 8th companies, I am not much acquainted with them, but I believe they are good officers.

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

I understand that Childs's Company, part of Rosekrans's and Swartwout's Company, are inlisted during the pleasure of the Congress. Jackson's and Belknap's only for a year, but they may all claim the same.

—

List of the Officers' names of the Third Regiment of NEW-YORK Continental Forces, commanded by Colonel RUDOLPHUS RITZEMA.

No Chaplain.
Field Officers: Rudolphus Ritzema.....Colonel.
Frederick Weisenfels.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Andrew Billings.....Major.
Staff Officers: Jonathan Hallett.....Adjutant.
Robert Provost.....Quartermaster.
Kinslock Woodruff.....Surgeon.
Daniel Minima.....Mate.

First Company.

Daniel Deubon, Captain; a good officer, but inactive, and had better quit the service.
Nathan Strong, First Lieutenant; a very good officer.
James Miller, Second Lieutenant; an excellent officer, and would make a very good Captain, to which office we recommend him.
Cadmil Moore, Ensign; sickly.

Second Company.

Abraham Riker, Captain; a good officer, but inactive, of a sickly constitution, and had better quit the service.
Jonathan Hallett, First Lieutenant; a very excellent officer; is Adjutant of the Regiment, and will make a very good Captain, to which office we recommend him.
Daniel Pelton, Second Lieutenant; an active officer, but wants solidity; absented himself without cause twice.
Jonathan Holmes, Ensign; a very indifferent officer.

Third Company.

Cornelius Hardenburgh, Captain; cashiered by a general court-martial for defrauding his men.
Edward Lounsberry, First Lieutenant; an excellent officer; would make a very good Captain, and we recommend him as such.
Charles Newkirk, Second Lieutenant; a good officer.
Jeremiah Clark, Ensign; a good officer.

Fourth Company.

Jonathan P. Horton, Captain; a very indifferent officer, and had best be discontinued.
Joseph Youngs, First Lieutenant; a very low-lived fellow.
Isaac Sherwood, Second Lieutenant; a good officer.
James Brundage, Ensign; indifferent.

Fifth Company.

David Hobby, Captain; a bad officer, and at present under an arrest, and will in all probability be cashiered.
James Miller, First Lieutenant; a bad officer.
Peter Benedict, Second Lieutenant; a very good officer.
Caleb Lawrence, Ensign; indifferent.

Sixth Company.

Amos Hutchings, Captain; of a low turn, and had better be dismissed the service.
Patten Jackson, First Lieutenant; may be continued.
Robert Wood, Second Lieutenant; a good officer.
John Johnson, Ensign; a good officer.

Seventh Company.

Benjamin Pelton, Captain; an excellent officer.
Elihu Marshall, Second Lieutenant; a good officer; will make a good Adjutant.
Thomas Cole, Ensign; very indifferent.
David Baldwin, First Lieutenant; a very indifferent officer; the oldest Lieutenant in the regiment, and acting Captain to Pearce's company, who is dismissed the service.

Eighth Company.

Nathan Pearce, Captain; dismissed the service by General Washington.
John Dusenberry, First Lieutenant; a bad officer.
Zephaniah Platt, Second Lieutenant; a good officer.
Josiah Thornton, Ensign; dismissed the service; a very bad officer.

SIR: Well knowing the importance of good officers in a corps and army, and how much we stand in need of a change in this respect, as we have been called upon (at the least the Colonel has) by his Excellency the General to give the characters of the officers of our regiment, that such as are fit may be continued in, and those that are unfit may be dismissed the service, we have, notwithstanding the delicacy of the subject, readily complied with it, and do hereby declare upon honour, that the characters we have wrote above opposite to the officers' names in our regiment is, to the best of our judgment, true. That we have done it impartially, without favour, fear, or affection, and that those gentlemen whom we have recommended to captaincies are well qualified to execute them. We farther declare that the underwritten Sergeants are qualified for subalterns' commissions.

We are, sir, respectfully, your humble servants,
RUD. RITZEMA, Colonel.
FRED'K WEISSENFELS, Lieutenant-Colonel.
ANDREW BILLINGS, Major.

Sergeants recommended to Subalterns' Commissions.

Peter Sacket, Sergeant-Major; will make a very good Adjutant or a good Ensign. Levy Dewitt, a good Quartermaster, Quartermaster Provost being appointed Paymaster to the regiment, and can't hold but one commission.

Andrew White, Thomas Bushfield, Peter Dolson, William Nothingham, Timothy Smith, T. Jerrick Beekman, Joseph Hanning.

Ensign Weissenfels, of Colonel Nicholson's regiment, we shall be happy in having him removed to the regiment. Lieutenant Houghston and Lieutenant Pearce, of General McDougall's first regiment, will make very good Captains; are excellent officers, and unprovided for.

To Brigadier-General McDougall, Present.

—

Arrangement of Officers of Colonel VAN SCHAICK'S Regiment.

Lieutenant-Colonel.....Peter Gansevoort, Jun.
Colonel.....Goose Van Schaick.
Major.....Eleazer Curtis, Connecticut.

Joseph McKraken; not fit to be a Major, (v. g.).1st Captain.
John Barns, (bad).....2d First Lieutenant.
Luther Bissel, (dead).....8th Second Lieutenant.
John McClung, (bad).....2d Ensign.

James Van Rensalaer,.....2d Captain.
Ebenezer Hill, (bad).....5th First Lieutenant.
James Clark, (bad).....2d Second Lieutenant.

Andrew Fink, (v. g.).....3d Captain.
Henry Deffendorff, (middling).....3d First Lieutenant.
Tobias Van Veghten, (v. g.).....1st Second Lieutenant.
John Denny, (v. g.).....3d Ensign.

Benjamin Hicks, (v. g.).....4th Captain,
Guy Young, (bad).....1st First Lieutenant.
Manning Van D. Heyden, (indifferent).....4th Second Lieutenant
Jonathan Brown, (indifferent).....4th Ensign.

Job Wright, (b.).....5th Captain.
Holtham Dunham, (indifferent).....6th First Lieutenant.
George Sythes, (good Adjutant, very good)....5th Second Lieutenant.
Palmer, (indifferent).....5th Ensign.

David Van Ness,(good).....6th Captain.
Peter T. Vosburgh, (indifferent).....7th First Lieutenant.
John T. Van Ess, (indifferent).....6th Second Lieutenant.
Nicholas Kettle, (scoundrel).....6th Ensign.

Robert Edmunston (bad).....7th Captain.
Michael Ryan, (indifferent).....8th First Lieutenant.
Ch. Conyn, (good).....7th Second Lieutenant.

Moses Martin, (middling).....8th Captain.
Chas. Parsons, (good).....4th First Lieutenant.
William Moulton, (bad).....3d Second Lieutenant.
Thomas Hoit, (bad).....1st Ensign.

Peter B. Tears, (g.).....Adjutant.
Henry Van Woert, (good).....Quartermaster.
Budd, (bad).....Surgeon.

Arrangement of the Officers of Colonel VAN SCHAICK'S Regiment, in the year 1776.

Goose Van Schaick.....Colonel.
Peter Gansevoort.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Peter B. Tears.....Adjutant.
Henry Van Woert.....Quartermaster.
Budd.....Surgeon.

Captains: Joseph McKracken, Andrew Fink, Benjamin Hicks, David Van Ness.
First Lieutenants: Charles Parsons.
Second Lieutenants: Tobias Van Veghten, Nanning V. D. Heyden, George Sythes, Philip Conyn.
Ensign: John Denny.

—

The following is a catalogue of the names of the Officers belonging to Colonel LASHER'S Regiment.

Field Officers.

Colonel John Lasher; a good officer, and ought to be promoted, for he has lost his all, his four houses being burnt.
Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew Stockholm.
Major James Abeel.

Commissioned Officers.

Capt. Abr'm Van Dyck; prisoner.
Lieut. Parsons.
Lieut. Brevoort.

Capt. Beekman.
Lieut. Sickles; a very good officer.
Lieut. Lawrence.

Capt. Banker; a very good officer.
Lieut. Beekman.
Lieut. Hoagland; prisoner.

Capt. Dickson.
Lieut. Fortin.
Lieut. Troup, prisoner.

Capt. Dickerson.
Lieut. Warner.
Lieut. Mesier.

Capt. Wm. Wilcox; good officer.
Lieut. R. Shurman; good officer.
Lieut. Edw'd Dunscomb; prisoner.

Capt. Van Zandt.
Lieut. Johnson.
Lieut. Stymetz.

Capt. Wright; an exceeding good officer.
Lieut. North.
Lieut. Hicks.

No Captain.
Lieut. Vreedenburgh.
Lieutenant Codwise; an active and assiduous officer.

—

List of Colonel MALCOM'S Officers.

Field Officers.

Colonel William Malcom; an exceeding good officer.
Lieutenant-Colonel Stoutenburgh; sickly.
Major James Almer; a good officer.

Commissioned Officers.

Captain J. Wool.
Lieutenant H. Rutgers.

Captain Jon. Blake.
Lieutenant Jos. Cheesman.
Lieut. James Black.

No Captain.
Lieutenant Foght.
Lieutenant Bowen.

No Captain.
Lieutenant J. Fish.
Lieutenant J. Thompson.

Captain Brasher.
Lieutenant Moffatt.
Lieutenant Coles.

Captain Smith.
Lieutenant Nevens.
Lieutenant Myers.

Captain Edward Meeks.
Lieutenant Elliott.

Captain J. Meeks.
Lieutenant S. Fleming.
Lieutenant I. Sandford.

Captain Mitchel.
Lieutenant Cornwall.
Lieutenant Lawrence.

Captain Stewart.
No Lieutenant.

—

Colonel LASHER'S Regiment.

Captain Wright, Captain Beekman, Captain Banker, Captain Wilcox.
Lieutenant Ralph Thurman, Lieutenants Robert Troup and Dunscomb, Lieutenant Ethan Sickles; all good officers.
Lieutenant-Colonel Hulbert, of Colonel Samuel Drake's regiment, a good officer.
Captain Deane, a good officer.

—

Colonel RITZEMA'S Regiment.

James Miller, 2d Lieutenant, 1st company,
Jonathan Hallet, 1st Lieutenant, 2d company,
Edw'd Lounsberry, 1st Lieutenant, 3d company,
} Captains.
Nathan Strong, 1st Lieutenant; a very good officer.
Elihu Marshal, 2d Lieutenant, a very good officer, Adjutant.
Zeph'a Platt, 2d Lieutenant; a good officer.
Robert Wood, 2d do. do. do.
Peter Benedict, 2d do. do. do.
Isaac Sherwood, 2d do. do. do.
Cha's Newkirk, 2d do. do. do.
Jeremiah Clark, Ensign, do. do.

Captain Wright, late of Colonel Lasher's regiment, in my brigade, has distinguished himself as much by his cool, intrepid spirit, as by his zealous attachment to the American cause, and his modest, discreet, and prudent behaviour. I strongly recommend him as a man who will do honour to his country in the rank of Captain in the new establishment.

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

Officers for the four Continental Regiments of NEW-YORK.

First.

Alexander McDougall, Colonel, Rudolphus Ritzema, Lieutenant-Colonel, Donald Campbell, Major; John Brogden, Adjutant.

1.
Benjamin Ledger, Captain.
James Jarvis, 1st Lieutenant.
Hughes, 2d Lieutenant.

6.
John Johnson, (ap.) Captain.
William Brown, 1st Lieutenant.
Abraham Brasher, Jr., 2d Lieut.

2.
John Quackenbush, Captain.
Jonathan Pearcy, 1st Lieutenant.
James Campbell, 2d Lieutenant.

7.
Marinus Willet, (ap.) Captain.
William Gilliland, 1st Lieutenant.
Leonard Bleecker, 2d Lieutenant.

3.
Jacob Cheesman, (ap.) Captain.
Aaron Austin, 1st Lieutenant.
John Houston, 2d Lieutenant.

8.
Abr'm A. Van Wyck, (ap.) Capt.
William Leary, 1st Lieutenant.
John Beeckman, 2d Lieutenant.

4.
Fred'k Van Weisenfels, (ap.) Capt.
John Alex. McDougal, 1st Lieut.
Stephen Steel, (ap.) 2d Lieutenant.

9.
Richard Van Varck, Captain.
David Van Horne, 1st Lieutenant.
Daniel Gano, 2d Lieutenant.

5.
Gershom Mott, Captain.
Pelton, 1st Lieutenant.
Timothy Hughes, 2d Lieutenant.

10.
William Goforth, Captain.
James W. Pane, 1st Lieutenant.
Parker McDougal, 2d Lieutenant.

John L. Linn, Surgeon.

Third.

James Clinton, (ap.) Colonel; Edward Flemming, (ap.) Lieutenant-Colonel; Cornelius D. Wynkoop, (ap.) Major; George Slossen, (ap.) Adjutant; James Hamilton, Quartermaster.

1.
Daniel Griffen, (ap.) Captain.
Benjamin Marvin, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Nathaniel Norton, 2d Lieutenant.

6.
John Grinnell, (ap.) Captain.
Wm. Phelps, Jun., (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Philip Conklin, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

2.
John Hulbert, (ap.) Captain.
John Davis, (ap.) 1st Lieutenant.
William Havens, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

7.
Andrew Billings, Captain.
Ezekiel Cooper, 1st Lieutenant.
John Langdon, 2d Lieutenant.

3.
John Nicholson, Captain.
Isaac Belknapp, 1st Lieutenant.
David Dubois, 2d Lieutenant.

8.
Daniel Denton, (ap.) Captain.
Baltazer De Hart, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Jonas Bellows, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

4.
Elias Hasbrouck, (ap.) Captain.
Cornelius T. Jansen, 1st Lieut.
Albert Pawling, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

9.
Lewis Dubois, (ap.) Captain.
Elias Van Bunshooten, 1st Lieut.
Cornelius Adriance, (ap.) 2d Lt.

5.
Jacobus S. Bruyn, (ap.) Captain.
Thomas De Witt, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
James Gregg, 2d Lieutenant.

10.
Robert Johnson, Captain.
Martinus Goetchius, 1st Lieut.
Philip Du Bois Bevier, (ap.) 2d Lt.

Samuel Cooke, Surgeon.

Fourth.

James Holmes, (ap.) Colonel; Philip Cortlandt, (ap.) Lieutenant-Colonel; Barnabas Tuthill, (ap.) Major; Benjamin Chapman, Quartermaster.

1.
Henry B. Livingston, (ap.) Capt.
Jacob Thomas, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Roswell Wilcox, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

6.
Nathaniel Woodard, Captain.
Abraham Ricker, 1st Lieutenant.
Morris Hazard, 2d Lieutenant.

2.
Daniel Mills, (ap.) Captain.
Elijah Hunter, 1st Lieutenant.
John Bayley, 2d Lieutenant.

7.
John R. Livingston, (ap.) Capt.
Leonard Ten Broeck, (ap.) 1st Lt.
Andries Heermanse, (ap.) 2d Lt.

3.
Jonathan Platt, (ap.) Captain.
David Dan, (ap.) 1st Lieutenant.
Manning Bull, 2d Lieutenant.

8.
Henry G. Livingston, (ap.) Capt.
Samuel Van Veghten, 1st Lieut.
Wm. Matthewman, (ap.) 2d Lt.

4.
Ambrose Horton, (ap.) Captain.
David Palmer, 1st Lieutenant.
Samuel Tredwell Pell, 2d Lieut.

9.
Jacobus Wynkoop, (ap.) Captain.
Anthony Welph, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Thomas Lefoy, 2d Lieutenant.

5.
Rufus Herrick, Captain.
Charles Graham, 1st Lieutenant.
Jesse Thompson, 2d Lieutenant.

10.
Joseph Benedict, Jun., Captain.
Samuel Sackett, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
William Wilcox, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

Ebenezer Haviland, Surgeon; Isaac Smith, Surgeon's Mate.

Second.

Myndert Roseboom, (ap.) Colonel; Gosen Van Schaick, (ap.) Lieutenant-Colonel; *Lucas Van Veghten, Major; Barent J. Ten Eyck, (ap.) Adjutant; John W. Wendell, (ap.) Quartermaster.

1.
*Peter Yates, (ap.) Captain.
Henry Van Veghten, (ap.) 1st Lt.
Gideon King, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

6.
John Frey, (ap.) Captain.
Anth'y Van Veghten, (ap.) 1st Lt.
Matthew Warmood, (ap.) 2d Lt.

2.
Stephen T. Schuyler, (ap.) Capt.
Barent Roseboom, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Direk Hansen, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

7.
Joseph McCracken, Captain.
Moses Martin, 1st Lieutenant.
John Barns, 2d Lieutenant.

3.
Peter B. Roman, (ap.) Captain.
Myndert A. Wemple, (ap.) 1st Lt.
Jellis A. Fonda, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

8.
Joel Pratt, (ap.) Captain.
Benjamin Chattenden, (ap.) 1st Lt.
Israel Spencer, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

4.
John Fisher, (ap.) Captain.
Benjamin Evans, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Joseph Fitch, (ap.) 2d Lieut.

9.
Hezekiah Baldwin, Captain.
Nath'l Rowley, 1st Lieutenant.
Roswell Beeby, 2d Lieutenant.

5.
Corn's Van Dyck, (ap.) Captain.
Corn's Van Slyck, (ap.) 1st Lieut.
Guy Young, (ap.) 2d Lieutenant.

10.
Elisha Benedict, Captain.
Samuel Fletcher, 1st Lieutenant.
Alexander Brink, 2d Lieutenant.

John Williams, Surgeon.

*The eldest officer of Lucas Van Veghten and Peter Yates is to be Major, and the other Captain.

One company of Artillery, consisting of one hundred men, including officers, to be drafted out of the within list, and that John Lamb be appointed an additional officer, to have the command of that company: John Lamb, Captain; Thomas Ivers, Captain-Lieutenant; John Crane, 1st Lieutenant; Martin Johnson, 2d Lieutenant.

If any Captain in Albany County should refuse the service, that vacancy to be filled up from Cumberland County, who have given up their nomination in favour of Elisha Benedict.

—

Second or Albany Regiment.

Goose Van Schaick, Colonel.....in the room of Myndert Roseboom.
Peter Yates, Lieutenant-Colonel...in the room of Goose Van Schaick.
Peter Gansevoort, Jun., Major....in the room of Lucas Van Veghten.

1.
John Fisher, Captain.
Benj. Evans, Lieutenant.
Jos. Fitch, do.

2.
Corn's Van Dyck, Captain.
Corn's Van Slyck, Lieutenant.
Guy Young, do.

3.
Barent J. Ten Eyck, Captain, in the room of Peter Trooman.
Dirck Hansen, Lieutenant.
John G. Lansing, do.

4.
John Fry, Captain.
Anthony Van Veghten, Lieut.
Matthew Warmood, do.

5.
George White, Captain, in room of Stephen J. Schuyler.
Jervis Mudge, Lieutenant.
Eleazer Grant, do.

6.
Hezekiah Baldwin, Captain.
Nath'l Rowley, Lieutenant.
Roswell Beeby, do.

7.
Joseph McCracken, Captain.
Moses Martin, Lieutenant.
John Barns, do.

8.
Elisha Benedict, Captain.
Wm. McCune, Lieutenant.
Alex'r Brink, do.

9.
John Graham, Captain, in the room of Peter Yates.
Gideon King, Lieutenant.
Nicholas Van Rensselaer, do.

10.
Joel Pratt, Captain.
Benj. Chittenden, Lieutenant.
Israel Spencer, do.

Henry Van Woerdt.....Quartermaster.
John Tillman.....Adjutant.
Stephen McCrea.....Surgeon.

—

A List of the Officers of the four Battalions raised in the State of NEW-YORK in the year 1776, for the defence of the said State.

First Battalion.

Captains: John Johnson, Benj. Ledyard, John Wiley.
First Lieutenants: Leonard Bleecker, James H. Hughes, Benj. Walker, Henry Tiebout, Tho's Lefoy.
Second Lieutenant: Wm. Tapp.
Ensigns: Gilbert R. G. Livingston, Wm. Munday, James Bonnel, James Fairly.
Andrew Taylor, Adjutant. Mr. Curtis, Surgeon.

Second Battalion.

Henry B. Livingston.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Captains: John Davis, Wm. Jackson, Ab'm Swartwout.
First Lieutenants: Wm. Havens—a man of honor, but very illiterate, but a submissive officer; Israel Smith, Simeon Tryon, John Lloyd, Jonathan Titus.
Second Lieutenants: Nathan'l Norton—the same as Wm. Havens; Edward Conklin, Henry Pawling, George Smith.
Ensigns: Sylvanus Conklin, Gilbert Ja's Livingston.
Judah Harlow, Adjutant. Petrus Tappen, Surgeon.
Nehemiah Carpenter, Quartermaster. Van De Linde, Surgeon's Mate.

Third Battalion.

Fred'k Weisenfels.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Captain: Benj. Pelton.
First Lieutenants: Nathan Strong, Jonathan Hallet, Edward Lounsberry, Patten Jackson.
Second Lieutenants: James Miller, Cha's Newkirk, Isaac Sherwood, Peter Benedict, Robert Wood, Elihu Marshall.
Ensigns: Jeremiah Clarke, John Johnson.
Jonathan Hallet, Adjutant. Hunlock Woodruff, Surgeon.
Rob't Provost, Quartermaster. Dan'l Wemina, do. Mate.

Fourth Battalion.

Philip Van Cortlandt.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Captains: Sam'l Van Veghten, John H. Wendell, Gerrit Veeder.
First Lieutenants: Jno. Hooghkerk, Jno. C. Ten Broeck, Adiel Sherwood, Barent Staats Salisberry.
Second Lieutenants: John Ball, Jno. Welch, Levi Stockwell, Isaac Bogert.
Ensigns: Jno. Ostrander, Wm. Scudder.
Teunis Van Waganen, Adjutant. Haviland, Surgeon.
Tho's Williams, Quartermaster. George Graham, Surgeon's Mate.

—

In Committee appointed by the Convention of the State of New-York for arranging the Officers of the four Battalions directed to be raised in this State by the General Congress, and for executing their Resolutions relative thereto:

Captain Platt requests of this Committee that his son, Zephaniah Platt, may be omitted in the present arrangement, as his private affairs render his continuance at home indispensable.

Resolved, That Captain Platt's request though as his son is recommended as a good officer, they wish it had been convenient to him to have continued in the service.

21 November, 1776.

—

WILLIAM HARPER TO COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS: If there should be a vacancy for a Lieutenant in Captain McKen's company, I would recommend Joseph Harper, who has served under said McKen this last campaign, at his own expense, as a volunteer, on purpose to qualify himself for the same, and is capable of inlisting a number of men, and would be very agreeable to Captain McKean and Lieutenant French. But if there cannot be a provision made there, I would request some other place.

From, gentlemen, your humble servant.

WM. HARPER.

—

LEONARD GANSEVOORT TO ROBERT YATES.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Jacob John Lansing being anxious to inlist into the Army of the United States, if he could be provided for as an officer, this desire has been signified to General Schuyler by Mr. Philip Van Rensselaer, who informs me that the General begged him to request me to recommend him to your Committee; and as Mr. Cuyler and yourself are as well acquainted with Mr. Lansing as myself, I presume it is needless for me to mention his qualifications.

Mr. Henry Van Veghten also mentions to me that he would with alacrity enter the service if he could be suitably appointed.

Messrs. Leonard Gansevoort, Jun., and John Tob's Ten Eyck, have also requested me to transmit you their names as Regimental Paymasters. The former has been recommended to Congress some time ago by Colonel Van Schaick to that post for his regiment.

I am, most respectfully, your and the Committee's most obedient and very humble servant,

LEONARD GANSEVOORT.

To Robert Yates, Esq.

—

ROBERT YATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Fishkill, November 28th, 1776.

SIR: The Committee of Arrangement have been informed by the members of Tryon County that Captain McKeen and his Lieutenants, Ebenezer French, Albert Vander Werke, and Gerrit Pottmom, instead of having discharged his company are still in service, and at the same time recommended those officers as well qualified to continue in service. Without relying, however, too much on recommendations which probably may be partial or interested, the Committee have directed me to apply to you for further information. If they are officers with qualifications such as Congress requires by their late resolves, the Committee will, without hesitation, place them on the present establishment; and the more so, as the County of Tryon may probably conceive that it has not been sufficiently noticed. The Committee, as soon as they can complete the arrangement, will furnish you with a copy.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROB'T YATES, Chairman.

—

J. A. MAGEE TO ROBERT YATES.

Fishkill, November 29th, 1776.

SIR: I would presume to recommend my brother Peter Magee for an officer in the new recruits, now a Second Lieutenant in the Army at Fort Constitution, in the company of one Mr. Bently, and in the regiment whereof Henry V. Rensselaer, Esq., is Major. I would choose, sir, to refer to Major Van Rensselaer and Major Peter Schuyler.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

J. A. MAGEE.

To Robert Yates, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Arrangement.

Meeting of the Committee of Arrangement, December 6th, 1776:

Resignations.

Captain Samuel Veghten, (Goose Van Schaick.)
Captain Garret Veder, (Goose Van Schaick.)
Captain John Johnson.
Captain Richard Platt.
Captain Elijah Hunter.
Lieutenant-Colonel Hulbert.
Lieutenant James M. Hughes.
Lieutenant John Johnson.
Ensign Joshua Drake, (Captain Sackett's company.)
Ensign Joseph Hanning.

Recommendations.

Abraham Ricker.
Captain Copp, (Capt. Vascifell.)
Captain McKean, (the Continental Delegates.)
Theodorias Fowler.
John Brogden.
Lieutenant Hugh McClennan.
Lieutenant John Nicholls.
Lieut. French, (Tryon County Delegates.)
Lieut. Peter Magee, (Lieutenant of Militia No. 1.)
Jeremiah Lansingh.

Ensigns.

——— (Ph. Livingston, Esq.)
Gilbert Strang, (Captain Sacket.)
George Deniston Grey, (Cy. Gen. Clinton.)
James Barret, Sergeant-Major of McDougal's, (by Captain Johnson.)
Moore, (Tryon.)
Simon Cryger.
Paymaster Provost.
Leonard Gansevoort, Junior.
John Tob's Ten Eyck.

—

In Committee of Arrangement, Fishkill, December 12, 1776.

Present: Robert Harper, Chairman pro tem., Colonel Duer, Mr. Duane, Colonel De Witt.

Resolved, That Captain Abraham Ricker and Captain John Copp be appointed Captains in one of the four Battalions of this State; also that Thomas McKane be appointed a Captain in the same.

Lieutenant-Colonel Hulbert has informed Colonel Duer and Mr. Duane that he had resigned, and would not any longer continue in service.

A Letter from Nathaniel Hazard, December 9th, 1776, informing of the resignation of Mr. John Gunnel; and of Mr. Slaus Hobart's recommendation of Nathaniel Platt for a Captaincy.

A Letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Hulbert, December 9th, 1776, informing the Committee of his resignation, at the same time recommending Benjamin Marvin as an officer of merit, for a Lieutenancy.

A Letter from Captain John Johnson, November 17th, 1776, recommending Lieutenant John Johnson for a Captain of Marines, and Sergeant-Major James Barret as worthy of a commission.

A Letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Weisenfels, of December 2d, 1776, informing of the resignations of Captains John Johnson, Richard Platt, Brigade-Major, and Elijah Hunter; also Lieutenants James M. Hughes and John Johnson; recommending Captains Copp, Gershom Mott, John Brogden, and Lieutenants Hugh McClellan and John Nicolls; also Simon Crygier for an Ensign.

A Letter from Jelles Fonda, of 22d November, recommending Captain McKane, First Lieutenant Ebenezer French, Second Lieutenant Albert Van Dewarka, Garret Pottman, and Major Robert Cochran, which last he says would choose to be in service as a Ranger.

A Letter from Samuel Sackett, Captain, of 27th November, informing of the resignation of Lieutenant Ebenezer Mott, Joshua Drake, Ensign; also recommending Mr. Gilbert Strang as a very fit person for an officer; requesting that he may be appointed Ensign to his Company.

A Certificate from Messrs. William Harper and John Moore, of the 29th November, recommending Captain McKane and Lieutenant French as good and worthy officers; also of the dismission of Captain Scban's Company.

A Letter from Rev. John Mason, November 26, 1776, requesting a Chaplaincy in one of our Battalions.

A Letter from Ja. Cuyler, Esq., 9th December, informing that Mr. Valkenburgh, who was left out of the arrangement on declining to serve, is now willing to continue in service, and recommending him as a good officer; also that Mr. Samuel Thorn will accept; and that Mr. Henry Devandorph, who was mentioned to us as indifferent, has done some extraordinary services, for which he recommends him for a good officer.

A Letter from Colonel P. Gansevoort, of the 3d December last, recommending Henry Colbraith and McClannen for Ensigns. He has sent them out to recruit.

A Note from General James Clinton of the 6th December instant, recommending George Dennison for an Ensign in Captain Gregg's Company.

A Letter from James Magee, of 29th November, 1776, recommending his brother, Second Lieutenant Peter Magee, for an appointment on the new establishment.

A Letter from Surgeon Benjamin Curtis, of November 3d, 1776, wherein he resigns his office.

A Letter from Robert Provost, December 7th, instant, appointed a Paymaster by General Washington, requesting to be continued.

A Letter from Major Benjamin Ledyard, December 12th, recommending Theodosius Fowler as First Lieutenant to Captain Walker.

A Letter from General James Clinton, of December 2d, 1776, recommending Captain Rosecrans and Lieutenant Lee.

A Letter from Colonel Van Schaick, December 5th, enclosing the resignation of Captains Samuel Van Veghten and Garret Veeder; also of Second Lieutenants John Lansing and Bartholomew Van Valkenburgh; and of Ensigns John Vernon, John J. Ten Eyck, Abraham G. Lansing, and Peter S. Schuyler. The Colonel informs that Major Christopher P. Yates, First Lieutenant John Hooghkirk, Second Lieutenant Abraham Hardenburgh, Second Lieutenant William Scudder, Second Lieutenant John Ostrander, First Lieutenant Adire Sherwood, and Ensign Peter J. Hoogeboom, had returned him no answer.

Lieutenant Cornelius Bicker, recommended by Captain Anthony Rutgers, December 14th, to be provided for in the new arrangement.

Ezekiel Cooper went First Lieutenant with Captain Billings to Canada; when the Regiment was discharged at Montreal, was appointed Captain by General Montgomery, served at Quebeck last winter, was appointed Captain this spring, and now serves on the Mohawk river.

—

In Committee of Arrangements, Fishkill, December 14th, 1776.

Present: Robert Harper, Chairman, Mr. Duane, Mr. Jay, Colonel Duer, Colonel De Witt.

Resolved, That Captain Abraham Ricker be, and he is hereby, appointed Captain in the First Company of the Regiment commanded by Colonel Cortlandt, in the room of Captain John Johnson, who has resigned; and that a copy of this Resolve, with his Instructions, be immediately sent him by the Chairman, together with the names of his subaltern officers.

Resolved, That Recruiting Instructions be immediately given to Captain John Copp, for inlisting a Company in Colonel Van Schaick's Regiment, and that this Committee pledge themselves that he shall be placed in such rank on the Continental establishment as he is entitled to from his former commission.

Resolved, That Captain Robert McKane be, and he is hereby, appointed Captain of a Company in Colonel Van Schaick's Regiment; and that this Committee pledge themselves that he shall be placed in such rank on the Continental establishment as he is entitled to from his former commission.

Resolved unanimously, That Jacob Morris, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Major to the Regiment commanded by Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That Amos Hutchins, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain of a Company in Colonel Duboise's Regiment; and that a copy of this Resolve, his Instructions, together with the names of his subaltern officers, be immediately sent him by the Chairman.

Resolved, That James Stewart, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment of Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That Philip Duboise Bevier, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That Brinton Payne, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment of Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That William J. Smith, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That Henry Godwin, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That Samuel English be, and he is hereby, appointed a Second Lieutenant in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Edward Weaver, Gent., be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Thomas Lewis, Gent., be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Henry J. Vanderbergh, Gent., be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Nathaniel Birdsall, Gent., be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Jacobus Sleght, Gent., be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Thompson, late a Sergeant in Colonel Humphrey's Regiment, be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Henry Duboise, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed Adjutant to the Regiment commanded by Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That John McClaughery be, and he is hereby, appointed Quartermaster to Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Albert Pawling, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed Aid-Major to the Regiment of Colonel Duboise, with the pay of a Major in the Continental service, and with the rank he is entitled to by his former commission in Colonel Duboise's Regiment.

Resolved, That Recruiting Instructions be sent to the respective Captains and Ensigns above appointed, and that a copy of the Resolution appointing each of them respectively be endorsed on their respective Instructions.

Resolved, That application be made to the Convention for an advance of the sum of , out of the Treasury of this State, towards the bounty for recruiting the said Regiment.

Resolved, That Doctor John Coats be appointed Surgeon to the said Regiment.

Resolved, That Dennis Tappen be, and he is hereby, appointed Paymaster to said Regiment.

Resolved, That Colonel De Witt be requested to transmit to Major Pawling the resolution of his appointment, and to inform him that it is the earnest wish of the Committee of Arrangement that he may accept the same.

Resolved, That Henry Pawling, who is appointed a First Lieutenant in Colonel Gansevoort's Regiment, be removed to the Regiment to be raised and appointed by Colonel Duboise, and that he hold the same rank there that he was entitled to by a former commission.

A Letter from General George Clinton, of this date, recommending Lieutenant Lawrence to an appointment on the New Arrangement:

Resolved, That Lieutenant Andrew Lawrence be, and he is hereby, appointed a Lieutenant in the Regiment of Colonel Duboise.

A Letter from John McKesson, Esq., recommending Mr. Alexander McArthur and Mr. John I. Myers to appointments on the New Arrangement.

Resolved, That Mr. Alexander McArthur be, and he is hereby, appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Regiment of Colonel Duboise.

Resolved, That Simon Crygier be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Cortlandt, and in Captain Jonathan Hallet's Company.

—

In Committee of Arrangement, Fishkill, December 18th, 1776.

Present: Rob't Harpur, Chairman pro tem., Colonel Duer, Colonel De Witt.

Jacobus A. Rosa, Ensign, now of Captain Jackson's Company, in the late Regiment of General James Clinton, recommended by said General as an Ensign in Captain Israel Smith's Company of Colonel Livingston's Regiment, and Second Lieutenant Peter Elsworth in the room of Lieutenant Lee, should he resign. First Lieutenant Lee also recommended by the General to a commission, preserving his rank, in any of the new Regiments.

A Letter received from Captain Ben. Walker, requesting that, as he is unwell, Subalterns may be appointed immediately, and clothing given to his men.

General J. Clinton recommends Andrew Harkness, a Sergeant in Captain Jackson's Company, for an Ensigncy; said Harkness is a good penman and arithmetician.

The General informs, that John McClaugery would suit an Ensigncy better than the Quartermastership he is now appointed to the 14th instant; and that the present Quartermaster, Jeremiah Carpenter, in the said Regiment, will accept, and in the General's opinion is much better qualified.

—

In Committee of Arrangement, Fishkill, December 20th, 1776.

Resolved, That Mr. Josiah Bagley be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Ganscvoort.

Mr. Ganscvoort recommends Silas Grey as a good officer and is worthy the notice of the Committee; that Colonel Gansevoort would be happy in having him appointed a Second Lieutenant in his Battalion.

Memorandum.—John Houston, now the 8th Captain in Colonel Ganscvoort's, was a Second Lieutenant last year. Jonathan Pearcy, now First Lieutenant in First Company of said Regiment, was a First Lieutenant last year, and returned from Canada in June last.

Agreeable to the proposal sent to Captain Rosecrans, of his choosing whether he should go into Colonel Duboise's or Livingston's Regiment, he has chosen the former.

Resolved, That he continue in Colonel Dubois's Regiment.

Resolved, That Henry Swartwout, Edward Weaver, John McClaughrey, Jacobus Sleght, Henry J. Vanderberg, Nathaniel Birdsall, and Thomas Lewis, be, and they are hereby appointed, Ensigns in the regiment commanded by Colonel Dubois.

—

Colonel DUBOY'S Officers on the New Arrangement.

Captains.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Jacobus Rosecrans, | Philip Dubois Bevier, | Wm. I. Smith, |
| Amos Hutchins, | Brinton Payne, | Harry Godwin. |
| James Stewart, | | |

Second Lieutenants.

Samuel English.....Alex'r McArthur.

Ensigns.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Henry Swartwout, | Henry J. Vanderberg, | Thompson, |
| Edward Weaver, | Nath'l Birdsall, | John McClaughery. |
| Tho's Lewis, | Jacobus Sleght, | |

Henry Dubois.....Adjutant.
Nehemiah Carpenter.....Quartermaster.

—

Resignations of Officers received by the Committee of Arrangement from the day of to the 14th day of December, inclusive.

| Van Schaick's. | Cortlandt's. | Livingston's. |
|---|---|---|
| Garret Veder, Captain, | Richard Platt, | Lieut. Colonel Hulbert. |
| Samuel Van Veghten, | Elijah Hunter, | |
| John Lansingh, Junior, 1st Lieutenant, | John Johnston, | |
| John Verner, Ensign, | James M. Hughes, 1st Lieutenant, | |
| John J. Ten Eyck, | John Johnson, 2d Lieut. | |
| Abraham G. Lansingh, | | |
| Peter J. Schuyler. | | |

December 22d, 1776.—Colonel Duboys requests that the Rev. John Mason be appointed a Chaplain to his Regiment.

December 23d, 1776.—Resolved, That Samuel Lewis be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in Captain Abraham Swartwout's Company and Colonel Gansevoort's Regiment.

December 23d, 1776.—Resolved, That Lieutenant Thomas Lee be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Duboys.

December 23d, 1776.—Resolved, That the following be, agreeable to the request of Colonel Duboys, the rank roll of his Regiment; and that the Officers do hold their respective ranks in the Continental establishment, agreeable to their former commissions:

| | |
|---|---|
| Jacobus Rosecrans, 1st Captain, | Captain, resigned, |
| Henry Dodge, 1st Lieutenant, | Henry Vanderberg, 1st Lieutenant, |
| Samuel Dodge, 2d Lieutenant, | James Betts, 2d Lieutenant, |
| Henry Swartwout, Ensign. | Henry J. Vanderberg, Ensign. |
| Amos Hutchins, Captain, | William I. Smith, Captain. |
| Patton Jackson, 1st Lieutenant, | |
| John Forman, 2d Lieutenant, | |
| Edward Weaver, Ensign. | |

James Stewart, Captain, Henry Godwin, Captain,
John Burnet, 1st Lieutenant, Andrew Lawrence, 1st Lieutenant,
Alexander McArthur, 2d Lieuten't, Ebenezer Mott, 2d Lieutenant,
John McCloughery, Ensign. Thomas Lewis, Ensign.
Philip Duboys Bevier, Captain, Thomas Lee, Captain,
Thomas Brinkley, 1st Lieutenant, Henry Pauling, 1st Lieutenant,
Samuel English, 2d Lieutenant, Nathaniel Birdsall, 2d Lieutenant,
Jacobus Sleght, Ensign. Thomas Beyux, Ensign.

Memorandum.—Colonel Duboys requests that the same sum be granted him as was to the other Colonels. He has drawn £1,500 already of that sum, and wants £1,500 more immediately.

December 24th.—Second Lieutenant Daniel Lawrence applies for to be taken as an officer in the New Arrangement. He entered a Second Lieutenant in Rosecrans's Company last February; was a Lieutenant of the Militia before; can be recommended by General J. Clinton. Mr. McNeal recommends as a stout, good officer. Mr. Sackett knows him, as also Mr. Gilbert Livingston.

28th.—Resolved, That Barent J. Ten Eyck, Esq., be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Goose Van Schaick.

30th.—Resolved, That Jeremiah C. Muller, Gent., be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Van Schaick.

Memorandum.—Jonathan Piercy was the eldest First Lieutenant in the first four Regiments, and then said to be the first man to be preferred to a company.

January 1st.—Mr. Timothy Smith, of Goshen, (an Ensign,) resigns. He will recommend an Ensign in his stead if agreeable.

January 2d, 1777.—Mr. Harpur proposes the following Resolve for the approbation of the Committee of Arrangement, viz: That First Lieutenant Jonathan Piercy, who was the eldest Lieutenant in the first four Regiments of this State, be, and he is hereby, appointed a Captain, in the room of Captain Brinton Payne, of Colonel Duboys's Regiment, who has resigned; and that he, the said Piercy, shall preserve the rank he is entitled to from his former commission.

Resolved, That Mr. Christopher Hutton be, and he is hereby, appointed an Ensign in the Regiment commanded by Colonel Gansevoort, and in Captain Henry Tiebout's Company.

January 1st, 1777.—Timothy Smith, Ensign, told the Chairman he had declined serving, and Joshua Hubbard, a good-looking young fellow, desires to be put in his room; said Hubbard was a Corporal in Captain Chas. Graham's Company, and from Suffolk County.

Captain Jacob Wright recommended by General Scott as an excellent officer for a Captain on the New Arrangement.

Timothy Hughs, Nath'l Henry, Lieutenants in Colonel Nicholson's Regiment, also Lieutenant Guy Young, for Lieutenants; and Jonathan Brown, Francis Shaw, and Bennet, for Ensigns, recommended by Colonel Van Schaick.

Jeremiah Lansing recommended for a Paymaster to Colonel Gansevoort's Regiment, or any other, by the President, General Ten Broeck.

Captain Dan'l Griffin, 1st Captain in J. Clinton's Regiment, recommended for Lieutenant-Colonel to Colonel Livingston's Regiment. He is before Lieutenant-Colonel Hulbert in rank. He and Benjamin Marvin petitioned the Convention on the 23d December, 1774.

Sergeant Will'm Erskin recommended by Captain Godwin as an excellent fellow for an Ensign, and requests him for his company.

Doctor Wm. Mead recommended to Colonel Cortlandt's Regiment by Mr. Jay, Captain Pell, and others, as a good Surgeon. He has lodged a certificate of his examination by Doctor Bard with the Convention, by the hands of Mr. Tompkins.

---

DEBATES IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS AND HOUSE OF COMMONS ON MEASURES RELATING TO AMERICA, DURING THE SESSION OF PARLIAMENT COMMENCING ON THURSDAY, THE THIRTY-FIRST DAY OF OCTOBER, 1776.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Thursday, October 31st, 1776.

The King came to the House of Peers, and opened the session with the following Speech to both Houses:

"My Lords and Gentlemen:

"Nothing could have afforded me so much satisfaction as to have been able to inform you, at the opening of this session, that the troubles which have so long distracted my Colonies in North America were at an end; and that my unhappy people, recovered from their delusion, had delivered themselves from the oppression of their leaders, and returned to their duty. But so daring and desperate is the spirit of those leaders, whose object has always been dominion and power, that they have now openly renounced all allegiance to the Crown, and all political connection with this country: they have rejected, with circumstances of indignity and insult, the means of conciliation held out to them under the authority of our commission, and have presumed to set up their rebellious Confederacies for independent States. If their treason be suffered to take root, much mischief must grow from it, to the safety of my loyal Colonies, to the commerce of my Kingdoms, and indeed to the present system of all Europe. One great advantage, however, will be derived from the object of the Rebels being openly avowed and clearly understood: we shall have unanimity at home, founded in the general conviction of the justice and necessity of our measures.

"I am happy to inform you, that by the blessing of Divine Providence on the good conduct and valour of my officers and forces by sea and land, and on the zeal and bravery of the auxiliary troops in my service, Canada is recovered; and although, from unavoidable delays, the operations at New-York could not begin before the month of August, the success in that Province has been so important as to give the strongest hopes of the most decisive good consequences; but, notwithstanding this fair prospect, we must, at all events, prepare for another campaign.

"I continue to receive assurances of amity from the several Courts of Europe, and am using my utmost endeavours to conciliate unhappy differences between two neighbouring Powers; and I still hope, that all misunderstandings may be removed, and Europe continue to enjoy the inestimable blessings of peace. I think, nevertheless, that in the present situation of affairs, it is expedient that we should be in a respectable state of defence at home.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"I will order the estimates for the ensuing year to be laid before you. It is matter of real concern to me, that the important considerations which I have stated to you, must necessarily be followed by great expense. I doubt not, however, but that my faithful Commons will readily and cheerfully grant me such supplies as the maintenance of the honour of my Crown, the vindication of the just rights of Parliament, and the publick welfare, shall be found to require.

"My Lords and Gentlemen:

"In this arduous contest, I can have no other object but to promote the true interests of all my subjects. No people ever enjoyed more happiness, or lived under a milder Government, than those now revolted Provinces. The improvements in every art of which they boast, declare it; their numbers, their wealth, their strength by sea and land, which they think sufficient to enable them to make head against the whole power of the mother country, are irrefragable proofs of it. My desire is to restore to them the blessings of law and liberty, equally enjoyed by every British subject, which they have fatally and desperately exchanged for all the calamities of war, and the arbitrary tyranny of their chiefs."

DEBATE ON THE LORDS' ADDRESS OF THANKS.

His Majesty having retired,

The Earl of CARLISLE said, that he rose with great reluctance, knowing his own incapacity, either to take the lead on so important an occasion, the most so this country ever before experienced, or to pay that just tribute of thanks due to the gracious speech from the Throne, a speech, he would venture to affirm, replete with the strongest marks of sound policy, royal wisdom, and paternal tenderness, for the prosperity, happiness, and freedom of all his subjects. His Lordship observed, that the nation had been brought into its present critical and dangerous situation, by the arts of designing, ambitious men; and he could not, while he lamented the influence the leaders in America had over their deluded, infatuated brethren, help remarking, that the present daring and open hostilities commenced, abetted, and avowed, which preceded their declaration of independency, would never have happened, if that disobedient, traitorous spirit had not been fomented, nourished, and strengthened by a set of men in this country, who, deserting its interests, shamefully sacrificed them to their personal views of faction and ambition. He said, the ground taken on this occasion became dangerous in proportion to its plausibility; for it was, indeed, hardly conceivable, that the people of America, who owed so many obligations to the parent State, who were at once bound to it by every tie of gratitude and interest, and every bond of union which nature and affection could render sacred, would ever break and cancel them all without any real provocation: but the event had proved the contrary; and as the noble Lords on the other side of the House founded their opposition on the idea, that America never did aim at independency, he trusted now that the question had totally altered its nature, the consequence of such alteration would be an unanimity as complete, as he was assured it would be decisive, in restoring peace to this distracted and divided Empire.

His Lordship commented on several parts of the speech from the Throne, particularly on the zeal and bravery of the King's troops, the recovery of Canada, and the late success on Long-Island. He spoke with warmth upon the insolence of the Rebels (as he called them) in refusing to treat with the Commissioners appointed by his Majesty. He bestowed several harsh expressions on the conduct and behaviour of the Congress; spoke of the necessity of vigorously exerting ourselves in the course of the ensuing campaign, in order to repair the repeated injuries, and to heal the wounds the constitution and interests of this country have received from its base and unnatural children; and concluded with assuring their Lordships, that he did not entertain a single doubt but that ample reparation would be obtained, and that the whole would in the end terminate to the mutual happiness and advantage of both countries.

His Lordship then moved an Address to the King.

Earl FAUCONBERG seconded the motion. His Lordship observed, that the question between Great Britain and America was changed; the original one, relative to taxation, no longer existing. The alternative was now, whether we should forever relinquish America, and submit to the consequences which must inevitably ensue, from our giving up all future pretensions to a superiority over that country? or, considering the great and important stake for which we are contending, make one vigorous effort to bring its deluded inhabitants back to a proper sense of their duty? He was for the latter.

The Marquis of ROCKINGHAM condemned, in very strong terms, the contents of the speech, which he treated as the speech of the Minister. He remarked on the following passage in the speech: "No people ever enjoyed greater happiness, or lived under a milder government, than those now revolted Provinces, the improvements in every art of which they boast declared it; their number, their wealth, their strength by sea and land, which they think sufficient to make head against the whole power of the mother country, are irrefragable proofs of it." This passage, his Lordship contended, was a virtual censure of the present Administration, and pointed out the impolicy of forcing such a people into rebellion. It proved, beyond question, the great advantages of a mild Government, and the evils resulting from a cruel and oppressive one. He presumed that Ministers would hardly pretend to say, that it was the present system of measures under which this people throve, and rose to that pitch of opulence and strength, they themselves had given so lively and apt a description of; if it was not, but that it evidently impeded instead of augmenting this state of domestick prosperity, it followed of course, that America owed its greatness to a system of mild Government; and that a direct deviation, or total abandonment of that system, was what gave occasion to the present cruel and unnatural civil war. He said, whatever colour might be now given to the present state of affairs, taxation was the original cause; and he still continued to think, as he had always declared himself, that the only sure constitutional taxes which could or ought to be drawn from the Colonies, would be the monopoly of their trade; and the other great advantages drawn from their constitutional dependency and connection with the parent State; and though the right were clearly on our side, nay, even that there were some degree of necessity for exercising it, yet when the real disposition of the people came to be known, their resources, strength, and numbers, came to be revealed, and the enormous expense of prosecuting such an expensive war, at so great a distance, was properly considered; motives of expediency in the first instance, and considerations of the possible impracticability of such an attempt, united, would induce him for one to consent to any reasonable terms of accommodation. What, said his Lordship, do Ministers tell us this day? They come forward, and, through the medium of the speech, write a panegyrick on their own conduct. I will put the whole of their defence on this short issue, without entering into particulars: I will leave the decision with themselves. I ask them, in the whole course of their extensive reading, knowledge, experience, or to the utmost stretch of their belief, whether they ever heard, or can now be persuaded to think, that a whole people, so numerous, and living under so many different forms of Government, though members of the same political body, ever unanimously confederated to join in a revolt, under a mild, wise, and equitable administration of publick affairs relative to America? His Lordship arraigned besides the principle on which the measures have been all along conducted and supported, that of unconditional submission. He said, the idea was abhorrent to the subjects of this free Government; that Englishmen, whatever their local situation may be, know no obedience to any thing but the laws; and that when the protection of the laws was taken away in several instances, particularly by the Capture Act, when they were declared open enemies, and put out of the King's peace, it was impossible for them to do otherwise than they did. If they declared themselves independent, it was long after they were declared enemies; and for his part he could not possibly see what degree of obedience was due, where publick protection was openly withdrawn.

His Lordship then moved an amendment to the Address.

The Duke of MANCHESTER drew a parallel between the present state of the British empire, and that of ancient Rome in its decline. He observed, in one, as the other, the mere forms of the constitution were preserved long after every effort of despotism and arbitrary power were felt in their fullest extent. Imperial Rome oppressed her provinces and dependencies, like Britain; her subjects bowed under the yoke of the most insupportable oppression, like that endeavoured to be inflicted on our colonists; and he did not hesitate to foretell, that as in one instance the distant subjects of that proud, overbearing mistress of the universe, by the injustice and severity of her government, forced her provinces to resist her lawless power; so in the other, this country had alienated the obedience and affection of her American subjects, which would bring on a dismemberment of the empire, and probably terminate in a total dissolution of this Government.

His Grace remarked on that passage in the speech (the whole of which he imputed to the Minister) relative to assurances of amity, said to be received from the several courts of Europe, in a very pointed manner. He said, it contained the most improbable information that could be well conceived, unless we supposed, that the framers of the speech, and those who advised the present naval armaments, thought differently on the same day; or were not the same persons; for if assurances were given, and that they were to be depended on, why have recourse to that mode of manning our Navy, a press, which was known to be fraught with so many hardships and inconveniences, and which should never be resorted to, but in seasons of difficulty and danger? If, on the other hand, those assurances of amity were not to be relied on, why deceive the publick and Parliament in so gross and flagrant a manner? Why delude them into a dangerous repose? Why tell them, on the eve of a rupture, that we were in a state of perfect tranquillity? But his Grace insisted, that we ought not, in the present situation of affairs, to trust either to assurances, however strong, or reasons however plausible, when facts were so evidently against them. He had, he said, the most undoubted information, that whatever those assurances might be, they ought not to be relied on; a matter having come to his own knowledge, or at least it came so well authenticated, that he was perfectly satisfied of its being indisputably true. He would just mention it for the present, presuming, if it were false it would be contradicted, in which case he would quote his authority; if it were not, then it would remain at least a strong circumstantial contradiction to that part of the address. The fact was, that a gentleman, on whose veracity he could depend, assured him, that he had been at Havre-de-Grace some short time since, where he saw a vessel publickly loading with fire-arms and other military stores for the use of the Provincials. If, in the language of the speech, the Americans were to be esteemed Rebels, and if rebels in arms were to be looked upon as open enemies, the fact now alluded to was an irrefragable proof, that France was in the first stage of open enmity with Great Britain.

His Grace then contradicted the substantial information of the speech on another ground. He said, that it was now no secret, that a fleet had lately sailed from Cadiz, with a considerable body of land forces on board. This armament must be destined to carry on hostilities against us in some part of the western world, or for South America, or to be employed against the Portuguese. Supposing the former not to be the case, no doubt could be entertained of the latter, which came exactly to the same point; because, if Portugal were attacked, Britain must consequently be involved in a war, unless we broke our engagements with Portugal, and sacrificed our dearest interests to the blind rage of making a conquest of our fellow-subjects in America. We were bound by treaty, he insisted, to support and defend Portugal; our interests, as well as our solemn engagements, compelled us to it. The difference was therefore very little, whether France or Spain broke with us openly, or in this roundabout, indirect manner, the consequences would be the same: we should in the end find ourselves engaged in a war with the united force of the House of Bourbon. Portugal had already given us the highest instance in their power of their friendship; they had forbid the Provincials from entering their ports. Had France or Spain done so? The contrary was notorious. If, then, taking the question in either light, as an attack of Spain on our ally, or the open encouragement given to our subjects now in arms against us, he wished to know from Administration what requisitions had been made on our part, to bring the Courts of Versailles and Madrid to an explanation on those very important points; what was the effect of those requisitions; and what we had now finally, at so critical a period, to depend on? His Grace concluded by observing that no reliance was to be had at any time on the pacifick assurances of those courts, much less when their conduct contradicted them; that therefore a tame acquiescence in whatever measures they might think proper to adopt, or an immediate war with those Powers, was inevitable, which, considering the present distracted and almost exhausted state of this country, threatened no less than its total ruin. He had foreseen this from the beginning; he had often foretold it. He was in future determined to lament it in silence, as all further efforts, he perceived, would be in vain; however, as the last attempt, he very readily joined in the amendment moved by his noble friend [the Marquis of Rockingham.] The speech was no more than a recommendation of the same ruinous system of measures, which had brought us into our present perilous and tremendous situation. If the amendment was agreed to, it would give the House time to consider and devise some means of averting the innumerable dangers with which we were now surrounded; the first salutary and effectual step to which would, in his opinion, be the appointing a committee to inquire into the state of the nation, in order to discover the source of our present calamities, and to devise remedies the best suited to their cure and removal.

Lord CARDIFF [Lord Mountstuart] declared the Colonists to be exceedingly ungrateful. He said, from their first emigration from this country they had manifested a most disloyal and republican spirit; in proportion to the favours we had heaped upon them, the protection we had afforded, the encouragement we had given them in free ports, bounties and premiums, and the blood and treasure we had spilt and lavished in their service, they had been disobedient, turbulent, and ungrateful; that our strength and finances had been wasted in defending and covering them from a dangerous and superior enemy during the late war, to a degree, he feared, that would not shortly, if ever, be recovered; and now the return we met with was, to be involved in a bloody, expensive contest, on the issue of which the dearest interests of this country were staked, perhaps its very exsitence as a great commercial and maritime Power. He trusted, however, such being the provocations on our part, and such the unparalleled baseness on theirs, that the spirit of the British nation would be roused, so as to take the necessary measures for their effectual chastisement. He could not, he said, agree with the amendment proposed by the noble Marquis, for many cogent reasons; but for none more than that it brought matters forward which, at least for the present, formed no part of the question. If Ministers had neglected their duty; if they suffered themselves to be deceived; if they misled Parliament; those might be all proper objects of inquiry at a suitable and convenient season. That was not the subject of the present Address. The only matter now under discussion, or worthy of debate, was, What is the present state and condition of our Colonies? What are the resolution and final determination of our subjects in America? Have not they declared themselves an independent State? Are not they in arms in support of that independency? Have not they pulled off the mask, and avowed themselves open enemies? The question of taxation alluded to by the noble Marquis is now totally lost, or buried in an obstinate and loud appeal to arms. They no longer think it necessary to conceal their real sentiments; they have put us to defiance, and the event must inevitably be the full assertion of our legislative authority over them, or submitting to forever relinquish it. Should the latter be the case, then farewell to the importance of this country. The state of Europe, he observed, had undergone an almost total change since the first establishment of those Colonies. Several considerable acquisitions of territory had been made by the great States, who may be supposed to be the rivals of our power and greatness. The wealth and additional strength which we have hitherto derived from our Colonies have enabled us to retain our consequence and superiority in the grand European system. What, then, would be the probable effect, merely on consideration of self-preservation, but that, stripped of so ample a support, we should dwindle so as, in the first instance, to lose our importance in that system, and, in the end, to become a Province of the first ambitious Power who might think proper to attack us? For instance: France, our natural rival and enemy, is a vast, extensive, opulent country, full of inhabitants, fertile in soil, rich in native produce, and rendered more so by the industry of its people; it is compact in itself; its strength is easily collected; how, then, can it be expected that Great Britain and Ireland, inferiour in every respect, and divided and broken by seas, could withstand so formidable a Power, if those sources of wealth and strength derived from our Colonies were to be cut off, which must be the case should we tamely permit America to remain independent.

This, his Lordship presumed, was the true point on which the deliberations of this day would turn. It fairly included this short question: Whether, by foregoing our superiority over America, we were at the same time willing to take such a resolution, with all the consequences now described, which he contended must follow? He said, besides this grand, this leading inducement to a vigorous exertion of our whole strength, there were many collateral circumstances which gave him hopes that the general impressions of despondency attempted to be made by the noble Marquis and the noble Duke who spoke last, were ill-founded, and were neither supported by fact or probability. He said, the deluded people of America had been inflamed, misled, and hurried on by their leaders; that the late success of his Majesty's forces on Long-Island, and the events which might reasonably be expected in consequence of that success, gave the most rational ground to expect that his Majesty's subjects in America would recollect themselves, and return to their duty; and such of them as all along retained their loyalty, be emancipated from the cruel oppressions they had sustained for their attachment to the mother country; which would create such an additional strength as not only to rescue the Province of New-York from under the dominion of its merciless oppressors, but likewise to establish a civil Government in that Province, and from thence extend, by its influence and example, the blessings of peace, law, and liberty, to its several neighbouring Colonies; which would, in time, he hoped, by that means be communicated to the whole Continent. He said he felt as strongly as any Lord in the House for the miseries of war; he always thought it should be the last resource; yet while he lamented its ravages, it was a consolation to him that its temporary effects might be productive of a restoration of Government; since nothing else was capable of bringing back the people to their duty: one part, he trusted, would return from motives of loyalty and inclination; the other from finding they had no protection but what might be derived from a restoration of peace, and a submission to the constitutional supremacy of the parent State. He was every way satisfied that this would be the event of the ensuing campaign, if determined on with unanimity here, and carried on with vigour there. He did not, however, according to the language of the amendment, expect, much less wish, that the people of America should yield to an abject or servile submission. It was not, he dared to say, the wish of Administration, nor of any noble Lord in that House. It was, however, now become indispensably necessary to the interests, nay, to the very existence of the British empire, that the supremacy of this Legislature should be maintained and asserted in its full extent. When that point was once fully established, he doubted not but the people of America would receive every satisfaction and security for every just grievance they may have felt, and every right they may be entitled to enjoy as British subjects. Fully convinced of the justice of the cause, and of the propriety of the measures recommended in the speech, he must, he said, differ from the amendment proposed, and give an affirmative to the address now moved.

The Earl of DERBY spoke warmly in favour of the speech, and against America, which, he said, had entered into the most horrid and unprovoked rebellion ever known in the annals of this or any other country. He insisted that they had an equitable as well as a legal right to contribute towards the national burden incurred during the late war on their account: first, on the constitutional right the parent State had to regulate, controul, and give law to all its dependencies, which inherent right especially included the power of taxation; secondly, because one-half the publick debt was incurred in defending and protecting them. He complimented such of his noble auditory as always looked upon the disobedience and resistance made to the laws enacted in support of the exercise of our constitutional superiority over America, as a strong indication, if not a substantial avowal, of their intended independency. He observed, that such being the fact, now no longer to be controverted, he was astonished that any noble Lord, who declared himself a friend to Britain, could possibly hesitate about agreeing with the address, as the measures it was meant to sanctify were the only means to save the British empire from certain ruin and destruction. His Lordship lamented the factious spirit, both here and in America, which had been the cause of the present melancholy state of publick affairs; and hoped, as the only means of reparation left, that those who had unhappily fomented the present disturbances, that those who had, by the strongest reiterated assurances, pledged themselves to the nation that America only wished for a constitutional dependency, not to deny or throw off the supreme legislative power of the Parliament of Great Britain, would now candidly confess their errour, and prove themselves only mistaken, not intentionally wrong.

The Earl of RADNOR made several observations on the sentiments delivered by the last noble Lord but one, [Lord Cardiff.] He said that he could not agree with the proposed address or amendment, neither of them coming up to his ideas. The noble Lord [Lord Cardiff] asserted that the people of America were tainted with principles of republicanism in general, and had always showed a spirit of disobedience. He denied that either of those assertions were strictly just. The charge of republicanism was never even attempted to be made against any but the Northern Colonies, and there, he believed, with great injustice. And the charge of disobedience was still worse founded; for he believed, if the history of the Colonies was impartially considered and fairly decided on, from their first establishment, it would be found that no subjects had ever exhibited stronger proofs of duty, attachment, obedience, and affection for the parent State. If, indeed, the same spirit which compelled the first settlers to fly from the ecclesiastical and civil persecution and oppression of a tyrant was a spirit of republicanism, he trusted that spirit would never be extinct, either there or here; for if it should, then despotism would triumph, and nothing would be left for the Prince on the throne but to possess himself of the liberties of the people thus deserted and surrendered. He repeated his disapprobation of the address and amendment, and said he should not vote for either.

The Duke of RICHMOND arraigned the conduct of Administration in relation to the affairs of America; and described what he called the tremendous and awful situation this great empire was reduced to, the whole of which he attributed to a want of wisdom in Ministers, as well as a want of virtue in Parliament. His Grace mentioned the several measures adopted by the King's servants against that country, and reminded their Lordships, that the consequences from the beginning to the very close of the last session, were exactly, nay, almost literally foretold by those who disapproved of them; that there was something very remarkable, however, in this combination of cause and effect; for while Opposition predicted the probable operation those coercive laws would produce, they did not neglect to remind Ministers, that they supposed those laws were expressly enacted for that purpose; if so, though such a conduct might well serve to impeach the justice of the measures, it proved in some degree, that they were not so much the effect of ignorance as design. America had the alternative to submit, or to abide the event of resistance; the several oppressive laws spoke that language; and as America refused to accede to terms of unconditional submission, she was of course compelled to declare herself independent. In that point of view, Ministers had been successful, and gained what they secretly wished for, though they did not dare to openly avow it; they put all on the issue of a trial of strength between the parties, in which struggle they flatter themselves they shall prevail. Such, certainly, was the express intention of the Capture Act; nothing less could be expected: this law was passed in order to put the Colonies to the test; it was meant to produce submission or independency; the former, in that stage of controversy, was not expected; independency was looked for; and Ministers, in one instance at least, were not disappointed. To prove the truth of what he now asserted, he gave a short history of the Capture Act; he showed, that the King's speech, on the opening of the preceding session, promised that Commissioners should be sent out to treat with the Americans; that when this promise came to be fulfilled by Ministers, the farce was still kept up in the Capture Act, though nothing more than a bare power to receive submissions, and grant pardons, was expressed: yet trifling, absurd, and insidious, as this must appear, Ministers were resolved, that no good consequence should arise, for though the Royal word was pledged in October, and the law was passed the next month, no attempt was made to fulfill it on the part of Administration for full seven months after. This brought strongly into his mind a passage in a modern writer [Mr. Gibbon] who has written on the causes of the decline of the Roman Empire; where, speaking of the Christians, and the persecutions they suffered under some of the Roman Emperors, he says, "they were thus driven from the protection of the law." His Grace commented very pointedly on that passage in the King's speech, which says, "that his desire is to restore to them [the people of America] the blessings of law and liberty, equally enjoyed by every British subject." This, he said, was a palpable fallacy; and could be only introduced into the speech by the Minister, in order to mislead the people of this country, and to incense them against their fellow-subjects in America; and he expressed his astonishment at the temerity of those who thus dared to put such a sentence in the mouth of their Sovereign. It was absurd to the last degree; it was known to be directly repugnant to the express constitutional system of government established in this country, to that power of commercial control lodged in the seat of empire; and that great commercial law, the act of navigation, which withheld several great advantages from our dependencies in Ireland and America; consequently, it was a vile imposition to suppose, that either the Sovereign could or would restore to America the blessings of law and liberty, equally enjoyed by every British subject, because such a promised enjoyment was no less false in contemplation than it was totally impracticable in the execution. His Grace next lamented the extreme degeneracy of Government; he boldly affirmed, that it was carried on solely through the means of bribery and corruption; that all test of publick conduct was laid aside, which depended upon freedom of thought, or freedom of acting. The indiscriminate support Ministers received, to whatever measures they thought proper to propose, though ever so ruinous and destructive, furnished daily proofs of it; and what, from a total disregard which prevailed among publick men, to the interests of the nation, and the innumerable modes of corruption, long established, with the new ones daily devised and discovered, he was in his conscience satisfied, that nothing but the personal virtue of the Sovereign prevented this country from a total loss of liberty. Like Sweden, it was ripe for the event; and he begged leave once more to give the most solemn testimony, to declare from the bottom of his heart, that nothing but the virtue of the Sovereign on the throne prevented this country from being at present under the dominion of arbitrary power.

His Grace, after testifying his high esteem for the Generals Howe and Carleton, with both of whom he had served, men equally deserving in their private characters, as of high merit in their respective professions, lamented the fatal effects of the war, with the conduct of which they are entrusted. From their known temper and disposition he should have conceived the most favourable hopes, if their hands had not been fettered by Ministers, nay, indeed, if they had not been actually prevented from taking any measures but such as the laws of war prescribed. This was a melancholy consideration, when we reflected, that every life lost on either side was a diminution of that strength which ought to be preserved, and which should be only employed against our natural and foreign enemies. This led his Grace to that part of the speech, which says, "I still hope that all misunderstandings may be removed, and Europe continue to enjoy the blessings of peace; I think it nevertheless necessary, that we should be in a respectable state of defence at home." This, he said, however artfully and plausibly disguised, with a view of answering a double purpose of holding out peace at the present, and preparing us for another interpretation, should the event make it necessary, was a most alarming piece of information. If any explanation was wanting, the press-warrants lately issued would serve as the best comment; they justified our apprehensions; they confirmed our fears, and the more so, when we recollected, that the greatest part of our only sure bulwark and national defence, our Navy, was on the other side of the Atlantick. He observed, that Ministers had been silent through inattention, or not being able to stand, on this very critical and trying occasion, the test of inquiry. It was no secret, he said, that France and Spain had been some time arming; that the disputes between Spain and Portugal were notorious, and the publick declarations of a Minister, in high favour at Court, and influence in the Cabinet, relative to the intended conduct of this country, should a rupture be the consequence of those disputes, made this disagreement a matter of very serious consideration, particularly as the passage in the speech, which alludes to that important affair, says only, "I hope, &c., that all misunderstandings may be removed." On the other hand, if the repeated accounts be true, that an open commerce is carried on between France and our Colonies; if the latter, in return for their native commodities, are supplied with military stores, will not this, if not discontinued on their part, be looked upon as an avowal of the cause of America? So that in either event, whether Portugal is attacked, or the Colonists are openly assisted and supported by France, a rupture with the united force of the House of Bourbon seems inevitable. From these important facts, and obvious deductions, his Grace took occasion to expatiate on the dangerous predicament this country now stood in, a probable rupture with France and Spain, a civil war with our Colonies, our only national defence at the mercy this instant of our natural enemies, an accumulating debt, divided councils, and a distracted people on the verge of political despair. In such a dire and calamitous situation, he recommended a reconciliation with our Colonists upon any terms. He thought it would be much better to have them as friends than enemies, though we should be under the necessity of acknowledging them as so many independent States. He concluded his speech with protesting, that he did not believe that any measures that could now be adopted, would ever reconcile the people of America to our Government; the attempt, in his opinion, was impracticable. Though a change of Administration, and a change of measures in consequence thereof, should take place, he had no expectation that for his part either, or both, would produce any good consequence. A noble Lord, early in the debate, [Lord Cardiff,] had supposed, that this country would not support its rank, as a great European Power, without the Colonies: his Grace strongly doubted the truth of this reasoning. Britain had cut as conspicuous a figure, as she has done since, in the time of the Protectorate, before the Colonies were any addition to the strength or opulence of this country. Be that as it may, if the task of conquest was impracticable, as he believed it was, it would be better to retain our native strength than waste it to no purpose. In such a train of impending evils, as surrounded us on every side, he could only venture to pronounce one certain truth, that he was satisfied the country was ruined, he feared the nation was undone.

The Earl of Sandwich said, the speech recommended measures so wisely framed, and so peculiarly well suited to the present situation of affairs, that he should not have troubled their Lordships, had not the noble Duke, who spoke last, alluded to some matters which, as connected with the office at which he had the honour to preside, he looked upon himself particularly called upon to explain. The noble Duke asserted, that the greatest part of our force was on the other side of the Atlantick, and that we were left defenceless at home. The first of these assertions was not founded in fact; for out of twenty-eight thousand seamen, with one of the most formidable fleets this country ever beheld, fifteen thousand, including the marines who were doing duty on shore, as well as on board the ships-of-war, and two line-of-battle-ships, were only on the other side of the Atlantick: and as to the other assertion, that we were left in a defenceless state at home, it was equally ill-founded; for we had a naval force at this instant ready for sea, allowing that the Courts of Versailles and Madrid had any hostile intentions towards us, which he was persuaded they had not, fully sufficient for our defence and protection. We had the most ample and unreserved assurances from those courts, of their pacifick and friendly dispositions. If they should turn out otherwise, we are prepared for the worst. He said, he looked upon it to be his duty, as an official man, to take care, that the Navy, which was our only national defence, should be in the best condition in his power. He was happy to inform their Lordships, that it was so, and he was determined that this kingdom should be prepared for any event that might happen. He should not follow the amendment made by the noble Marquis, it took in so many different matters, little relative to the present subject of debate; but while it recommended a retrospective inquiry into the conduct of others, he could not, now he was up, help declaring, that the true cause of this civil war we are engaged in, was the bad policy of those, who, by their advice, power, influence, and official situations, laid a foundation for it, by the repeal of the Stamp Act. He had often said so, and would avow it with his last breath. As a friend to his country, he must dissent from the extraordinary proposition made by the noble Duke who spoke last, "recommending a reconciliation with America upon any terms, even upon grounds of admitting their independency." As an Englishman, and a friend to his country, he could not endure the thought; he would never consent to subscribe to a doctrine so derogatory to the honour, so disgraceful to the character, and so destructive to the interests of this country. He would risk every thing sooner than accede to it; he would hazard every drop of blood, and the last shilling of the national treasure, sooner than Britain should be set at defiance, bullied, and dictated to by her ungrateful and undutiful children, her disobedient and rebellious subjects. He alluded to a passage in the last-mentioned noble Duke's speech, in which he protested, that he did not believe either a change of men or measures, in consequence of it, would effect a reconciliation, so as to bring America back to her former disposition. He believed his Grace, for he was certain that the resentments of America were not directed against any particular set of men; he was convinced that they despised their supposed friends, as well as their pretended enemies; and that their intentions were uniformly from the beginning to render themselves independent of the parent State.

The Duke of Richmond, mistaking his Lordship's words, desired that he might be permitted to explain himself. He supposed that the last noble Lord imputed to him the following words: "Though there should be a change of men, there will be no change of measures." He therefore begged to be understood, that he neither meant, nor made use of any such expression. He thought it necessary, for he was certain, if there was a change of men, there would be a change of measures. For his part, he did not wish to take any official part in any such change, for the reason before assigned; because he was morally certain that all attempts to recover America would be in vain; the moment was passed, that country was now irretrievably lost.

The Earl of Sandwich appealed to their Lordships' recollection, if the noble Duke had not totally misstated his words and misconceived his meaning, and wished to be set right, whether he had done more than repeat the words in the manner now explained by his Grace, as an argument to prove, that nothing now remained but to exert the force of this country to the fullest extent, in reducing America to a proper state of legal and constitutional dependence.

The Duke of Grafton prefaced his particular sentiments of the measures chalked out in the speech, in the strongest disapprobation of the conduct of Administration from the beginning. He pledged himself to the House, and to the publick, that while he had a leg to stand on, he would come down, day after day, to express the most marked abhorrence of the measures hitherto pursued, and meant to be adhered to, in respect to America. He condemned, in terms equally explicit and unreserved, the measures which had compelled America to declare herself independent, though he was sorry for it, and thought she acted extremely wrong in so doing. He said, Ministers had not only effected this part of their scheme, by a set of the most cruel, oppressive, destructive, and impolitick laws, that were ever devised by a deliberate assembly, but they had likewise brought themselves into a situation which had been often predicted by those on this side of the House; he intended by this expression, he said, no particular distinction of party; he meant only the noble Lords with whom he voted in the course of the last session on American affairs. Those predictions Ministers affected to disbelieve; though the experience of that day, the very speech delivered from the throne, proved this truth; and when other circumstances came to be revealed, their veracity could not be questioned, they were beyond the reach of doubt, much less of naked contradiction. He was justified, from an authority which could not be disputed, to aver, that four ships of the line, with a considerable number of land forces on board, had lately sailed from Cadiz; that another fleet of seven men of war of the line, with a body of at least ten thousand land forces, were preparing to follow them; that the French had been for some months busily employed in making very formidable naval preparations; the consequence of which was, that a strong squadron of men-of-war were now lying at Brest, completely fitted and manned, waiting only for orders to proceed to the place of its intended destination. His Grace attributed our present alarming situation to a want of proper information: it was, he contended, the great cause of all our misfortunes. Parliament was led blindfolded; they assented to every thing Ministers proposed; they reposed an unlimited confidence in their assurances; and though, perhaps, from the same spirit of obstinacy and infatuation, they should wilfully continue to persist in errour, they must acknowledge that they were grossly, and, he believed wilfully deceived. He reminded Ministers, how often, and with what confidence, the last year, when the possible, if not probable, interference of foreign Powers was suggested, as a strong ground of expediency for us to relax in our claims on America, and to adopt conciliatory measures, they pledged themselves to Parliament that no impediment or obstruction was to be dreaded from that quarter; that our Court daily received the most full and satisfactory assurances, assurances that might be safely relied on, of the pacifick disposition of both France and Spain; yet all of a sudden press-warrants are issued, while, if the speech may be depended on, such a precaution is unnecessary. Two days before the meeting of Parliament, the substance of the speech is flatly contradicted, the assurances are no longer to be relied on; the noble Lord who presides at the Admiralty tells you that it became necessary to prepare for the worst. Does his Lordship mean to amuse us, by telling us that our present armament was only meant to put us in a state of defence, confessing by that assertion, at the same time, that, before the steps now taken, the nation was not in a proper state of defence, contrary to the repeated assurances that his Lordship had given to this House that it was?

The Earl of Sandwich (to explain) insisted that he never meant to say that the nation was not in a state of defence previous to the preparations now going on, for he was certain that we were all along prepared; what he meant to say was, that as a dispute subsisted between Spain and Portugal, which might call for our interference, as well as mediation, if pushed to extremities, he thought it his duty to prepare for the worst, in order to give our mediation the proper effect.

The Duke of Grafton replied to this explanation by observing, that although every thing asserted by the noble Lord had been literally true, he begged leave to differ from him in thinking that our home defence could be looked upon as complete, while we solely depended on our Navy. Adverse winds and a thousand accidents fleets were liable to, pointed out the necessity of auxiliary assistance, such as a strong military force, should an enemy by chance, or any other means, effect a landing. A strong instance of the truth of this observation had, he begged leave to remind their Lordships, happened during the late war, when Sir Edward Hawke was wind-bound in Torbay, so as not to be able to prevent Conflans from invading some part of these kingdoms, though he was apprised of his intention. At the critical instant Providence interposed, and the wind suddenly changing, Sir Edward was enabled to proceed to sea, and meet the enemy at the very moment they had cleared the land, by which fortunate circumstance he was enabled to engage them, and defeating them, prevented an invasion which might have been productive of the worst consequences. His Grace concluded therefore, in answer to the noble Earl's general argument in support of the measures of Administration, allowing every one of his Lordship's assertions to be founded in fact, and to carry with them the effect they were wished to produce, that a powerful naval force was not sufficient alone for home defence; that the silence of the other members of the Cabinet had the most unfavourable appearance; and as the noble Lord seemed to trust so much to the respectable state of the Navy previous to the press, he would be glad to have a specifick answer to this question: Was the naval force a few days since a sufficient defence against that now fitting out and ready to sail from Brest? Because, if it was not, then Parliament had been designedly misled, the nation had been grossly and criminally deceived, Ministers had trusted the safety of the kingdom to an inferiour force, and had by so doing given Parliament official information that was not to be relied on. Such, then, being the state of publick affairs respecting both America and the unfavourable dispositions, if not the direct hostile intentions, of foreign Powers, the love he bore his country, his respect for his sovereign, his duty as a member of that House, forbid him to approve of an address so big with mischief, and so much calculated to lull the nation into a fatal security, while its dearest interests, its very existence, were on the eve of being ultimately decided upon. On the contrary, he would most earnestly recommend, at this alarming crisis, to suspend all further proceedings, in order that the House might resolve itself into a Committee, to inquire into the state of the nation, to learn the true causes which have occasioned the revolt of our American subjects, to discover their authors, and to devise the best measures for rescuing the nation from the innumerable perils with which it is at this present instant surrounded.

The Earl of SANDWICH said, he could give a direct answer to the question now proposed; he could assure the House from his own certain knowledge, that before any late preparation was made on our part, we had a naval force sufficient to cope with any now at Brest, fitting out there, or preparing to depart. The armament alluded to was but a small one, consisting only of six ships of the line; but if it had been greater, we were sufficiently prepared. In answer to something suggested by the Duke of Grafton, relative to the real motives of the armament, whether it was or was not occasioned by the disputes subsisting between Spain and Portugal, he said it was not; but as France had thought proper to augment her Navy, he thought it his duty to agree with his brethren in office, not entirely to trust to assurances. Assurances were on some occasions to be firmly relied on, when they were accompanied with appearances that bore a full and unequivocal testimony of their truth; when they were not, they became an object of serious attention, and called for suitable measures from those whose business it was to watch them. As to the expense objected to by the noble Duke, however prudent it might be to attend to it in some situations, in others it became an object of no concern. An early and timely preparation on our part would have the effect of substantial economy; it would probably be the last expense; for, by incurring it in time, it might, perhaps, prevent a much greater.

The Duke of RICHMOND again rose; he begged to state the question on a larger ground than it was propounded by the noble Duke who spoke last but one. He observed, that the noble Lord who undertook the defence of Administration, had confessed that the French were fitting out a fleet at Brest; that in consequence of that armament, not on account of the dispute between Spain and Portugal, his Lordship, with the rest of the Cabinet Ministers, had advised his Majesty to make the present proposed naval augmentation. He should, therefore, be glad to know, if the preparations in the ports of France were of a long standing, or whether they came only to the knowledge of Administration within a few days; and if they were of a long standing, how came Administration to defer taking the necessary measures earlier? He again reprehended Ministers very severely on this silence, which if longer persisted in, he should impute to the most unbecoming and criminal contempt, or to their inability of giving a satisfactory answer.

Lord Viscount WEYMOUTH said, the absence of two Cabinet Ministers [Lords Gower and Suffolk] was the occasion of that silence on the part of Administration which had been improperly imputed to a reluctance or inability to give satisfaction to the House. He defended the speech from the several objections made to it; and said, he particularly rose to explain a matter which had been unwarrantably pressed on the noble Earl who spoke last on the same side. The noble Duke who spoke before him proposed the following dilemma: Either Administration knew of the armament fitting out at Brest, or they did not; if they did, and failed so much in their duty as not to take the necessary steps to meet and counteract, then we were blamable; if they did not, they were still more censurable for neglecting so indispensable a part of their duty. Now, in his opinion, without admitting either conclusion, the matter might be cleared up, and Ministers, instead of incurring any just censure, would be found to have acted perfectly consistent and judiciously; for they knew that the preparations were going on; and they resolved to keep pace with them. In answer, therefore, to the charge, why did you not arm earlier? it is enough to say, that notice was received of the armaments going on in France; that Administration availed themselves of that information; that the ships intended for service were fitted for sea; and that when the moment arrived in which it was prudent for this country to make her real intentions known, orders were given for a press, the ships were ready to receive the men, and as soon as the number of seamen necessary to proceed to sea are procured, it is only to ship them, and the business will be completed. He congratulated the nation on the address, and the expedition with which the whole was executed; and was glad to find, though nothing of the kind was intended, that the secrecy with which the whole was conducted should make the transaction pass unobserved in general, and should have, in particular, escaped the eagle and observant eyes of the noble Lords on the other side of the House, who, by their total ignorance of the precautions and preparations his Majesty's servants had wisely been making, showed their vigilance and activity, while it demonstrated the prudence that accompanied that vigilance which could effect its purposes without creating an alarm either at home or abroad. It was no secret to great numbers, that the nation was not only prepared, but earlier prepared than was expected by those who might think they would have an interest and advantage in being beforehand with us, and thereby taking us by surprise.

The Duke of RICHMOND returned to the question put to the first Lord of the Admiralty by the noble Duke in the blue ribbon, [the Duke of Grafton.] He said, his Lordship had artfully evaded giving a direct answer to the question proposed to him. He had answered, that the naval force of this country, before the press-warrants were issued, was superiour to the armament then fitting out at Brest. He begged leave to put the question upon a more general ground. Is the naval force of Britain, now ready to proceed to sea, sufficient for home defence, and for the necessary defence of the empire, supposing that France and Spain should break with us, either by abetting America, or in case of an attack upon Portugal? This, his Grace said, was a question that could not be evaded or answered in the affirmative, without a professed design to mislead the House and impose on the nation.

The Earl of SANDWICH answered, that our fleet was in prime condition; that the complements of our ships were nearly made up; and, that we could fit out a fleet at a short notice nearly equal to all the Powers of Europe.

The Lord WYCOMBE [Earl of Shelburne] said he was astonished that the House could continue to submit coolly to the contempt with which Administration had treated it, both in the speech, and the manner in which the speech was defended in the course of the evening. The speech, he said, was a piece of metaphysical refinement, framed with a purposed design to impose; the defence made to continue the imposition, was nothing more than a string of sophisms, no less wretched in their texture, than insolent in their tenour. He said, he was no great metaphysician, but still he knew enough of the science of metaphysics to see and detect the manifest falsehoods, clothed in the semblance of truth, particularly when the garment was so thin, or the disguise so gross and ill-suited, that further confidence would be madness, and remaining in errour would be the effect of the most senseless stupidity.

Such being the contents of the speech, the manifest intention of its framers, and the shameful conduct of its defenders, he begged the indulgence of the House, while he briefly delivered his sentiments on those several points. As the first part of his engagement, he proceeded to consider the speech paragraph by paragraph. In the execution of this task, he trusted he should prove, that it was fraught with a mixture of the most unqualified absurdity, treachery, cruelty, hypocrisy, and deceit. The very opening of it was manifestly fallacious; for how was it possible to expect unanimity at home in support of the prosecution of a war, the original object of which was professedly to enslave three millions of British born subjects? How could Ministers dare to call for unanimity from those whom they had so repeatedly insulted, betrayed, and deceived? and the imputation of unanimity was still more absurd, when it was looked for from those who had so often predicted, nay literally foretold them every circumstance which had happened in the course of this cruel and bloody business to the present instant; and had frequently, during the last session of Parliament, faithfully described the present awful and alarming state of this country, both in regard of her subjects in America, and her home security. His Lordship observed, that the first paragraph contained many specious falsehoods, as well as those he had just remarked on. It charged the Americans with "rejecting the means of conciliation held out to them under the authority of our commission, with circumstances of indignity and insult." This his Lordship contended was no less untrue, than plausibly and artfully stated. For the pretended means of conciliation alluded to, were held back so long, the commission not being made out, nor the Commissioners sent till about the middle of May, that the people of America, if the Commissioners were armed with powers sufficient to hold out fair and solid means of conciliation, were fully justified in declaring themselves independent, from the most obvious motives of self preservation; but when these pretended means of conciliation held out nothing but a naked offer of pardon, on the terms of unconditional submission, the hitherto unparalleled effrontery of Ministers, who could thus dare to deceive their Sovereign, could now be only equalled by the political blindness and tame servility of those who could submit, or swallow such gross deviations in point of fact, and misrepresentations in argument and conclusion. Every opprobrious charge which could tend to inflame the people of this country against their fellow-subjects in America was stuffed into the speech, and had been copied and improved on by the friends of Administration, particularly two or three of the noble Lords, who spoke early in the debate. They have been represented daring, desperate, traitorous, insolent, ungrateful, and rebellious. These, he said, were strong charges, and they required suitable proofs. For his part, whatever the speech may have decided, or however eager the supporters of the speech might have been to improve on the pattern or doctrines therein laid down, he could never be persuaded to deem people taking up arms in defence of their property, their privileges, and unalienable rights, Rebels; if such doctrines had prevailed at the time of the Revolution, their lordships would not then probably be sitting in that House. If resisting a lawful authority, though perhaps not a rightful authority, be the essence of treason, the Whigs at the Revolution were rank Rebels, in the sense the speech used the term. King James the II. was their lawful King! It is true, he endeavoured to trample, and in some instances, did invade their rights; but still, if a resistance of lawful authority constituted an act of treason in every possible event, the Whigs in 1688, and the Provincials now in arms, may be deemed Rebels. It was an opinion he never could accede to; he would always continue to think that both were a constitutional resistance to a power originally legal, but which, by an unconstitutional exercise of it, had degenerated into the most oppressive stages of an usurped arbitrary power. He said, while he gave his opinion so explicitly on the sufferings of America, he would wish to be understood, that he never meant this country should relinquish its right of commercial controul and regulation over that; on the contrary, he always thought, that that power of regulating the trade of the Colonies, was the very essence of the political connection subsisting between both countries; that even if this regulatory power was defined in its most full and extensive sense, and acknowledged on the part of the Colonies, yet something more might be still expected; the national debt, under which the people of this country now groan, is truly and equitably the debt of every individual in the whole empire, whether in Asia, America, or nearer home. But until the Americans had full satisfaction on the question of taxation, and ample reparation for the attack on their charters, till the exclusive right of taxing themselves, and the most solemn security was given them for their colonial privileges, derived through their respective legislative assemblies, it was in vain to talk of conciliation. It was possible extirpation might follow from the means of conciliation held out to them, but he was certain, notwithstanding what may have been held out in the speech, conciliation never would. These, he said, were his general sentiments relative to that species of dependency America owes of right to the parent State. It might not meet the approbation of a great number of persons on the other side of the Atlantick. That, however, did by no means influence his opinion; it had been the same from the beginning. He did not now take it up, because our affairs in that country wore at present a more favourable aspect than at any time during the last session; for he expressed himself precisely in similar terms, at the time that America was flushed with success, when they had every foot of Canada in their possession, the town of Quebeck excepted. He referred to the pamphlet written by Dr. Price, at the end of which a speech was printed in his name, which he owned was authentick.

The second paragraph in the speech was another metaphysical refinement equally ill supported in fact or argument; if it contained any substantial truth, it was, that the same violent oppressive measures were determined to be pursued; that we must prepare for another campaign, and that the foreign mercenaries had executed, with a bloody alacrity, the horrid purposes of their paymasters, by butchering our fellow-subjects in cold blood. It was a very proper and timely eulogium in return for a faithful discharge of their duty, and, he presumed, was intended to operate as a powerful stimulative to perseverance in the same commendable line of conduct.

On the third paragraph he likewise commented; and insisted, that it was fraught with the most gross and notorious falsehoods; no assurances of amity were, or could be, received; and if they were received, and could be depended on, why arm? why put the nation to so monstrous an expense? why despatch your press-gangs in every quarter of the town? why let loose so many bands of ruffians to enter by force into people's dwellings, to drag the unhappy master of a numerous family from them, aboard a tender, where perhaps the first account they hear of him is, that he died of grief and vexation, or of the cruel usage and bad treatment he received before or during his passage to, or being aboard at the Nore. His Lordship, however, was proud to find, that by the spirited conduct of the Lord Mayor of London (Mr. Sawbridge) a stop had been put to those horrid outrages within the limits of his jurisdiction. He had refused to back press-warrants, though it was insinuated by those that applied, on his refusal, that the request was merely complimentary, for that the press would be carried into the city. He said, if any proof were wanting of the unpopularity of the present barbarous war, that honest Magistrate's conduct, as expressing the sentiments of the inhabitants of the first city in the empire, perhaps in the world, was the most irrefragable and conclusive. If, upon any other occasion, the most distant prospect of a foreign war was only so much as talked of, the citizens of London would be the foremost and most conspicuous in expressing their zeal for chastising our foreign enemies; but when it was known that the present threatened rupture is corrected, or more properly speaking, is a consequence of an unnatural proscription of three millions of their fellow-subjects, the spirit of the nation is bowed down and enfeebled, their hearts, as well as their countenances, are frozen, and they even remain in a kind of political stupour, scarcely venturing to decide in their own hearts, whether a vigorous resistance against our foreign enemies may not be the means of ensuring evils, no less to be avoided, than even defeat from the hands of our natural foes, that of forging chains for our American brethren, as the leading measure in due season to the riveting them on ourselves. His Lordship assured the noble Earl, [Lord Sandwich,] who supposed that he went over to the Continent to seek intelligence, that he was misinformed or mistaken in his conjectures. It was true that he did go to France towards the latter end of the summer, but with no such intention as the noble Earl was pleased to impute. He was in Britanny, and in several parts of the sea-coast, where he received every mark of politeness, hospitality, and kindness, that was in the power of the inhabitants of the country to bestow; it was, he said, the native disposition of the nobility and gentry of France, to conduct themselves in that manner towards all strangers of rank, or worthy of note. He was certain that there was not one of their Lordships present, if in his situation, who would not have had a reception equally kind, friendly, and respectful. It would ill become him, therefore, if he had learned any thing, through such a confidential medium, to disclose it. He trusted he was incapable of acting in such a manner; but whatever wit there might be in the noble Earl's insinuation, there was nothing in it solid, or relative to the present subject of debate; for without stirring out of England, without looking for official information, every body had repeatedly heard that Spain and Portugal were seemingly on the eve of a rupture, relative to a dispute of boundaries of territory in the Brazils, which, in its consequences, was likely to involve Britain in a war; that Spain and France had been arming for some months; that a formidable fleet is now fitting out at Brest; that the French and Spanish ports were rendered asylums and places of safety to the American privateers, both in Europe and the West-Indies; that warlike stores were daily transported both in French and American bottoms, openly, from almost every port in France; that the latter Court had, as often as applied to, positively refused to forbid or prohibit American trading vessels or ships of war from entering their ports; and that, to complete the whole, a person from the Congress, if not two or three, were now in a publick character at the Court of Versailles; not perhaps received with the formalities of an Envoy Extraordinary, to agree upon specifick articles, but most certainly armed with all the efficient powers of a person treating on the part of an independent State, on certain preliminary conditions, leading to engagements of a most consequential and important nature. These being incontrovertible facts, daily repeated in the publick papers, and known universally to every person who spent a single hour's consideration, or bestowed the least degree of attention on the subject, he looked upon himself fully satisfied in flatly contradicting the passage alluded to, and solemnly affirming that we do not continue to receive assurances of amity from the several Courts of Europe, or that receiving them, it was a gross imposition on Parliament, to even insinuate that they were to be relied or depended on. His Lordship turned with great indignation on the Cabinet Ministers; said, it was very lucky for such of them as were absent; for surely, in the present situation of affairs, they must cut a very awkward figure: but he was astonished how the noble Viscount could so forget, as to say, that we had been preparing for some months, when the contrary was well known to every clerk and store-keeper in the several dock-yards; nay, a most curious circumstance was generally reported, and believed to be true, which was, that the speech, as first manufactured, was obliged to be altered two days before its final revision; such being the information Ministers had of the disposition of foreign courts on the Thursday night or Friday morning previous to the issuing the press-warrants. He reprehended the noble Lord whose province it was to procure the necessary information, in very severe terms. He said, when he had the honour of occupying the same post, he spared no pains or expense to be fully, timely, and minutely informed. He was apprised of every step taken by France, in relation to the purchase and intended conquest of Corsica, from its very commencement. While that matter was in agitation, he kept it continually in his mind, and often thought of it on his pillow; and though he was left alone, and deserted by all his colleagues in office, and brethren in Cabinet, he had the conscious pleasure in recollecting that he had done his duty, and that nothing could be fairly imputed to his neglect or inattention.

On the concluding paragraph of the speech, his Lordship was also severe. He said it was a compound of the most glaring hypocrisy and deceit, unless attempting to rob the people of America of their property, by laying taxes without their consent or approbation, or stripping them of their charters, the only legal foundation of their legislative and personal privileges, as a proof "that no people ever enjoyed more happiness under a milder Government," or unless, since the resistance to this mild Government, the sending over an Army of blood-thirsty foreign mercenaries to cut their throats, as the first step "to restore them the blessings of law and liberty, equally enjoyed by every British subject," be a truism, he could not discover the most distant semblance of truth throughout the whole sentence. His Lordship concluded with calling on the Cabinet Ministers present, to declare whether they had applied to the Court of Versailles on any of the leading points now mentioned; whether they were disavowed, mitigated, or explained by that Court; whether, on the other hand, they were openly avowed, or replied to in such a manner as to give us to understand that they would, when their armaments were rendered more forward. These, his Lordship insisted, were matters that called for so many explicit answers: that until explanations were had on them substantially, or in detail, it was impossible that their Lordships could, with safety, proceed, much less vote the present address, which might, or might not be true, taking the matter in the most favourable light. In fine, it was absurd, it was an insult on common sense, to talk of "assurances of amity from foreign Powers," while some of those Powers were, at least hitherto, known to secretly abet, and, in some instances, openly countenance, nourish, and support, our subjects now resisting our authority in America.

The Lord Osborne said he was far from approving the conduct of Administration; he was satisfied that they justly incurred censure in several parts of it; yet he could by no means agree with the amendment, as it held out investigation and inquiry at the instant that the fullest exertion of the Naval and Military strength of Great Britain was called for, as well for our own protection, as to bring back our subjects in America into a constitutional acknowledgment of the superiority of this country as the parent and governing State: when that acknowledgment was obtained, then he would recommend the most mild and conciliating terms that could be well imagined. No noble Lord in that House would go further, or more cheerfully, in restoring peace upon fair, equitable, and reasonable terms than he would, if they submitted to the legislative power of this country; till that should happen to be the case, none would more zealously support such measures as might promise to compel them to a constitutional submission to the British Legislature. Nothing came more fully up to the ideas he entertained and wished to convey on the great American question, than the Declaratory Act passed in 1766, on the repeal of the Stamp Act; that asserted the legislative supremacy of this country in its fullest extent, and he was astonished that the framers of that act could offer to defend America, when the very resistance which produced the present unhappy civil war, was made expressly in contradiction to the parliamentary rights therein maintained. He spoke much of the ingratitude of America, the favours we had heaped upon her, and the insupportable burdens we had loaded ourselves with, in rearing, nourishing, and protecting her, till at length we had raised her to a pitch of strength and opulence, sufficient to trust the decision of her cause to the event of arms. Such was the state of things; and now we had no alternative but either to suffer America to erect herself into an independent sovereign State, which was an opinion, he trusted, would never prevail in that House, or exert ourselves to the utmost stretch of our abilities. He said, the success of our troops at Long-Island, and the probable good consequences it may be productive of, would, he hoped, give us such a footing in America, as would break the Rebel Confederacy in some measure. If New-York is taken, which he had little doubt was the case before now, a civil Government might be reëstablished there, which would afford an asylum to those who were forced into a rebellion against their inclination, or had suffered for not doing so. It would give an opportunity to the friends of Great Britain to show their attachment to the parent State, and might probably, in the end, form so powerful a balance, as would be sufficient to restore that country to a state of obedience and tranquillity, without the sad necessity of wading to it through blood and slaughter.

The Earl of Shelburne perceiving that the Earl of Sandwich declined giving any answer relative to what steps had been taken by Administration towards bringing the Court of Versailles to an eclaircissement, on account of the open countenance and secret assistance which had been given to America in the course of the present civil war, called once more on his Lordship, and at the same time insisted he should give the House some information, relative to the state of the Navy, the number of ships we could fit out upon an emergency, a list of those now serving in America, and the force collected in the French ports.

The Earl of Sandwich said, he did not think himself permitted to give the explanation required: such an explanation would not be prudent at this time. If the intentions of France were hostile, it might not be proper, though he believed they were not. At all events he thought such an eclaircissement would be highly improper respecting our home defence. As for the force serving in America, it consisted of two ships-of-the-line, ten fifties, and seventy-one frigates and armed vessels, amounting in the whole to eighty-three ships and vessels of war, and fifteen thousand seamen.

The Earl of Shelburne said, he did not make the requisition now evaded, by way of a personal application. He knew his Lordship too well, and had too thorough a knowledge of him, to trouble him on any subject on which he should be obliged to depend on his word. He called upon him in his official character, and expected to be answered.

The Earl of Sandwich said, he could not satisfy his Lordship; that the question was of too delicate a nature to admit of an explanation; that nothing was said in that House that did not get out; that let our force be what it might, we should, from motives of policy, forbear to disclose it, particularly when foreign Powers were arming, and known to be in some degree of forwardness; that if we had any enemies, they would be soon made acquainted with our situation. It might be supposed, that people would not be wanting, nay, if all other means were denied, the very door-keepers might, and must have it in their power to disclose that species of intelligence, which it is our business to conceal.

The Earl of SHELBURNE said he was astonished, that any man in office in that House, who was responsible to the publick, and accountable to their Lordships, dare, on so important an occasion, trifle with the House, and refuse the necessary information, when he, at the same time, confessed it was in his power to satisfy them. [Here a great confusion arose, and a general call for Order! Order! Order!]

The Duke of RICHMOND contended, that his noble friend was by no means disorderly; that as a Lord of Parliament, sitting in that House, and called upon for his advice, he had a right to have the question now put fully and fairly answered.

The Earl of SANDWICH replied, he was in the judgment of the House; that he was ready, if the House insisted on it. [A cry of No! No! No!]

The Earl of BRISTOL. I think the noble Earl is properly justifiable in not answering the question now so warmly pressed, unless at the express desire of the House. The House do not wish for any such explanation, in which, I am of opinion, they have acted very wisely. It would answer no one good purpose: I am certain, taking the fact either way, it might be productive of many bad ones. The noble Earl preserves every possible confidence that can be reposed in him. I had the honour of sitting with him at the Board, at which his Lordship now presides, and can, from my own knowledge and experience in my profession and official character, affirm, that no man is capable of discharging the duties of the important station he now fills with more fidelity and ability than his Lordship. The noble Lord who spoke last but one, [Lord Shelburne,] is very desirous to be acquainted with the detail of our naval force at home. I can tell his Lordship, that we have twenty-three ships-of-the-line, their complements nearly full, and the ships in a condition to proceed to sea at a day's notice. I will tell him further, that the present press will furnish us with seamen sufficient to man the ships going to be put into commission; that we may have forty sail-of-the-line ready for sea by the first of March; nay, I may venture farther, and assure the House, that they will be ready early in February. From which, I am fairly authorized to draw this clear deduction, and which will be partly an answer to the question put early in the debate by the noble Duke in the blue ribbon, [Duke of Grafton,] the other noble Duke who enlarged the question, [Duke of Richmond,] and by the noble Lord, [Lord Shelburne,] whom I last mentioned; and it is this: that the guard-ships are a full match for any naval armament now ready in the French and Spanish harbours, and that the additional armament proposed to be fitted out, will give us such a fleet, as the whole combined force of France and Spain will not, by the time I have first stated, be able to cope with.

The same noble Earl has passed great encomiums on the Chief Magistrate of the City of London, for what his Lordship is pleased to term that Magistrate's spirited and commendable conduct. He has, he says, refused to back the press-warrants. Now, for my part, I entertain a very different opinion of the worthy Magistrate's conduct; and so far from being a popular step, I trust it will meet with that degree of publick disapprobation it justly merits. The noble Lord himself looks upon a war with France and Spain to be inevitable: we may presume, that his Lordship and his favourite Magistrate, unite in opinion. How then are we to interpret the conduct of one, or the approbation of the other? They must know, that though the strength and security of the Island is known to depend upon our Navy, that without seamen ships are of no service, and that on emergencies, such as the present, we are always obliged to have recourse to a press; yet, what must we think of those who, at so critical and alarming a crisis, would sooner sacrifice, not only the interests, but hazard the very existence of the nation to party views and personal resentments. The noble Lord supposes, that the absence of the greater part of our frigates on the other side of the Atlantick, is at present a very dangerous circumstance, if any actual sudden operations were intended to be carried into execution. That, however, is not the case; nothing of the kind is expected; but even if it were, we have several frigates at home fit for service, and several others that could be easily made ready for sea at a short notice; besides, if things should take a more serious and decisive turn, we could order home a sufficient number from America. Without sending for them, now that the landings are effected, there will be no occasion for such a number to be kept in America, consequently several of them will return to Britain. My Lords, I have spent the greatest part of my life in the naval service, and mean to dedicate the remainder to my profession, if circumstances should make it necessary. I know that things wear a suspicious appearance; but I know likewise, that we are, as the noble Earl has more than once assured your Lordships this night, prepared for the worst. The British Navy has always hitherto been invincible, and I trust ever will. Whatever character I have obtained in the service, either as an official or professional man, I am ready to stake it, that we will be more than a match for our enemies, taking the question of a rupture at the present, or at any more remote period. I am, my Lords, thoroughly convinced of the truth of what I now advance; and as the best proof, both of my own conviction and of my readiness to support those sentiments, am ready to take any command which it may be thought proper to entrust me with. I will never serve in any other character, but that which I have been accustomed to from my earliest youth. I would decline any other were it offered to me, while I would cheerfully execute any commands which might be laid upon me in the way of my profession.

The amendment being negatived, was entered as a Protest, as follows:

Amendment proposed to be made to the motion for an Address on his Majesty's Speech.

"To assure his Majesty, that, animated with the most earnest and sincere zeal for his true interest, and the real glory of his reign, we behold with inexpressible concern the minds of a very large and lately loyal and affectionate part of his people entirely alienated from his Government. Nor can we conceive, that such an event, as the disaffection and revolt of a whole people, could have taken place, without some considerable errours in the conduct observed towards them.

"These erroneous measures, we conceive, are to be imputed to a want of sufficient information being laid before Parliament, and to too large a degree of confidence being reposed in those Ministers, who from their duty were obliged, and from their official situation were best enabled, to know the temper and disposition of his Majesty's American subjects, and were therefore presumed most capable of pointing out such measures as might produce the most salutary effect. Hence the schemes which were formed for the reduction and chastisement of a supposed inconsiderable party of factious men, have driven thirteen large Provinces to despair. Every act which has been proposed as a means of procuring peace and submission, has become a new cause of war and revolt; and we now find ourselves almost inextricably involved in a bloody and expensive civil war; which, besides exhausting at present the strength of all his Majesty's dominions, exposing our allies to the designs of their and our enemies, and leaving this kingdom in a most perilous situation, threatens in its issue the most deplorable calamities to the whole British race.

"We cannot avoid lamenting, that in consequence of the credit afforded to the representations of Ministers, no hearing has been given to the reiterated complaints and petitions of the Colonies; neither has any ground been laid for removing the original cause of these unhappy differences, which took their rise from questions relative to parliamentary proceeding, and can be settled only by parliamentary authority. By this fatal omission, the Commissioners nominated for the apparent purpose of making peace, were furnished with no legal power but those of giving or withholding pardons at their pleasure, and of relaxing the severities of a single penal act of Parliament, leaving the whole foundation of this unhappy controversy just as it stood at the beginning.

"To represent to his Majesty, that in addition to this neglect, when, in the beginning of the last session, his Majesty, in his gracious speech to both Houses of Parliament, had declared his resolution of sending out Commissioners for the purposes therein expressed, as speedily as possible; no such Commissioners were sent until near seven months afterwards, and until the nation was alarmed by the evacuation of the only town then held for his Majesty in the thirteen United Colonies. By this delay, acts of the most critical nature, the effect of which must as much depend on the power of immediately relaxing them on submission, as in enforcing them upon disobedience, had only an operation to inflame and exasperate. But if any Colony, town, or place, had been induced to submit by the operation of the terrours of these acts, there were none in the place of power to restore the people so submitting to the common rights of subjection. The inhabitants of the Colonies, apprised that they were put out of the protection of Government, and seeing no means provided for their entering into it, were furnished with reasons, but too colourable, for breaking off their dependency on the Crown of this kingdom.

"To assure his Majesty, that, removing our confidence from those who in so many instances have grossly abused it, we shall endeavour to restore to Parliament the confidence of all his people.

"To this end it may be advisable to make a more minute inquiry into the grievances of the Colonies, as well as into the conduct of Ministers with regard to them. We may think it proper particularly to inquire, how it has happened, that the commerce of this kingdom has been left exposed to the reprisals of the Colonies, at the very time when their seamen and fishermen, being indiscriminately prohibited from the peaceable exercise of their occupations and declared open enemies, must be expected, with a certain assurance, to betake themselves to plunder, and to wreak their revenge on the commerce of Great Britain.

"That we understand, that amidst the many disasters and disgraces which have attended on his Majesty's arms in many parts of America, an advantage has been gained by his Majesty's British and foreign mercenary forces in the Province of New-York. That if a wise, moderate, and provident use be made of their advantage, it is not improbable that happy effects may result from that use. And we assure his Majesty that nothing shall be wanting on our part to enable his Majesty to take full advantage of any dispositions to reconciliation, which may be the consequence of the miseries of war, by laying down, on our part, real permanent grounds of connection between Great Britain and the Colonies, on principles of liberty and terms of mutual advantage.

"That whilst we lament this effusion of English blood, (which we hope has not been greater, or other than necessity required and honour justified,) we should most heartily congratulate his Majesty on any event leading to the great desirable end of settling a peace, which might promise to last, by the restoration of the ancient affection which has happily subsisted in former times between this Kingdom and its Colonies; any other would necessarily require, even in case of a total conquest, an army to maintain, ruinous to the finances and incompatible with the freedom of his Majesty's people. We should look with the utmost shame and horrour on any events, of what nature soever, that should tend to break the spirit of any large part of the British nation, to bow them to an abject, unconditional submission to any power whatsoever, to annihilate their liberties, and to subdue them to servile principles and passive habits by the mere force of foreign mercenary arms. Because, amidst the excesses and abuses which have happened, we must respect the spirit and principles operating in these commotions. Our wish is, to regulate, not destroy them. For, though differing in some circumstances, those very principles evidently bear so exact an analogy with those which support the most valuable part of our own constitution, that it is impossible, with any appearance of justice, to think of wholly extirpating them by the sword in any part of his Majesty's dominions, without admitting consequences and establishing precedents the most dangerous to the liberties of this Kingdom."

The question was put, Whether these words shall stand part of the motion?

It was resolved in the negative.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Contents, - - - - | 26 | - - - - | 26 |
| Not contents, - - - | 82 | - - - - | 91 |
| Proxies, - - - - - | 9 | | |

Dissentient.—Manchester, Portland, Richmond, Scarborough, Devonshire, Rockingham, King, Craven, Fitzwilliam, Abingdon, De Ferrars, Effingham, Abergavenny, Ponsonby.

November 1.

ADDRESS PRESENTED.

"The humble Address of the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled:

"Most gracious Sovereign:

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, beg leave to return your Majesty our humble thanks for your most gracious speech from the throne.

"It is with the truest satisfaction we congratulate your Majesty on the success of your arms in the Province of New-York, the recovery of Canada, and the fair prospect of decisive good consequences, which, under the blessing of Divine Providence, is now opened by the firmness of your Majesty's councils, the valour and good conduct of your Majesty's officers and forces by sea and land, and by the zeal and bravery of the auxiliary troops in your Majesty's service.

"We beg leave to assure your Majesty, that nothing would have given us equal happiness to the having been informed by your Majesty, at the opening of this session, that the troubles which have so long distracted North-America had been at an end; that your Majesty's unhappy people in those Provinces had recovered from their delusion, and, awakened by a due sense of their misfortunes and misdoings, had delivered themselves from the oppression of their leaders, and were returned to their duty. While we lament that your Majesty's humane and merciful intentions have been frustrated by the neglect shown to the means of conciliation, notified under the authority of your Majesty's royal commission, we feel the strongest indignation at the insolent manner in which they were rejected; and we want words to express our abhorrence of the desperate spirit of those overbearing men, who, with an insatiable thirst of power and dominion, which has uniformly actuated all their proceedings, have now renounced allegiance to the Crown, and all political connection with Great Britain; and, with an arrogance equal to the enormity of the attempt, lest a doubt of their real designs should remain on the breast of any person whatever, have set up their rebellious Confederacies for independent States. We are fully aware of the mischief which would accrue from the success of this treason to your Majesty's loyal Colonies, to the commerce of this nation, and, more remotely indeed, but not less certainly, to the system of Europe, and to every State upon the Continent of Europe possessed of distant Colonies.

"We reflect with pleasure on the solid advantage which will be derived from the object of the Rebels being openly avowed and clearly understood; the unanimity which will prevail at home, founded in a conviction of the justice and necessity of your Majesty's measures. Inspired with the same zeal for the cause of our country which animates the kingdom at large, we will steadily support your Majesty in the vindication of the honour of your Crown and the just rights of Parliament, and will cheerfully concur in making the necessary provisions for those great purposes.

"The assurances of amity which your Majesty continues to receive from the several Courts of Europe afford us great satisfaction; we entertain the most grateful sense of the endeavours which your Majesty is exerting to conciliate the unhappy differences between two neighbouring Powers; and we trust that, by your Majesty's auspicious endeavours, these misunderstandings will be removed, and Europe continue to enjoy the inestimable blessings of peace. Permit us, sir, at the same time, to return your your Majesty our dutiful thanks for your provident attention in guarding against any events which may arise out of the present situation of affairs, by keeping us in a respectable state of defence at home.

"With hearts full of duty and gratitude, we acknowledge the happiness which, under your Majesty's mild government, is extended to every part of the British empire; of which the late flourishing state of the revolted Provinces, their numbers, their wealth, their strength by sea and land, which they think sufficient to enable them to make head against the whole power of the mother country, show that they have abundantly participated. And we earnestly hope, that your Majesty's paternal object of restoring your distracted Colonies to the happy condition from which, by their own misconduct, they are wretchedly fallen, will be speedily attained."

*

His Majesty's most gracious Answer.

"My Lords: I return you my thanks for this dutiful and affectionate address. It is with the greatest pleasure I observe the satisfaction which the success of my arms against the Rebels in North-America has given to all my loving subjects. That which you express is highly acceptable to me. The preservation of the publick tranquillity, the happiness of all my people, and the maintenance of our most excellent constitution, are the invariable objects of my heart."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

DEBATE IN THE COMMONS ON THE ADDRESS OF THANKS.

Thursday, October 31, 1776.

The Commons being returned to their House,

Mr. Neville moved the following Address of Thanks:

"Most Gracious Sovereign:

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, beg leave to return your Majesty the humble thanks of this House, for your most gracious speech from the throne.

"While we lament the continuance of the troubles which have so long distracted your Majesty's Colonies in North-America, and of the calamities and oppressions which our unhappy fellow-subjects are still suffering under the arbitrary tyranny of their leaders; we cannot forbear to express our detestation and abhorrence of the audacious and desperate spirit of ambition, which has at last carried those leaders so far, as to make them openly renounce all allegiance to the Crown, and all political connection with this country, and in direct terms to presume to set up their rebellious Confederacies for independent States.

"We consider their rejection of the gracious and condescending means of reconciliation, held out to them, under the authority of your Majesty's commission, as a fresh and convincing proof that the object of these men has always been power and dominion; but we can impute the circumstances of indignity and insult accompanying this proceeding to no other motive, than a resentment of your Majesty's firm and constant adherence to the maintenance of the constitutional rights of Parliament, divested of every possible view of any separate interests of the Crown; and we beg leave to assure your Majesty that the same attachment of your Majesty to the parliamentary authority of Great Britain, which hath provoked the insolence of the chiefs of this rebellion, cannot but operate, as it ought to do, in fixing your Majesty still deeper, if possible, in the affections of a British House of Commons.

"With reverence and gratitude to Divine Providence, permit us to express our unfeigned joy, and to offer our sincere congratulations to your Majesty, on the success which has attended the good conduct and valour of your Majesty's officers and forces both by sea and land, and the zeal and bravery of the auxiliary troops in your service, in the recovery of Canada, and in the important operations in the Province of New-York, which give the strongest hopes of the most decisive good consequences.

"It is with much satisfaction we learn, that your Majesty continues to receive assurances of amity from the several courts of Europe; and we thankfully acknowledge your Majesty's goodness and paternal concern for the happiness of your people, in your constant attention to preserve the general tranquillity; and it is our most earnest wish that, by your Majesty's interposition, all misunderstandings and differences between two neighbouring Powers may be happily reconciled, and Europe still enjoy the blessings of peace.

"Your faithful Commons consider it as a duty which they owe to your Majesty, and to those they represent, to grant your Majesty such supplies as the weighty considerations, which your Majesty has been pleased to state to us, shall be found to require; and we have a well-grounded confidence, that, at this time, when the object of the Rebels is openly avowed and clearly understood, the general conviction of the justice and necessity of your Majesty's measures must unite all ranks of your faithful subjects in supporting your Majesty with one mind and heart in the great national cause in which you are engaged."

Mr. Hutton seconded the motion.

Lord John Cavendish disapproved of the proposed address, and moved an amendment, by leaving out all after the first paragraph, in order to insert these words:

"Animated with the most earnest and sincere zeal for his true interest, and the real glory of his reign, we behold with inexpressible concern, the minds of a very large and lately loyal and affectionate part of his people, entirely alienated from his Government; nor can we conceive that such an event, as the disaffection and revolt of a whole people, could have taken place without some considerable errour in the conduct observed towards them; these erroneous measures, we conceive, are to be imputed to a want of sufficient information being laid before Parliament, and to too large a degree of confidence being reposed in those Ministers, who, from their duty were obliged, and from their official situation were best enabled, to know the temper and disposition of his Majesty's American subjects, and were therefore presumed most capable of pointing out such measures as might produce the most salutary effects; hence the schemes which were formed for the reduction and chastisement of a supposed inconsiderable party of factious men, have driven thirteen large Provinces to despair: every act which has been proposed as a means of procuring peace and submission, has become a new cause of war and revolt; and we now find ourselves almost inextricably involved in a bloody and expensive civil war, which, besides exhausting at present the strength of all his Majesty's dominions, exposing our allies to the designs of their and our enemies, and leaving this kingdom in a most perilous situation, threatens in its issue the most deplorable calamities to the whole British race.

"We cannot avoid lamenting, that, in consequence of the credit given to the representations of Ministers, no hearing has been given to the reiterated complaints and petitions of the Colonies, neither has any ground been laid for removing the original cause of these unhappy differences, which took their rise from questions relative to parliamentary proceedings, and can be settled only by parliamentary authority; by this fatal omission, the Commissioners nominated for the apparent purpose of making peace, were furnished with no legal powers, but that of giving or withholding pardons at their pleasure, and for relaxing the severities of a single act of Parliament, leaving the whole foundation of this unhappy controversy just as it stood in the beginning.

"To represent to his Majesty, that, in addition to this neglect, when in the beginning of the last session his Majesty, in his gracious speech to both Houses of Parliament, declared his resolution of sending out Commissioners for the purposes therein expressed "as speedily as possible," no such Commissioners were sent until near seven months afterwards, and until the nation was alarmed by the evacuation of the only town then held for his Majesty in the thirteen United Colonies: by this delay acts of the most critical nature, the effect of which must as much depend on the power of immediately relaxing them on submission, as in enforcing them upon disobedience, had only an operation to inflame and exasperate.

"But if any Colony, town, or place, had been induced to submit by the operation of the terrours of these acts, there were none on the place of power to restore the people so submitting to the common rights of subjection. The inhabitants of the Colonies, apprised that they were put out of the protection of Government, and seeing no means provided for their entering into it, were furnished with reasons but too colourable for breaking off their dependency on the Crown of this kingdom. To assure his Majesty, that removing our confidence from those who in so many instances have grossly abused it, we shall endeavour to restore to Parliament the confidence of all his people; to this end it may be advisable to make a more minute inquiry into the grievances of the Colonies, as well as into the conduct of Ministers with regard to them. We may think it proper particularly to inquire how it has happened, that the commerce of this kingdom has been left exposed to the reprisals of the Colonies at the very time when their seamen and fishermen, being indiscriminately prohibited from the peaceable exercise of their occupation, and declared open enemies, must be expected with a certain assurance to betake themselves to plunder, and to wreak their revenge on the commerce of Great Britain.

"That we understand, that amidst the many disasters and disgraces which have attended on his Majesty's arms in many parts of America, advantage has been gained by his Majesty's British and foreign mercenary forces in the Province of New-York; that if a wise, moderate, and provident use be made of this advantage, it is not improbable that happy effects may result from that use; and we assure his Majesty, that nothing shall be wanting on our part to enable his Majesty to take full advantage of any dispositions to reconciliation, which may be the consequence of the miseries of war, by laying down, on our part, real permanent grounds of connection between Great Britain and the Colonies, on principles of liberty, and terms of mutual advantage.

"That whilst we lament this effusion of English blood, (which we hope has not been greater or other than necessity required and honour justified,) we should most heartily congratulate his Majesty on any event leading to the great desirable end of settling a peace which might promise to last, by the restoration of the ancient affection which has happily subsisted in former times between this kingdom and its Colonies; any other would necessarily require, even in case of a total conquest, an army to maintain, ruinous to the finances, and incompatible with the freedom of his Majesty's people; we should look with the utmost shame and horrour on any events of what nature soever that should tend to break the spirit of any large part of the British nation, to bow them to an abject unconditional submission to any power whatsoever, to annihilate their liberties, and to subdue them to servile principles and passive habits, by the mere force of foreign mercenary arms; because, amidst the excesses and abuses which have happened, we must respect the spirit and principles operating in these commotions, our wish is to regulate, not to destroy them; for though differing in some circumstances, those very principles evidently bear so exact an analogy with those which support the most valuable part of our own constitution, that it is impossible, with any appearance of justice, to think of wholly extirpating them by the sword in any part of his Majesty's dominions, without admitting consequences, and establishing precedents, the most dangerous to the liberties of this kingdom."

The Marquis of Granby seconded the motion.

Governour Johnstone in very severe terms arraigned the conduct of Administration, in commencing the war with America. He said the affair of Long-Island was by no means a matter worthy of triumph. That island, he said, was a mere out-post to New-York, as New-York was an out-post to America, and it would have been folly and rashness in the extreme, had the Provincials attempted to maintain it. He paid General Howe and his brother very great compliments on their manœuvres in the capture of the island, and inferred that from the whole of General Howe's conduct in taking it, his caution in not forcing any of the Provincials' strong-holds, his opening trenches at six hundred yards distance from their redoubts, with his general orders to his officers to act with all possible circumspection, that most evidently the General thought highly of the Provincials, and had therefore treated them with the suitable respect due to so powerful and formidable an enemy. He complained of the defenceless state of the kingdom, and urged the danger of a war with France and Spain. The Minister's speech he declared to be an entire compound of hypocrisy. It made his Majesty talk of peace, at the very moment when not only all Europe, but this kingdom, gave the most evident appearances of preparation for war. In short, it was like a deceptious mirrour, reflecting a false image of truth. That part of it which talked of giving the Americans law and liberty, he conceived to be a mere turn of wit and humour, which would not bear a serious interpretation. It was an insidious, hypocritical speech, that held out law and liberty at the point of the sword. He spoke strongly of the falsehood of France, and the little reliance that was to be put on her professions, instancing a circumstance which happened while Cardinal Mazarine was Minister, when the Portuguese and Spaniards were at war together, and the latter had received repeated assurances of the pacifick intentions of France, although that kingdom had actually lent Portugal troops, clothed them, paid them, and officered them. He said he did not entirely approve of the American Declaration of Independence, but affirmed that the Americans were driven to that measure by our rigorous persecution of them. We had hired foreign troops to fight against them, and they had no other way of putting themselves on a footing with us, than by throwing off the yoke, declaring themselves independent, and inviting foreign aid to defend them. They had, he said, taken every possible means to avoid such a measure; they had sent a most humble petition to Government, praying relief, and couched their prayer in the strongest terms of duty and allegiance; Government had, with the most provoking harshness, rejected their petition, refusing to give any answer to it, or offering in any manner to hear them. The mode of their declaring for independency was, to be sure, in some measure indefensible. The declaration of the New-England Government was exceedingly rude and ill-written; the language was more unmannerly and abusive than even worse treatment than what they had received would have justified; but then it must be considered as written merely to captivate the common people, and therefore a polished style, and very scrupulous decency, were probably but trifling objects with the writer. He however as much condemned it, as he applauded that of the Pennsylvanians. He censured the late issuing of press-warrants, and declared that he was not only convinced a better mode of manning the Navy might be found out, but that he was well informed the late press was carried on with great irregularity and cruelty.

Mr. Wombwell said, no press was better conducted than the present. He approved of the motion for an address as exceedingly proper, and disapproved of the amendment. He censured the Americans as a bragging, cowardly banditti, &c.

Mr. Wilkes. The honourable gentleman who spoke last endeavours to mislead the House. It is certain that no pressing has at this time been carried on in the city of London, or its Liberties. No press-gangs have dared to make their appearance in that jurisdiction. Those lawless bands of cruel banditti very prudently chose other scenes of horrour and bloodshed of less danger to themselves. The city has hitherto remained in perfect safety and tranquillity, in a most happy state of security by the vigilance, intrepidity, and noble love of liberty, which are conspicuous in its present worthy Chief Magistrate. The conduct of Administration, sir, in the late issuing of press-warrants, before they had tried the operation of the high bounty, is totally unjustifiable. The speech now in your hand, sir, is so very pacifick, that the large bounty of five pounds for every able, and fifty shillings for every ordinary seaman, promised in last Saturday's Gazette, might safely, for a short time at least, have been trusted to, the emergency not being thought very critical. From the Minister's own state of publick affairs there was no danger in the experiment. Much cruelty and bloodshed had been avoided, many valuable lives preserved.

The affair of Long-Island has been misrepresented, and greatly magnified. The superiority of numbers was very considerable. General Howe landed twenty-two thousand men. The Provincials had only six thousand effective men on that island. They were ordered to retreat, and four thousand did accordingly, without being attacked, embark for the island of New-York. There was a real mistake of orders as to the other two thousand, but they acted as brave men always will act under a mistake of orders; they fought. They saw the enemy, left their intrenchments, and attacked with spirit. From the superiority of numbers, and their flanks being neglected and unguarded, they were totally defeated. They did not, however, remain inactive, like cowards, on an important day of battle. No such imputation can be fixed on them. Nothing decisive can follow from the late successful affair on Long-Island, no more than from the defeat at Sullivan's Island. New-York will probably fall into your hands, but your situation will in that case be scarcely mended since the last year, for you then possessed the capital of North America, Boston. Is that great and important town advantageously exchanged for New-York? I forgot that we still possess the fishing hamlet of Halifax. But, sir, we ought to take a much larger and more comprehensive view of this interesting scene, which is now fully disclosed.

The important dispute of Great Britain with her Colonies has for a considerable time fixed the attention, not only of this nation, but of almost all Europe. The most essential interests of this country, and indeed of the greater part of the Powers on the Continent, are deeply interested in the event. The sacrifice of so much blood and treasure is to every State an object of the highest importance; to us, whose empire seems mouldering away, of the nearest concern; and I much fear we are now brought by inextricable difficulties to the very verge of destruction.

Since our last meeting, sir, the scene, with respect to America, has totally changed. Instead of negotiations with Colonies, or Provincial Assemblies, we have a war to carry on against the free and independent States of America; a wicked war, which has been occasioned solely by a spirit of violence, injustice, and obstinacy in our Ministers, unparalleled in history. In the beginning of September, in the last year, a very humble and dutiful petition was sent from the Congress to his Majesty, in which his Majesty was supplicated "to direct some mode by which the united applications of his faithful Colonists to the Throne, in pursuance of their common councils, may be improved into a happy and permanent reconciliation." There was not a word in the petition but what breathed submission and loyalty, and yet the official answer of Lord Dartmouth, the Secretary for the American department, after long deliberation, was to the last degree irritating. It was, "that no answer would be given;" that is, we will not treat; we scorn to negotiate with you; we exact unconditional submission. This answer, sir, in my opinion, might justly be called indignity and insult. It drove the Americans to despair, and with the violation of the perfidious promises in Lord Hillsborough's famous official circular letter, laid the real foundation of their Declaration of Independency. Much has been said, sir, of the prophecy of the Ministers, that the Americans would in the end declare themselves independent. I give the Ministers no credit for such a prophecy. They went on the surest grounds. They might very safely promulgate such a prediction, when they knew that the unjust and sanguinary measures which they intended to pursue, must bring about the event. They drove the Americans into their present state of independency. The Jesuits in France risked nothing when they prophesied in 1610 the death of the best prince that ever reigned in Europe, within that year. Theirs was the sure word of prophecy. They employed Ravillac to assassinate their Sovereign.

An honourable gentleman near me attacks the American Declaration of Independency in a very peculiar manner, as a wretched composition, very ill written, drawn up with the view to captivate the people. That, sir, is the very reason why I approve it most as a composition, as well as a wise political measure, for the people are to decide this great controversy. If they are captivated by it, the end is attained. The polished periods, the harmonious, happy expressions, with all the grace, ease, and elegance of a beautiful diction, which we chiefly admire, captivate the people of America very little; but manly, nervous sense, they relish even in the most awkward and uncouth dress of language. Whatever composition produces the effect you intend in the most forcible manner, is, in my opinion, the best, and that mode should always be pursued. It has the most merit, as well as success, on the great theatre of the world, no less than on the stage, whether you mean to inspire pity, terrour, or any other passion.

The honourable gentleman, sir, who seconded the address, says, the Americans' declaration of independency was no surprise to him—nor I believe, sir, to any man of common reflection, after the frantick and extravagant career, which Administration pursued, with a full chorus of approbation from the majority of this House.

The speech in your hand, sir, which an honourable gentleman near me has well called a speech of hypocrisy, mentions the "assurances of amity, which his Majesty continues to receive from the several Courts of Europe." At the beginning of the last session, the Minister gave us in the King's speech more explicit assurances. It was said, "I am happy to add, as well from the assurances I have received, as from the general appearance of affairs in Europe, I see no probability that the measures which you may adopt, will be interrupted by disputes with any foreign Power." We have no such assurances held out to us this year, that our measures will not be interrupted by disputes with any other foreign Power; but we have still assurances of amity, which are daily contradicted by the immense preparations of the neighbouring foreign Powers of France and Spain, and indeed of the whole House of Bourbon. The accounts from Naples contain little but the vast preparations making by the King of the Two Sicilies. Are we indeed simple and credulous enough to trust to general vague expressions of politeness against the clear evidence of facts? Our Ministry know very well that an American privateer being lately stopped at Bilboa, in Biscay, an express was immediately despatched to Madrid, which returned with the fullest directions for the release of the privateer, and permission to furnish him with provisions, stores, ammunition, in short, whatever he wanted. This fact will not be denied. Is Spain, then, one of the foreign Powers, which again soothes us with these honeyed assurances of amity? Has fate ordained, that we are neither to possess capacity enough to profit by the example of others, nor even by our own experience? In the very first year of the present reign, in September, 1761, the Gazette told us that "the Catholick King had at no time been more intent upon cultivating a good correspondence with England, than in the present conjuncture;" a declaration received seriously here, held out as part of the Court creed, and laughed at by all the rest of Europe. In the beginning of the following January, without any new facts having occurred of any moment, war was declared by England against Spain. Will the plausible, smooth-tongued French likewise be able to lull us into a fatal security against the evidence of all history? Can we expect to be treated by them in any other manner than the Spaniards were at the time of the famous revolt of Portugal? The French sent whole regiments, completely officered, into the service of the House of Braganza. They paid them underhand the same as their national troops, yet all the while declared their abhorrence of rebellions and of rebels, issuing proclamation after proclamation, and recalling their deserters under the most severe penalties. Sir, there is not a Power in Europe, unsubsidized by Great Britain, which does not wish success to the Americans; and we are considered almost every where on the Continent, in the odious light of tyrants and oppressors.

The speech, sir, states, that "if treason be suffered to take root, much mischief must grow from it to the safety of my loyal Colonies." Alas! sir, what we call treason and rebellion, and they just resistance and a glorious revolution, has taken root, a very deep root indeed, and has spread over almost all the American Colonies. In this very speech we are told of their numbers, their wealth, their strength by sea and land. The loyal Colonies are three, the free Provinces thirteen. In laying on the embargo, the exception to the rule is ridiculous enough. It is as thirteen to three. The Gazette says, "any of my Colonies in North-America except the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the three lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia." Of what other Colonies was his Majesty in possession at his accession to the throne? I think the permission extends only to the Provinces which we have not yet lost—to the two Roman Catholick Provinces of Canada and Florida, and to Nova-Scotia.

We have now been carrying on for two years a savage and piratical, as well as an unjust war. Every demand of Government has been complied with, and yet the great force employed both by sea and land has not hitherto recovered a single Province of all the confederated Colonies. On the contrary, the evil grows more desperate. The last year only twelve Colonies humbly petitioned the Throne. This year, by the accession of Georgia, we have seen a Federal Union of thirteen free and powerful Provinces asserting their independency, as high and mighty States, and setting our power at defiance. This was done with circumstances of spirit and courage, to which posterity will do justice. It was directly after the safe landing of your whole force. In return we have barbarously plundered their coasts, and set fire to their open towns and defenceless villages, in a manner which disgraces the English name. In the midst of all the cruelties, terrours, and devastations, which follow your arms, the spirit of the Americans is still unsubdued, and I hope, and believe, you never will conquer the free spirit of the descendants of Englishmen, exerted in an honest cause. They honour and value the blessings of liberty. They are determined to live and die freemen, notwithstanding the vain efforts of every arbitrary Power in Europe. It is a foolish attempt to think of conquering and holding the immense territory of North-America, when the whole country is united against us. We argue in a trifling manner on the decisive good consequences for events only in the Province of New-York. They do not prove that we shall subdue Virginia or either of the Carolinas. Success in two or three battles or sieges argues little for the final success of a war, so extensive already, and so greatly complicated.

As to our unanimity at home, sir, the very idea is absurd, because impossible, while the present system of injustice and oppression continues in its full rigour. The American war is unjust, and unconstitutional in its first principle, and, if persisted in, must end in our ruin. We have neither force to conquer, nor strength to maintain such extensive conquests, if we could succeed. Our situation is become truly critical. The constitution of this country is at home sapped by bribery and corruption. On the other side of the Atlantick it is assailed by violence and force of arms. The too fatal success in this devoted nation is very evident, but in the New World, I trust, as a friend of mankind, that all the despotick measures of a tyrannical Administration will prove ineffectual. It is impossible for this Island to conquer and hold America. They are determined and united. Your fleets may indeed every year carry horrour through all their coasts. Your armies may possess some sea-port towns, but the numerous and greatly-increasing people of the Provinces will retire into the interiour parts, of which you have already had some experience. Peaceful towns and villages will cover their fruitful plains, liberty will fix her blest abode among them, the unmolested, happy inhabitants rejoicing that they are procul à Jove, procul à fulmine.

I heartily agree, sir, with the noble Lord in the amendment proposed; but I go further, and my opinion is, that if we expect to save the empire, to preserve, even for a short period, Canada or the West-India Islands, or to recover any part of the immense territory we have lately lost, we must recall our fleets and armies, repeal all the acts injurious to the Americans passed since 1763, and restore their charters. We may then, if they will forgive, and can trust us, treat with them on just, fair, and equal terms, without the idea of compulsion, and a foundation be laid for the restoration of peace, internal tranquillity, and unity, to this convulsed and dismembered empire.

Honourable Temple Luttrell. He said, that he so very widely differed in opinion from the honourable member on the other side of the House, who moved the Ministerial address, in commendation of his Majesty's speech delivered from the throne, that he should feel himself highly culpable were he to sit still till the close of the debate, and content himself to be numbered with the silent votes in its disfavour. There was, however, no doubt of its being carried by a large majority; for those court-retainers and dependants on Government, who had this campaign reaped a golden harvest from the calamities of their country, would see in the speech under consideration, the best earnest that could possibly be given, of a no less plentiful harvest of the same sort the ensuing summer. For his part, he construed this speech an infamous, groundless libel, fabricated by a tyrannical faction, against some of the most valuable members of the British community, who, actuated by principles of justice and honour, were nobly contending on the other side of the Atlantick, for the dearest rights of mankind; and who, limiting their resistance to a redress of real and essential grievances, were falsely accused of having, from the beginning of this unhappy contest, had no other object in view than anarchy and independence.

It was a custom among the ancient Persians (in later times adopted in the kingdom of Naples) to cover their tribunals of justice with the skins of corrupt lawyers, whom they flayed alive. Were a similar example to prevail within these walls, and the seats around us to be clothed with the skins of corrupt statesmen, I fear, sir, there are not a few gentlemen on your right hand would catch their deaths of cold before the end of the approaching winter; I should tremble this night for a long group of pensioners, contractors, paymasters, treasurers, &c., &c., who will walk forth into that lobby, in order to bring up an address to their Sovereign, beseeching that he will persevere to plunder and assassinate his subjects, and totally to extinguish the vital spirit of that free constitution, on the maintenance of which alone rests his claim to the throne of these realms.

The honourable member near me [Governour Johnstone] has justly observed, that the "address moved for by Government is an echo of the speech" imposed on their royal master. It occurs to me, sir, that the speech itself is, in many of its most striking passages, an echo to the Continental remonstrances, and Declarations of Independency: for instance, "they have rejected, with insult and indignity, every offer of accommodation." This is verbatim the charge brought against the mother country by the oppressed Colonists. They likewise declare that "it would be rash to put an end to their plan when they have every reason to pursue it;"—that "it is a contest of the last importance;"—"a war, not of ambition, but necessity." Good God, sir! state this argument, on our part, in other language, without perverting the sense, and it will stand thus: "You are ambitious to maintain the rights of free-born Britons, and 'tis necessary we should have an army of foreign assassins, and use every barbarity to render them slaves." Omnipotence on one side, sir, must imply slavery on the other.

When news was brought to Agesilaus, King of Sparta, during a civil war in Greece, that a bloody fight had happened near the city of Corinth, but that the Spartans were victorious, and the number of their troops killed was but inconsiderable, compared with the loss of the enemy, instead of exultations of joy, that wise and humane monarch, with a deep sigh, cried out, "Oh, unhappy Greece! to have slain so many of thy best warriors with thine own hand, who, had they lived, might have proved a match for all the barbarians in the world!" I am credibly informed, sir, that when our most gracious Sovereign received news of the unhappy conflict at Long-Island, he broke forth in an exclamation of a like philosophick and generous nature, lamenting that Great Britain should destroy so many of her brave men with her own hand, who, had they lived in mutual concord and amity, might have set at defiance the united force of our natural enemies, the Bourbon States, at this hour threatening us with an invasive war. Confident, as I was, that such ideas perfectly coincided with his Majesty's known humanity of heart, and tenderness towards all his people, I did not conceive it possible that the most flagitious Minister of the bloody junto would dare to advise a continuance of these disgraceful and ruinous measures, and propose a speech from the throne, evidently dictated by despotism, hypocrisy, and infatuation. I, sir, entertain hopes of healing propositions, and a timely dereliction, on the part of this country, of its unjustifiable and empty claim of taxation; that efficient cause of the civil war, and which, if made an irrefragable ultimatum of your terms of peace, cannot fail to accelerate the downfall of your empire. For the Commons of Great Britain to support so desperate a purpose at the point of the sword, at the present alarming crisis, too, the French and Spaniards preparing for a rupture, and the nation sinking under an enormous debt of one hundred and fifty millions, argues folly in us beneath the unlettered Parliament, madness beyond the insane Parliament, and a blood-thirsty spirit of enterprise above any of the proscribing, chivalrous Parliaments, under the worst of the Plantagenet tyrants.

I may, perhaps, be told, as I was last year, when I took the liberty to move an address to the King, to instruct the Commissioners in America to treat for peace with the Provincial Conventions, or General Continental Congress, that bodies of men, under denominations not formally legalized, can, in no possible situation of things, expect a publick recognition of their authority; nor can you treat with rebels while they have arms in their hands. From what knowledge of men or books is this State maxim derived? I defy any of the learned gentlemen over the way to instance any intestine commotion, from the beginning of the world to this moment, of equal magnitude and maturity with that of America, where such wild doctrines have been maintained. In support of directly opposite measures and policy, without recurring to eras very remote, or troubling the House with stale, pedantick researches, I shall beg leave to remind you of one or two remarkable precedents from modern history, where the proudest and most perverse potentates in Christendom have been taught an humbler and more rational lesson; and I mean to hold up in terrorem, their obstinate tyranny, and the calamities resulting from it, to themselves and their dominions, that these alicna pericula may serve for beacons to preserve us from a similar fate.

About the year 1617, the Bohemians having suffered extreme oppression, met in Convention, and set forth their grievances to the Emperor, (Matthias;) answer was made, that nothing had been done on the part of the Court of Vienna that was contrary to the imperial edicts and resolutions of the States of the empire; certain judges were commissioned by the Emperor, as King of Bohemia, to grant general or particular pardons; but these persons having treated the remonstrants with much harshness and indignity, were thrown headlong from a two pair of stairs window on the stone pavement of the castle yard. The Bohemians then constituted thirty Directors of their nation, and took up arms, publishing a manifesto to the several Powers of Europe, in which they maintained the equity of their cause. An army of thirty thousand men took the field, under a great hero of that day, (the name, sir, will probably carry with it a striking sound to your ear, as a champion for the liberties of the people,) Count Mandsfelt. Soon after this civil war broke out, the Emperor gave authority to the Duke of Bavaria, the Elector of Saxony, the Elector of Metz, and several other illustrious personages, to negotiate a peace with the malcontents. Thus much for the punctilious idea of not condescending to treat with rebels. The difficulty of the times increased to such a degree the distraction of the Emperor's mind, already agitated with the pangs of a recent domestick misfortune, that he resigned altogether the regal dignity, and soon after died, leaving to his successor a war of twenty-eight years, one of the most rancorous and bloody on the records of history. The Bohemians offered their Crown to the Elector Palatine, (Frederick V.,) ancestor in a female line of our most gracious Sovereign George the Third, the chief of whose electoral house, the Duke of Brunswick, hazarded his life and dominions, and actually lost an arm in upholding the oppressed Bohemians. The Parliament of England cheerfully voted supplies to maintain their revolt, upon a principle worthy the representatives of a free and generous nation; that tyrannical mandates, a violation of charter rights, and unconstitutional imposts, had dissolved the bands of submission from the subject towards the Sovereign, and left them at liberty to create a new Government. A regiment of two thousand British soldiers, among which were many volunteers of the highest birth and character, embarked on this popular service, under one of the Vere family, while the Archbishop of Canterbury, convinced of the godliness of their battle, gave them his solemn and sacred benediction.

Another precedent, in my humble opinion, is well worth observance, to establish the expediency of treating with insurgents, though imbodied in the field and bearing arms, may be found in reading the civil wars of Hungary, begun about a century ago, by a violation in the Emperor Leopold of the laws and privileges of that spirited nation, and the inhuman butchery of those truly patriotick leaders, Counts Serini and Nadasti. The first notable achievements on the side of the Emperor, in the field of battle, were performed by a Colonel Heister, followed by endeavours to establish military dominion throughout Hungary. This brought on an almost unanimous revolt of the people. In 1678, an ineffectual Congress was held for pacification between the Hungarians and their Sovereign;—conferences—proposals—suspension of hostilities, without avail, till the Emperor making certain concessions, a truce was agreed to in 1681. The war, however, was revived the year after, with a printed declaration that Leopold, having violated the fundamental laws of the constitution, was fallen from his throne and authority, and Emeric, Count Sekeli, elected King of Hungary, to whom, in a few campaigns, Heister (now become a General) abandoned the whole principality of Transylvania. Upon the death of Leopold, the Emperor Joseph made proposals to the enemy, which were rejected. In 1709, several prisoners were massacred in cool blood, by both parties; in which year, a Diet assembled at Presburg, to accommodate matters between the Emperor and the revolters, but that Diet being composed of the Emperor's partisans only, Ragozzi, commander of the malcontents, though invited by a safe conduct, refused to come, and forbade any Hungarians to repair thither, under pain of being considered as enemies to their country. The envoys from the Courts of Great Britain and the United Provinces made several fruitless attempts to mediate a reconciliation. The Imperial Ministers (say the writers of these transactions) were, in fact, averse from treaty, hoping to aggrandize themselves by the contest, and grow rich from a confiscation of the estates of the Hungarians; however, in 1711, the Court of Vienna found it expedient to despatch a publick Minister in form to the Rebel army, as it was called, to negotiate a peace, which was at length accomplished, after the civil war had raged, with short intermissions, for near half a century, with the destruction of about half a million of subjects; the Emperor stipulating to preserve inviolate, for the future, the rights, immunities, and liberties of Hungary.

I would observe, upon a view of these tragick scenes, that mankind in the mass of society, are, in all ages and countries, actuated by nearly the same passions; and the same radical evils in the body politick cause similar convulsions and risk of dissolution. Without consulting false pretenders to augury; without preternatural divination, you may, sir, perceive a gloomy series of misfortunes hanging over these realms, from the progress of our intestine warfare, equal to what befell either of those unhappy nations I have just spoken of. For my part, sir, I own I should be glad to compound for an issue to our quarrel with the Colonists, as little destructive to the human species, and as little decisive of the general destiny of the kingdom, as those civil broils in Hungary or Bohemia; but, I fear, a still more awful doom awaits us.

The force and prosperity of every nation depends, in great measure, on its populousness. "The Romans," says a learned author, "destroying others, were at length themselves destroyed; continually in action, and embarked on the most hazardous attempts, they wore out, like a weapon kept constantly in use." Whoever will duly reflect on the state and transactions of this our nation, within the last twenty years, will find her much reduced in number of inhabitants; not only from the efforts of the late war, but from her extensive maritime and commercial emigrations; her garrisons and settlements in the remotest and most insane corners of the globe; her enterprises (not to say errantry) in the East Indies, and many debilitating home manufactories that administer to the luxuries of the great, unthought of in ancient times; neither are we, I believe, at all behind the heathen world for the waste of debauchery and intemperance. In the midst of these various drains, is our little cholerick island entering upon a war of the most inveterate nature, and for an unattainable object; a war, that were you peopled like the dominions of China, and disciplined by the prolifick morality of the primitive disciples of Lycurgus, must ere long totally annihilate your empire. "Nature," says Montesquieu, "having made men equal, reason can never make them dependent, unless where it is necessary to their happiness." I shall add, that an appeal must ever hold, in equity, to the common sense of living societies, from the compacts or institutions of the dead.

Thus much may of a truth be advanced in favour of the Americans: Partners with you in the triumphs of a most glorious foreign war, and in all those national benefits acquired by your joint exertions and prowess, they stood firmly cemented to you by affection, as well as consanguinity. Perhaps, sir, there are deep-founded civilians, whose rules might have held them justified long ago, in saving their rising fortunes from your sinking fate, and in an absolute separation from your dominion, were it only upon that fundamental principle which ought to govern human societies as well as individuals—the law of self-preservation. They might, indeed, have urged a plea of insanity against the parent country, whose folly, ambition, and rapaciousness were proceeding with gigantick strides, year after year, and day after day, for a long time past, to destroy one common stock of happiness, the joint property of all the members of this distracted empire: neither was such abundant happiness to be found, I believe, in the lot of any mortal society since the beginning of the universe. A faction of despots presiding over your ostensible Government, fitter for the cells of Bedlam than the efficient Cabinet of a limited monarch, whose sole right to his diadem is a right of election from the people, and the end of that election to guard inviolate the liberties and properties of all his subjects—though the Colonies beheld such alarming evils, and another dependent country (Ireland) shamefully trampled upon, suffering injuries and indignities too numerous and glaring to need a recital—and which country, by the way, never deserved a like treatment at your hands, unless to bear it be to deserve it. I say, sir, though the Americans clearly saw these things, it was with an eye of affliction, and rather with the tear of pity given to your publick degeneracy and fascination, than the least spark of anger: but when you followed those distant enormities, by bringing home to their own thresholds, the hand of rapine and tyranny; when you, with a remorseless violence, were preparing to wrest from them every blessing to which they were unalienably entitled, as British subjects and freemen, substituting instead a constitution never attempted to be imposed on any spot of Christian earth, but by a banditti of highwaymen on the heaths of Bagshot or Hounslow—"Give me your money, or I'll blow out your brains;" then, sir, it was surely high time, if they felt like men, and like Britons, to act with a spirit of fortitude becoming men and becoming Britons. Amidst the refuse of every numerous community, we of course find some characters marvelously sluggish and abject. From a few of these did we absurdly and fallaciously judge of the majority of the injured Colonists, till the measure of our oppression being full, in a string of diabolical acts against their charters, their trade, and very existence, scarce one advocate remained to us throughout thirteen large Provinces. "There is a time," says Thomson, (not the Provincial Colonel of that nation taken in Canada, but the flower of Scottish poets, Jemmy Thomson,) "when e'en the slave at heart will spurn his chains, nor know submission more." That time you have, with prodigious pains, brought to maturity. From what accursed examples our prevailing system of politicks is drawn, I am at a loss to discover; I can conceive there is nothing of a similar complexion midst all the voluptuous annals of mankind, unless it be met with in the memoirs of Dionysius, tyrant of Syracuse. Sir, that monster being determined upon the ruin of a free people of Reggio, imposed on them certain exactions, with which he was persuaded they had not the ability to comply—hence he founded a pretext to invest their territories with a formidable army; after a gallant and desperate defence, they were reduced to an unconditional surrender. Dionysius then laid their city in ashes, condemned many of the principal inhabitants to cruel tortures, and sold the rest for slaves by beat of drum, to the highest bidder, in a publick market-place. How happy, sir, would it make that mirror of all good qualities, our first Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, were he appointed drummer at the city of New-York on a like occasion!

To invocate the special interposition of Providence in such an infernal undertaking as the present, is, to my mind, the most profligate excess of blasphemy; but, however the mercenaries of Government may this day act, I hope the independent country-gentlemen will join with me to implore the God of clemency, that He will exorcise this demon of discord and violence, which has too long inspired our deliberations, and presided over the publick counsels of every branch of the British Legislature. May that God at length open our eyes and our hearts to the true interests of our country!

It is a very unfair argument to allege, that the Americans fight for independency. You must be sensible, sir, that the only way to straighten a bow is to wrest it with vigour to an opposite curve. The acts of this Legislature affecting the Colonists were so warped from rectitude, that their only chance to recover a right line of justice was by proceeding to contrary extremities, to announce disunion and absolute freedom. I approve of the address to his Majesty, recommended by the right honourable member near me, [Lord John Cavendish,] because I think it bids fair to save both countries from destruction, and to restore perfect concord to the contending parts of this distracted empire. If you empower the Commissioners in America to propose peace on equitable conditions; offer to restore their charters, and relinquish the unsustainable claim of taxation with a good grace—even now, while your armies figure in the field, under hitherto triumphant generals—and I make no doubt, but by so laudable a step, you will obtain from your Colonies, through your Howes, as fair and magnanimous an answer as that which was sent from the Faleríi to the Roman Senate, by the great Camillus: "The Romans, in having preferred justice to conquest, have taught us to be satisfied with submission instead of liberty."

Sir Herbert Mackworth professed himself to be one of the independent country-gentlemen, and declared, he feared that matters were much misrepresented; that he did not like to hear gentlemen so ready to find a plea for the Americans on every occasion, and even when they were beat, to hunt after a reason to show that they could not avoid it, and that some particular circumstances occasioned it. He said, he was ever most clearly against that House attempting to tax America, as America was not represented in that House; but he thought it highly necessary to maintain the right; and that it was but reasonable America should contribute something in return for the millions she had cost this country. He spoke highly in favour of some of the gentlemen in Opposition, but applauded the Ministry; finally declaring, that as an ancient Briton, he felt for the honour of his country, and therefore wished her success; not but he would be glad that a proper treaty for reconciliation was on foot, and, he owned he cared not whether it was with Rebels in arms or without them. He was against the amendment.

The Right Honourable T. Townshend. I do not rise, sir, to discuss, or indeed to take much notice of that humorous paragraph, which the Ministers have thought proper to insert in his Majesty's speech, calling for the unanimity of this House, and of the nation at large. I say, his Ministers have inserted, because I hope it will still be deemed parliamentary to consider the King's speech as the speech of the Minister, and to hold, that the Minister or Ministers are answerable for every part of it. I call it humorous, because it would be ridiculous in any one to consider it as serious. We have, thank God, a very witty Minister, and he has thought proper at this time, when the generality of the world think this country in a situation that ought to make the boldest man among you tremble, to treat us with a joke.

It would be doing the composer of the speech great injustice to suppose, that he meant in earnest to assume that we must now be unanimous. If he were, what must be his logick? Must he not reason thus? Gentlemen, you and all the world foretold last year, that the measures of Administration would bring the affairs of America into the unhappy state in which we now see them; that they would force the Americans to a declaration of independence; and you urged those natural consequences as reasons for opposing such measures. The consequence you foretold has happened; come, then, give us now your confidence, and be unanimous in your support of the same men, in the prosecution of the same system. To say that the measures of last year did not tend to this end, seems to me absurd to the last degree. What did you do by your language in every debate, and by the provisions of every act that you passed? Did you not declare them out of your protection? Did you not put them in the situation, not only of separated States, of France and Spain for example, but of distinct States, of France and Spain, at open war with you? Did you, even in your acts of Parliament, so much as affect to distinguish between the innocent and the guilty?

In this situation, Ministers think proper to trifle and to joke with the House. I never saw such a scene on the first day of a session, in a most important hour, as I have seen to-day. Ministers do not think themselves bound to attend, or to give answers to the questions that have been put to them by many respectable gentlemen to-day: nay, they do not even preserve the least appearance of attention; they do not keep their seats, they walk about the House, or out of the House. I really thought some time ago, that the Minister in the blue ribbon had left the House entirely, and meant to depute the care of the division to his clerks and secretaries, who might afterwards report the numbers to him at his own house. Such a treatment, I believe, a House of Parliament never experienced at any time, at least not at so important a period; a period, when we may possibly have reason to expect, that before many months are over our heads, this country may be in as melancholy a situation, a state of as much confusion and desolation as now prevails in America, in consequence of our past measures.

I will now venture to put a few questions to the Administration, though I do not very well know why I should, as they have not thought proper to answer questions, perhaps, much more pertinent; I am sure, much better stated from other honourable gentlemen, who have as good a right to expect answers as any men who ever sat here. I believe it never happened, that on the first day of the session, after a long recess, and at a most alarming crisis, a debate had lasted so long a time, and reached this hour of the evening, without a word having fallen from any one officially qualified to give satisfactory answers upon the situation of publick affairs.

I must ask, then, what means that part of the speech, which tells us, that all the Powers of Europe are in amity with us, but that we must put our forces in a respectable state? Is not France arming? Is not Spain armed? Has not the former called for the registered seamen? Has she not swept her coasts by a press? Does there remain even a fisherman on the coast opposite to us, fit for the King's service, who is not marching, or under orders to march to Brest? Has she not an equipment at Brest ready to sail? Have we not pressed, and are we not putting a fleet of men-of-war into commission? I have been told that the Court of France have been asked the reason of their arming, and that the answer our Court received was, that we were armed ourselves, and in so formidable a state, that we should immediately subdue America, and that they were jealous, that in the career of our glory we should fall upon them. If that is true, I must suppose the Minister of France to have been in as facetious a humour when he sent that answer, as our Minister was, when he composed that part of his Majesty's speech, which assumes, that we must be unanimous in this day's debate. I must confess, that till I receive a little satisfaction upon these points, I shall continue to think this country in the most perilous situation it ever experienced. When I consider our army in England, our army in Ireland, what are the numbers, and of what raw men they are composed, I own, I tremble. Surely our Militia alone, in its present condition, is not to be trusted as the only defence of this country. It is not like what it was during the last war. The Militia marched out from their counties, regiment by regiment, according to the state of their discipline, and their fitness to take the field. They had had the assistance of two or three officers from the Army, to assist in training each separate battalion. Now, they will be called out all at once, and without these assistances. Add to this, that, without any reflection upon the present gentlemen who bear commissions in the Militia, they have not a third or a fourth part of the weight and property among them, that they had during the war. Now, sir, as those essential qualities in officering a Militia are not counterbalanced by the least superiority in military skill, that body of men are, in my opinion, not by any means so much to be depended upon.

As to the state of the Navy, we have heard much upon it from gentlemen much better qualified to speak upon it than myself. But there are one or two very striking features in it, that differ much from what we saw last war. We had twelve or thirteen thousand Americans in our Navy. It is unnecessary to say where they are now. They are making reprisals upon our defenceless trade. I hope they have made more prizes than the French and Spaniards did in all the last war in those seas. We have besides, I understand, about fifteen thousand seamen in our fleet in America. What a draught from the general naval force of this country! We have, as you are told, a very fine fleet of ships-of-the-line: but can ships-of-the-line protect your trade, or alone prevent an invasion? Where are your frigates and sloops? Almost all in America. I have been told, and from the best authority, by men who sat many years at the Board of Admiralty, with, perhaps, the greatest officer this country ever saw at the head of its Navy, that in times of an apprehended invasion, fifty, sixty, seventy of these frigates and sloops were constantly and necessarily employed. What proportion of them can you now command?

In the last war, the French had other objects to think of, besides an invasion of these islands. You had an army in Germany, that held at bay, and found ample work for one hundred and fifty thousand of the best troops in France. What chance have we now of such a diversion of their force? They seem to me to have before them, the full choice of every circumstance that a nation can wish for, that have a constant rival, and almost as constant an enemy to deal with. They may choose the scene, the mode, and, if I may use the expression, the degree of war they please.

The fleet of Spain may sail to America, while the troops and fleet of France may either threaten or attack this country. If they march their troops down to the coast, which they may do without the least inconvenience to themselves, if their men-of-war only ride at anchor in the road of Brest, it will be sufficient to strike almost a fatal blow to the credit of this country, at the same time that your fleet in America will be at the mercy of the Spaniards. For, as it has been already said, what can my Lord Howe's frigates do against ten or twelve men-of-war of the line?

The disputes and hostilities between Spain and Portugal are hinted at in the speech. If that difference proceeds to an open rupture, if France and Spain jointly, or either of them separately, attack that country, we are bound by treaty to assist Portugal with considerable succours by sea and land. The commerce of this country with Portugal has been always looked upon as an object of importance; it may be something less beneficial now than it used to be, but still it is of great moment to us. Can you in your present situation protect it? Can you perform your engagements, and attempt to prevent that country from becoming a Province of Spain? What a figure will this country make, if it is obliged to declare in the face of all Europe, that it is not in a condition to fulfill its treaties, (a disgrace which never before stained the annals of this country!) and to suffer Portugal, once the source of a trade extremely beneficial to us, to be overrun by the Princes of the House of Bourbon, and perhaps to become a Province of Spain.

Sir, this picture is too disagreeable for me to wish to dwell upon it. I am afraid it is not overcharged. If it is, I shall be glad to be convinced of it.

Before I sit down, I must beg leave, sir, to take notice of a few words that fell from the worthy member who spoke last. He spoke long and well. I have not equal pretension or inclination to take up as much of your time. He used much argument, and certainly no declamation, as he proscribed and forbid it in others. He threw out a sort of a challenge: do not declaim, but show me, when this House has inflicted any hardship upon America. I must recommend to the gentleman to take one or two of the volumes of statutes of the last two years, and peruse them. He will find them full of such laws as never made a part of any statute-book before. He will find, that we have put the Colonies totally out of our protection: that we have forbid them the exercise of any trade but that of arms, and have by those means forced them to take up those arms and use them against ourselves: that we professed to involve the innocent subjects of America with the guilty: that our restrictions did not only deprive them of trade but even of food. In this situation we are to wonder at their declaring themselves independent.

Sir, the worthy member has likewise accused sombody of taking every opportunity of extolling the bravery and conduct of the American troops and officers, and at the same time of wantonly and injuriously censuring the behaviour of our own officers and troops. I do not know at whom he means to point. I do not feel myself liable to this charge As to the affair of Long-Island, as the action happened, I am glad to find it attended with so little loss on the side of General Howe. I own I am wicked enough to wish that fewer Americans had fallen. There are disagreeable reports upon that subject. I do not know enough of the subject to speak with certainty, but I hope the Ministers will be able to convince us, that it is not true, that fourteen or fifteen hundred of them were killed in cold blood. When I came to town the day the news came, I heard that fact asserted with exultation, avowed and justified. Afterwards, I heard it upon a little cooler reflection, palliated and accounted and apologized for: I understand that to-day it will be denied. As I do not pretend to be certain of the fact, I will not even hint at the body of troops, by which it is supposed to have been committed.

I have never been disposed to make free with the characters of officers absent and upon service. I am sure, I am not one of those who have cast those reflections, alluded to by an honourable gentleman behind me, upon the conduct of Sir Peter Parker. I have always heard him reckoned an able officer; he has undoubtedly, in the affair of Sullivan's Island, shown himself a brave man. It is impossible for one so ignorant of naval affairs as I am, to judge of the propriety of the attack. But where is the character of General Clinton? as amiable and respectable a man, and as gallant and enterprising an officer as any in the service. And yet, judgment formed by mankind from the accounts published by Government is not in his favour. He appears, by their accounts, to have been nineteen days on Long-Island, before he found out the channel was seven feet deep instead of eighteen inches. General Clinton in the last war attached himself to the hereditary prince of Brunswick, a service, that would not have been chosen by a man, that had not the spirit of enterprise. In such a school he was not likely to learn to hesitate, or to decline any fatigue or danger, by which the service, upon which he was ordered, might be advanced. Nor did he deviate from his former conduct upon this occasion: though the accounts that have been published and the reports spread by every member of Government may have drawn upon him the censure of unthinking men. Sir, I have seen such accounts, as authorize me to say, that he examined the channel or ford, as it has been erroneously called, the day he landed, and that he sent an account of it to the Commodore. He sounded it with his own person as far as he could. If I advance what is ill-founded, let me be contradicted. But I am confident no man can contradict me. If I am right, how injuriously he has been treated! The worthy member exclaims with propriety against liberties taken with the characters of absent officers, but let him remember the quarter from whence the injury comes, and direct his censure accordingly.

There is, I think, one part of the speech which mentions a discovery of the original designs of the leaders of the Americans. In God's name, who made them leaders? How came they to be so? If you force men together by oppression, they will form into bodies, and choose leaders. Mr. Hancock was a merchant of credit and opulence when this unhappy business first broke out. Men in that kind of situation are not very prone to a change of Government. I think I have sometimes heard a few old women say, that the civil war of the last century was originally contrived by Cromwell; that the first opposition to Charles I., was begun in order to advance Cromwell to the Protectorship. It is a sagacity and penetration of the same kind that has now happily discovered the original views of those who now are the leaders of the Americans.

Some gentlemen have been jocular upon the ribbons and other honours conferred by the Congress. They have, however, hardly distributed honours with a less sparing hand than the Ministers have done. I believe, since the good days of King James I., there never was so great a profusion of honours, as within this half year. I beg pardon for the expression of profusion, it conveys an improper idea, and I wish to recall it. It is not a profusion; it is a happy increase of merit in these times, which called for certainly a much larger distribution of honours than has been known in the memory of man. One Gazette announced no less than two-and-fifty honours conferred in Ireland. The great seals of England and Ireland have been set to six-and-forty patents of peerage within these few months. Some of them, I believe, supposed not to be quite consistent with the Act of Union. I would not be supposed to look with an evil eye at any marks of favour shown to the Peers of Scotland; I do not enter into that question; it is matter for the decision of another assembly. I wish the Scotch peerage upon a much better footing. I should see with pleasure five-and-twenty or thirty British peerages conferred upon the peers of that kingdom, provided we could get rid of the election of the sixteen. I respect many of the present sixteen, and should willingly see them included in such a promotion. But their present condition is not a desirable one. I believe there is not a man in that part of the United Kingdom, who does not agree with me in this opinion.

But, sir, I am deviating from the question before us; though I believe I may plead precedent for it, the first day of a session being usually looked upon as a day of general conversation. I have now only to return thanks to the House for their indulgence to me.

I rose for the purpose of asking the few questions which I have ventured to submit to those, who in other times would have been thought under some degree of necessity of answering them. I shall not be much surprised to find my questions treated as those offered by other gentleman have been. However, if I can procure a satisfactory answer to them, I shall think myself amply repaid for the trouble I have taken to state them.

Lord North. I think it proper to deliver my sentiments thus early, because should I defer my intention for only half an hour longer, the House may probably forget one of my prime inducements for rising to trouble you. It is, sir, to meet the charge made against me by the right honourable gentleman over the way, [Mr. Townshend,] lest it may go forth, that I neglected my duty in this House, as a member or a Minister; lest, sir, an absence of ten minutes, on a pressing call of business in the course of a debate, which will probably continue fourteen hours, should be represented as an open desertion of my post, in the moment of danger and difficulty. I may, sir, be deficient in many respects, but of all wants I never imagined that a want of respect, diligence as a member, or attention to this House, would have swelled the long catalogue. I am yet to learn, that the behaviour of a member, relative to these personal minutiæ, was ever esteemed a fit object of parliamentary animadversion, or matter sufficiently important to incur publick reprehension. I have, it is true, been absent about ten minutes, upon a pressing call of business, and am now returned to my seat. This, sir, is the atrocious crime I have committed. This it is that has furnished the right honourable gentleman who spoke last with so happy an opportunity of displaying his talents. I trust, however, that I shall have the justice done me, to allow that there is no member in this House longer keeps his place, I mean my place in Parliament, or attends with greater patience and resignation, the whole length of a tedious debate, than I do.

It has been more than once objected this night, that I have since the commencement of the present troubles, held back such information as became necessary for you to know, in order the better to be able to decide upon measures proper to be pursued, relative to America. Nothing can be more unjust and ill-founded than this charge. I have been ready at all times to communicate every possible information that could be given with safety: I repeat with safety, because the very bad and mischievous consequences of disclosing the full contents of letters, with the writers' names, has been already severely proved, and would, in the present situation of affairs, not only be impolitick, but might be to the last degree dangerous, if not fatal, to the persons immediately concerned.

Several honourable gentlemen on the other side have proposed questions which I think an attentive perusal of the speech would have prevented them from putting to me. His Majesty says he has received assurances of amity from the several Courts of Europe; yet he has thought it necessary to prepare himself against any sudden attack. The assertion is, I contend, strictly true; I am answerable for its veracity; for I advised, in concert with the rest of his Majesty's servants, the passage now objected to. His Majesty has received those assurances; but he has not thought it prudent entirely to trust and rely on their contents.

It is well known that Spain and Portugal have been for the last year on the point of differing about the frontiers of the Brazils. It is equally true, that his Majesty has interposed his good offices as a mediator, and endeavoured to accommodate the dispute. This interposition, at present, promises to terminate happily, and to the satisfaction of both parties; it is, however, impossible to tell what turn the affair may take, or venture at all to be responsible for the event of such a negotiation.

From the present assurances of the Court of France, and stronger cannot be desired, we have every reason to be satisfied of their pacifick intentions; should it nevertheless prove otherwise, I can venture to affirm, and from my own knowledge to assure this House, that we are prepared for the worst, and that our preparations have been such as to enable us to cope with any enemy who may be inclined to molest us. It has been said, that we are stripped of our home naval defence; that though we should procure seamen, and have a sufficient number of line-of-battle ships ready for sea, the absence of our frigates would prevent us, for some time, at least, from carrying on any effectual naval operations. To this, a very short answer will suffice: we have several frigates at home; there are some building; and if it were not so, we could procure a sufficient number to answer every purpose we want, or wish at present to effect.

The armament going on in France, which has been this night so mightily magnified, is but a small one. I mean comparatively, with what we are able to send to sea, at a short warning; it consists of six ships of the line and four frigates. They are, it is true, putting their Navy on a respectable footing; they have made a demand on the registers. These preparations import nothing directly hostile; their assurances of their pacifick disposition towards us are as strong as words can make them: but I repeat once more, that his Majesty's Ministers have thought proper to advise him to the present armament, by way of precaution.

Two or three honourable gentlemen on the other side have charged me with stuffing the speech with wit and humour, hypocrisy, deceit, and absurdity; some on account of the word "unanimity;" others for the following passage: "My desire is to restore to them (the people of America) the blessings of law and liberty." Now, I see no wit or humour in either of the passages alluded to, but the plainest deductions of plain reasoning and common sense. By unanimity, it cannot be supposed was meant a total union of sentiment, on every side of the House; it could hardly be imagined or expected; it meant great and decisive majorities, minorities consisting, perhaps, of thirty or forty members. As to the hypocrisy charged on that other passage, wherein his Majesty expresses his desire to restore his subjects to law and liberty, that I think is, if possible, worse founded; instead of being absurd or hypocritical, I am of opinion it is supported by fact, and as sound logick as the English language is capable of conveying. Is not law and liberty fled from America? Can it be said so of this country? The debate of this day has fully proved it cannot; and I beg leave to remind the gentlemen, who have in the course of the present evening thrown so many reflections upon Administration, that they would soon find the difference of the two countries, had they dared to make so free with the Congress. I cannot, however, but applaud the spirit which has dictated those severities: I am pleased with that spirit of inquiry which has manifested itself, though it be a licentious spirit; and I wish it to continue, though I am destined to be the object of attack.

I beg pardon of the House for taking up so much of their time, but I wish them to recollect, that much the greater part of it was taken up in replying to questions and explanations, I thought it my duty to answer and give. I cannot agree with the amendment proposed, because it desires his Majesty to set on foot a tedious inquiry to no purpose; to procrastinate events which in all probability will soon be produced, and render fruitless every favourable operation which hath already taken place. It has always been my wish, and that of every other servant of the King, to bring matters to as early an issue, and with as little bloodshed as possible; to use the present successes and victory, if it were gained, with prudence and moderation, and rather as a means of cementing a lasting unity and amity, than as objects of triumph, or instruments for forging the chains of slavery, or excuses for tyranny or oppression.

He appealed to his own conciliatory motion, that reconciliation had constantly been his object. He asserted, that that motion held out to the Colonies a proposal, or proposition, that they should raise among themselves a certain, or such a proportionate sum, as should be settled and agreed upon between Great Britain and them; and that in future, they should never be further taxed but when we were.

Colonel Barré observed, that the right honourable gentleman who spoke last but one, was wrong in stating that the noble Lord did not pay sufficient attention to the House; that the noble Lord certainly did very regularly attend, and was in general ready to answer the questions put to him. That he answered them satisfactorily, he would not say; but he generally answered them. There was one question which had been put in the course of the debate—a question of the first consequence, of the most serious importance—to which the noble Lord had wholly neglected to speak. In order to give him an opportunity of speaking to it, he would therefore then put it, and sit down, without proceeding further, that the noble Lord might give the House that satisfaction which he doubted not many of them wished to receive. The question was, "What powers were General and Lord Howe invested with, as his Majesty's Commissioners to treat with America?"

Lord North immediately said, that their commission had lately been published in the Gazette, and that nothing relative to the business had been concealed. His Lordship read part of the commission, and said he knew of nothing more, unless indeed some direction relative to prisoners.

Colonel Barré again rose, and pulling a paper out of his pocket, declared he had in his hand an account of what passed at a conference between Lieutenant-Colonel Patterson and General Washington, when Colonel Patterson was despatched with General and Lord Howe's letter; that the account was printed in America, but that it bore evident marks of authenticity, although indeed it did not come directly to his hands; for he could positively say, that no letter directed to him, and sent from America, ever reached him. He commented on the account in his hand, declaring his high esteem for Colonel Patterson, with whom he had the happiness to be acquainted, and asserting, that he was a man of the first honour in the service. He said, the account he was going to read did Colonel Patterson infinite credit.

He then read the following paper, from the New-York Gazette of the 5th of August:

"The following is an exact state of what passed at the interview between his Excellency General Washington and Colonel Patterson, Adjutant-General of the Army under General Howe, July 20, 1776:

"After usual compliments, in which, as well as through the whole conversation, Colonel Patterson addressed General Washington by the title of Excellency, Colonel Patterson entered upon the business by saying, that General Howe much regretted the difficulties which had arisen respecting the address of the letters to General Washington; that it was deemed consistent with propriety, and founded upon precedents of the like nature by ambassadors and plenipotentiaries where disputes or difficulties of rank had arisen; that General Washington might recollect he had, last summer, addressed a letter to General Howe, to the Honourable William Howe, Esq.; that Lord Howe and General Howe did not mean to derogate from the respect or rank of General Washington; that they held his person and character in the highest esteem; that the direction, with the addition, &c., &c., &c., implied every thing that ought to follow. He then produced a letter which he did not directly offer to General Washington, but observed, that it was the same letter which had been sent, and laid it on the table, with the superscription to George Washington, &c., &c., &c. The General declined the letter, and said, that a letter directed to a person in a publick character, should have some description or indication of it, otherwise it would appear a mere private letter; that it was true the &c., &c., &c., implied every thing, and they also implied any thing; that the letter to General Howe alluded to, was an answer to one received under a like address from him, which the officer on duty having taken, he did not think proper to return, but answered it in the same mode of address; that he should absolutely decline any letter directed to him as a private person, when it related to his publick station. Colonel Patterson then said, that General Howe would not urge his delicacy any further, and repeated his assertions, that no failure of respect was intended. He then said, that he would endeavour, as well as he could, to recollect General Howe's sentiments on the letter and resolves of Congress, sent him a few days before, respecting the treatment of our prisoners in Canada, and that the affairs of Canada were in another department, not subject to the control of General Howe, but that he and Lord Howe utterly disapproved of every infringement of the rights of humanity. Colonel Patterson then took a paper out of his pocket, and, after looking it over, said, he had expressed nearly the words. General Washington then said, that he had also forwarded a copy of the resolves to General Burgoyne. To which Colonel Patterson replied, he did not doubt a proper attention would be paid to them, and that he (General Washington) was sensible, that cruelty was not the characteristick of the British nation. Colonel Patterson then proceeded to say, he had it in charge to mention the case of General Prescot, who, they were informed, was treated with such rigour, that, under his age and infirmities, fatal consequences might be apprehended.

"General Washington replied, that General Prescot's treatment had not fallen under his notice; that the persons under his particular direction, he had treated with kindness, and made their situation as easy and comfortable as possible; that he did not know where General Prescot was, but believed his treatment was different from their information. General Washington then mentioned the case of Colonel Allen, and the officers who had been confined in Boston jail. As to the first, Colonel Patterson answered, that General Howe had no knowledge of it, but by information from General Washington, and that the Canada department was not under his direction or control; that as to the other prisoners at Boston, whenever the state of the Army at Boston admitted it, they were treated with humanity and even indulgence; that he asserted this upon his honour, and should be happy in an opportunity to prove it.

"General Washington then observed, that the conduct of several of the officers would well have warranted a different treatment from what they had received; some having refused to give any parole, and others having broke it when given, by escaping, or endeavouring so to do. Colonel Patterson answered, that as to the first, they misunderstood the matter very much, and seemed to have mistook the line of propriety exceedingly; and as to the latter, General Howe utterly disapproved and condemned their conduct.

"That if a remonstrance was made, such violations of good faith would be severely punished; but that he hoped General Washington was too just to draw publick inferences from the misbehaviour of some private individuals; that bad men were to be found in every class and society; and such behaviour was considered as a dishonour to the British Army. Colonel Patterson then proceeded to say, that the goodness and benevolence of the King had induced him to appoint Lord Howe and General Howe his Commissioners to accommodate this unhappy dispute; that they had great powers, and would derive the greatest pleasure from effecting an accommodation; and that he (Colonel Patterson) wished to have this visit considered as making the first advances to this desirable object. General Washington replied, he was not vested with any powers on this subject, by those from whom he derived his authority and power. But from what had appeared and transpired on this head, Lord Howe and General Howe were only to grant pardons; that those who had committed no fault, wanted no pardon; that we were only defending what we deemed our indisputable right. Colonel Patterson said, that would open a very wide field for argument. He then expressed his apprehensions that an adherence to forms was likely to obstruct business of the greatest moment and concern.

"He then observed, that a proposal had been formerly made of exchanging Governour Skene for Mr. Lovell; that he now had authority to accede to that proposal. General Washington replied, that the proposition had been made by the direction of Congress, and having been then rejected, he could not now renew the business, or give any answer, till he had previously communicated it to them.

"Colonel Patterson behaved with the greatest attention and politeness during the whole business, expressed strong acknowledgments that the usual ceremony of blinding his eyes had been dispensed with. At the breaking up of the conference, General Washington strongly invited him to partake of a small collation provided for him, which he politely declined, alleging his late breakfast, and an impatience to return to General Howe, though he had not executed his commission so amply as he wished. Finding he did not propose staying, he was introduced to the General Officers, after which he took his leave, and was safely conducted to his own boat, which waited for him about four miles distant from the city.

"Made publick by order of Congress:

"JOHN HANCOCK, President."

Colonel BARRÉ demanded of the Ministers why some account of this matter had not been given the publick through the channel of the London Gazette? He said, it was that scandalous concealment of intelligence from the publick which roused his warmth; that from the account he had just read it was plain the Ministers had been bold enough to break through an act of Parliament, for in that very House the act had passed but last session limiting the powers of the Commissioners sent to America, and rendering their commission altogether ineffectual. That he should have applauded them for their spirit in daring to violate the law, had the violation produced a salutary effect. That he had last year told them what would be the consequence of their sending such Commissioners under such an act of Parliament; that he had advised them to send a trumpet from camp to camp, previous to any action; that the House, he was proud to say, had approved of that advice, and that he was sure it would have been more effectual than a ridiculous attempt at a treaty, overlaid by absurd forms and idle punctilio. He turned from this to what he called another important subject, the tremendous appearance of a war in Europe, and told the House in a most peremptory tone, that a war of the most serious kind threatened this country, a war from the united Powers of France and Spain. That the attack would shortly be made, and made within the hearing of those who then sat in the House. A laugh arising from the opposite benches, the Colonel observed with some warmth, "Gentlemen may laugh, but I dare aver, that those who laugh now will, in the moment of danger, be lying, in tears, on their backs, like cowards." He then declared, that France was full two months beforehand with us in preparation, that we were, in fact, defenceless, unable to make any resistance should she soon begin; that the noble Lord shifted his ground so often that there was no dependence on his information; that even now he had said, he relied on the present assurances of the pacifick intentions of France, but that he did not know how soon she might alter her intention.

Lord NORTH declared, that he firmly believed the Court of Versailles: but as he was no prophet, he would not answer for events six months hence. He complained of having his words watched, and thrown perpetually in his teeth.

Colonel BARRÉ declared he ever would watch the Minister; that it was extraordinary indeed, if the noble Lord high in office, and the ostensible Minister, expected his words would not be watched; he protested he would continue to watch him, and report his words on every fit occasion. The Minister of this country, he said, ought always to have information sufficient of what the French were about to undertake to promise for six months; if he could not, his neck ought to be brought to the block. The situation of the affairs of this country, he said, was awful, alarming, and tremendous: he spoke it, he said, with fear and trembling, but this country seemed to be near the crisis of her fate; he advised the Treasury-bench, therefore, to look about them, and as there was one question which demanded an immediate answer, he would then put it: "Had the King's Ministers information of a particular species of armament preparing by the French in those ports of France which were immediately opposite and nearest to this kingdom?" The question, he trusted, was clear and comprehensive. He put it roundly, and it required immediate explanation. If it was not answered, the silence of the Ministry would operate in his mind as fully as any answer they could give; if they had not the necessary information, they were not fit for their posts, and ought to hold them no longer. He entered into the state of our naval power, summing up the number of men-of-war in our ports, and the guard-ships, which he declared had none of them their complement of men on board, although the noble Lord had said they were nearly manned. [Here he was again interrupted, Lord North having said partly manned.] He asserted that we were by no means a match for the united force of France and Spain. He recommended to the Ministry at any rate to make up matters with America; he observed we had in the last war twelve thousand seamen from America, who would now, should France attack us, be fighting against us; that all the useful part of our Navy was on the coasts of America; in fact, that matters were so bad, that unavoidable ruin hovered over this devoted country. Recall, therefore, he said, your fleets and armies from America, and leave the brave Colonists to the enjoyment of their liberty. [This created a louder laugh than the former among the occupiers of the several official benches; which irritated the Colonel so much that he reprehended the Treasury-bench in terms of great asperity; he arraigned them with a want of manners, and declared, he thought professed courtiers had been better bred.] He then again denounced vengeance, and, after a thousand repetitions of the danger of our present situation, he bid the Ministry appoint proper officers; the fleet, he said, ought to be commanded by a brave man then in the House, an Admiral who had once already saved his country; the Admiral he meant was his honourable friend near him, Admiral Keppel. He said he knew he was out of order in naming a member, but on such an occasion he thought himself justified in mentioning so brave an officer.

At length, having held up a most tremendous picture of impending mischief to his country, he repeated his question to the Treasury-bench, and sat down, deploring the infatuation of Government, and asserting that a majority of votes in that House would never conquer France and Spain however they might procure the Minister a momentary triumph, and make him a welcome guest at St. James's.

Admiral KEPPEL said, that things had an extreme disagreeable appearance. He asserted, from the most authentick information, that Spain had twenty-five ships-of-the-line, but believed them to be ill-manned with marines. In respect to France, it was otherwise. Their registers commanded seamen, and their military force was known to be sufficient to furnish any number of men they might want to serve on board their ships-of-war. He concluded with lamenting, in case of a rupture with France or Spain, the absence of that useful and necessary part of our naval force, our frigates and sloops-of-war.

Lord GEORGE GERMAINE. I rise to explain a few circumstances which have been demanded for information; I shall give all the satisfaction in my power, not speaking from notes. Relative to the state of our armament, the right honourable gentleman is much mistaken in saying the twenty-three ships are not half manned. They want, sir, only fifteen hundred men of their full complement, and twelve are fully manned: so that there are no reasons for those numerous and great apprehensions which the right honourable gentleman has stated so largely. As to the propositions which General Howe made to General Washington, they prove clearly, as the Americans themselves state the matter, that General Howe was eager for the means of peace and conciliation; but Washington against them. However, General Howe will doubtless be able to put New-York at the mercy of the King; after which, the Legislature will be restored, and an opportunity will thereby be given for the well-affected to declare themselves, who are ready to make proper submission. Sir Peter Parker's expedition failed, from arriving too late; I am not answerable for its success, for it was planned before I came into the office. I had assurances from Lord Cornwallis and General Clinton of this, that had not unavoidable delays happened, the force would have proved sufficient. The conduct of the war in Canada also has been reprobated for want of boats; all possible expedition has been used in building them, but it has taken longer time than I expected, and the embarking upon the lake has necessarily been delayed beyond the time intended. I am further asked, what are the numbers of the armies in America? Sir, the number of that under General Howe is twenty-five thousand, and he will be reinforced by five thousand more, which are near the American coast by this time. He has besides about two thousand Provincials, and will probably have more. The Army in Canada is eleven thousand, and perhaps three or four hundred, which is the full complement for that department, if not a little more. There has been no cartel settled. There can be none; but the commanders in chief have agreed upon an exchange of some prisoners, man for man. Another question is, whether Administration knows any thing of particular preparations on the coast of France? I have asked the noble Lord by me, [Lord North,] and he knows nothing of any such—nothing further than what is necessary for conducting the registered seamen to Brest—nor have I any intelligence of that sort. And now, sir, having replied to these queries, permit me to make one remark on the House of Bourbon's supposed design of assisting the Americans by going to war with us. I can give no credit to this idea, and my reason is, because it would be manifestly against their interest. How well do you suppose would those countries like to have the spirit of independence cross the Atlantick? Would they not fear that their own Colonists would catch fire at the unlimited rights of mankind,—would they not like that language better than digging gold? And would not there arise great danger from powerful independent States being so near them, freed from all control from Europe? I cannot believe, sir, that they would be so blind to their own interests.

Mr. FOX said, that every circumstance that had fallen out in America, was one aggregate proof, that Opposition had been right last session in every one of their prophecies, and in every motive they had laid down as the cause of their conduct: that nothing could be so farcical as calling for unanimity in approving measures, because those measures had been uniformly attended with the mischiefs that had been predicted: that instead of applause and approbation, Administration deserved nothing but reproach—for having brought the Americans into such a situation, that it was impossible for them to pursue any other conduct than what they had pursued.

He went into the independence declared by America. The Americans had done no more than the English had done against James the II. When James went out of the kingdom, the English declared the throne to be abdicated, and chose another King. When the late severe laws were passed against the Americans, they were thrown into anarchy; they declared we had abdicated the Government, and therefore they were at liberty to choose a Government for themselves.

He was astonished at the sense which the noble Lord in the blue ribbon put upon his conciliatory motion. He affirmed, that the motion contained no such proposition as that now asserted by the noble Lord, nor could such a construction be put upon any words in the motion. He desired the motion might be read. It was read, as follows:

"February 27, 1775.—Resolved, That when the Governour, Council, and Assembly, or General Court of any of his Majesty's Provinces or Colonies in America, shall propose to make provision, according to the condition, circumstances, and situation of such Province or Colony, for contributing their proportion to the common defence, (such proportion to be raised under the authority of the General Court, or General Assembly of such Province or Colony, and disposable by Parliament,) and shall engage to make provision also for the support of the civil Government and the administration of justice, in such Province or Colony, it will be proper, if such proposal shall be approved by his Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament, and for so long as such provision shall be made, accordingly, to forbear, in respect of such Province or Colony, to levy any duty, tax, or assessment, or to impose any further duty, tax, or assessment, except only such duties as it may be expedient to continue to levy or to impose for the regulation of commerce; the net produce of the duties last mentioned to be carried to the account of such Province or Colony respectively."

Well, sir, is it not clear, that no such proposition was held out by the motion? and is it not extraordinary, that every body should understand the motion, but the author of it? As to the noble Lord who spoke last, priding himself on a Legislature being reëstablished in New-York, it is the highest absurdity. Who can suppose, that with an army of thirty thousand men there, a Legislature will not be found that shall express just that species of law and liberty which the other noble Lord wishes to establish in America, and which Kings may naturally be supposed to wish to flow from popular assemblies. Sir, it has been very well said, that the speech is an hypocritical one; and in truth there is not a little hypocrisy in supposing, that a King, (I except his present Majesty, who really loves liberty;) but that a common King should be solicitous to establish any thing that depended on a popular assembly. Kings, sir, govern by means of popular assemblies, only because they cannot do without them; to suppose a King fond of that mode of governing, is to suppose a chimera. It cannot exist. It is contrary to the nature of things; and it is hypocrisy to advance it.

But, sir, if this happy time of law and liberty is to be restored to America, why was it ever disturbed? It reigned there till the abominable doctrine of gaining money by taxes infatuated the heads of our statesmen. Why did you destroy the fair work of so many ages, in order to reëstablish that by the sword, which prudence, and the good government of the country, had seemed to fix forever?

But, sir, how is this blessed system of law and liberty to be established? By the bayonets of disciplined Germans. The noble Lord who spoke last, seemed to pride himself upon the Americans of Long-Island making a precipitate retreat. They were out-generalled. Discipline triumphed over the enthusiasm which liberty inspires. Did the noble Lord triumph? I pity his feelings.

Sir, something has been said on the case of General Clinton: I wish that matter had been more explained; as it stands at present, the Gazette account is an infamous libel on the character of that gallant officer. Let Administration stand forth, and avow that representation: they will not do it; they dare not do it; they skulk from an open and a fair representation.

We have been told, that it is not for the interest of Spain and France to have America independent. Sir, I deny it; and say, it is contrary to every principle of common sense. Is not the division of the enemy's power advantageous? Is not a free country engaged in trade less formidable than the ambition of an old corrupted Government, their only formidable rival in Europe? The noble Lord who moved the amendment, said, that we were in the dilemma of conquering or abandoning America; if we are reduced to that, I am for abandoning America. What have been the advantages of America to this kingdom? Extent of trade, increase of commercial advantages, and a numerous people growing up in the same ideas and sentiments as ourselves. Now, sir, how would those advantages accrue to us, if America was conquered? Not one of them. Such a possession of America must be secured by a standing army; and that, let me observe, must be a very considerable army. Consider, sir, that that army must be cut off from the intercourse of social liberty here, and accustomed, in every instance, to bow down and break the spirits of men, to trample on the rights, and to live on the spoils cruelly wrung from the sweat and labour of their fellow subjects;—such an army, employed for such purposes, and paid by such means, for supporting such principles, would be a very proper instrument to effect points of a greater, or at least more favourite importance nearer home; points, perhaps, very unfavourable to the liberties of this country.

General Conway said, he should be very sorry any part of his conduct were construed as disrespectful to his Majesty; no person bore his Majesty higher respect; but the address was so entirely against his sentiments, so often declared in that House, that he must vote against it.

The House divided upon the amendment; 87 for it, and 242 against it.

After which, they divided on the original address. Ayes 232; Noes 83.

—

November 1.

The Address reported. No debate.

—

November 2.

The Address presented.

"The humble Address of the House of Commons to the King.

"Most Gracious Sovereign:

"We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, beg leave to return your Majesty the humble thanks of this House, for your most gracious speech from the throne.

"While we lament the continuance of the troubles which have so long distracted your Majesty's Colonies in North-America, and of the calamities and oppressions which our unhappy fellow-subjects are still suffering under the arbitrary tyranny of their leaders, we cannot forbear to express our detestation and abhorrence of the audacious and desperate spirit of ambition, which has at last carried those leaders so far as to make them openly renounce all allegiance to the Crown, and all political connection with this country, and in direct terms to presume to set up their rebellious Confederacies for independent States.

"We consider the rejection of the gracious and condescending means of reconciliation held out to them, under the authority of your Majesty's commission, as a fresh and convincing proof, that the object of these men has always been power and dominion; but we can impute the circumstances of indignity and insult accompanying this proceeding, to no other motive than a resentment of your Majesty's firm and constant adherence to the maintenance of the constitutional rights of Parliament, divested of every possible view of any separate interests of the Crown: and we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that the same attachment of your Majesty to the parliamentary authority of Great Britain, which hath provoked the insolence of the chiefs of this rebellion, cannot but operate, as it ought to do, in fixing your Majesty still deeper, if possible, in the affections of a British House of Commons.

"With reverence and gratitude to Divine Providence, permit us to express our unfeigned joy, and to offer our sincere congratulations to your Majesty, on the success which has attended the good conduct and valour of your Majesty's officers and forces, both by sea and land, and the zeal and bravery of the auxiliary troops in your service, in the recovery of Canada, and in the important operations in the Province of New-York, which give the strongest hopes of the most decisive good consequences.

"It is with much satisfaction we learn, that your Majesty continues to receive assurances of amity from the several Courts of Europe: and we thankfully acknowledge your Majesty's goodness and paternal concern for the happiness of your people, in your constant attention to preserve the general tranquillity; and it is our most earnest wish, that, by your Majesty's interposition, all misunderstandings and differences between two neighbouring Powers may be happily reconciled, and Europe still enjoy the blessings of peace.

"Your faithful Commons consider it as a duty which they owe to your Majesty, and to those they represent, to grant your Majesty such supplies as the weighty considerations which your Majesty has been pleased to state to us shall be found to require, and we have a well-grounded confidence, that at this time, when the object of the Rebels is openly avowed and clearly understood, the general conviction of the justice and necessity of your Majesty's measures, must unite all ranks of your faithful subjects in supporting your Majesty with one mind and heart in the great national cause in which you are engaged."

The King's Answer.

"This very loyal address deserves my particular thanks. I receive with the highest satisfaction your affectionate acknowledgment of my constant regard for the constitutional rights of Parliament, and your zealous assurances of confidence and support in this great contest, in which the interests of all my subjects are so essentially concerned."

—

November 2.

Address presented. Adjourned to November 4.

—

November 4.

No debate. Adjourned to November 6.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Wednesday, November 6, 1776.

Thin House. Nothing expected.

Mr. Fox begged the House would not adjourn; an honourable friend of his was coming down to move something of the first consequence; and seeing none of the Ministers in the House, he desired they might be sent for; he thought them exceedingly blamable in being absent; whether business was expected or not, they ought constantly to attend their duty in Parliament.

[Messengers were sent to Lord North and Lord George Germaine. In a few minutes Lord John Cavendish came, and as did also the Ministers.]

Lord John Cavendish said, that he had seen in the publick prints of this day a most extraordinary Declaration, which, if genuine, required the attention and consideration of the House. He read it:

"By Richard Viscount Howe, of the Kingdom of Ireland, and William Howe, Esq., General of his Majesty's Forces in America, the King's Commissioners for restoring peace in his Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in North-America, &c.

"Declaration.

"Although the Congress, whom the misguided Americans suffer to direct their opposition to a re-establishment of the constitutional government of these Provinces, have disavowed every purpose of reconciliation not consonant with their extravagant inadmissible claim of independency; the King's Commissioners think fit to declare, that they are equally desirous to confer with his Majesty's well-affected subjects upon the means of restoring the publick tranquillity, and establishing a permanent union with every Colony as a part of the British empire. The King being most graciously pleased to direct a revision of such of his royal instructions as may be construed to lay an improper restraint upon the freedom of legislation in any of his Colonies, and to concur in the revisal of all his acts by which his subjects there may think themselves aggrieved, it is recommended to the inhabitants at large to reflect seriously upon their present condition, and to judge for themselves, whether it be more consistent with their honour and happiness to offer up their lives as a sacrifice to the unjust and precarious cause in which they are engaged, or to return to their allegiance, accept the blessings of peace, and be secured in a free enjoyment of their liberty and properties, upon the true principles of the Constitution.

"Given at New-York, the 19th day of September, 1776.

"HOWE,

"W. HOWE."

"By command of their Excellencies:

"H. STRACHEY."

On this extraordinary Declaration, he said, he had some observations to make. There was no man more zealous for preserving the liberty of the press than he was. It was always with grief and indignation he beheld it abused, or employed to improper purposes. It was with reluctance he should complain of the abuse of it in the present instance, if the authenticity of the paper now alluded to were disavowed, which he must continue to think it would; because if such a paper really existed, it might be well expected its first publick appearance would be either in the Gazette or the Journals of the House. If the paper was a forgery, or was spurious, it was a most daring attempt to impose on the publick. Before he proceeded therefore any further, he thought proper to call on the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, [Lord North,] or his noble colleague in office who sat next him, [Lord George Germaine,] to tell the House whether the paper was genuine.

Lord NORTH said, he believed it was; that he heard the contents read, and believed it corresponded pretty faithfully with that which appeared in the publick papers. It was not properly in his department; he therefore referred the noble mover and the House, to the noble Lord who sat next him, and to whose office it was transmitted, for further information.

Lord GEORGE GERMAINE confessed the authenticity of the paper in question; said he had seen it in print the preceding evening, and believed it to be a faithful copy of that issued at New-York by Lord Howe.

Lord JOHN CAVENDISH then congratulated the House on this gleam of peace and conciliation, though he could not but express his astonishment at both the contents of the Declaration, and the extraordinary manner it became first communicated to the publick. He observed, that Parliament had been used all along by Administration with the most mortifying contempt; Commissioners are sent out with an intention of carrying a certain act of Parliament into execution, armed at the same time with certain parliamentary powers for restoring peace; these extend no further than granting pardons and receiving submissions; yet, wonderful to relate, the first account Parliament hear, and that through the channel of a newspaper, is, that those Commissioners are authorized to answer directly for the Sovereign; and obliquely for the two other branches of the Legislature, that he will concur in the revisal of all acts, by which his American subjects are aggrieved. He said, Parliament were rendered cyphers in the whole conduct of the business from its commencement; when their name is wanted, they are called on by way of requisition, to sanction acts which render them abhorred by their fellow-subjects in every part of the empire; when the least appearance of lenient measures is to be held out, the merit is all to be attributed to the King and his Ministers. It is to originate from them alone. Notwithstanding all this, he felt a dawn of joy break in on his mind. If Ministers were serious, he should not stand upon mere punctilios; yet, he thought, to give the negotiation the greater weight and efficacy, that House should, as the first proof of their disposition to peace, coöperate with Administration, in so desirable a work. It would, besides, restore Ministers to confidence; their professions were disbelieved in America; the motion, therefore, he was about to make, would be the means of removing the almost universal opinion that prevailed in America, that every Ministerial promise was given with some insidious intention of treachery, deceit, imposition, or to divide them, in order the more easily to break their strength, and subdue them. To remove so strong an impediment to peace and conciliation; to show we were in earnest, and wished sincerely for both; his Lordship moved, "that this House will resolve itself into a committee, to consider of the revisal of all acts of Parliament, by which his Majesty's subjects in America think themselves aggrieved."

Mr. BURKE seconded the motion. He begged to know from the noble Lord over the way, [Lord North,] whether the instructions to the Commissioners went the length of the offer of revisal held out in the Declaration; for without intrenching on that part of the prerogative which promises a revision of such of the Royal instructions as may be construed to lay an improper restraint, &c., it was in his apprehension pretty evident, that the latter part of the sentence on which the motion was framed, held out a promise of concurrence on the part of the Crown, to revise all acts by which his Majesty's subjects in America think themselves aggrieved. This he looked upon to be leading Parliament, not following it; he should, however, suspend any decisive opinion on the passage, till the noble Lord had explained it. The text was before us; he wished the noble Lord would rise and give us the comment; for certainly, either the idea held out in the Declaration meant that Great Britain intended to revise and concede, or desired the people of America to lay down their arms, and submit to state their grievances, and we will remedy them, if we think proper.

Lord NORTH said, he should not enter into a critical, literal, or philological interpretation of the passage in the Declaration, which gave rise to the present motion. He would, however, assure the honourable gentleman, that Administration never meant to relax in pursuing the claims of this country, so long as its legislative authority was disputed. He referred the honourable member to the commission under which the Commissioners acted, to their first proclamation, and desired him to compare them with the present, and see if they did not all substantially correspond; whether they did not all tend to the same point, to the restoration of peace to America. This Declaration invited the people of America to that restoration; and as a motive of encouragement, as well as with a view of establishing a lasting union, to be rendered permanent and cemented by mutual advantage, a revisal of all acts, by which his Majesty's subjects in that country think themselves aggrieved, was held out. His Majesty has promised to concur in those acts or Royal instructions that depend immediately on himself; he is more explicit: he has engaged that they shall be revised, and tells his Colonies that he has already directed his Commissioners to that effect. As to the motion made by the noble Lord, he must be obliged to dissent from it for several reasons. Before, however, he proceeded to state those reasons, he would take the liberty to set his Lordship right, as he supposed the errour he meant to allude to, led him to make the motion, and support it throughout, in his opinion, on very wrong grounds. The noble Lord's mistake was this: that the promise contained in the Declaration was the first of the kind. Nothing could be more erroneous. It was the great principle that pervaded the conduct of Administration from the beginning. It was the language of Parliament at the very outset. In the address of both Houses early in February, 1775, the conduct since so faithfully pursued, was strongly pressed and warmly recommended. One great object, nay, the leading one, was to hear grievances, to transmit an account of them home, and to engage, on the part of the Legislature, that redress would be granted, wherever a just cause for redress existed. That this was the first opportunity the Commissioners had to discharge that part of their duty, with any prospect of success; and why any communication of a plan already sanctioned by Parliament, or, more properly speaking, originating from it, should be insisted on till some of the fruits of the measure thus recommended, became necessary, was more, he confessed, than he could possibly perceive. His reasons for giving a negative to the motion, on this state of the whole question, would, he presumed, be obvious to every member present. The Americans have declared themselves independent; why enter into deliberation about what you are willing to concede, till we know first that they acknowledge our authority; and after they have returned to us, as subjects, till we know what would reasonably content them? How is it possible to treat, while they avow their sovereignty and independency? much less to form legislative regulations for those who, both as subjects and independent States, have all along disputed our power and right of legislation. Let them acknowledge the right once; let them fairly point out the constitutional abuse of it, and the grievances flowing from that abuse, and I shall be ready to go into the proposed committee; or to adopt the most efficacious and speedy measures, not only to remedy real grievances, but even to bend to their prejudices in some instances. In such a case they would be heard with complaisance, and treated with candour; but for petitions to be repeatedly presented to this House, denying expressly the legislative authority of Great Britain, was to the last degree nugatory and absurd, and must continue to be ever rejected or unanswered; for though the purport of the generality of those petitions, substantially, at least, by implication, recognize the authority of Parliament, their contents taken in another light, composed partly of flat denials of the superiority of this country, of assumed facts, and a species of argumentative reasoning, controverting the very power which they are at the instant appealing to, will render such appeals ridiculous and inadmissible, till they accompany them with a clear, explicit, unequivocal acknowledgment of the right. His Lordship added, besides, that the present motion, if agreed to, instead of producing any good consequence, might produce the very worst. The affair was at present in the hands of his Majesty's Ministers, by the express advice of Parliament. The motion might retard it, not that he entertained any great hopes of its success. Still Parliament had advised it; his Majesty was willing to cooperate in effecting the same purpose, upon every parliamentary, rational and consistent rule of conduct. On the whole, therefore, he could not possibly discover what service the agreeing with the motion could answer, but he saw many inconveniences, and much possible mischief it might be productive of.

Mr. Fox observed, that howsoever absurd and inconsistent Administration had showed themselves in other respects, in their measures relative to America, and their professed contempt for Parliament, they had been perfectly uniform and consistent. They had all along manifested the most contemptuous treatment of that House. He was always with the majority of the House in one point, though not upon other occasions, in supporting its dignity, privileges, and consequence with the people; which, in every measure relative to America, in particular, had been most shamefully violated; every information was denied, or purposely held back. The operations of war, it is true, were communicated with all possible ostentation and parade; but the only proper objects of parliamentary attention were totally neglected, and left to be collected from chance, vague reports, or a newspaper, while the negotiations for peace, in which Parliament and the nation were much more deeply interested, as the welfare of this country more immediately depended upon them, were kept in a state of concealment, as if Ministers were ashamed to own, as well they might, that after all the blood and treasure which had been spent in the unhappy contest, they are obliged in the end to offer those very conditions which they had some years since rejected, with every mark of displeasure and disapprobation. The account from New-York, he observed, was received late on Saturday night; an extraordinary Gazette, announcing the retreat of the Provincials from that city, was published early on Monday morning; another Gazette followed it the succeeding evening; and yet a syllable of the Declaration never transpired. He first heard it at the opera the preceding evening, and read it that morning in a newspaper; still doubting its being genuine, till he heard it authenticated by the two noble Lords on the opposite bench. He begged to be understood, that he did not make a charge of intentional concealment; but he contended that Ministers were no less culpable than if they concealed it from design; particularly when the omission included in it the most manifest and mortifying inattention to Parliament, whose sentiments the penner of the above Declaration had virtually, and, he would add audaciously, engaged for, there being but little or no essential difference, according to the present well known pliable disposition of that House, between a royal promise to concur in the revisal of certain acts of the British Legislature, and an actual solemn engagement of the whole Legislature, for its due and faithful performance. In America, he said, all was peace, conciliation, and parental tenderness; in England, nothing but subjugation, unconditional submission, and a war of conquest. With that view Administration procured a pamphlet * to be written and sent to America, where thousands of them were distributed gratis; while in England the title was not so much as known, till after the publication on the other side the Atlantick. Publications of a very different tendency are encouraged here. America is to be subdued; taxes are to be obtained; charters are to be modified or annihilated at pleasure. These doctrines secure a party, and the bulk of the people on this side of the water, while the most moderate measures and fascinating promises are held out on the other, in order to insidiously trepan and deceive. He returned to what he called the shameful inattention and neglect which Ministers had shown in their conduct towards Parliament; and as Government had taken so much pains to conceal the proclamation alluded to, he had strong reasons to suspect, that other matters of a similar nature were suppressed, and never permitted to see the light. If there have been any such, why have not Parliament been made acquainted with them? Is it not reasonable that this House should know them? He then addressed and asked the Treasury-bench, if every supply they demanded had not been granted? Why, then, in this, as well as every other instance, keep back information, or, which was the same thing, neglect to give it to Parliament, which had acted so openly, and put such confidence in Ministers? What was the return? Either a downright, designed imposition, or the most gross nonsense. What do the Commissioners promise in the King's name? That "being most graciously pleased to concur in the revisal of all acts," &c. Does his Majesty, at any time, or upon any occasion, concur in the revisal of any acts of any kind? He may concur in the repeal of an act or in any amendment made in an act which comes in the shape of a bill, waiting for the royal assent; but as for promising to concur in the revisal of a law, which implies examination and amendment, in stages in which he can possibly take no part, it is rank ignorance or gross deceit. Besides, though Ministers were serious, the promise could not be fulfilled, without supposing that the opinion of Parliament was just what Ministers pleased to dictate; for what signifies what his Majesty's good dispositions may be, since Parliament, it is well known, thinks differently? If, therefore, revision or revisal, he said, meant any thing, he said, it meant a repeal, which it was impossible to expect from the present Parliament, as they had so frequently refused any motion, overture, or proposition, tending even that way. He finished with observing, that the Commissioners, especially Lord Howe, were known to be friends to conciliation; and for that reason were not sent out till so late in the season that Government knew the Americans must have declared for independency before they arrived. He declared it, as his firm opinion, that there could be no peace in America without a complete relinquishing on our part of the claim of taxation; that the Congress might well call the propositions of the Court of Great Britain insidious, if the House of Commons refused to support the Declaration of the Commissioners. That the expressions in the Declaration were complained of as not being clear; but that whenever an expression was represented as not clear, the act accompanying it must be taken as its commentary. If, then, the Declaration in question is not clear, how must America understand it, when by the vote of this House, this day, should the noble Lord's motion be negatived, they shall plainly perceive, that the Commons of Great Britain had peremptorily refused to concur in rendering his Majesty's gracious dispositions effective?

Mr. Solicitor General WEDDERBURNE. The reasons which have been given, Mr. Speaker, for agreeing to the present motion, are, I must confess, such as by no means convince me. I have not a doubt but the noble Lord who made it, wishes for nothing so much as to accelerate the means of peace; and my reason for opposing it is, that I think it would effectually mar the whole design. It is at present in the hands of the Commissioners, regularly in the common and natural course of business; but to comply with this motion would be at once to take it out of their hands, and to raise jealousies in the Americans, at the designs or powers of those Commissioners. Such a conduct here might be productive of the worst consequences. It might, in the first instance, be deemed an act of submission on our part, not of favour in condescension to those who look upon themselves as a sovereign State, and actually deny our authority. It would discredit the Commissioners, and throw difficulties in the way of the negotiation, now probably begun; because, by giving them the present proposed sanction it would point out that they were not before armed with parliamentary powers, adequate to the professed objects of their commission. On the other hand, it may be productive of evil, as it compels us to give the proposition a negative, which is far from being the disposition of the House, when America shall acknowledge the supreme legislative right of this country, and by such acknowledgment, lay a just constitutional claim to our favour and protection. Let it be considered what is the present situation of the Colonies. They are in a state of declared independency. Would you admit that independency, or treat with them as independent States? Or could you, consistently with common sense and prudence, revise acts by way of obliging those whose principal object at present is not such revision, but to render themselves free from all connection with you as their superiours? It has been observed, that the King has answered too much for the Legislature of this kingdom in the expressions of the proclamation in question. It appears to me very different, sir. His Majesty there speaks only as the head and mouth of the nation, and the Legislature, by assuring them that the legislative power is ready and willing to hear their grievances, and revise any of their acts which may prove grievances. To think the words of the proclamation mean any thing else, is to torture them strangely. Relative to these grievances, what are they which we can enter into a revision of? The principal that have been mentioned to-day, are, taxation and their charters. And would you enter upon the question of taxation by way of a means of reconciliation? Impossible! There is at present but one point which must be settled as a preliminary; it is that of independency. If they adhere, as I have no doubt they will, to that, there can be no discussion of other points; it is in vain to think of it. And as to their charters, they are not at all the questions at present, for restore their charter of King William, will they be satisfied? No. They are as unwilling to submit to the terms of those charters, as to the Boston acts: they openly declare this. Hence, therefore, I may fairly and reasonably assert, that till the spirit of independency is subdued, it is idle to come to any resolutions or revisions, as means of conciliation. Take the sword out of the hand of the governing part of America, and I have not a doubt but a very considerable part of that country will return to its obedience with as much rapidity as it revolted. Is it possible, that gentlemen can give their attention so much to one side of the question, and read one side only, so as to imagine the Americans are so free under their present Government as to have any reason to wish for a continuance of it? The very contrary is the fact; the Congress does not govern America—it tyrannizes over it; the power and punishment of imprisonment as practised there, are tyrannical to the highest degree, and utterly inconsistent with every idea of freedom. The liberty of the press is annihilated; a printer that dared to print any thing contrary to their system and interests, would be instantly ruined; nor is even the freedom of private letters, or private conversation, permitted; destruction hangs over the man who ventures to write, or express a sentiment in opposition to their opinions. This horrid tyranny is what we may rationally hope to be so far dissolved, from the difference of the troops on both sides, as to enable the oppressed tyrannized Americans, safely to avow their real opinions, and to return without danger to their duty. As to a point which the honourable gentleman much insists on,—the design in Administration of keeping the proclamation secret,—it appears strange to me that any person should think of such a thing, unless from the mode of reasoning which he is so ready to adopt, that having so much folly in it, it is the more likely to be the work of this Ministry. Folly indeed to make that a secret, which was posted upon the walls of New-York; and this I think is reason enough why it was not inserted in the Gazette—there was no call for it. I should ask the House pardon, for having troubled them so long upon matters which appear to me of little consequence; but before I sit down, I should remark, that it appears a very sudden and unexpected way of bringing in a debate, after it was so generally understood that no business of any consequence was to come on in the House before the recess; but as I was not at the opera last night, where this manœuvre was planned, I must be excused if I have not treated it in all its parts in the manner some might expect.

* The Rights of Great Britain asserted against the Claims of America: being an Answer to the Declaration of the General Congress.

Mr. Burke. Rejoiced I am, sir, that the learned gentleman has regained, if not his talent, at least his voice; that as he would not, or could not reply the other night, to my honourable friend, charmed as he must have been with the powerful reasoning of that eloquent speech, he had the grace to be silent. On that memorable occasion he lay like Milton's devil, prostrate on the oblivious pool, confounded and astounded, though called upon by the whole Satanick host: he lay prostrate, dumb-founded, and unable to utter a single syllable, and suffered the goads of the two noble Lords to prick him till he scarcely betrayed a single sign of animal or mental sensibility. Why, sir, would he not be silent now, instead of attempting to answer, what in truth was unanswerable? But the learned gentleman has now called to his assistance the bayonets of twelve thousand Hessians; and as he thinks it absurd to reason at present with the Americans, he tells us, that by the healing, soothing, merciful measures of foreign swords, at the breasts of those unhappy people, their understandings would be enlightened, and they would be enabled to comprehend the subtleties of his logick. It was well said, on another occasion, that your speech demands an army!—and I may say, that the learned gentleman demands blood; reasoning he says is vain: the sword must convince America, and clear up their clouded apprehensions. The learned gentleman's abilities surely desert him, if he is obliged to call such a coarse argument as an army to his assistance; not that I mean any thing reflecting on his parts—I always esteem, and sometimes dread, his talents. But has he told you why Commissioners were not sent sooner to America? Has he explained that essential point? Not a jot. Why, after the act passed for them, why were they delayed full seven months, and not permitted to sail till May; and why was the commission appointing them delayed till the 6th of that month? Answer this. The blood and devastation that followed, was owing to this delay; upon your conscience it ought to lay a heavy load. If the measure was right and necessary in order for conciliation, as the King declared in his speech at the opening of that session, why was it not executed at a time, in which it could be effectual; instead of being purposely deferred to one, when it could not possibly answer any end but that of adding hypocrisy to treachery, and insult and mockery to cruelty and oppression? By this delay you drove them into the declaration of independency; not as a matter of choice, but necessity: and now they have declared it, you bring it as an argument to prove, that there can be no other reasoning used with them, but the sword. What is this but declaring, that you were originally determined not to prevent, but to punish rebellion; not to use conciliation, but an army; not to convince, but to destroy? Such were the effects of those seven months cruelly lost, to which every mischief that has happened since, must be attributed.

But still the learned gentleman persists, that nothing but the Commissioners can give peace to America;—it is beyond the power of this House. What was the result of the conference with the delegates from the Congress? Why, we are told, that they met in order to be convinced that taxation is no grievance—"no tyranny" used to be the phrase, but that is out of fashion now. Then, sir, what an insult to all America was it to send as Commissioners none but the commanders of the fleet and army to negotiate peace! Did it not show how much you were determined, that the only arguments you meant to use, were your broadswords and broadsides? Let me assert, sir, that the doctrines to be laid down in America would not have been too trivial an occasion, even for the reasoning abilities of the learned gentleman himself. But, sir, you may think to carry these doctrines into execution, and be mistaken too;—the battle is not yet fought; but if it was fought, and the wreath of victory adorned your brow, still is not that continent conquered; witness the behaviour of one miserable woman, who with her single arm did that which an army of a hundred thousand men could not do—arrested your progress in the moment of your success. This miserable being was found in a cellar, with her visage besmeared and smutted over, with every mark of rage, despair, resolution, and the most exalted heroism, buried in combustibles, in order to fire New-York, and perish in its ashes. She was brought forth, and knowing that she would be condemned to die, upon being asked her purpose, said, "to fire the city!" and was determined to omit no opportunity of doing what her country called for. Her train was laid and fired; and it is worthy of your attention, how Providence was pleased to make use of those humble means to serve the American cause, when open force was used in vain. In order to bring things to this unhappy situation, did not you pave the way, by a succession of acts of tyranny? For this, you shut up their ports; cut off their fishery; annihilated their charters; and governed them by an army. Sir, the recollection of these things, being the evident causes of what we have seen, is more than what ought to be endured. This it is that has burnt the noble city of New-York; that has planted the bayonet in the bosoms of my principals; in the bosom of the city; where alone your wretched Government once boasted the only friends she could number in America. If this was not the only succession of events you determined, and therefore looked for, why was America left without any power in it, to give security to the persons and property of those who were and wished to be loyal? This was essential to Government; you did not, and might therefore be well said to have abdicated the Government.

I have been reading a work given us by a country that is perpetually employed in productions of merit. I believe it is not published yet—the History of Philip II.; and I there find, that that tyrannical monarch never dreamt of the tyranny exerted by this Administration. Gods! sir, shall we be told, that you cannot analyze grievances? that you can have no communication with Rebels, because they have declared for independency? Shall you be told this, when the tyrant Philip did it after the same circumstance in the Netherlands? By edict he allowed their ships to enter their ports, and suffered them to depart in peace; he treated with them; made them propositions; and positively declared that he would redress all their grievances. And James II., when he was sailing from France, at the head of a formidable force, assisted like you by foreign troops, and having a great party in the kingdom, still offered pacifick terms; while his exceptions of pardon were few, amongst the rest my honourable friend's ancestor, Sir Stephen Fox. But you will offer none; you simply tell them to lay down their arms, and then you will do just as you please. Could the most cruel conqueror say less? Had you conquered the devil himself in hell, could you be less liberal? No! Sir, you would offer no terms; you meant to drive them to the declaration of independency: and even after it was issued, ought by your offers to have reversed the effect. You would not receive the remonstrance which I brought you from New-York, because it denied your rights to certain powers; yet the late King of France received the remonstrances from his Parliaments, that expressly denied his right to the powers he was in the constant exercise of; answered them, and even redressed some of the grievances which those very remonstrances complained of, though he refused to grant what he thought more peculiarly intrenched upon his own authority.

In this situation, sir, shocking to say, are we called upon by another proclamation to go to the altar of the Almighty, with war and vengeance in our hearts, instead of the peace of our blessed Saviour. He said, "My peace I give you;" but we are, on this fast, to have war only in our hearts and mouths; war against our brethren. Till our churches are purified from this abominable service, I shall consider them, not as the temples of the Almighty, but the synagogues of Satan. An act not more infamous, respecting its political purposes, than blasphemous and profane as a pretended act of national devotion, when the people are called upon, in the most solemn and awful manner, to repair to church, to partake of a sacrament, and at the foot of the altar, to commit sacrilege, to perjure themselves publickly by charging their American brethren with the horrid crime of rebellion, with propagating "specious falsehoods," when either the charge must be notoriously false, or those who make it, not knowing it to be true, call Almighty God to witness—to not a specious, but a most audacious and blasphemous falsehood.

Mr. Rous entered into an abstract discourse on the nature of civil government, and applied his reasoning on the subject to the grounds of the present dispute subsisting between Great Britain and her Colonies. From thence he proceeded to state the various difficulties which presented themselves on either hand on the subject of taxation; whether the right was suspended or concealed on our part, or acknowledged or exercised on the other, it would be liable to strong objections. However, there was one point, as a grand preliminary, which must be the basis of every conciliatory step on either side; that was a clear unequivocal acknowledgment of the legislative supremacy of the British Parliament. If that was not to be obtained but by the force of arms, he confessed that he was most eagerly desirous that arms should be resorted to; that probably the advantages we had lately obtained at Long-Island, and in the neighbourhood of New-York, might give us an opportunity of establishing a civil government in that Province, the example and influence of which, when accompanied with a promise of a redress of real grievances, might be productive of the most happy and salutary consequences. After making a great many observations, he concluded thus: That he would be better pleased to see Britain dying of the wounds she might receive in this unnatural conflict given by her rebellious ungrateful children, than consent to one condescending step that might tend to tarnish her former glories.

Mr. Byng observed, that Administration had all along acted upon system; and however mistaken they might be as to some of the effects of their measures, they never lost sight of the great object they had in contemplation from the beginning: that was, to compel America to consent to unconditional submission; which was, in other words, to consent to be slaves; or, in the event of their refusal and consequent resistance, to endeavour to subdue or extirpate them. This he contended was the great pervading principle which governed the American system, and such was the intention of those to whom carrying it into execution was committed. The opposition given to the motion made by the noble Lord near him [Lord J. Cavendish] was of a piece with the whole of the Ministerial conduct, since the commencement of this business. Ministers in private, and their runners in publick, were constantly known to load the officers entrusted with the superiour commands with reproaches, or to flatly charge them with disobedience of orders, and with the commission of acts to which they were not authorized. Such, he presumed, was the true purport of what was now urged against the motion. The Declaration imports one thing, the obvious contents another; however, if a different interpretation should be put on it by the Americans, we still have two ways to get rid of it, and still keep up a semblance of good faith; for we retain the right of explaining our own meaning, or of disowning the Declaration, as exceeding the powers granted by the commission, and if more closely pressed, of exceeding the powers granted by Parliament; so that whatever the Declaration promises, can be of no avail, but to mislead America by false lights. Our aim is unconditional submission; every concession beyond that, we can explain away and disavow. He finally observed, that this underhand conduct on the part of Administration answered more purposes than one; it answered in a military, as well as a civick capacity, to screen and varnish over, as well as to mislead and betray. Thus they had the address and effrontery to shift the censure they would have so deservedly incurred off their own shoulders. This he instanced in the persons of Carleton, Howe, Clinton, and several others, who were represented by their runners about town, and even by some of the principals, as mad, ignorant, rash, or inactive, according as it suited the present moment. He should not have particularly adverted to those circumstances, he said, if it had not called to his recollection the fate of a near relation, who fell a sacrifice to the same treacherous motives of self acquittal.

Lord George Germaine next spoke, and said, he arose to clear up some matters of fact. That the noble Lord who made the motion, had supposed that he received the proclamation with the despatch from General and Lord Howe; that on the contrary, the proclamation was left at Falmouth with other matters, and coming up to town in the ordinary way, did not reach his hands till Monday morning, when the extraordinary Gazette was already published. That he forbore to insert it in Tuesday's Gazette, because he really did not think it of importance enough; that it was not concealed, many copies having been pasted against the walls of New-York, and many sent all over America. That, as it was only part of a treaty, he thought it improper to publish it, and conceived it was altogether unusual, as he remembered the conversations between Lord Chatham [when Mr. Pitt] and M. de Bussy, previous to the finishing the treaty of peace with France, were never published. With regard to the great American question, he said, it was endless to argue upon it. Every gentleman present, he doubted not, had formed his opinion, and that the House might debate to eternity without altering the different ideas of different men. That he, from his opinion, called the Americans Rebels, and approved of the measures pursued against them by Government; that he was averse to the present motion, as it would deprive General and Lord Howe of the honour of making peace with America, an honour which he flattered himself the gentlemen on the opposite side of the House wished them to have. As to the proclamation for a fast, he had before this day only heard it read once in Council, and therefore from what the honourable gentleman had said, he had been induced to imagine, that the Archbishop who drew it up might have made some mistake; but that he had now read it, and thought it a very good and a very proper proclamation. His Lordship then read it at the table, and having finished, declared the words, "specious falsehoods," were properly introduced. He bid the gentlemen recollect the American Declaration for Independency, and then ask, if the Rebels had not published "specious falsehoods?" He bid them read their several other publications, and he doubted not they would all agree with him, that the assertion was most true; but he could easily account for his not seeing the matter in the same light as the honourable gentleman opposite him; he was neither so accomplished an orator, nor so excellent a divine.

Mr. Dunning opened with observing, that he was not at the opera (alluding to Mr. Solicitor-General) on Tuesday evening; and as he did not imagine any newspaper contained any matter likely to entertain him, he had not read one that day; that he came down to Westminster-Hall in the way of his profession, and had come from thence into that House, without any previous knowledge of the debate; but as the proclamation read from the newspaper, produced by the noble Lord, his friend, had been declared to be authentick by the noble Lord in the blue ribbon, and the other noble Lord who sat next him, [Lords North and Germaine,) it was evident that newspaper information was to be trusted as much as that given in any other manner. He declared his amazement, that the motion which had been made should be deemed sudden and ill-timed; he said he knew of no time more proper for appointing a committee for the revision of such acts as were deemed grievances by the Americans than the present. That the question was not now, what should be altered, and what should remain in force; that those were considerations to be agitated when they came into a Committee; that it was high time the Legislature of Great Britain gave America reason to suppose they would not always turn a deaf ear to her complaints; that it appeared by the proclamation of Lord Howe that he had promised in the King's name, that such acts as they thought grievances should be revised; that the promise went to an assertion, that Parliament, as a branch of the Legislature, would enable the King to keep his word; that therefore it was high time Parliament convinced America how ready they were to second the King's endeavours to restore peace, by beginning the good work with a revisal of the acts which oppressed America, and a removal of those obstacles to a reconciliation. He said, the remarks of a learned gentleman (who had taken the other side of the question) relative to the futility of the House's taking into their consideration what they thought the grievances of America, because it might afterwards appear they were not considered by the Americans as grievances, was notoriously ill-founded. That the gentleman did himself and the House much wrong, if because Parliament had collectively been blind to the several publications of America, he supposed that the members as individuals had been equally blind, and neglected to peep into the petitions which had been presented. That all the members had made themselves masters of the subject, and that the House knew the grievances America had to complain of, was well aware what she felt as grievances, and might with great certainty proceed to redress them. He said, the learned gentleman had given some new ideas of liberty; he had declared that America must be subdued, America must be conquered in order to her deliverance. This sort of deliverance was to him a new consequence of conquest. From all that he had read or heard, he never knew that a conquered people were a free people; and he believed the House would join with him in supposing, that from time immemorial, the very reverse of freedom had been the fate of the conquered. As to the observation, that Lord Howe's first proclamation was necessary to inform the publick that Lord Howe was arrived in America, he said, it might also have been proper to have published the present proclamation to show that he was still there. The noble Lord [Lord George Germaine] he said, had accommodated himself to all parties, in his reasons for not publishing the Declaration in the Gazette. To those who thought it ought to have been made publick, he had declared, any man might read it in the newspapers; and to those who wished and thought it ought to be kept private, he had said, none could read it but those who chose to take a voyage to New-York, where they would find it pasted on the walls of the half-burnt houses; and that he had not printed it in the Gazette, because Lord Chatham's private negotiations with M. de Bussy were not printed there. He should give his vote for the motion, (although, he said, he knew it would not be carried,) and ended with declaring, in reply to Lord George Germaine's observation about the fast proclamation, that he thought a church an improper place to promulgate a Court creed in, and that so to act was to profane the place of worship.

The House divided.

Tellers.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Yeas | Mr. Fox, - - - - - - - - - - | 47 |
| | Mr. Byng, - - - - - - - - - - | |
| Noes | Earl Lisburne, - - - - - - - - | 109 |
| | Mr. Charles Townshend, - - - - - | |

So it passed in the negative.

Adjourned to November 8.

---

DEBATE IN THE COMMONS ON THE NAVY ESTIMATES.

November 8.—In the Committee of Supply, Mr. Buller moved, "That 45,000 Seamen, including 10,129 Marines, be employed for the year 1777."

Sir George Yonge said, he should not oppose the motion, though he must condemn the service for which the greatest part of the seamen were destined. But while he approved of putting this country in a proper state of defence, he must reprobate that ruinous system upon which the present civil war was founded. He adverted to the declaration made by Lord and General Howe, and positively affirmed the Ministers were by that declaration pledged to a reversal of their system with America.

The Honourable Mr. Luttrell said, that the naval strength of this nation, for the protection of Great Britain and Ireland, was by no means equal to the account publickly given by some of the most responsible characters in office. So far from twenty-three ships-of-the-line being fit for sea, as was asserted at the opening of Parliament by the first naval authority in Great Britain, and positively insisted on by a noble Lord over the way [Lord George Germaine] in contradiction to real, though melancholy facts stated by another right honourable member, [Colonel Barré,] we had not, on the first day of the present session, a sufficient number of men to complete the complements of thirteen sail of the twenty-three guardships then in commission, so as to render them in a condition to encounter an enemy; and yet the highest war establishment of this country is lower as to numbers than that of any other naval power in the universe. He conceived it to be the immediate duty of Parliament to take measures for putting these kingdoms in a proper state of naval defence, and not suffer the most useful of the ships, and the flower of your seamen, to be sent three thousand miles off, on a fruitless, romantick attempt to reduce the vast continent of America to unconditional submission; utterly lost to these dominions, (to borrow the words of a very emphatick orator [Mr. Solicitor-General] of the long robe,) "by the folly of a few, the madness of some, and the evil designs of many, who have gone headlong into these enterprises." Let us be the more careful of what yet remains of empire and of liberty, nor leave these islands in a defenceless state, while our confederate enemies of France and Spain actually command all the European seas with a fleet of fifty men-of-war. We should be told, perhaps, that it is highly improper thus publickly to expose the weakness of our Navy to those inimical Powers, of whom such strong apprehensions are now expressed. If there was a ray of hope consistent with common sense, that such specious falsehoods of Government could impose upon the clear-sighted statesmen on the other side of the Channel, or upon their Ministers or emissaries on this side, we might allow that we had in the noble Earl the best Commissioner of the Admiralty that ever presided at that board; I mean so long as the safety of the nation depends upon concealing or disguising the truth; for I verily believe him to be the only man of his rank and education in these realms—I am sure he is the only professed moralist—who, after reiterated detection in the grossest impositions and deep-laid fictions, can rally again, and return to the charge with so sanctimonious a composure, so dauntless an effrontery, that the rarity and perfection of the vice almost constitutes it a virtue.

Mr. Attorney-General called Mr. Luttrell to order, appealing to the Committee, whether such language, and so personal an attack, ought to be suffered?

Honourable Mr. Luttrell said, he would persevere in his privilege as a representative of the people, to set forth, in as strong colours as he pleased, the official faults or iniquities of any of the publick Ministers of this country, where he was ready to support his allegations by circumstantial proofs.

The Attorney-General insisted, that as there was no accusation formally before the House, Mr. Luttrell could not, consistently with the rules of the House, proceed any further.

Honourable Mr. Luttrell replied, that he would, at all hazards, proceed in acquitting himself of his duty. He knew (with great deference to that learned and respectable gentleman) he was within the law of Parliament, and the rights of every individual member of it; and that the plea of wanting a formal accusation was a chicane which should avail nothing; for if the Ministry would suffer him to carry a motion for the returns and state of the Navy on which to ground his charges, he assured the House he would do no less in consequence of those abuses and mal-practices which must on inquiry come out, than follow such a motion by an address to his Majesty, "that he would be graciously pleased, for the welfare of his people, to remove the Earl of Sandwich, not only from the office he now holds, but from the royal councils and presence forever." He then proceeded and observed, that to give the First Commissioner of the naval department the palm of specious falsehoods, while he had so many competitors in the Ministerial fraternity, was indeed no trifling compliment. He acknowledged he was run hard by those men who give out to the world, that they have offered conditions of peace, and a real redress of grievances to the people of America, which offers have been rejected by those men on the Treasury-bench, who advance, that the Congress have disavowed every purpose of conciliation short of independence. What conditions of peace, founded on a redress of real grievances, have been offered to the Congress, or any delegates in whom the Americans put a trust? Shall we again be insulted and nauseated with your ambiguous, hypocritical, and insidious placards and proclamations, tending only to allure and cajole a few dastard renegadoes from the cause of constitutional liberty to your tyrannical standards? We were told by a noble Lord the other night, "that he would never allow the legislative claims of this country to be a grievance." These were his very words; I took them down in writing at the instant he uttered them. One of the first Crown lawyers added, that nothing could satisfy Government short of unconditional submission. "The Americans have no terms to demand," said he, "from your justice, whatever they may hope from your grace and mercy." Sir, when the Heathen Emperor, Claudius Cæsar, held Caractacus and all his British warriours in chains at his chariot wheels, he talked not so proud a language to his captives, as these Christian Ministers, while they invoke the special interposition of the Almighty, hold forth to their own countrymen hitherto superiour to them in the lists. In short, strip off the mask and specious falsehoods from every department of the State, as it is now modeled, and the war is a war of taxation, a war of injustice, impiety, and endless bloodshed.

Mr. Wombwell warmly defended Lord Sandwich, and gave a long panegyrick upon his private virtues, publick talents, and industry; said he was the best Minister, and perhaps the worthiest man in this country; [here the House laughed heartily;] that he was not to be hurt by the shafts of that vehement member who spoke last. His Lordship ought to be revered and honoured by every honest man in this country for his services in the department where he presides; there never was his equal in office; he gloried in calling him his friend; nor was there a man so admired and approved of by foreigners.

Mr. Luttrell made a short reply, and ended by saying, he verily believed that foreigners approved much of our having at this conjuncture such a man in such an office, and that he might perhaps be worshipped by the savages of Otaheite. He meddled not with his worthiness in social life; but he thought no good subject of this country held him worthy of his publick trust.

Lord Mulgrave said, he was glad to find the honourable member intended to move for a serious parliamentary inquiry into the conduct of his noble friend at the head of the Admiralty Board; that whenever the truth came out, the honourable member, however prejudiced he was at this time, by vague, ill-founded, and empty conjectures, would, if he had any candour in his nature, become a convert to a better-founded and more just opinion: for that the British nation had never known a first Commissioner of the Admiralty equal to the present in capacity and meritorious services. He therefore wished the honourable member to move a fair, publick test of the noble Earl's conduct; and he, as the noble Earl's friend, would stand as forward as any gentleman in opposition could do to second it.

Lord North also got up in behalf of Lord Sandwich; said, his Majesty had in that noble Earl a very capable and zealous servant, who ought not to be thus attacked in his absence, from a collection of loose surmises, and low newspaper abuse; that, if the honourable member would inform himself of the real desert of the noble Earl, in his official character, he must retract his imputation, and admit that the most laborious and eminent publick services had been rendered this empire since he came to the naval administration; neither could any of his predecessors (upon the whole) boast equal pretensions to the applause of this country, and the respect of every unprejudiced individual.

Lord Palmerstone spoke in support of Lord Sandwich, and the present Board of Admiralty; but he said, that in commending the noble Earl's assiduity and talents, he would not be understood to detract in any degree from the praise due to Sir Edward Hawke (now Lord Hawke,) with whom he had likewise been in office. His Lordship acquitted himself with a propriety of temper, and in terms becoming the peculiar situation of having served his Majesty at the Admiralty Board, under three successive Administrations.

Mr. Buller stated the number of mariners in the British ports as sufficient for the defence of these dominions, and maintenance of our national honour upon the seas, against any combined powers whatever that might attempt hostilities.

[Mr. Luttrell rose to reply to the several advocates for the noble Earl; but some strong expressions falling from him, which seemed applied to Lord Mulgrave, the latter was entering upon too warm an altercation, when a cooler dialogue was recommended to both gentlemen by Sir Edward Astley and Sir Fletcher Norton, the latter of whom desired the Chairman to read the resolution, in order to preserve order, by keeping both the honourable gentlemen to the proper subject contained in the resolution.]

Mr. Luttrell told Lord Mulgrave, he was not apt to become a convert in principle or persuasion, after he had once formed his mind upon the best lights his understanding could furnish; that the two noble Lords on the opposite bench did him injustice, when they imputed his conduct and accusations to anonymous slander, or a vague unsubstantial testimony of any nature whatever; that when this boasted service of the noble Earl came to be inquired into, it would be found he had been entrusted annually with twice as much of the publick money as any one of his predecessors in office; therefore he ought certainly to have the fleet in a more formidable and respectable condition; but certain it was, that a great part of this treasure was not applied to the uses for which it was granted; there had been a multitude of errours and much corruption, which he was prepared to produce evidence of, whenever the House would give a candid hearing. He thanked Lord Mulgrave for offering to second his inquiry, but could never have expected such a favour from a member for Huntington.

Sir HUGH PALLISER closed the arguments in Committee, by saying, he hoped the House would take confidence in the present strength of our naval establishment at home, and sufficiency of ships and men.

The question being put, was agreed to. The House was resumed, and Mr. Speaker took the chair.

Honourable Mr. LUTTRELL then moved, as the first evidence necessary, on which to establish the truth of his charges, and even for the material information of Parliament, independent of the proposed address to the King, to displace the Earl of Sandwich; "That the proper officers do lay on the table the latest weekly accounts received at the Admiralty, prior to the opening of the present session of Parliament, from the Admiral, or Commander-in-Chief of all his Majesty's ships and vessels at the several departments of Portsmouth, Chatham, and Plymouth; together with the latest week's account received at the said Board, prior to the commencement of this session, of all ships and vessels of war employed on Channel service, or on the coast of Great Britain or Ireland." Mr. LUTTRELL said, that he would show by these accounts, that the information given to both Houses of Parliament and the publick, on the first day of this session, of the state of the Navy, when it was officially alleged, that we had twenty-three ships-of-the-line fit to take the seas, and many more in great forwardness, and that our fleet at home was then a full match for the combined squadrons of France and Spain, should they visit these coasts, was a dangerous, wicked, and willful imposition on Parliament, and the whole nation. We had not, he said, near seven thousand effective men in the twenty-three guard-ships put together, and, to complete their complements for war, near double that number would be requisite. Our frigates, sloops, and small craft, were most of them upon remote service; and those ships-of-the-line, put lately into commission, alleged by the American Secretary [Lord George Germaine] to be "in great forwardness," had not, one with another, a twentieth part of their war complement; neither were the returns of the impressed men in and about this metropolis, on the first night of issuing the warrants, above one third in number of what the runners of Government were ordered to spread abroad. At Portsmouth and its environs, the intention of impressing men was known to all the seafaring people twenty-four hours before the press-gangs were in motion; so we succeeded but ill in that quarter, and still worse on the western coasts. In short, if the people of England knew the real state of our marine power and resources, and the great superiority of our natural enemies in these seas, they would scarce suffer so many ships and men to be despatched to the furthest quarter of the globe, even on a more rational and profitable pursuit than the reduction of our American Colonies to despotism, before we had secured the seat of our empire from invasion and ruin. He was confident, after what had passed, after the impatience of the noble Earl's friends to bring him to a fair ordeal, he should be seconded in this motion by one of the Lords of the Admiralty, or the noble Lord [Lord Mulgrave] in his eye.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL argued strenuously against receiving the motion: and the friends of Administration were for throwing it out without further discussion.

Right Honourable T. TOWNSHEND, after showing that the motion was strictly parliamentary and of material import to the business then before the House, seconded it; and asked what opinion any unprejudiced person could entertain of those gentlemen who so strenuously encouraged the honourable gentleman in his inquiry, and now shrunk from the trial. This clandestine and unwarranted step of withholding the first official papers called for by the honourable member, would stamp a sentence on their friend and patron, not much to his honour or his advantage.

Mr. H. W. HARTLEY likewise supported Mr. Luttrell, and drew a mournful picture of this country in its present condition, and a very odious one of the Administration, and the systems on which they act.

Honourable Mr. LUTTRELL insisted, that the absolute management of the maritime power of the British empire was too arduous, too solid, too important a trust, to be committed to a bon vivant of Lord Sandwich's levity of disposition and known depravity of conduct, especially now the piping hours of jubilee and dalliance are at an end; and we ought to prepare for naval operations of the most substantial and critical import to the safety of these islands.

The question being put, the motion was negatived without a division.

---

CORRESPONDENCE, PROCEEDINGS, &c.

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, 1st December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Among the many important objects which employ your whole attention, I presume ways and means for defraying the expense of the present war, has a capital place; you will therefore give the following thoughts the weight which they deserve: In the first place, to emit more bills will be rather dangerous, for money, or whatever passes for such, when it exceeds the amount of the commerce of a State, must lose its value, and the present circumscribed state of the American commerce, is perhaps within the amount of your emissions already made. Your bills, therefore, must be borrowed of individuals by the publick at interest, or those already emitted paid off by taxes, and new emissions made. Some Colonies, I am sensible, may now be content with a tax, but it is most probably quite out of the power of some, and a measure rather impolitick in a majority of the Colonies or States durante bello. To effect any considerable loan in Europe is perhaps difficult; it has not been tried; and on the probability of succeeding in this, I will give my sentiments hereafter; this is obvious, that let the loan be made when it will, it must have a day fixed for payment, and respect to some fund appropriated to that purpose.

The relying on future taxes is holding up to the people a succession of distresses and burthens, which are not to cease even with the war itself. Whereas, could they have a prospect of paying the expenses of the war at the close of it, and enjoying the remainder of their fortunes clear of incumbrance, it must greatly encourage and animate both the publick and private in pushing it on with vigour. Loan of six or eight millions, or a debt of that amount, will probably enable you to finish the war. This I am confident may be negotiated on terms which I will propose hereafter; but previously let it be attended to, that the present contest has engaged the attention of all Europe; more, it will eventually interest all Europe in favour of the United States—the Russians in the north and Portugal in the south excepted. I make no consideration of the little mercenary Electorates in my calculation. The mercantile part of the other Powers are convinced where their interest appears so evidently engaged. The political part are sensible of the importance of enlarging their own naval concerns and force, and checking that of Great Britain.

The good and wise part, the lovers of liberty and human happiness, look forward to the establishment of American freedom and independence as an event which will secure to them and their descendants an asylum from the effects and violence of despotick power, daily gaining ground in every part of Europe. From these, and other considerations, on which I need not be minute, emigrations from Europe will be prodigious immediately on the establishment of American independency. The consequence of this must be the rise of the lands already settled, and a demand for new or uncultivated; on this demand I conceive a certain fund may now be fixed. You may smile, and recollect the sale of the bearskin in the fable, but at the same time must be sensible that your wants are real; and if others can be induced to relieve them, it is indifferent to you whether they have a consideration in hand or in prospect.

I trace the river Ohio from its junction to its head; thence north to Lake Erie, on the south and west of that lake to Fort Detroit, which is in the latitude of Boston; thence a west course to the Mississippi, and return to the place of my departure. These three lines, of near one thousand miles each, include an immense territory, in a fine climate, well watered, and by accounts exceeding fertile; it is not inhabited by any Europeans of consequence, and the tribes of Indians are inconsiderable, and will decrease faster than the lands can possibly be called for, for cultivation. To this I ask your attention, as a resource amply adequate, under proper regulations, for defraying the whole expense of the war, and the sums necessary to be given the Indians in purchase of the native right. But to give this land value, inhabitants are necessary. I therefore propose, in the first place, that a grant be made of a tract of land at the mouth of the Ohio, between that and the Mississippi, equal to two hundred miles square, to a company formed indiscriminately of Europeans and Americans, which company should form a distinct State, confederated with and under the general regulations of the United States General of America. That the Congress of the United States shall out of such grant reserve the defraying or discharging the publick debts or expenses, one-fifth part of all the lands, mines, &c., within said tract, to be disposed of by the Congress in such manner as good policy and the publick exigencies may dictate; the said one-fifth to be sequestered out of every grant or settlement made by the company, of equal goodness with the rest of such grant or settlement; the company on their part shall engage to have in seven years after the passing such grant thousand families settled on said grant, and civil government regulated and supported on the most free and liberal principles, taking therein the advice of the honourable Congress of the United States of North-America. They shall also, from and after their having one thousand families as above said, contribute their proportion of the publick expenses of the continent, or United States, according to the number of their inhabitants, and shall be entitled to a voice in Congress as soon as they are called on thus to contribute. The company shall at all times have the preference of purchasing the Continental or common interest thus reserved, when it shall be offered to sale. The company shall consist, on giving the patent or grant, of at least one hundred persons.

These are the outlines of a proposed grant, which you see contains more than twenty-five millions acres of land, the one-fifth of which, if a settlement is carried on vigorously, will soon be of most prodigious value. At this time a company might be formed in France, Germany, &c., who would form a stock of one hundred thousand pounds sterling, to defray the expense of this settlement. By such a step you in the first place extend the circle of your connection and influence, you increase the number of your inhabitants, proportionably lessen the common expense, and have in the reserve a fund for publick exigencies. Further, as this company would be in a great degree commercial, the establishing commerce at the junction of these large rivers would immediately give a value to all the lands situated on or near them, within the above extensive description; and further grants might admit of larger reserves, amply sufficient for defraying the expenses of the war, and possibly for establishing funds for other important purposes.

It may be objected, this is not a favourable time for such a measure. I reply, it is the most favourable that can happen. You want money, and by holding up thus early to view a certain fund, on which to raise it, even the most certain in the world, that of land security, you may obtain the loan and engage the moneyed interest of Europe in your favour. I have spoke with many persons of good sense on this subject, which makes me the more sanguine.

As to a loan, I will now dismiss this scheme, to speak of that; only adding, or rather repeating, what I have in a former letter wrote, that a large and generous allowance ought immediately be made for the officers and soldiers serving in the present war, in which regard should be had to the wounded, the widow, or children, of those who fall, and to the term or number of campaigns each one serves. This will make the Army consist literally of a set of men fighting for freehold; and it will be a great encouragement to foreigners, with whom five hundred or a thousand acres of land has a great sound.

It has been a question with me at times, whether, if our commerce were open and protected, the Colonies would be wise in negotiating a loan. But on considering that before this war the importation of the Colonies just about balanced their exportations, I cannot think it possible with the most rigid economy, supposing exports as large as formerly, to make a lessening of consumption equal to the amount of the expenses of the war, and that consequently a debt must be contracted by the publick somewhere.

The question which naturally rises on this is, whether it be most prudent to contract this debt at home or abroad? To me it admits of no doubt, that the latter is to be preferred on every account. If you can establish a credit and pay your interest punctually, the rate of interest will be less by two or three per cent. in Europe than in America. You will thereby engage foreigners by the surest tie, that of their immediate interest, to support your cause, with many other obvious reasons for preferring the latter mode.

But the next question is, where can you borrow and what security can you offer? Holland is at present the centre of money and credit for Europe, and every nation is more or less indebted to them, collectively, to such an amount that could the nations in Europe at once pay the whole of their debts to this Republick of Mammon, it would as effectually ruin it as the breaking in of the sea through their dykes. Would you know the credit and situation of the affairs of the different kingdoms, consult the books of the Dutch banks. This kingdom has been in bad credit from the villainy of a late Comptroller-General, as it is said, one Abbé Terrai, against whose administration the severest things have been said and wrote. He was succeeded by the much esteemed Mons. Turgot, and stocks rose and a commission given a banker (a correspondent of mine in Amsterdam) to negotiate a loan; but the dismission of Mons. Turgot, and the indifferent opinion moneyed men at least had of his successor, Mons. Clugny, prevented the loan and fell the stocks. Mons. Clugny died last week, and is succeeded ostensibly by one Mons. Tabouron; I say ostensibly, for one Mr. Necker, a noted Protestant banker, is joined with him as Intendant of the Treasury. This raised stocks immediately; and I am told they have already risen ten per cent. This is the most politick appointment that could have been made; and it deserves our notice, that where a man has it in his power to be of publick service, his principles of religion are not a sufficient obstacle to hinder his promotion even in France. This will probably enable this kingdom to borrow money, which, from all appearances, will soon be wanted.

Spain, from the punctuality of its payments of interest and its well-known treasures, is in high credit in Holland. Denmark borrows at four per cent.; Sweden at the same; the Emperor of Germany, from the security of his hereditary dominions, and the Empress of Russia, from her having lately paid part of the large sum she borrowed in the Turkish wars, are both of them in good credit. The credit of Great Britain, though it has not fell, yet it is in a ticklish situation, with these foreseeing people; who, on receiving the news of the action on Long-Island, which raised stocks a trifle in England, began immediately to sell out. Not a Power in Europe, the King of Prussia excepted, can go to war without borrowing money of Holland to a greater or less amount; and whilst so many borrowers are in its neighbourhood, whose estates, as I may say, are settled and known, it is not to be expected Holland will be fond of lending money to the United States of North-America, though we should offer an higher interest.

To offer a large interest might be tempting, but it would be very ruinous to us; and I conceive it will never be thought prudent to permit higher than five per cent. interest in the States of North-America, and this is but one per cent. more than is given in Europe. This view leads me again to reflect, as I constantly do, with the utmost grief on the unaccountable delay of proper authority announcing the independency of the United States of North-America, and proposing terms of alliance and friendship with France and Spain. This, I am as confident as I can be of any thing not already effected, would at once remove this and many other difficulties; would put our affairs on the most established and respectable footing, and oblige Great Britain herself to acknowledge our independency and court our friendship, or hazard the chance of ceasing to be a nation. On such powers being received and presented, these kingdoms, I have no doubt, would become our guaranty for the money we want, and the produce of our country will be wanted for the interest, and even the principal, fast as we can transport it hither. But as no such powers and instructions are received, it is possible you mean not to send any.

I will mention a few thoughts on another plan. You are not in want of money, but the effects of money, in the manufactures of Europe. Of these the Colonies, or United States, must now have a demand for some millions sterling. These manufactures are to be had principally in France and Holland. As to the latter, they have not at present, and are resolved never to have, any peculiar connection with, or friendship for, any Power further than their commerce is served by it; but that is not the ruling passion of the former, but the desire of humbling their old rival and hereditary enemy, and aggrandizing their monarchy, are predominant; and never was there a more favourable opportunity than the present. So favourable is it, that were the funds of this kingdom in a little better situation, and were they confident the United States of America would abide by their independency, not a moment's time would be lost in declaring, even though you had made no application direct, whatever part this kingdom takes will be pursued by the Court of Madrid. Would this Court give a credit even to private merchants, it would answer the same purpose as a loan, as for instance, the United States want about three million value of manufactures annually (it has heretofore been rising of that) from Europe; if this Court will give a credit to that amount to any body of men in the kingdom, that company may engage to pay the Court the same amount in Continental bills within a limited time, this company may send to America supplies to that amount, as the Congress shall order such goods as are wanted, either for Army or Navy. The Congress will instantly deposit their bills for the amount, the residue may be sold at a stated advance for Continental bills, the whole of the amount immediately put on interest to this Court; this will be the calling in of such an amount of the bills, and of course give the greater currency to the whole; mean time this Court must become interested to have the commerce free, by which alone remittances can be made. This is but a sudden thought, recommended to you for digesting, if deemed worthy of pursuing. That something this way may be effected, I can have no doubt, while I have this most unequivocal evidence: I am now credited to the amount of all the supplies for thirty thousand men, a train of artillery amounting to more than two hundred pieces of brass cannon, ammunition, &c., &c., which must be of near half a million sterling, not ostensibly by the Court, but by a private company; at the same time other companies, as well as individuals, after offering any loan or credit I should ask, always brought in sooner or later the condition of having my bills endorsed by some banker or person of credit, where you are sensible, in my situation, the affair ended, though in several instances I had the most flattering encouragement, and expected most assuredly no security would be required: but that this particular house should be able and willing to advance this prodigious sum at once, and without security, is no way surprising, but perfectly consistent with what I have all along asserted.

The most effectual card now played by the British Ambassador is, asserting that an accommodation will soon take place, and by some means or other conjecturing my want of powers by my not publickly appearing at Court. He is bold in this assertion, and I find it the greatest difficulty I have to encounter. But I will not enter on a subject which has well-nigh distracted me, and embarrassed and disheartened, in a greater or less degree, every friend of America. The late conduct of the Court of Spain respecting Captain Lee, whose case I mentioned before, is a striking proof of what I have so positively asserted of the good disposition of both these Courts. They dismissed the complaint against him, afforded him protection, with assurances of every assistance he might need, declaring publickly that their ports were equally free for Americans as for Britons. I have besides these overt acts, still more convincing proofs that the moment your application is made, every thing will be set in proper motion.

I now dismiss a subject which has given, and still continues to give me as much anxiety as I can struggle with, and mention another a little new, but indeed somewhat connected with it: it is the equipping of a number of American ships of war in the ports of France. Considering the price of duck, cordage, ordnance, and other military stores in America, they may be built much cheaper here. This is not the sole advantage. They may carry over stores of every kind in safety, as being French bottoms, ostensibly at least. All the brave and ingenious in the marine department in this kingdom would become adventurers in person or in purse and influence in such a scheme; and I speak on good grounds when I say, in three months after receiving your orders, I can have ten ships of at least thirty-six guns each, at your service, independent of assistance immediately from Government, so much attention is paid to the American cause by all persons of consequence in this kingdom.

The honourable Congress must, I conceive, either continue emitting bills or borrow money; and I submit it whether it be not preferable to borrow of foreign States than of individuals, in the present situation of American affairs. If of foreigners, I am convinced you may borrow five or six millions of Holland, on France becoming your security. This I am confident may be obtained on application to this Court and Spain; and that on these principles, they can by no means be willing to permit the Colonies to return to their former subjection to Great Britain, armed as both countries are. Their possessions in America must lie at the mercy of Great Britain on such an event as a reconciliation with the Colonies. The Colonies being in want of the manufactures of Europe, of this kingdom in particular, this sum would, a principal part of it, rest in France, and give a great spring to their manufactures, and give them the advantage of the first lead in American commerce. These are important objects, and I have no doubt would be considered of consequence sufficient for them to risk such a credit. Rich individuals offer to supply any quantity of goods or stores on such security, and I believe the latter would do considerable, were they only assured of five per cent. interest on their debts after due.

But I submit the whole to the mature consideration of the honourable Congress; and am, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

GEORGE COOK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 1st, 1776.

HONOURED GENTLEMEN: We got safe to Baltimore on Friday morning, and since have not been able to do any thing for want of a wharf for the ship to clean at. I expect to get one that Mr. Lux has two brigs at, Monday morning, and shall use my utmost endeavours in getting the ship ready for sea as soon as possible. As soon as the tender is fit to be sent to Potomack, I shall send her off, with instructions to call at Annapolis, and take Mr. Middleton with them, to endeavour to find our anchor. I shall acquaint you from time to time how we go on.

I have the honour to be, honoured gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE COOK.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

P. S. Enclosed I send you two advertisements of the sale of the snow Georgia. I should be glad to be informed what we are to do for mops for the ship's company, which are much wanting, or whether I may not contract for such articles as are wanting, if I have it in my power.

---

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 1st, 1776.

SIRS: The bearer, Mrs. Trepolet, is uneasy about her houses taken by Captains Ewin, Smith, and Ramsey, last winter for barracks. I have troubled you on the same account once before. I was called on by the Court to value the houses when they were taken, and I believe for that reason the widow insists I will do something for her. This was all settled; she was paid, but since the houses was much abused, and she thinks will be recovered. They are better for barracks than any in town, and I believe the abuses had best be repaired. They are very careless, and she thinks they will burn her and all she has by their neglect. I think she has catched them with large fires against the walls on the outside. But what she says I think may be depended on, and must leave you and her to settle it. Please excuse for this freedom; it is for a widow.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 1st, 1776.

SIRS: I have provided for you near two hundred barrels of beef, which the butchers have, and are delivering every day. The bearer, Mr. Crafford, has a parcel of beef, barreled and to barrel, which he thinks very good, and wants to sell. The quantity he has is so great that I did not choose to purchase it without your consent. If you think so much beef will be wanted please write, and it shall be purchased. There is no pork yet come to hand, but I think there will be a great number of hogs in this winter, for the people's expectations are up. If Mr. Crafford's beef would do for Captain Cook, some of Captain Cook's agents ought to examine it and be satisfied as to the quality.

Captain Gibbens has sailed as low as the boom. Captain Martin will be loaded this week, and shall do every thing in my power to get them away; but it is hard to be done. There is a schooner here owned by Messrs. Morris and Turnbull. She is quite new, and seems a good vessel. Her fore timbers are all mulberry. She has all her sails but a flying jib, new and in good order; good anchors and cables. I think her a good vessel and fit for sea; but the price is high. Fourteen hundred pounds is the price, he told me to write. She, I think, will carry near five hundred barrels. Please let me know what you would have done in this. The Captain is waiting for your directions to Captain Cook about the mate. I have a deal of trouble, and fear you blame me for delaying the vessel, but I can load twenty vessels rather than man and sail two. The money paid to Captains and sailors is wonderful, and no way to shun it. Shall send you your nails as soon as I can, but there is no such thing as I know of.

From your friend and humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

The Council of Safety.

---

THOMAS SMYTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Chester-Town, December 1st, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This will be delivered you by Robert Read, a blacksmith of this town, who waits on the Council to sell them seventeen muskets which he has made, and carries with him. They seem to be strong and substantial. He proposes contracting with your Board for a good many. He bears the character of an honest man; has some real property in this town, and, I believe, would be pretty punctual.

I wrote the Council a few days ago that no salt had reached me for curing the beef and pork they had given me orders to purchase. I could have purchased by this time the one hundred barrels of beef and as many of pork, had the salt been ready; but for want thereof could not pretend to buy a single beef, and most of it is now sold.

There is a good deal of very fine pork to sell, which the farmers hold very high, up to forty-five shillings per hundred weight, and some people, I am told, have offered that price. Little or none has yet been sold, and I apprehend it may be bought at forty shillings per hundred weight. If you propose to limit me in price or quantity, please to write me particularly by the bearer of this letter. The salt ought to be here now, as most people will sell their pork in the course of two weeks; and when the salt arrives I shall do the best I can. The people of the neighbourhood of this town, both in this County and Queen Anne's, are greatly distressed for the want of salt. The Council would relieve their distresses much if they could send some for their use at the time they send that intended for the Province use, and I would engage to distribute the salt and remit the Council the money for it.

The row galley that is building at my yard is nearly ready to launch. The cables and anchors are wanting to secure her when in the water; the guns are wanting to enable the carpenters to make the carriages, and the pig iron for ballast. The Council will please to direct me what name to call her.

Mr. Thomas Coursey, who stands of the list of appointments, would accept of the appointment of her. I am told he is very capable, and was all last war engaged in the sea service, and had the command of a privateer; or he would accept of the command of one of the Province merchant vessels. Mr. Coursey is well known to several gentlemen of your Board.

The Council will please excuse the liberty I have taken in mentioning Mr. Coursey; and am, with much respect, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

THO'S SMYTH.

The honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

---

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, December 1st, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 30th November was duly received; in consequence of which, as the contents were of the utmost importance, I thought proper to call the Congress together; whose resolutions of this day I now do myself the honour to enclose.

Considering the very critical situation of our affairs, the Congress have agreed that you may order into the Jerseys the troops who are at present on the east side of Hudson's river, if it should be your opinion the publick service will receive any benefit from such a movement.

You will please to direct that the clothing, as fast as it arrives at Head-Quarters, or at any of the camps, should be given to those soldiers who stand most in need of them.

The Secret Committee will order one or two persons to set out immediately to the Eastern States, to see that the clothing and stores which have been purchased in that quarter be sent to the Army with all possible despatch.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the most perfect esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO DOCTOR MORGAN.

Philadelphia, December 1st, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed resolve of Congress, relative to your duty and the department in which you are to exercise it, I have it in charge from Congress to transmit to you as the rule of your conduct.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

Doctor Morgan.

[Same to Doctor Shippen.]

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Brunswick, December 1st, 1776.

SIR: I yesterday had the honour of writing, and to advise of our arrival here. I am now to inform you that the enemy are still advancing, and that their vanguard had proceeded as far as Bonum, a small town about four miles this side of Woodbridge, according to my last intelligence. As to their number, reports are various; some say they were joined yesterday by a considerable reinforcement from Staten-Island. How far this fact may be true, I cannot determine; but from every information before, they were between six and seven thousand strong. I have for some time past supposed Philadelphia to be the object of their movements, and have every reason to believe my opinion well founded, the advices of sundry persons who have had an opportunity of mixing and conversing with them on the march agreeing that such is the report.

I have wrote to Governour Livingston upon the subject, requesting his utmost exertions to forward on every succour in his power. The same, I trust, will be attended to in Pennsylvania. Without a sufficient number of men and arms, their progress cannot be checked. At present our force is totally inadequate to any attempt.

Several officers belonging to the enemy, who were prisoners, have obtained permission to return. I have not yet sent in the names of those belonging to us, that are to be exchanged for 'em. By a Virginia paper, I perceive that Captain Morgan and Lieutenant Heath, who were taken prisoners at Quebeck, and now on parole, are promoted in the late arrangement of officers in that State, the former to a regiment, the latter to a majority. It would be well if they were released; but being Virginians, and not knowing that any gentlemen who were taken at the same time are so circumstanced, I have declined claiming their return without the opinion of Congress, lest I should incur the charge of partiality.

I have sent forward Colonel Humpton to collect proper boats and craft at the ferry for transporting our troops, and it will be of infinite importance to have every other craft besides what he takes for the above purpose secured on the west side of Delaware, otherwise they may fall into the enemy's hands and facilitate their views.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

P. S. Half after one o'clock, P. M.—The enemy are fast advancing. Some of 'em are now in sight. All the men of the Jersey Flying-Camp, under General Howe, being applied to, have refused to continue longer in service.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON.

Brunswick, December 1, 1776.

Dear Sir: I wrote to you yesterday; but as from every information of the motions of the enemy, their intent seems plainly directed through this State, and then on to Philadelphia, I cannot help calling on you, in the most urgent manner, and begging you to fall upon proper means to draw forth the strength of your Province to my support.

The enemy's advanced parties were last night at Bonum town, four miles on this side of Woodbridge. They are impressing wagons and horses, and collecting cattle and sheep, which is a further proof of their intent to march a considerable distance. Unless my force is speedily augmented, it will be impossible for me to make any stand at this place, when the enemy advance, as I have not, including General Williamson's Militia, (say one thousand,) more than four thousand men. The Militia from the Counties of Morris and Sussex turn out slowly and reluctantly; whether owing to the want of officers of spirit to encourage them, or your summons not being regularly sent to them, I cannot say; but I have reason to believe there has been a deficiency in both cases. Designing men have been purposely sent among them, to influence some and intimidate others; and except gentlemen of spirit and character will appear among them, and rouse them, little can be expected. I wrote to General Williamson last night, and pressed him to exert himself; but I have reason to believe he has not the confidence of the people as much as could be wished. My accounts of the reinforcements to be expected from Pennsylvania are very encouraging; but, from the distance and necessary delays attending a sudden march, I cannot look for them under a week or ten days, in which time the enemy will have reached the Delaware, at least, if not opposed by more than my present numbers. General Lee is on his march down to join me; but if the enemy should throw in a body of men between us, he will be obliged to make a considerable circuit to avoid them. The boats and craft all along the Delaware side should be secured, particularly the Durham boats used for the transportation of produce down the river. Parties should be sent to all the landings, to have them removed to the other side, hauled up and put under proper guards. One such boat would transport a regiment of men.

I have, &c., Go. Washington.

To Governour Livingston, New-Jersey.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Brunswick, December 1st, 1776.

Dear Sir: The enemy are advancing, and have got as far as Woodbridge and Amboy, and from information not to be doubted, mean to push to Philadelphia. The force I have with me is infinitely inferiour in number, and such as cannot give or promise the least successful opposition. It is greatly reduced by the departure of the Maryland Flying-Camp men, and sundry other causes. I must entreat you to hasten your march as much as possible, or your arrival may be too late to answer any valuable purpose. Your route, and the place to join me, I cannot particularize; in these instances you must be governed by circumstances, and the intelligence you receive. Let the former be secure. I hope to meet a considerable reinforcement of Pennsylvania Associators; it is said they seem spirited upon this occasion.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c., Go. Washington.

To Major-General Lee.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HOWE.

Brunswick, December 1st, 1776.

Sir: I am to acknowledge the honour of your favour of the 11th ultimo, and to thank you for your polite return of my letter to Mrs. Washington.

Agreeing to the proposition you were pleased to make for the exchange of such prisoners as can be conveniently collected, the gentlemen whose names are specified in the enclosed list, have permission to proceed immediately to New-York. Others, as soon as they arrive, will be allowed the same indulgence. At a proper season I shall require a return of the like number, and of equal rank.

Having directions from Congress to propose an exchange of Governour Franklin for Brigadier-General Thompson, I would take the liberty to submit the matter to your determination, and to request your answer upon the subject.

Besides the persons included in the enclosed list, Captain Hesketh, of the Seventh Regiment, his lady, three children, and two servant maids, were permitted to go in a few days ago.

I am, sir, with due respect, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

December 1st, 1776, half after 7, p. m.

Sir: In a little time after I wrote you this evening, the enemy appeared in several parties on the heights opposite Brunswick, and were advancing in a large body towards the crossing place. We had a smart cannonade whilst we were parading our men, but without any or but little loss on either side. It being impossible to oppose them with our present force with the least prospect of success, we shall retreat to the west side of Delaware, and have advanced about eight miles, where it is hoped we shall meet a reinforcement sufficient to check their progress. I have sent Colonel Humpton forward to collect the necessary boats for our transportation, and conceive it proper, that the Militia from Pennsylvania should be ordered towards Trenton, that they may be ready to join us and act as occasion may require.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To the Hon. John Hancock, President of Congress.

P. S. I wish my letters of yesterday may arrive safe, being informed that the return express, who had 'em, was idling his time and showing 'em on the road.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, DATED NEW-YORK, DECEMBER 1, 1776.

General Howe is returned hither from the Army, and General Clinton is sailed from hence with six thousand men, some say to Rhode-Island. Our successes lately are very great. It is not alone what we have obtained, but the great good it will do the King's service, by heartening up those who were rather lukewarm in his interest. We have had such numbers flock in here, that but for the great precaution of our General we might have had a famine; but, considering every thing, provisions are very reasonable.

I should not wonder if the King's troops were put in possession of Philadelphia without striking a blow. A number of people are there of great worth, who, though they might contribute towards the continuation of the war at a distance, will, I believe, be the first to give up that city should an enemy appear before it; and this opinion is generally believed by the most intelligent here.

---

London, January 14, 1777.

Yesterday an officer arrived from Quebeck, which place he left on the 1st of December. He left the troops in cantonments. An officer of the King's who had been a prisoner, was lately brought through the post of Ticonderoga, and reports that the Rebels were at work upon their fleet for next season, and says, that they had laid the keels of twenty-six boats, large and small. The General has, on our part, laid the keels of six, one of which is to be a twenty-gun ship. Little is to be apprehended from these preparations of the Rebels, who are in want of artillery, and all manner of articles for equipping a fleet, and have applied to Philadelphia for shipwrights without success, that city having no assistance to spare, from the consideration of its own defence. The Army in general are very sickly, and particularly the Brunswickers. Out of twelve thousand, which was the complement, there are not above seven thousand effective. The following is the winter quarters of the Army: General Hospital of the Royal Artillery is at Montreal; General Fraser's corps of Grenadiers and Light Infantry of the British troops, and the Twenty-Fourth Regiment, upon the south side of the river St. Lawrence, at Le Prarie, Longueil Boucher, Ville Varren, and Isle Therese, Ver Cheris, Bouchard, Contre Creur, and Grand St. Curs. Fifty-Third Regiment at Chamblee. Thirty-First at Baleuil, St. Charles, St. Dennis, St Anthony, St. Curs, and Sorrel. Ninth and Forty-Seventh at Isle Jesus, River de Prarie, St. Luce Recollect, St. Genevieve, and St. Lawrant. Twenty-First at St. John's. Sixty-Second at Point Levi, &c., opposite to Quebeck. Twentieth at the Isle aux Noix, and Thirty-Fourth at Quebeck. The Brunswickers and Hanau troops quartered in the river St. Lawrence, from Berthier to Three Rivers, and forty miles below Three Rivers, in the road to Quebeck; Maclean's Royal Highland Emigrants, at Chinage Bonne and river Du China; Sir Jo. Johnston's Regiment, called the Royal New-Yorkers, at Lachine, La Point Clare, and St. Ann; the Eighth Regiment in the back posts of Canada.

There is one very principal fact respecting this unhappy American war, which ought not to escape the publick attention. It is the difference between the number of troops paid for, and the number in actual service. The American establishment is, at this time, fifty-four thousand men. General Howe's last returns are under twenty-two thousand; and General Carleton's under seven thousand; but not to quibble about half a dozen men, suppose them together to be thirty thousand; it is then a certain fact, that this country is paying for four-and-twenty thousand men more than are in the service. The specie is sent from England for the payment of these troops. Paper payments in England have increased amazingly; and the foreign exchange is rising against us. These are circumstances so very important and interesting, that they would in any other time have awakened the nation, and compelled the Court to abandon a system of government so very injurious to the publick welfare. But supposing America should be conquered, it has been rationally asked, What is the advantage gained? She cannot repay the enormous sum expended. But supposing America should not be conquered, what is the loss? Not only the trade, but the islands, and the strength of that country turned against us. The small progress made by so large an army and fleet in a whole campaign, and the non-effect of the Commissioners' last proclamation, show that the latter alternative is but too probable.

An able calculator affirms, that the expense of this war to Great Britain, from the time of the battle of Lexington to the end of the campaign of 1776, has not been less than thirty millions; and the loss of troops, British and foreigners, by slain, sickness, desertion, &c., has not been less during the same period than twenty thousand men. The West-India planters and merchants alone, estimate their losses in the year 1776, by the capture of their ships, at £1,800,000. The other trading vessels, with the ordnance store-ships, transports, &c., cannot be put at less than £500,000; and the sailors or hands on board the several ships, not less than three thousand.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL TYLER.

Peekskill, December 1st, 1776.

Dear Sir: I have received your favour of the 29th ultimo, and thank you for the vigilance which you have discovered in securing the stores, &c., at Tapan. I should have ordered you to have returned to your former post before this time, but have waited for the moving of part of the Army on this side, whom I have been for several days expecting would cross over the river. They will most probably pass this day or to-morrow, after which you will join Colonel Huntington with your regiment, except two companies, which you are to detach, upon the receipt hereof, to Colonel Hay's, to protect such stores and provisions as are there until further orders. General Scott is now at Colonel Hay's with his brigade, but the time of their engagement expired yesterday, and I fear that not many of them will stay longer.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

W. Heath.

Colonel Tyler.

---

COLONEL SCAMMELL TO GENERAL HEATH.

General Lee desires me to inform you, that the State of New-Jersey is destitute of lead, and that it would be for the good of the service to forward a quantity on, if there is any to spare at Peekskill.

With the greatest respect, your most obedient,

A. Scammell, D. A. G.

Major-General Heath.

---

NICHOLAS QUACKENBUSH TO JUDGE DUER.

Peekskill, December 1, 1776.

Sir: Major Hughes has desired me to send to you for three hundred bushels of oats, which are exceedingly wanted at his post.

Two divisions of the Army are now coming here, and Mr. Pemart assures me that there is not a sufficiency of hay to last two days; and as for grain, there is not more than three hundred bushels of corn in all the stores. You must be sensible of the difficulties that will ensue from the scarcity of forage at this time. Teams must stop, every thing remain in a confused state, and all owing to the want of hay and grain. I beg, therefore, (in behalf of Mr. Hughes,) that you would please to order large quantities of both to be forwarded immediately to this place.

I am, with due respect, sir, your very humble servant,

Nicholas Quackenbush.

To Honourable Judge Duer.

---

ISAAC NICOLL TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Peekskill, December 1st, 1776.

Sir: I have just learned from good authority that there is a considerable quantity of goods and household furniture in stores near Orange-Town, belonging to Colonel William Bayard, and sundry other disaffected persons, who are now actually with the enemy. There is to a considerable amount in and about the camp, of goods—two horses, one yoke of oxen, and cart, belonging to Joshua Barnes—which goods was taken going to the enemy. If I could have proper authority I could have them secured for the good of the State.

From your sincere friend and humble servant,

Isaac Nicoll.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., at Fishkill.

---

TIMOTHY DANIELSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Peekskill, December 1st, 1776.

Sir: By order of the late Massachusetts-Bay, we have appointed William Shepard, James Wilson, John Bailey, Thomas Nixon, Rufus Putnam, and Michael Jackson, Esq., to the command of battalions, and John Brooks, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel in Colonel Jackson's battalion, who is absent by reason of a wound, and have commissioned them accordingly.

By order of the Committee of the State of Massachusetts-Bay, to appoint officers.

Timothy Danielson.

His Excellency George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army.

---

JOHN BARD TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Hyde-Park, December 1, 1776.

Sir: As teams appear at present much wanted at the Fishkills, I have taken the liberty to offer mine for the publick service for a week, which I beg may be at my private expense. By the same opportunity I have sent a small present of cider and fruit, which I beg the Convention will accept as a pepper-corn acknowledgment of my respect.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

John Bard.

To Colonel Pierre Cortlandt, Vice President of the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN ELMENDORF.

December 1st, 1776.

Sir: The necessity of obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river near Pollepel's Island, having been resolved upon as an object of the utmost moment to the safety of this State, the enclosed resolutions have been adopted. The advanced season requires that the preparations should be made with the utmost vigour; and from an opinion which the Committee of Safety entertain of your activity and your zeal for the common cause in which we are engaged, they have unanimously appointed you to the trust mentioned in the said resolutions. They entertain no doubt but that you will execute it with fidelity, despatch, and cheerfulness.

I am, sir, your very humble servant. By order of the Committee of Safety.

Captain John Elmendorf,
Mr. Jeremiah Clarke.

---

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Albany, 1st December, 1776.

Dear General: Enclosed is a publick letter I received yesterday evening. As it contained nothing that required immediate despatch, I deferred sending an express until this morning. General Arnold sends you his opinion of the subject of a boom, with a draft. I think I remember to have been told that the boom which is placed to defend the dock-yard at Portsmouth is a very heavy chain, which lays at the bottom of the water; at each end thereof is fastened a strong cable, which is fixed to a capstan; whenever it is necessary to raise the boom, the capstans are manned, and the chain hove as near the surface of the water as is thought necessary. This boom is placed under the cover of two strong batteries of cannon, and would also be protected by ships-of-war moored across the channel.

There is a report here that the King of England is dead.

I am, &c., Horatio Gates.

To the Honourable Major-General Schuyler.

---

COLONEL WAYNE TO GENERAL GATES.

Ticonderoga, 1 December, 1776.

My dear General: I anxiously waited for your directions for my line of conduct as commander of this post until the 27th ultimo, when I was favoured with instructions from General Schuyler, viz: That sentries were necessary in an Army; that cleanliness was conducive to health; that chimneys ought to be swept; to send advice if soap and candles were wanting, &c. Indeed, the chief purport of them were to let me know that I had no power to do any one act, however necessary, without first obtaining permission in writing from Head-Quarters at Saratoga or Albany. Notwithstanding, I shall endeavour to recollect the heads of such matters as you recommended to me viva voce, and to render this place as tenable as possible during the time I remain on the ground.

I must take the liberty to remind you that the term for which the Pennsylvanians are engaged expires the 5th of next month; no time is therefore to be lost in relieving them. We shall be hard set to get the sick away; our hospital, or rather house of carnage, beggars all description, and shocks humanity to visit. The cause is obvious: no medicine or regimen on the ground suitable for the sick; no beds or straw to lay on; no covering to keep them warm, other than their own thin wretched clothing. We can't send them to Fort George as usual, the hospital being removed from thence to Albany, and the weather is so intensely cold that before they would reach there they would perish. It lays much in your power, by a proper representation to Congress, to have these defects supplied, and many other abuses redressed that tend to render the service almost intolerable to men and officers. But as you are a much better judge of those matters than me, I shall say no more on the subject.

Enclosed is the return of this garrison for this day, together with some of the references omitted in the unfinished plan of Mount Independence and Ticonderoga.

I have advice that Colonel McGaw and Colonel De Haas (two very good officers) are likely to be promoted over me. (Their being younger in rank than myself is a circumstance which, perhaps, you were not acquainted with.) If Congress see cause they undoubtedly have a right to do it; and for my own part, I shall with the utmost composure retire to my Sabian field, where love, where peace, and all that man can wish fondly, waits my return. I never will submit to be commanded by the man whom I commanded yesterday. I may be wrong, but I have custom and prejudice in my favour, and a pride common to a soldier, that will not be easily eradicated—Inter nos.

Whilst I am writing, an express brings advice of Fort Washington being in the hands of the enemy, and the whole garrison, consisting of two thousand men, killed or prisoners. My heart bleeds for poor Washington. Had he but Southern troops he would not be necessitated so often to fly before an enemy, whom, I fear, has lately had but too much reason to hold us cheap.

I wish to God that it was possible to lead the fifteen hundred hardy veterans you left with me to your assistance, but for one day; I would risk my life that they would sell their lives or liberties at too dear a rate for Britons to make many purchases. But as that is out of my power I can only wish you success, and assure you that the post you left to my charge shall be maintained; and that I shall always be ready to serve you with the best service of, dear sir, yours most sincerely, Ant'y Wayne.

Major-General Gates.

☞ As I was beginning to seal this, Captain Church, whom I had sent down the lake to gain intelligence of the situation of the enemy, returned and informed me that about four miles below Crown-Point he discovered a large topsail vessel coming up the lake. He made all the sail he could with his boat, and by the help of his oars got clear of her. She came to anchor at Crown-Point. I sent off two parties immediately by land to make further discoveries. They have not yet returned. Whether this is only a single vessel come on some scheme, or the advanced guard of the enemy, I can't determine. I think it is quite too late for an attack; however, I am preparing for the worst, and will, at all events, defend this place until succours can arrive. I would by no means have this occasion any alarm until you hear further from your humble servant, Ant'y Wayne.

3d December, 1776.

---

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sir: I leave Mr. William Hoskins to act for me in my absence, in New-England, preparing salted provisions for another season. I must beg your Excellency's directions to him from time to time as occasion may require, and warrants on the Paymaster-General from time to time as he may apply, as the season is coming on for providing necessaries for the winter, and next season the demands will be large. Whatever sums he may receive I shall hold myself accountable for.

I am, most respectfully, dear General, your most humble servant, Jos. Trumbull.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Providence, December 2, 1776—past 12 o'clock at night.

Honourable Gentlemen: I have just received undoubted information that a large fleet of square-rigged vessels was seen this morning between Block-Island and Montauk, steering for Newport. When the letters were writing to me from Colonel Noyes and Colonel Sturton, eleven sail were plainly discovered, and when the expresses came away several more hove in sight. I am mustering the Militia of this State, and must earnestly entreat you not to lose a moment's time in assembling a force to march immediately to the assistance of this State, and act as the exigency of affairs shall require. I also give this information by express to Governour Trumbull, and desire you to forward the enclosed immediately.

I am, in great haste, respectfully, your Honours' most obedient, humble servant, Nich's Cooke.

Honourable General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Boston, December 2, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed letter from General Lee is just received, which I beg leave to communicate to your Honours for your consideration.

Sergeant Dawes has just informed me that there is not a man left at Dorchester heights, by which the cannon there may be rendered useless and the barracks burnt by any person inimical and evil-minded enough to execute so infernal a business. I have desired him to attend your Honours, that you may know from him the state in which the posts at Dorchester are left, and he now waits on you accordingly.

I am, with great respect, your Honours' most obedient servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

I sent your Honours, per Mr. Loring, in the morning, a letter from Mr. Gibson, Secretary to the Treasury Board at Philadelphia, which I suppose he has communicated.

---

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee, Baltimore, 2d December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The officers in Colonel Edward Cockey's battalion has not yet received their commissions, and as the battalion are to meet in all next week, they conceive they have not a right to act without their commissions. We therefore request they may be forwarded immediately.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

WILL'M LUX,
AND. BUCHANAN,
JOHN MOALE,
SAM'L PURVIANCE, Jun.

The Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., President of the Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

ROBERT CUMMINS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Monckton Mills, 2d December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As our contract for supplying the troops with provisions will soon be out, and Mr. Buchanan declines any thing further in that way, if a further contract be made (though the latter unsuccessful to us) I would be glad to have an offer of it, as the season for putting up provisions for the summer is at hand, and our people whom we have had out to purchase the needful supply is returned, after engaging the chief part of what we shall want, or what you will allow for barreled beef or pork, should I find it answer to put up any more than will serve the present contract.

As there will be some salt wanted for the troops, the honourable the Council will please to let me have an order for the preference in the purchase of one hundred bushels, paying the current price. As I could not get any of the last, came to Baltimore without it. The messenger with this will wait your answer.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT CUMMINS.

To the honourable the Council of Safety at Annapolis.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COMMANDING OFFICERS OF BATTALIONS.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 2, 1776.

SIR: The Army under General Howe has taken possession of Brunswick. General Washington, not having a sufficient number of men to oppose the enemy, is obliged to retreat before them. Vigour and spirit alone can save us. There is no time for words. Exert yourselves now like freemen.

By order of the Council:

DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Vice President.

To the Colonels or Commanding Officers of the respective Battalions.

---

COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 3, 1776.]

Burlington, New-Jersey, December 2d, 1776.

SIR: When I did myself the honour of addressing you on the 30th ult., I had not the least idea that the enemy would at this season attempt a progress thro' the country. It seems but too probable that I was mistaken. I therefore beg leave to retract the resignation I then made, and as soon as I have disposed of Mrs. Reed and my children, will attend my office in the Army until a successor is appointed, or operations shall cease beyond all doubt.

Flattering myself that an uninterrupted attention for six months and my conduct during that time, will incline you to the most favourable construction of this measure, which proceeded from our unacquaintance of the state of things, I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOS. REED.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Princeton, December 2d, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here this morning with our troops, between eight and nine o'clock, when I received the honour of your letter of the 1st, with its enclosures. When the enemy first landed on this side the North-River, I apprehended that they meant to make a push this way; and knowing that the force which I had was not sufficient to oppose 'em, I wrote to General Lee to cross with the several Continental regiments in his division, and hoped he would have arrived before now. By some means or other he has been delayed. I suppose he has passed the river, as his letter of the 26th ultimo mentioned that he had marched a brigade the day before and should follow the next himself. The remainder of the troops I conceived necessary to guard the several passes through the Highlands, nor do I think they can be called from thence. Their number is very small, being reduced to very few by the departure of the troops who stood engaged till the 30th ultimo.

I understand there are now at Bristol several prisoners. As their exchange at this time cannot be effected with propriety, I think it will be necessary, under the present situation of affairs, to have 'em removed immediately to some more interiour place upon their paroles. If they remain they may be of infinite disadvantage.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO CAPTAIN OTTENDORF.

The Congress having been pleased to give you a commission of a Captain in the Army of the United States, you are hereby authorized and empowered to inlist a body of able-bodied men, especially Germans, to be under such regulations as the Congress shall hereafter direct, for the term of three years; and on the conditions and pay of the last establishment.

Given under my hand this second day of December, 1776.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Captain Ottendorf.

---

An Estimate of the Provisions and Men at and near TRENTON; also the Cattle on the east side River DELAWARE. December 2, 1776.

| | Barrels Flour. | Hhds. Beef. | Barrels Beef. | Quantity in hhds. and barrels. | Quantity Beef in bulk—lbs. wt. | Hhds. Rum. | Bushels Salt. | Boxes Soap and Candles. | Cattle on hand. | Barrels Pork. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| At the Landing | 2,000 | 40 | 100 | 62,000 | - | - | 250 | - | - | - |
| Mr. Tucker's Store | - | 33 | - | 33,000 | 100,000 | - | - | - | - | - |
| In sundry stores | - | - | - | - | - | 35 | - | - | - | - |
| Office cellar | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 150 | - | - |
| Sundry places on east side Delaware river. | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1020 | - |
| At Penny-Town | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 200 |
| At Flemington | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 500 |
| At Jacob Service's, on Delaware | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 100 |
| Total | 2,000 | 73 | 100 | 95,000 | 100,000 | 35 | 250 | 150 | 1020 | 800 |

Attest: STEPHEN LOWRY, A. D. C. G.

General Return of the Army. TRENTON, December 1st, 1776.

| DISTRIBUTIONS.—REGIMENTS. | | OFFICERS PRESENT. | | | | | | | | | | | | | | Rank and File. | | | | | Wanting to complete. | | | Alterations since last Return. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | Commissioned. | | | | | | Staff. | | | | | | Non-Comm'd. | | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| | | Colonels. | Lieutenant-Colonels. | Majors. | Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. | Chaplains. | Adjutants. | Quartermasters. | Paymasters. | Surgeons. | Mates. | Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Present, fit for duty. | Sick, present. | Sick, absent. | On command. | On furlough. | Total. | Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Rank and File. | Inlisted. | Dead. | Discharged. | Deserted. |
| Mercer's Brigade. | Hutchinson's | 1 | - | 1 | 2 | 6 | 5 | 6 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | 1 | 19 | 10 | 179 | 74 | 15 | 95 | - | 363 | 1 | 2 | 187 | - | 2 | - | 2 |
| | Durkee | 1 | - | 1 | 7 | 5 | 7 | 7 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 30 | 12 | 343 | 52 | 28 | 55 | 4 | 482 | - | 2 | 158 | - | 2 | - | 2 |
| | Late Smallwood | - | - | 1 | 6 | 5 | 4 | 5 | - | 1 | 1 | 1 | 2 | 2 | 13 | 11 | 210 | - | 534 | 23 | 2 | 769 | 15 | 14 | 387 | 1 | 6 | - | - |
| | Bradley | - | - | - | 3 | - | 3 | 1 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | 11 | 2 | 86 | 1 | - | - | - | 87 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Rawlins | - | - | - | 2 | - | 2 | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | 3 | - | 36 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Total | 2 | - | 3 | 20 | 16 | 21 | 20 | 1 | 4 | 4 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 76 | 35 | 854 | 127 | 577 | 173 | 6 | 1701 | 16 | 18 | 732 | 1 | 8 | - | 4 |
| Stevens's Brigade. | Elliot | - | 1 | 1 | 8 | 7 | - | 5 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | 22 | 9 | 208 | 17 | - | - | - | 225 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Scott | - | - | - | 6 | 6 | - | 4 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | 1 | 17 | 8 | 140 | 7 | - | - | - | 147 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Bucknor | 1 | 1 | - | 7 | 7 | 8 | 7 | 1 | 1 | 1 | - | 1 | 1 | 25 | 13 | 224 | 50 | - | 15 | - | 289 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Total | 1 | 2 | 1 | 21 | 20 | 8 | 16 | 1 | 3 | 3 | - | 1 | 2 | 64 | 30 | 572 | 74 | - | 15 | - | 661 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| Ewing's Brigade. | Montgomery | 1 | 1 | 1 | 5 | 5 | 4 | 5 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | 1 | 26 | 5 | 177 | 13 | 39 | 45 | - | 274 | - | - | - | - | - | - | 3 |
| | Watts | 1 | 1 | - | 4 | 3 | 6 | 5 | 1 | 1 | 1 | - | 1 | 1 | 18 | 5 | 134 | - | 28 | 63 | - | 225 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | McCalester | 1 | 1 | - | 3 | 4 | 4 | 3 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | 11 | 1 | 107 | 31 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Clotts | 1 | - | 1 | 5 | 7 | 6 | 1 | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | 16 | 3 | 122 | 19 | 3 | 13 | - | 157 | 12 | 4 | 303 | 1 | - | - | 8 |
| | Moor | - | - | 1 | 6 | 5 | 1 | 4 | - | - | 1 | - | - | 1 | 19 | 4 | 154 | 15 | 20 | 48 | 11 | 258 | - | - | - | 29 | - | - | 28 |
| | Total | 4 | 3 | 3 | 23 | 24 | 21 | 18 | 1 | 3 | 5 | - | 2 | 3 | 90 | 18 | 694 | 78 | 90 | 169 | 11 | 914 | 12 | 4 | 303 | 30 | - | - | 39 |
| Hand's Brigade. | Hand | 1 | - | 1 | 6 | 5 | 6 | 8 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 24 | 15 | 246 | 40 | 52 | 22 | 4 | 364 | 5 | 3 | 356 | - | - | - | - |
| | Haller | 1 | - | - | 3 | 5 | 5 | 4 | - | 1 | 1 | - | 1 | 1 | 23 | 8 | 250 | 12 | - | - | - | 262 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - |
| | Cunningham | 1 | 1 | 1 | 8 | 7 | 9 | 8 | - | 1 | 1 | - | 1 | - | 32 | 5 | 347 | 50 | 27 | - | 8 | 432 | 1 | 13 | 198 | - | - | - | - |
| | Total | 3 | 1 | 2 | 17 | 17 | 20 | 20 | 1 | 3 | 3 | 1 | 3 | 2 | 79 | 28 | 843 | 102 | 79 | 22 | 12 | 1058 | 6 | 16 | 554 | - | - | - | - |

RETURN OF OFFICERS IN GENERAL SULLIVAN'S BRIGADE.

Continental Eleventh Regiment of Foot, 1776.

Field Officers: James Reed.....Colonel.
Israel Gilman.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Nathan Hale.....Major.

Staff Officers: .....Chaplain.
Ezra Green.....Surgeon.
Nathaniel Breed.....Mate.

Commissioned Officers.

| Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Ezra Towne, | Joseph Churchel, | James Taggard, | Palatiah Whitemore, |
| John Jones, | Elijah Clayes, | James Otis, Adjutant, | Silvanus Reed, |
| Levi Spaulding, | George Aldrich, | Thomas Boffee, | William Lee, |
| | Thomas Grover, | Thompson Maxwell, | Gillan Taylor, |
| Robert Oliver, | Isaac Farewell, | Richard Coughlare, | Jonathan Emerson, |
| Jacob Hinds, | Isaac Stone, | Isaac Fry, Quartermaster, | Benjamin Davis, |
| Benjamin Mann, | Samuel Pattingale, | Jonathan Collis, | Wm. Adrian Hawkins, |
| David Place. | Amas Emerson. | Aaron Hanson. | Stephen Carter. |

Continental Fourth Regiment of Foot.

Field Officers: John Nixon.....Colonel.
Thomas Nixon.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Andrew Colburn.....Major.

Staff Officers: Hezekiah Smith.....Chaplain.
Isaac Spafford.....Surgeon.
Nathan Burnap.....Mate.

Commissioned Officers.

| Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Joseph Butler, | Silas Walker, | John Sawyer, | Warham Wheeler, |
| Micajah Gleason, | James Kimball, | Abel Holden, Adjutant, | Peter Cloyes, |
| Ebenezer Winship, | Nathan Wheeler, | Richard Buckminster, | Mason Wattles, |
| Jeremiah Gilman, | Joseph Smith, | John White, Quartermaster, | Simon Sartwell, |
| Moses McFarland, | | Joseph Wood, | Dudly Taylor, |
| Adam Wheeler, | Jonathan Hill, | Benjamin Haywood, | Ephraim Minot, |
| Thomas Barnes, | Silas Bent, | William Lemoul, | Isaac Nichols, |
| Joseph Thompson. | William Toogood. | Nath'l Critteton. | Ephraim Wheeler. |

Continental Fifth Regiment of Foot.

Field Officers: John Starks.....Colonel.
Thomas Poor.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
John Moore.....Major.

Staff Officers: Noah Cook.....Chaplain.
Goss.....Surgeon.
Josiah Chase.....Mate.

Commissioned Officers.

| Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. |
|---|---|---|---|
| George Reid, | | Robert Barnett, | Caleb Stark, |
| *Henry Dearbon, | Amos Morrill, | Mich'l McClary, | Samuel Bradford, |
| Daniel Moore, | Ebenezer Frye, | Ammi Andrews, | Edward Evens, |
| Joshua Abbott, | Joseph Sober, | Abiel Chandler, Adjutant, | Ephraim Colby, |
| Elisha Woodbury, | *Nath'l Hutchins, | Henry Perkinson, Quartermaster, | John Patten, |
| Samuel Richards, | James McCauley, | Daniel Livermore, | Timothy Blake, |
| John Hale, | Thomas Hardy, | Jesse Karr, | Thomas Richard, |
| Silas Walker. | Asa Coburn. | A. Aaron Steel. | Isaac Wormer. |

N. B. Those of this mark (*) are in Canada.

RETURN OF OFFICERS IN GENERAL SULLIVAN'S BRIGADE—Continued.

Continental Eighth Regiment of Foot.

Field Officers: Enoch Poor.....Colonel.
John McDuffee.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Joseph Cilley.....Major.

Staff Officers: Caleb Greenleaf Adams.....Surgeon.
William Sawyer.....Mate.

Commissioned Officers.

| Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Winborn Adams,Jeremiah Clough,Philip Tilton,Benjamin Titcomb,Jonathan Wentworth,James Norris,Richard Shortridge,Fred. Mordant Bell. | Zachariah Beal,Thomas Lyford,Benjamin Kimball,William Smith,James Carr,Jonathan Frye,Richard Weare,James Mathes. | Jeremiah Fogg, Quartermaster,Edward Parsons, Adjutant,Joseph Huntoon,Nathaniel McClintock,Jethro Herd,William Rowell,Joshua Lovejoy,Stephen Jones Thomas. | John Colcord,Jonathan Heath,Robert Pike,Enoch Chase,Samuel Nute,Charles Glidden,Stephen Abbott,Jacob Lowe. |

Continental Nineteenth Regiment of Foot.

Field Officers: Charles Webb.....Colonel.
Street Hall.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
John Brooks.....Major.

Staff Officers: Joseph Buckminster.....Chaplain.
Francis Fogues.....Surgeon.
Isaac Swift.....Mate.

Commissioned Officers.

| Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Joseph Haite,Nathaniel Tuttle,Edward Shipman,Isaac Bostwick,Peter Perit,Eli Levensworth,William Hull,Nathan Hale. | Joseph Allen Wright,Eli Catlin,John Yates,Samuel Hurlbut,Charles Pond,Robert Lewis,Joseph Sumway,Alpheus Chapman. | Reuben Scofield,Jesse Grant,Nathan Whittlesey,Elisha Bostwick,Samuel Sanford,Charles Webb, Jun., Adjutant,William Clarke,John Elderkins, Quartermaster. | Stephen Betto,Amos Johnson,Selah Benton,Amos Bostwick,William Smith,John Ball,Charles Whittlesey,George Hurlbut. |

Continental Twenty-Seventh Regiment of Foot.

Field Officers: Israel Hutchinson.....Colonel.
Benjamin Holden.....Lieutenant-Colonel.
Ezra Putnam.....Major.

Staff Officers: Elisha Smith.....Chaplain.
Thomas Welch.....Surgeon.
Nathan Oliver.....Mate.

Commissioned Officers.

| Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Ensigns. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Benja. Kimball,Ezra Newhall,Enoch Putnam,Nathan Browne,John Lowe,Addison Richardson,Billy Porter,John Baker. | Ephraim Emerton,Archelaus Batchelder,Job Whipple,Thomas Downing,Nathaniel Cleaves,Francis Cox,Haffield White,John Pierce. | Tarrant Putnam, Adjutant,Frederick Breed,Benja. Gardiner,Thomas White,Joseph Herrick,David Poor,Samuel Cutter,Jona. Trask. | Elisha Hutchinson,John Watts,John Tucker,Gibson Clough,Luke Roundy,Jeremiah Putnam,Eliphalet Perley,Ezekiel Cooper. |

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON FROM A FIELD OFFICER IN THE KING'S ARMY, DATED NEW-YORK, DECEMBER 2, 1776.

The troops under General Lord Cornwallis, after driving the Rebels from Fort Lee, or Fort Constitution, in New-Jersey, proceeded from Hackinsack to Newark, and from Newark to Elizabethtown, where they found great quantities of stores, amongst which are twenty tons of musket bullets. The Rebels continue flying before our Army. Lord Cornwallis took the fort opposite Brunswick, plunged into Raritan river, and seized the town. Mr. Washington had orders from the Congress to rally and defend that post, but he sent them word he could not. He was seen retreating with two brigades to Trenton, where they talk of resisting; but such a panick has seized the Rebels, that no part of the Jerseys will hold them, and I doubt whether Philadelphia itself will stop their career. The Congress have lost their authority. They ordered all the Militia of Pennsylvania to be drawn out; they refused to march. Their second order was for two companies of every regiment to be imbodied, and to repair to Washington, but they refused also. The Congress consists now of only seven members at Philadelphia, and they are in such consternation that they know not what to do. The two Adamses are in New-England; Franklin gone to France; Lynch has lost his senses; Rutledge is gone home disgusted; Dana is persecuting at Albany; and Jay's in the County playing as bad a part; so that the fools have lost the assistance of the knaves. However, should they embrace the enclosed proclamation, they may yet escape the halter, which I hear it is this night expected will be the case of many repenting sinners; and in Connecticut in particular, where they are much divided. Honest David Matthews, the Mayor, has made his escape from them, and arrived here this day. He was conducted by the Church of England people; they faithfully concealed him, although seven hundred dollars were offered by an advertisement which some poor man showed him. They conveyed him safely. All the Militia in Connecticut had been ordered out by Trumbull, the Governour, but they would not assemble, and he's at his wit's end. The fleet under Sir Peter Parker, consisting of twenty-three men-of-war, sailed from Sandy-Hook yesterday; and transports, with the troops and some frigates, passed Hell-Gate, and proceeded up the Sound this morning for Rhode-Island, where Lord High Admiral Hopkins and his Navy are supposed to be riding. Most of the inhabitants have quitted the island; and Mr. Matthews informs us that mobs began to rise in the country, crying out for peace. The paper currency of the Congress has lost its credit, and sells at thirty silver dollars the hundred. Salt is eight dollars the bushel in New-England, and not easily to be had at any rate. General Howe joins the Army to-morrow morning in the Jerseys, whither I shall accompany him. An exchange of prisoners, man for man, has taken place, and some of the Seventh and Twenty-Sixth Regiments arrived this day from Philadelphia. The Rebels have seized many Tories, and expected they would be exchanged too, but General Howe will not; because, if he should seize the Whigs for that purpose, it would occasion great disorder, and protract the disputes. The city fails daily, &c., &c.

---

COLONEL SARGEANT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Haverstraw, December 2, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mr. Joseph Allen, is the person originally intended as Paymaster to the Sixteenth Regiment, and would have waited on your Excellency last September, but your orders coming out for a proper person to be employed from each regiment to be sent to procure clothing for the diers, I sent him, knowing him to be well qualified for that business. As he has been employed from the first October, make no doubt your Excellency will appoint him from that time.

Your Excellency's humble servant,

PAUL DUDLEY SARGEANT.

---

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp Ramapough, 2d December, 1776.

SIR: By the best information there are not more than a thousand of the enemy at Hackensack; their main body at Elizabethtown. Between this and that there is a fine country, of twenty or thirty miles square, full of necessaries that is furnishing supplies to them. Ought they not to be interrupted? Is it not feasible to possess ourselves of Hackensack? Colonel Tyler's regiment is not yet returned from Toppon. Am doing all in my power to forward my works and barracks; and am, most respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

JED. HUNTINGTON.

Major-General Heath.

---

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Montgomery, December 2d, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received the resolve sent to me by your honourable House, setting forth the necessity of Colonel Humphrey's and Snyder's regiments continuing till the first of January next. But Colonel Snyder's regiment went away from here the 27th and 28th of November last, which was before I received the resolve. I had the resolve read to Colonel Humphrey's regiment, but without success. Upon some persuasion the officers all turned out—three sergeants, two corporals, and two privates; but, in my opinion, had the officers in general exerted themselves, many of the men might have been persuaded to stay another month; but to do the regiment justice, there was some good officers in it, as well as men. Lieutenant Hamille, who acted as Adjutant, and Lieutenant Talmage is still employed here.

I am very sorry to hear that Captain Rosekrans, of my regiment, is not provided for in the new arrangement. When I heard he was not amongst the list of Captains, I imagined he was promoted to the rank of a Field Officer, which I think he was deserving of, for I must say, without any reflection on the rest of the officers of the regiment, and I believe it will be acknowledged by the most of them, that he was the best officer in it. And as he was the oldest officer, he often had the command of this garrison before I moved here. Lieutenant Lee, who was his Lieutenant, and a good officer, would have been willing to serve under him as he was; but as he is appointed under another much below his rank, he talks of declining. But I hope it is not too late to continue them yet, agreeable to their rank.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To the President of the honourable Convention now sitting at Fishkill.

---

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fort Montgomery, December 2d, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed I send your Honour a return of the men in this garrison, including those on the fortifications on the south side of Puplopen's Kill or creek. The garrison at Fort Constitution and Fort Independent is supplied by my brother's brigade, and of consequence he will return them in his return. Since my last return, I moved two companies of my regiment from Fort Constitution to the fort on the south side of the creek where Colonel Snyder's regiment was left me. As I have two separate garrisons here, one on each side of the creek, I am obliged to keep about seventy men on guard at both places. I have likewise fifty men who does duty out of the five companies of my regiment in the artillery, so that I will not be able to carry on any work here, without it be getting of fire-wood and the necessary duty about the garrisons. You will see by the return that I have not one Field Officer with me.

I would be glad to know if there is any lime or brick at Peekskill, as I have one stack of chimneys to build in the barracks on the south side of the creek.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To Hon. Major-General Heath, Head-Quarters, Peekskill.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fort Constitution, 2d December, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: We are distressed for want of boats and tools to carry on our works here. The latter we know you can't supply us with further than you already have; but as I presume General Lee's division must have crossed the river, or at least will before this reaches you, must beg you will order us all the boats and pettyaugers and scows you can spare from Peek's Kill and the ferry. Captain Dobbs will be best able to judge which are fittest for our business; and I have sent an officer with a strong party to take charge of them, and bring them up loaded with stone, as they can be very conveniently loaded between Peek's Kill and this. I wish Captain Godwin and some other of my officers who were left behind on court-martial, were ordered to join their regiments, as their companies are little worth without them?

I am, dear sir, yours most affectionately,

GEO. CLINTON.

The meal ordered here, on delivery, fell short twelve pounds of the weight mentioned in Mr. Quackenboss's note. Will you be kind enough to mention this to him?

To the Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

MEMORIAL OF JOHN HATHORN, OF GOSHEN.

Goshen, December 2d, 1776.

Gentlemen, the Memorial of John Hathorn, of the County of ORANGE, humbly showeth:

That your memorialist had a small quantity of salt in Mr. William Ellison's store, at New-Windsor; that there was not more than he had engaged to his neighbours, and was obliged to keep for his own use; that a large number of men, whose names your memorialist can discover, without any legal authority, as he conceives, have taken out of said store, as well the salt of your memorialist (except one bushel) as of other persons; and that your memorialist is in the greatest want of salt for his own use. That unless a check is put to such unjustifiable proceedings, your memorialist apprehending, from the seeming disorderly spirit at present pervading among the common people, his property, as well as those of others, will be very insecure. He therefore humbly prays, that this honourable House would be pleased to take the premises into consideration, and grant such relief as to them shall seem meet; and your memorialist shall ever pray.

I am, with the greatest esteem, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOHN HATHORN.

The honourable Committee of Safety of the State of New-York.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Peekskill, December 2, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 29th ultimo, and am glad to hear of your Excellency's safe arrival at Brunswick, without the least interruption from the enemy. I am happy to find my honest endeavours to do my duty crowned with your Excellency's approbation.

In addition to the stores which I before mentioned to have been secured and brought off, a quantity of pearl-ash, beeswax, oil, &c., and two brass patereros, which belong to the States, have been brought here. An invoice thereof is enclosed. I have ordered them to Fishkill. I have also secured ten tons of lead, which is sent to the same place.

I am paying the utmost attention to the plan for obstructing Hudson's river, and have detached General George Clinton, with two of his strongest regiments, to push this most important business. They serve for a garrison for Fort Constitution at the same time that they are at this duty.

General Scott's brigade, Colonel Tash's and Colonel Snider's regiments, are gone home, except about one hundred of General Scott's brigade that have been prevailed upon to stay a little longer. The Convention of the State of New-York had sent them an address and fifteen hundred pounds currency, as a gratuity to encourage them to continue a month longer. I did all in my power to prevail upon them, and also transmitted to General Scott your Excellency's letter, urging the expediency of their staying at this time; but all was in vain; home they must go; but many mean to inlist, as they say, after they have seen their friends.

The troops now at this post are but few, and much scattered, which will put it out of our power to accomplish so much work as I fear will be expected; but no endeavours of mine shall be wanting.

I have just received a number of resolves from the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York, which I take the liberty to enclose, not knowing whether your Excellency has as yet received them.

General Lee is this day beginning to pass the river with his division; and numbers of the Northern Army we are told are on their march to join you. So that I hope soon to congratulate your Excellency on some signal victory over the enemy, unless upon the approach of the reinforcements they should give you the slip, which I rather think will be the case.

I have the honour to be, with respect and esteem, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. Heath.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

COLONEL WEISSENFELS TO ROBERT YATES.

Peekskill, December 2d, 1776.

Dear Sir: The constant movement of the Army makes it somewhat difficult with respect to the speedy raising recruits for the regiment, notwithstanding I have delivered some officers, who are on the spot, the cash for the above purpose, and doubt not we will fit up the men as fast as circumstances permit.

Enclosed is a list of officers who will not serve, together with the names of those who I humbly presume to recommend. Doctor Woodrof would be glad to be appointed in Colonel Van Cortlandt's regiment. He is now Surgeon in late Colonel Ritzema's, and a good Surgeon. As for a Sugeon's Mate, I know none, except one Mincma, who, I fear, is taken prisoner, as he was on the other side with the sick. The Chaplain I hope you have been pleased to appoint, and also the Paymaster; both of whom I made bold to recommend last time I had the honour of being with you.

I would be much obliged to you to communicate to me the arrangements of the other York battalion; and with great respect I remain, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Fred. Weissenfels.

---

Officers who refuse to serve.

Captain John Johnson;
Captain Richard Platt, Brigade-Major;
Captain Elijah Hunter;
Lieutenant James M. Hughes;
Lieutenant John Johnson.

Officers whom I humbly propose to recommend.

2d. Captain Copp; } All of Colonel
1st. Captain Gershom Mott; } Nicholson's
3d. Captain John Brogdon; } Regiment.
Lieutenant Hugh McClallan;
Lieutenant John Nicolls;
Lieutenant Simon Crygier;
Doctor, Hunlock Woodroof;
Paymaster, Christopher Bennet;
Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Gano.

I am sorry to inform you that Captain Pelton does not answer my expectation, and therefore should be sorry that he should be the oldest Captain, but would presume to mention that Captain Graham is much more deserving.

Fred. Weissenfels.

To Robert Yates, Esq., at Fishkill.

---

COLONEL WEISSENFELS TO ROBERT HARPUR.

Peekskill, December 2d, 1776.

Dear Sir: I have wrote to Mr. Robert Yates, and annexed a list of officers who will not serve, and who, I think, will serve. I also humbly recommend them to your notice. Simeon Crygier is on the list for an Ensignсy, in the room of Herring, who refuses. By my personal knowledge of those gentlemen I have recommended, I am very sure they will do honour to the service and their country.

I beg, dear sir, you would be pleased to save one dozen of those shirts I bought, as the officers will be glad to have some. As soon as we return from the other side of the river, I will send for them. God grant us success in our expedition, for to-morrow we shall go to the Jerseys. I am in great expectation of doing something at the close of the year.

With much respect, I am, dear sir, your most humble servant,

Fred. Weissenfels.

Robert Harpur, Esq., at Fishkill.

---

JAMES DUANE TO ROBERT HARPUR.

Manor Livingston, 2d December, 1776.

Gentlemen: Be pleased to examine whether there is a vacancy for the bearer, recommended by Mr. Yates, and in that case give him his recruiting orders. I am told Colonel Van Schaack's officers have already more than their complement.

To Mr. Yates I have written in pressing terms, to repair to the Fishkills. The service suffers but too much from the impediments to the arrangement which arise from his long absence.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

Jas. Duane.

To Robert Harpur, Esq., and the other Members of the Committee of Arrangement in Convention, Fishkills.

---

JAMES CLAY TO CUMBERLAND DELEGATES IN NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Brattleborough, December ye 2, 1776.

Gentlemen: At your desire, Captain Clay, Chairman of the Committee for said County, has taken pains to call us together, in order to make a representation to the State aforesaid, respecting the broken situation of this County. It is our opinion if we, who are only a part of the Committee for said County, should do any thing of that nature, it would make uneasiness in this County, and we think that as you represent the County, it is your indispensable duty to make a true representation thereof.

James Clay, Chairman.
John Bridgeman, John Sergeants,
Samuel Nichols, Israel Smith,
Luke Knowlton, Arad Hunt.
Samuel King,

To Messrs. John Session and Simon Stevens, Esqs., Representatives of the County of Cumberland, and State of New-York.

P. S. There was but nine members that voted for the withdrawing the letter, and eight against it. And after the vote was passed, and another that you have a copy of, the eight members withdrew, and broke up the Committee; otherwise the Committee would have represented the broken state of the inhabitants of the County as a body.

James Clay,
Chairman of the County Committee.

To Messrs. John Session and Simon Stevens, Esqs.

---

COURT OF INQUIRY ON GENERAL ARNOLD.

A Court of Inquiry held at Albany, the 2d December, 1776, to examine into the cause of complaint exhibited by Colonel Moses Hazen against Brigadier-General Arnold; Brigadier-General Bricket, President; Colonel Wigglesworth, Colonel Cortlandt, Members.

Colonel Hazen produced a writing on the back of a receipt, which was given by him at Chamblee, that was delivered the Commissioners by General Arnold, as follows:

"Thirty kegs rum for the use of the garrison, one load of which Mr. Daniel Tucker acquaints me was delivered to a Frenchman who kept tavern at Chamblee. Colonel Hazen can best tell how much he sold.

"One keg brandy for his private use, taken without my order, as was the tobacco, which is to be charged to his account. The bales contained about one hundred and fifty pounds each. B. Arnold, B. General."

Mr. Daniel Tucker being duly sworn, says, that coming out of the fort at Chamblee, he saw a cart loaded with kegs, about eight or ten. He asked the man that drove it, what he had in his kegs? Was answered it was rum he had brought from La Prairie, and was going into the village to deliver it to a tavern-keeper by Colonel Hazen's order.

Colonel Hazen then asked the evidence whether he knew Mr. Bell, of Chamblee, and if he sold rum? Answered he knew him, and he sold rum and wine.

2*d Question.* Whether he knew his handwriting? Answered, Yes.

Colonel Hazen then produced a writing, which the evidence thinks was writ by Mr. Bell, wherein he charges the publick with sixty gallons rum lent Colonel Hazen and Mr. McCarty.

General Arnold then asked the evidence whether the rum he saw on the cart was going to Bell's or the French tavern.

2*d Question* by General Arnold. Whether it was usual to keep rum belonging to the publick at the French tavern? Answered, not as he knew, as it was not the post he was stationed at.

The evidence being asked what time he saw the rum go to the tavern, and when he acquainted General Arnold of it? Answered, the beginning of June last, and acquainted General Arnold of it at Montreal and at Crown-Point.

Colonel Hazen produced sundry papers, giving him the command of the district of Montreal, including Chamblee and St. John's; superintending the works, contracting for provisions, commanding the French Militia, &c., &c., &c.

The Court, after due deliberation, are of opinion that the words "Colonel Hazen can best tell how much he sold," which is part of the note on the back of the receipt delivered the Commissioners by General Arnold, are an aspersion of Colonel Hazen's character, and therefore think the complaint just.

James Brickett, President.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Saratoga, December 2, 1776.

Sir: Your favour of the 28th ultimo, covering the resolutions of the Committee of Safety and draft of part of Hudson's river, I had the honour to receive this afternoon. I am much obliged by the favourable opinion the Committee of Safety is pleased to entertain of me. I wish I could be in sentiment with them, and be convinced that I was equal to the business they wish me to undertake. It is truly important, and will claim more attention than it will be possible for me to bestow on it, without neglecting a variety of other matters that are also indispensably necessary to be attended to; I will nevertheless most cheerfully give the utmost of my assistance.

As the Committee has not pointed out any particular mode of executing the work, I take the liberty to suggest my ideas on the subject. Experience has taught us that a chain sufficiently long to reach across the river ought to have better supports than floating logs—perhaps caissons, from thirty to forty feet square, according to the depth of the water where they are to be sunken, might answer the end. At the place in question the river is about six thousand feet wide; if, therefore, twenty-five such caissons were sunk at nearly equal distances, the intermediate space between each would be about two hundred feet. The tops of the caissons might come up to within two feet of the surface of the water at ebb tide, and the chain run through them at about six feet below the upper part of the caissons; but as the chain might not be sufficiently strong to withstand the great force of a ship coming against it under sail, and with the tide, a number of floats, each composed of six large pine logs, of fifty feet long, might be made; the logs fastened to each other with strong chains, eight or ten feet long, with an eye-bolt at each end and through the log, forelocked and keyed; the two extremes of those six logs to be fastened by a chain to two of the caissons. These thus fastened and let go with the tide of ebb, will form the two sides of triangle, the angular point of which will be about one hundred and twenty feet from the line of caissons, and there they should be kept by anchors. If a ship should come against these logs, the anchor will probably drag, may prevent the logs from breaking, and deaden the ship's way so much that the chain will not break. It is evident I suppose that we shall have batteries on the island and the western shore, to prevent the enemy from laying alongside of the caissons, in order to cut the chain. One caisson might be so constructed as to serve for a battery en barbet, and the guns being so near the surface of the water would make it extremely dangerous for a ship to come within reach of them. The greatest danger and difficulty we have to dread in sinking caissons is from large rocks in the bottom of the river, but that may also be overcome.

I cannot at present think of a better plan, and if the Committee approve of it, no time should be lost in procuring the timber, which must be got in the vicinity of Fishkill, as the season is so far advanced that what might be got here cannot be carried down until the winter breaks up. If the timber cannot be procured below, I should wish to be advised of it immediately, that I might employ people about Albany not only to prepare the timber, but to frame it, so as that the caissons may be expeditiously sunk in the spring. About two thousand pieces of thirty feet long and not less than ten by twelve inches square, and five hundred pieces of fifty feet long, twelve inches square, will be wanted, and about ten thousand inch and half plank.

I hope in fourteen days from this time to do myself the pleasure to pay my respects to Convention on my way to Philadelphia.

I am, sir, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

Ph. Schuyler.

Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Chairman &c., &c.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Saratoga, December 3d, 1776.

Sir: The time of inlistment of the troops that now garrison Tyonderoga, Fort George, &c., will expire on the last day of this month, and I fear they cannot be prevailed upon to remain there after that; it is therefore of the utmost consequence that troops should be expedited into this department the soonest possible. And agreeable to the enclosed resolution of Congress, I do myself the honour to entreat you to order such parts of each regiment to be raised in your State for this department as can be got ready, to march so as that they may arrive at Albany by the latter end of this month.

As it is impossible to prevent the enemy from gaining intelligence of what passes in this quarter, should the troops now at Tyonderoga leave it before others come up to relieve them, General Carleton will doubtless take the advantage of it, and possess himself of that important post; and what the consequences will be are easily conceived. I do not therefore doubt but that every exertion will be made by your State to hasten on the troops.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient humble servant,

Ph. Schuyler.

To the honourable President of the State of Massachusetts.

---

Newport, December 2, 1776.

The sloop Providence, Captain Hacker, arrived in a certain port last Wednesday from a cruise, in company with the Alfred, having taken a rich ship, a brig, and snow; the brig we mentioned in our last to have arrived safe; and it is said the Alfred and the other two prizes are safe in port at the eastward.

A gentleman arrived in town on Saturday from Boston, informs that a privateer from the eastward had lately taken a ship with dry goods, &c., whose cargo cost thirty-seven thousand pounds sterling.

---

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Boston, December 2d, 1776.

Sir: We have the honour to enclose you, by order of the General Assembly of this State, the petition and plan of Messrs. Fanueil and others, French gentlemen, together with the proceedings of the Assembly thereon, and to recommend them to the immediate notice of the honourable Congress, as the Assembly are of opinion the plan of these gentlemen may be adopted and improved by the Congress to the great benefit of the United States. They hope the Congress will take the matter speedily into consideration, as the gentlemen have been here upon considerable expense waiting the success of their application, and seem desirous of entering into their service.

FRANCIS DANA.

By order of the Committee.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the honourable Continental Congress.

---

The Committee of both Houses upon the Memorial of Messrs. Fanueil and others, French gentlemen, have attended that service, and beg leave to report it as their opinion, that the proposal of raising one or more regiments to be officered by French gentlemen, appears to be easily effected, and will be attended with important consequences to the United States, especially as there are many Canadians in different parts of the United States who, from the best information, will readily enter into the service. That therefore the plan and papers herewith, be forthwith transmitted to Congress, recommending the same to their immediate notice, as Monsieur Fanueil is now at considerable expense for himself, and the other French gentlemen with him, waiting the success of their application.

JOHN WHETCOMB, per order.

IN COUNCIL, November 26th, 1776.—Read and accepted, and thereupon Resolved, That Francis Dana, Esq., be a Committee, with such as the honourable House shall appoint, to write to the honourable Congress respecting the same.

Sent down for concurrence.

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, November 29th, 1776.—Read and concurred, and Brigadier Palmer and Colonel Orne are joined.

SAM'L FREEMAN,
Speaker pro tempore.

---

JOHN LANGDON TO MESHECH WEARE.

Portsmouth, December 2, 1776.

SIR: Captain Gardner waits on you for a commission for a very fine ship of twenty guns, which I intend sending out soon. Your Honour will particularly serve me if you will send it immediately. If it's necessary that I should come up to Exeter, shall come, but hope it can be done without, as I am greatly hurried.

Your most obedient servant,

JOHN LANGDON.

Honourable Meshech Weare, Esq.

---

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

Kingstown, December 2d, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: I am to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 8th ultimo, and want to hear the determination of Congress about increasing the soldiers' wages. Our Court had voted to give our men the same wages that the Massachusetts gave; and knowing that they had voted ten dollars per month, our Committee that went to appoint the officers, have given orders and have inlisted a number of men on those terms, so that it will be impossible now to raise them on any lower terms. They have appointed officers for but two regiments, viz: in Stark's and Poor's. General Ward gave orders to Colonel Long to march his regiment from Portsmouth to Ticonderoga, but I understand the men say they inlisted on the encouragement given them by their officers that they should not be called away out of the Province, and many of them, I am informed, refuse absolutely to march. Many necessaries are wanting for them before they can go, which will take some time to procure, and they have not received any pay except one month's wages from this State.

General Washington has requested a thousand more men from this State to be sent him, to be inlisted till the 1st of March. The General Court, which began their sitting last Thursday, has it now under consideration, and will, I believe, comply with his request. Had we received his letter seasonably, we should have sent to our men that are with that Army, and I believe could have prevailed on them to have tarried for that time, but by some mischance his letter, though dated the 6th ultimo, did not arrive till the latter end of last week.

We have for some time had very disagreeable news from the Army. The Tories here say the Regulars drive our Army before them like a parcel of sheep; that they have driven them forty or fifty miles with the greatest precipitation; and, by our late accounts, we learn that the enemy are in possession of the forts Washington and Lee, and some say, with all their artillery, stores, &c., and between two and three thousand men taken prisoners; but we have no certain accounts, only common fame, and I hope it will not prove quite so bad as it is reported, though I am pretty certain things wear a pretty unfavourable aspect in that quarter; but whether from cowardice, treachery, or want of experience, I am not certain, though I would hope the latter. These things raise the heads of the Tories, and very much depress the spirits of the friends of liberty.

If you have any good news to inform us of, pray send it along as soon as possible to cheer our drooping spirits.

Give my best regards to Colonel Thornton, who by this time, I hope, has got well through the small-pox.

I wish you health and happiness, and am your friend,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

P. S. The weather here has been this fall and is now remarkably fine and pleasant.

5*th*.—The General Court has voted to send five hundred men, agreeable to General Washington's request, to be immediately raised and sent; and to send and try and raise five hundred more out of our Militia at New-York. They have also voted to supply Colonel Long's regiment with necessaries for their march; but I fear they will not be prevailed on to move soon, if at all. We have had a confirmation of the loss of the forts Washington and Lee. Agreeable to the request of Congress, we have purchased a considerable quantity of shoes, stockings, mittens, hats, shirts, &c., &c., and many more are agreed for, and have wrote to Congress for money to pay for them agreeable to order. Twenty thousand dollars are requested for the purpose, and I hope you and your colleague will use your endeavours to see it is sent forward soon, as our treasury is almost empty, and I am loth we should make more paper money at this time.

Not having an opportunity of sending this letter, I am now arrived at the 6th, and we are now told that General Howe is marched with twenty thousand men for Philadelphia, and by a letter from Rhode-Island we are informed that a large fleet of the enemy have arrived there, but the news here is so various and contradictory that we know not what to believe, though lately the bad news have turned out to be true, and the good false. The spirits of the people here seem much depressed with our repeated losses, and I fear in the Army too. Unless something turns up more favourable, I dread the consequence. I hope the Congress act with more spirit than they have done lately, or else I am assured they will lose much of their former influence. Pray use your influence to keep up a consistency in their conduct. The want of it is much complained of. This inter nos.

J. B.

---

TRANSLATION OF A LETTER WRITTEN BY A FOREIGNER ON HIS TRAVELS.

London, December 3, 1776.

DEAR COUNT: I have now been six months in England, and eight weeks in this metropolis. You should have heard from me before, but my frequent avocations, as well as the want of a suitable opportunity, have prevented. Agreeably to my promise, however, I now sit down to give you some account of the character and politicks of this strange people. So copious a subject cannot be discussed in one letter; but you shall hear from me again, when further observation shall have enabled me to be more particular.

The general character of the English is certainly the most fantastick and absurd that ever fell to the lot of any known nation. As they are made up of contradictions, it would be unjust to give them any uniform designation. There is scarce a virtue that adorns the mind, or a vice that disgraces human nature, but may be ascribed to them as part of their national character. But the former are often rendered ineffectual by misapplication, and the latter qualified by a levity of manners, which shows them not to be constitutionally prevalent. An Englishman will treat his enemy with great generosity, and his friend with ingratitude and inhumanity. He will be lavish of his wealth when he has but little of it, and become a miserly wretch when fortune pours her favours into his purse. He will brave the utmost hardships, and encounter the severest trials with heroick fortitude; and will drown or hang himself because the wind is in the east. He will lend large sums to a stranger on the slightest security, and refuse his nearest relation the means of subsistence. To-day, his heart expands with social benevolence; to-morrow, he is cold, sullen and morose. To-day, he possesses the wealth of a nabob; to-morrow, he refuses a sixpence to a beggar, lest he should himself be reduced to the want of that sixpence. In a word, contradiction and absurdity makes an Englishman.

*

During the last century, this people hath risen in wealth, power, and prosperity; but the instability of their temper will not permit them to enjoy with content any blessing in possession. At peace with all the world; feared and respected by their neighbours; an established policy, reformed religion, and extensive commerce, are circumstances sufficient, one would suppose, to render any people happy. But the thirst of lawless ambition can never be satisfied. The English assume to themselves the character of being the most just, generous, and humane nation in the world, and yet they encourage the African trade—a trade attended with circumstances of injustice, cruelty, and horrour, that disgrace human nature; whereby they fasten for life, the chains of servitude the most abject, and misery the most complete, on many hundreds of their fellow-creatures every year.

This just and humane nation also sent one Clive to the East-Indies, to secure a dominion for them there; a country which, it should seem, the Creator never intended for the English, because he had placed it on the opposite side of the globe, and made the inhabitants of a quite different complexion. This Clive, however, arrived with his forces in the East-Indies, and under the sanction of his most gracious Britannick majesty and a free Parliament, put to death some hundred thousands of the inoffensive inhabitants by the sword, by famine, and the most atrocious cruelties; after which he returned to England with immense riches, and a wife set in diamonds, and was made a Lord—and then cut his throat with a penknife.

You will be surprised at this; but the people here were not surprised at all. It is no uncommon thing to spend an evening with a man, in all the easy gaiety of social life, and to hear next morning that he hanged himself in a stable, or practised phlebotomy on his own jugular vein with a razor.

The English now govern in the East-Indies with a tyranny so pure, so unadulterated with any mixture of justice or humanity, as could not have been exceeded in the reigns of the twelve Cæsars.

This best of all Kings has now turned his attention to America. There he had three millions of subjects, who loved, honoured, and obeyed him. He governed them by officers of his own appointment; he had the whole regulation of their commerce; and the overflowings of their wealth were conducted by easy channels into his coffers, and into the purses of the merchants and manufacturers of his kingdom. But he has quarreled with these loyal and beneficial subjects, because they are so obstinate that they will not acknowledge that two and two make five. Whole volumes have been written on this subject, and all the force of reason and eloquence exerted to convince this wise King that he is in an errour. The Americans have most emphatically beseeched him to accept of the undissembled loyalty of their hearts; declaring that they are satisfied that the fruits of their industry should centre with him and his people, as heretofore, to enrich and aggrandize them; but humbly pray that they may not be compelled to acknowledge that two and two make five, which would be to them a most dangerous and distressing violation of truth. But this wise and humane monarch is far from being disposed to give up the point. He has rejected their petitions with scorn, and spurned at their offers of affection and fidelity; and declares, that he will even risk the crown of his ancestors but he will make the obstinate Americans subscribe to his new dogma.

To this end he hath sent over, not only his own fleets and armies, but has hired a banditti of foreign mercenaries from a petty prince, who supports the splendour of his court by selling the blood of his subjects; and he has also employed negroes and wild Indians to persecute the poor Americans without mercy until they shall acknowledge that two and two make five.

America is at this time a scene of desolation and distress; a theatre whereon is acted a real tragedy, exhibiting every species of cruelty and injustice. The royal Army of this most enlightened of all nations are ravishing the women, murdering the men, and laying waste that fertile and beautiful country, under the conduct of Lord and General Howe; who are executing their bloody mandate with all the composure in the world. His most gracious Majesty receives, from time to time, such accounts of their proceedings as they please to give him, and is as happy as such a monarch can be.

Who would have thought that the peaceful plains of America would be desolated because the inhabitants will not believe that two and two make five, when their good King and wise Parliament require them so to do?

On the contrary, the Americans, highly resenting this treatment, have declared that they will no longer be pensioners of the smiles of such a King, or submit to a Government in which they have no share, and over which they have no control, and which is therefore, with respect to them, a Government of mere will and pleasure. They have determined to be henceforth a free people; and have publickly avowed that they will enjoy the inestimable privileges of believing and saying, that two and two make only four, according to the common sense of mankind.

How this affair will terminate, God only knows: but it seems very probable that the King of England will lose the most valuable jewel of his crown, in the pursuit of his present views.

You will say, perhaps, that the King could not act so absurdly were he not countenanced and supported in his folly by the assent of his people. But the truth is that the King, by means of his Ministers, hath gained such an ascendency over the Parliament, which is the constitutional voice of the people, that he can obtain their sanction for any project in which their rights are not openly and directly attacked. As to the people at large, they do not trouble themselves about the right or wrong of the matter in contest. America is a great way off, and they have no feelings for what is passing there. They grumble, indeed, about the diminution of their trade in consequence of this war, but leave the discussion of national politicks to their Parliament. The Crown hath imperceptibly extended its prerogative so as to destroy the boasted balance of the British constitution; and if the King's power should be further strengthened by the subjugation of America, the people of England may bid adieu to their constitutional freedom. Some of the wisest amongst them see this, and have openly declared, that the salvation of England depends upon the success of the Americans in the present war.

This infatuated people have wearied the world for these hundred years with loud eulogiums on liberty and their constitution; and yet they see that constitution languishing in a deep decay, without making any efforts for its recovery. Amused with trifles, and accustomed to venality and corruption, they are not alarmed at the consequences of their supineness. They love to talk of their glorious constitution, because the idea is agreeable, and they are satisfied with the idea; and they honour their King, because it is the fashion to honour the King. Half the loyalty of the nation is supported by two popular songs, viz: "Britons strike home," and "God save the King." These are vociferated at taverns, over porter, punch, and wine, till the imagination is heated, and the blood in a ferment, and then these pot-valiant patriots sally forth and commit all manner of riot and excess in honour of their King and country.

There are fanaticks in politicks as well as in religion, and both are managed in the same, viz: by keeping up the delusion in which they delight. The men in power well know the weakness of the multitude, and when they observe them to grow uneasy under the too barefaced encroachments of prerogative, they get half a dozen of court scribblers to expatiate on the glories of the British constitution, and to sing the sweet lullaby of liberty to the people, and all is well. Just so a nurse rattles three pieces of tin in a little rush basket to amuse her crying child. The poor infant thinks it has the world in possession, and is satisfied.

The extreme ignorance of the common people of this civilized country can scarce be credited. In general they know nothing beyond the particular branch of business which their parents or the parish happened to choose for them. This, indeed, they practise with unremitting diligence; but never think of extending their knowledge further.

A manufacturer has been brought up a maker of pin heads. He has been at this business forty years, and of course makes pin heads with great dexterity; but he cannot make a whole pin for his life. He thinks it is the perfection of human nature to make pin heads. He leave other matters to inferiour abilities. It is enough for him that he believes in the Athanasian creed, reverences the splendour of the court, and makes pin heads. This he conceives to be the sum total of religion, politicks, and trade. He is sure that London is the finest city in the world; Black Friar's bridge the most superb of all possible bridges; and the river Thames the largest river in the universe. It is in vain to tell him that there are many rivers in America, in comparison of which the Thames is but a ditch; that there are single provinces there larger than all England; and that the Colonies formerly belonging to Great Britain, now independent States, are vastly more extensive than England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, taken all together. He cannot conceive this. He goes into his best parlour and looks on a map of England four feet square; on the other side of the room he sees a map of North and South-America not more than two feet square, and exclaims, How can these things be! It is impossible! He has read the Arabian Night's Entertainment, and he hears this wonderful account of America—he believes the one as much as the other. That a giant should rise out of the sea, or that the Delaware should be larger than the Thames, are equally incredible to him. Talk to him of the British constitution, he will tell you it is a glorious constitution; ask him what it is, and he is ignorant of its first principles; but he is sure that he can make and sell pin heads under it. Mention the freedom of elections, and he will tell that he does not meddle in these matters; that he lives in a borough; and that it is impossible but that Squire Goosecap must represent that borough in Parliament, because Squire Goosecap is acquainted with the Prime Minister, and his lady comes every Sunday to the parish church in a brocaded gown, and sits in a pew lined with green cloth. How then can it be otherwise? But these are things in which he is not concerned. He believes in the Athanasian creed, honours the King, and makes pin heads—and what more can be expected of man?

It is not so in America. The lowest tradesman there is not without some degree of general knowledge. They turn their hands to every thing; their situation obliges them to do so. A farmer there cannot run to an artist upon every trifling occasion. He must make and mend, and contrive for himself. This I observed in my travels through that country. In many towns, and in every city, they have publick libraries. Not a tradesman but will find time to read. He acquires knowledge imperceptibly. He is amused with voyages and travels, and becomes acquainted with the geography, customs, and commerce of other countries. He reads political disquisitions, and learns the great outlines of his rights as a man and as a citizen. He dips a little into philosophy, and knows that the apparent motion of the sun is occasioned by the real motion of the earth. In a word, he is sure that, notwithstanding the determination of King, Lords, and Commons to the contrary, two and two can never make five.

Such are the people of England, and such the people of America. These nations are now at daggers drawn. At first, the Americans knew little or nothing of the art of war, but they improve daily. The British troops are teaching them how to conquer; and they find them very apt scholars. The probable consequence is, that England will lose, and America gain, an empire. If George the Third should subjugate America on his present principles, all good men will abhor him as a tyrant; if he should fail in his project, all wise men will despise him for risking the immense advantages he derived from a friendly connection with that country.

But it is time to conclude this long letter; for the present, therefore, adieu! and believe me ever yours, &c., &c., &c.

SILAS DEANE TO THE COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Paris, 3d December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: My letters from Bordeaux and since, to which I have received no reply, will give you my situation; but lest some of them fail, I will briefly in this give you the history of my proceedings. Immediately on my arrival, I sent forward your bills, a large part of which were protested, and intelligence arriving of the loss of Canada, and that Carleton was even on the frontiers of the Colonies, and at the same time the formidable armament gone and going over, made every one here give up the Colonies as subdued. To have tried for a credit under such circumstances would have been worse than useless; it would have been mortifying, as a refusal must have been the consequence. Mr. Delap generously offered to advance five or six thousand pounds, but when I considered it was already more than four months since you began to prepare for remitting, and that next to nothing was received, I really found myself embarrassed, and hoping every day for some relief, I suspended engaging, and came up to Paris, having previously sent Mr. Morris's letter to his different correspondents, not one of which appeared inclinable to be concerned in a credit.

I sent to procure the goods in Amsterdam, if to be had, but found our credit worse there than in France. A gentleman here offered me a credit for a million of livres, but it was, when explained, on the following conditions: I must produce direct authority from the Congress, with their promise of interest; all American vessels must be sent to his address; and until this could be secured him I must provide a credit, or in other words a security in Europe. Here you are sensible my negotiation ended. I then contracted for the supplies of the army, and crowded into the contract as large a proportion of woolens as I well could, sensible that with them you might do something, and hoping your remittances might still arrive, or some intelligence of the situation of your affairs, for I thought I judged rightly, that if in six or seven months you were unable to send out one third the remittances, the returns must be equally difficult. On this ground I have been anxiously waiting to hear something from you. Mean time I shipped forty tons of saltpetre, two hundred thousand pounds of powder, via Martinique, one hundred barrels via Amsterdam. The late affairs at Long-Island, of which we had intelligence in October, and the burning of New-York, the report of Carleton's having crossed the lakes, and that you were negotiating, has absolutely ruined our credit with the greater part of individuals; and finding so little prospect of completing the Indian goods, I have attended the closer to despatch the supplies for the Army, for which I had obtained a credit ostensibly from a private person, but really from a higher source. Mean time the moneys remitted are in Mr. Delap's hands, except what I have drawn out for my private expenses, for payment of the saltpetre, for the fitting out of Captain Morgan, and for the equipment of certain officers going to America. For the two hundred thousand weight of powder Mr. Delap is my surety, consequently should he receive nothing more from you he will have no considerable balance in his hands. Could I have received but one-half the amount in any season, I would have ventured on the goods long before this; but to what purpose would it have been, could I have been credited the amount, if you were unable to remit? The same obstruction must subsist against their arrival. I am however at last promised the goods on credit by the same way as the stores have been procured, and hope to ship them this month; but some of the articles are not manufactured any where in Europe except Great Britain, and others must be substituted in the best manner I can.

I have written to Mr. Delap to send you his account, also to send the particulars to me, which I will transmit as soon as received. The goods may be expected in the month of February; mean time I pray you, not on this account only, but on others, to exert yourselves in remitting so much as to support the credit of the Continent, for which I am now engaged to a very great amount. Tobacco, rice, flour, indigo, peltry, oil, whale fins, flaxseed, spermaceti, masts, spars, &c., are in good demand. Tobacco at nine to ten sous per pound and rising, free of duty or expense, save commission. Rice thirty livres per cwt. Flour twenty-two to twenty-four livres.

I am, most respectfully, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

P. S. When I say tobacco is free of duty, I mean if sold to the Farmers-General directly; on other conditions it is inadmissible at any rate.

---

SILAS DEANE TO JOHN JAY.

Paris, 3d December, 1776.

DEAR JAY: If my letters arrive safe they will give you some idea of my situation. Without intelligence, without orders, and without remittances, yet boldly plunging into contracts, engagements, and negotiations, hourly hoping that something will arrive from America. By General Coudray I send thirty thousand fusils, two hundred pieces of brass cannon, thirty mortars, four thousand tents, and clothing for thirty thousand men, with two hundred tons of gunpowder, lead, balls, &c., &c., by which you may judge we have some friends here. A war in Europe is inevitable. The eyes of all are on you, and the fear of your giving up or accommodating is the greatest obstacle I have to contend with. Mons. Beaumarchais has been my Minister in effect, as this Court is extremely cautious, and I now advise you to attend carefully to the articles sent you. I could not examine them here. I was promised they should be good, and at the lowest prices, and that from persons in such station that had I hesitated it might have ruined my affairs. But as in so large a contract there is room for imposition, my advice is that you send back to me samples of the articles sent you. Cannon, powder, mortars, &c., are articles known; but clothes, the fusils, &c., by which any imposition may be detected. Large remittances are necessary for your credit, and the enormous price of tobacco, of rice, of flour, and many other articles, gives you an opportunity of making your remittances to very great advantage. Twenty thousand hogsheads of tobacco are wanted immediately for this kingdom, and more for other parts of Europe.

I have written you on several subjects, some of which I will attempt briefly to recapitulate. The destruction of the Newfoundland fishery may be effected, by two or three of your frigates, sent there early in February, and by that means a fatal blow given to Great Britain—I mean by destroying the stages, boats, &c., and by bringing away the people left there as prisoners. Glasgow, in Scotland, may be plundered and burnt with ease, as may Liverpool, by two or three frigates, which may find a shelter and protection in the ports of France and Spain afterwards. Blank commissions are wanted here to cruise under your flag against the British commerce. This is a capital stroke and must bring on a war. Hasten them out I pray you. France and Spain are friendly, and you will greatly oblige the latter by seizing the Portuguese commerce wherever it is found. I have had overtures from the King of Prussia in the commercial way, and have sent a person of great confidence to his Court in person with letters of introduction from his agent here, with whom I am on the best terms. A loan may be obtained, if you make punctual remittances for the sums now advanced, for any sums at five per cent. interest, perhaps less. The western lands ought to be held up to view as an encouragement for our soldiers, especially foreigners, and are a good fund to raise money on. You may, if you judge proper, have any number of German and Swiss troops; they have been offered me, but you know I have no proposals to treat. A number of frigates may be purchased at Leghorn, the Grand Duke of Tuscany being zealously in favour of America, and doing all in his power to encourage its commerce. Troubles are rising in Ireland, and with a little assistance much work may be cut out for Great Britain, by sending from hence a few priests, a little money, and plenty of arms. Omnia tentanda is my motto, therefore I hint the playing of their own game on them, by spiriting up the Caribs in St. Vincents, and the negroes in Jamaica, to revolt.

On all these subjects I have written to you. Also on various particulars of commerce. Our vessels have more liberty in the ports of France and Spain and Tuscany, than the vessels of any other nation, and that openly. I presented the Declaration of Independence to this Court, after indeed it had become an old story in every part of Europe; it was well received, but as you say you have articles of alliance under consideration, any resolution must be deferred until we know what they are. The want of intelligence has more than once well-nigh ruined my affairs; pray be more attentive to this important subject, or drop at once all thoughts of a foreign connection.

I must mention a few trifles. The Queen is fond of parade, and I believe wishes a war, and is our friend. She loves riding on horseback. Could you send me a fine Narrotoheganset horse or two, the present might be money exceedingly well laid out. Rittenhouse's orrery, or Arnold's collection of insects; a phaeton of American make, and a pair of bay horses. A few barrels of apples, of walnuts, of butternuts, &c., would be great curiosities here, where every thing American is gazed at, and where the American contest engages the attention of all ages, ranks, and sexes.

Had I ten ships here I could fill them all with passengers for America. I hope the officers sent will be agreeable; they were recommended by the Ministry here, and are at this instant really in their army; but this must be a secret. Do you want heavy iron cannon, sea officers of distinction, or ships? Your special orders will enable me to procure them. For the situation of affairs in England I refer you to Mr. Rogers, Aid-de-Camp to Mons. Du Coudray. I have presented a number of memoirs, which have been very favourably received, and the last by his Majesty, but my being wholly destitute of other than accidental and gratuitous assistance will not permit my sending you copies. Indeed I was obliged to make them so as to explain the rise, the nature, and the progress of the dispute. I have been assured by the Ministers, that I have thrown much light on the subject, and have obviated many difficulties; but his Majesty is not of the dispostion of his great grandfather Louis XIV. If he were, England would soon be ruined. Do not forget or omit sending me blank commissions for privateers; under these, infinite damage may be done to the British commerce, and as the prizes must be sent to you for condemnation the eventual profits will remain with you. Tell Mrs. Trist that her husband and Captain Fowler were well the 16th instant. I had a letter from the latter. Pray be careful who you trust in Europe. One Williamson, a native of Pennsylvania, is here as a spy; yet I believe he corresponds with very good people on your side of the water. The villain returns to London about once in six weeks to discharge his budget.

Doctor Bancroft has been of very great service to me; no man has better intelligence in England in my opinion, but it costs something. The following articles have been shown to me; they have been seen by both the Courts of France and Spain, and I send them to you for speculation:

1st. The Thirteen United Colonies, now known by the name of the Thirteen United States of North-America, shall be acknowledged by France and Spain, and treated with as independent States, and as such shall be guarantied in the possession of all that part of the Continent of North-America, which by the last treaty of peace was ceded and confirmed to the Crown of Great Britain.

2dly. The United States shall guaranty and confirm to the Crowns of France and Spain, all and singular their possessions and claims in every other part of America, whether north or south of the equator, and of the islands possessed by them in the American seas.

3dly. Should France or Spain, either or both of them, possess themselves of the islands in the West-Indies now in possession of the Crown of Great Britain, (as an indemnity for the injuries sustained in the last war, in consequence of its being commenced on the part of Great Britain in violation of the laws of nations,) the United Colonies shall assist the said Powers in obtaining such satisfaction, and guaranty and confirm to them the possession of such acquisition.

4thly. The fisheries on the banks of Newfoundland, of Cape-Breton, and parts adjacent, commonly known and called by the name of the cod fishery, shall be equally free to the subjects of France, Spain, and the United States, respectively, and they shall mutually engage to protect and defend each other in such commerce.

5thly. The more effectually to preserve this alliance, and to obtain the great object, it shall be agreed that every and any British ship or vessel found or met with on the coasts of North-America, of South-America, or of the islands adjacent, and belonging thereto, and within a certain degree or distance to be agreed on, shall be forever hereafter considered as lawful prize to any of the subjects of France, Spain, or the United Colonies, and treated as such, as well in peace as in war, nor shall France, Spain, or the United Colonies, ever hereafter admit British ships into any of their ports in America, North and South, or the islands adjacent. This article never to be altered or dispensed with, but only by and with the consent of each of the three contracting States.

6thly. During the present war between the United States and Great Britain, France and Spain shall send into North-America, and support there, a fleet to defend and protect the coasts and the commerce of the United States, in consequence of which if the possessions of France or Spain should be attacked in America by Great Britain or her allies, the United States will afford them all the aid and assistance in their power.

7thly. No peace or accommodation shall be made with Great Britain to the infringement or violation of any one of these articles.

I am, with the utmost impatience to hear from you, dear sir, yours, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

MATTHEW TILGHMAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, December 3d, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Hanson and Mr. Chamberlaine arrived here last night, after, I believe, a very fruitless journey to the camp, which they found on the retreat, and is now no doubt at Trenton, being left by our gentlemen on the road thither on Sunday night.

By the best information our General could get, the enemy are between six and seven thousand; his Army now not more than three thousand. If any considerable reinforcement can be sent from hence, he intends to make a stand at Trenton, in case the enemy come forward, which it is generally thought they will, though General Chamberlaine thinks they will not.

The German battalion are nearly ready to march from hence, and every measure is taken to spirit up the Militia to move.

Should the enemy move forward with any degree of speed, I greatly fear our reinforcements will not be in time. A little time will open their designs. If we don't hear to-day of their coming forward from Brunswick, of which they must have possessed themselves on Sunday evening after the retreat of our Army, I shall be inclined to think their aim is not at this place. Where General Lee is, seems not to be known. 'Tis said General St. Clair is on his march with about fifteen hundred men. We had a report indeed yesterday, which for a time gained credit, that Lee and St. Clair were joined with an army of ten or fifteen hundred men, but it dwindled before night into almost nothing. Such is the present situation of our affairs. It is bad enough but may be worse. A few days will determine, and afford us a small respite or greatly add to the distress and confusion of this place.

I can't see how the Council or the Delegates to Congress can suppress any part of the proceedings of Convention.

With great respect, I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

MAT. TILGHMAN.

The Council of Safety of Maryland.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, Trenton, 3d December, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here myself yesterday morning, with the main body of the Army, having left Lord Stirling with two brigades at Princeton and that neighbourhood, to watch the motions of the enemy, and give notice of their approach. I am informed that they had not entered Brunswick yesterday morning, at nine o'clock, but were on the opposite side of the Raritan.

Immediately on my arrival here, I ordered the removal of all the military and other stores and baggage over the Delaware. A great quantity are already got over; and as soon as the boats come up from Philadelphia we shall load them, by which means I hope to have every thing secured this night and to-morrow, if we are not disturbed. After being disincumbered of my baggage and stores, my future situation will depend entirely upon circumstances.

I have not heard a word from General Lee since the 26th last month; which surprises me not a little, as I have despatched daily expresses to him, desiring to know when I might look for him. This makes me fearful that my letters have not reached him. I am informed by report, that General St. Clair has joined him with three or four regiments from the northward. To know the truth of this, and also when I may expect him, and with what numbers, I have this minute despatched Colonel Stewart (General Gates's Aid-de-camp) to meet General Lee and bring me an account.

I look out earnestly for the reinforcement from Philadelphia. I am in hopes that if we can draw a good head of men together, it will give spirits to the Militia of this State, who have as yet afforded me but little or no assistance; nor can I find they are likely to do much.

General Heard just informs me that a person on whose veracity he can depend, has reported to him that on Sunday last he counted one hundred and seventeen sail of ships going out of the Hook.

You may depend upon being advised instantly of any further movement of the enemy's Army, or that of mine.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Trenton, December 3d, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was just now favoured with your letter of the 30th ultimo. Having wrote you fully both yesterday and to-day of my situation, it is unnecessary for me to add much at this time. You will readily agree that I have sufficient cause for my anxiety, and to wish for your arrival as early as possible. In respect to instructions on your route, you must be governed by circumstances. This has been the language of all my letters since I had occasion to call for your aid. The sooner you can join me with your division, the sooner the service will be benefited. As to bringing any of the troops under General Heath, I cannot consent to it. The posts they are at, and the passes through the Highlands, being of the utmost importance, they must be guarded by good men. I would have you to give me frequent advices of your approach. Upon proper information in this instance, much may depend.

I am, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LIEUTENANT-GENERAL HOWE.

Head-Quarters, December 3d, 1776.

SIR: The letter which accompanies this, was designed to have been sent by the gentlemen whose names are in the list it encloses; but by some accident or delay of my messenger, they had left Brunswick before it reached them. Since that time I have been informed that a number of others, both officers and soldiers, are coming on from the State of Pennsylvania. I have directed Colonel Moylan to meet, and to give them a safe conduct to your outposts. He will transmit you a list of their number, names, and ranks, and I shall, as I mentioned in my former letter, soon make a requisition of the like number of equal rank.

I am, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

---

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 3d December, 1776.

MY LORD: I have the honour to enclose to your Lordship a return of ordnance and stores taken from the enemy, since the landing of his Majesty's troops at Frog's Neck, in Westchester County, from the 12th October to the 20th November; those in the Commissary and Quartermaster-General's branches are also very considerable; but as it has not been in their power hitherto to ascertain them, the reports must therefore be deferred to the next opportunity.

I also enclose a return of prisoners taken during the campaign, and am very sorry to add, I find myself under the necessity of detaining them, though at a very great expense and inconvenience, until the Rebels return the King's officers and men, now prisoners with them, for the performance of which, I have had frequent assurances, though hitherto delayed under various pretences. I have even allowed some of their principal officers, at their earnest request, to go to their Congress, and endeavour to expedite the exchange, which, being once effected, I shall soon rid myself of the remaining encumbrance.

In consequence of permission formerly received from his Majesty, I appointed Sir William Erskine Quartermaster-General to this Army, on the 7th October last past. The services he has since rendered in the military line of that department, have sufficiently proved his abilities, and entitle him to every acknowledgment in my power to make, which I am fully sensible is the best plea I can offer in recommendation of my appointment with his Majesty.

I am, &c.,

W. Howe.

—

Return of Commissioned and Non-Commissioned Officers, rank and file, killed, wounded, and missing, belonging to the Army under the command of his Excellency the Honourable General Howe, in several actions, &c., with the Rebels, from the 17th of September to the 16th of November, 1776, inclusive, specifying the different periods, and the Corps the casualties have happened in. Head-Quarters, New-York, 1st December, 1776.

In the action at Pelham Manor, on the 18th of October, and in previous skirmishes, from the 17th of September inclusive:

British.

17th Regiment of Light-Dragoons.—One drummer, missing.
1st Battalion of Light-Infantry.—One Sergeant, two rank and file, killed; one Field Officer, one Captain, one Subaltern, three Sergeants, one Drummer or Trumpeter, twenty-three rank and file, wounded; two rank and file, missing.
2d ditto.—One rank and file, killed; three rank and file, wounded.
2d ditto Grenadiers.—Two rank and file, wounded.
4th Regiment.—One rank and file, missing.
27th ditto.—One rank and file, wounded.
28th ditto.—One rank and file, wounded.
38th ditto.—One rank and file, wounded.
55th ditto.—One rank and file, wounded.
57th ditto.—One rank and file, wounded.
71st ditto.—Five rank and file, killed; seven rank and file, wounded.
Royal Artillery.—One Sergeant, three rank and file, killed.

Total.—Two Sergeants, eleven rank and file, killed; one Field Officer, one Captain, one Subaltern, three Sergeants, one Drummer or Trumpeter, forty rank and file, wounded; one Drummer, three rank and file, missing.

Names of the Officers killed and wounded, &c.

1st Battalion of Light-Infantry.—Captain Eveleyn, of the 4th Regiment, mortally wounded, and since dead; Lieutenant-Colonel Musgrave, of the 40th Regiment, wounded; Lieutenant Archibald Rutherford, of the 22d Regiment, wounded.

N. B. The Sergeant and three rank and file of the Royal Artillery, returned killed, were drowned in East River by the oversetting of a boat the 12th of October.

In the action the 28th of October, in passing the Bronks River, and in previous skirmishes, from the 19th of October, inclusive:

British.

16th Regiment of Light-Dragoons.—One Sergeant, one rank and file, one horse, wounded; one rank and file, missing.
17th ditto.—One rank and file, five horses, killed; subaltern, four rank and file, three horses, wounded.
Brigade of Guards.—One rank and file, killed; two rank and file, missing.
3d Battalion of Light-Infantry.—One rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, three rank and file, wounded.
5th Regiment.—One rank and file, killed; one Field Officer, one rank and file, wounded.
10th ditto.—One rank and file, killed; one rank and file, wounded.
28th Regiment.—One Captain, eight rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, four Sergeants, fifty-three rank and file, wounded.
35th ditto.—One Field Officer, one Subaltern, fifteen rank and file, killed; two Captains, one Subaltern, six Sergeants, thirty-one rank and file, wounded; two rank and file, missing.
37th ditto.—Three rank and file, killed; two rank and file, wounded.
45th ditto.—One drummer, one rank and file, missing.
49th ditto.—One Captain, one Subaltern, one Sergeant, five rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, two Sergeants, seventeen rank and file, wounded.
71st ditto.—Two rank and file, missing.
New-York Company.—One rank and file, wounded.
Queen's Rangers.—Twenty rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, eight rank file, wounded; twenty-eight rank and file, missing.
Royal Artillery.—One rank and file, killed; one Sergeant, one rank and file, wounded.

Total.—One Field Officer, two Captains, two Subalterns, one Sergeant, fifty-seven rank and file, five horses, killed; one Field Officer, two Captains, six Subalterns, fourteen Sergeants, one hundred and twenty-three rank and file, four horses, wounded; one drummer, thirty-six rank and file, missing.

Names of Officers killed and wounded.

17th Regiment of Light Dragoons.—Lieutenant Loftus, wounded.
5th Regiment.—Lieutenant-Colonel Walcott, wounded.
28th ditto.—Captain Deering, killed; Lieutenant Taylor, wounded.
35th ditto.—Lieutenant-Colonel Carr, Ensign Eagle, killed; Captain Fitzgerald, Captain-Lieutenant Massey, Lieutenant Banks, wounded.
49th ditto.—Captain-Lieutenant Gore, Lieutenant Joculyn, killed; Lieutenant Roberts, wounded.
3d Battalion of Light-Infantry.—Lieutenant Saurine, of the 46th Regiment, wounded.

Hessian Corps, &c.

Chasseurs.—Four rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, nine rank and file, wounded; two rank and file, missing.
Grenadier Battalion of Linsing.—One Captain, two rank and file, wounded.
Grenadier Battalion of Block.—One rank and file, wounded.
Hereditary Prince's.—Two rank and file, wounded.
Losberg's.—Six rank and file, killed; one Sergeant, thirty-nine rank and file, wounded.
Kniphausen.—Two rank and file, wounded.
Rall's.—Two rank and file, one horse, killed; one Subaltern, three rank and file, wounded.
Trumback's.—Eight rank and file, missing.
Artillery.—One rank and file, wounded.
3d Regiment of Waldeck.—Thirteen rank and file, missing.

Total.—Twelve rank and file, one horse, killed; one Captain, two Subalterns, one Sergeant, fifty-one rank and file, wounded; twenty-three rank and file, missing.

Names of Officers killed and wounded, &c.

Chasseurs.—Lieutenant De Rau, wounded.
Grenadier Battalion of Linsing.—Captain De Westerhagen, wounded.
Regiment of Rall.—Lieutenant Muhlhausen, wounded.

N. B. The eight rank and file of the Hessian Regiment of Trumback returned missing, were taken prisoners in Staten-Island, the 15th of October.

In the attack of the 16th of November, when the Rebel lines and redoubts near Fort Washington were stormed, and that fort surrendered, &c., with other casualties since the 29th of October and preceding the 16th of November:

British.

17th Regiment of Dragoons.—One rank and file, wounded.
2d Battalion of Light-Infantry.—One Sergeant, three rank and file, killed; two Sergeants, one drummer, seven rank and file, wounded.
4th Regiment.—One rank and file, missing.
10th ditto.—One Captain, three rank and file, killed; five rank and file, wounded.

15th Regiment.—One rank and file, killed; one rank and file, wounded.
23d ditto.—One Sergeant, wounded.
27th ditto.—Three rank and file, missing.
28th ditto.—One rank and file, wounded.
38th ditto.—Six rank and file, wounded.
42d ditto.—One Sergeant, eight rank and file, killed; three Subalterns, four Sergeants, sixty-six rank and file, wounded.
52d ditto.—One rank and file, missing; one Subaltern, one Sergeant, wounded.
71st ditto.—One rank and file, wounded; one Sergeant, missing.
New-York Company.—One rank and file, missing.
Royal Artillery.—One rank and file, killed; one rank and file, wounded.

Total.—One Captain, two Sergeants, seventeen rank and file, killed; four Subalterns, eight Sergeants, one drummer, eighty-nine rank and file, wounded; one Sergeant, five rank and file, missing.

Names of Officers killed and wounded.

10th Regiment.—Captain M'Intosh, killed.
42d ditto.—Lieutenant Alexander Grant, Lieutenant Patrick Graham, Lieutenant Norman M'Leod, wounded.
52d ditto.—Lieutenant Collier, wounded.

Hessian Corps, &c.

Chasseurs.—Six rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, five rank and file, wounded.
Grenadier Battalion of Kohler.—Six rank and file, killed; one Captain, one Sergeant, thirty-three rank and file, wounded.
Regiment du Corps.—Two rank and file, killed; one rank and file, wounded.
Hereditary Prince's.—Two rank and file, wounded.
Wuttginaw.—One Captain, one Sergeant, one Subaltern, thirteen rank and file, killed; two Subalterns, three Sergeants, fifty-nine rank and file, wounded.
Dittforth.—Two rank and file, wounded.
Donop.—One rank and file, wounded.
Losberg.—Five rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, seventeen rank and file, wounded.
Kniphausen.—One Captain, six rank and filled, killed; two Field Officers, one Subaltern, five Sergeants, fifty-eight rank and file, wounded.
Stein.—One Subaltern, one rank and file, killed; one rank and file, wounded.
Rall.—One drummer, two rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, three rank and file, wounded.
Wessembach.—Four rank and file, wounded.
Huyn.—One Subaltern, two rank and file, killed; one Subaltern, four Sergeants, twenty-one rank and file, wounded.
Bunon.—Two rank and file, killed; three Sergeants, twenty-three rank and file, wounded.
3d Regiment of Waldeck.—Six rank and file, killed; sixteen rank and file, wounded.

Total.—Two Captains, three Subalterns, one Sergeant, one drummer, fifty-one rank and file, killed; two Field Officers, one Captain, six Subalterns, seventeen Sergeants, two hundred and forty-six rank and file, wounded.

Names of Officers killed and wounded.

Grenadier Battalion of Kohler.—Captain Hessemuller, wounded.
Wuttginaw's Regiment.—Captain Medern, Lieutenant Lowensfeld, killed; Lieutenant De Lendaw, Ensign De Ende, wounded.
Losberg's Regiment.—Lieutenant De Wurmb, wounded.
Kniphausen's Regiment.—Captain Barkhausen, killed; Lieutenant-Colonel De Borcke, Major De Dichow, Lieutenant Brude, wounded.
Stein's Regiment.—Lieutenant Schwein, killed.
Regiment of Rall.—Captain Walter, killed; Lieutenant Kunen, Ensign Werneck, wounded.
Huyn's Regiment.—Lieutenant Justy, killed; Ensign Wend, wounded.

Return of Prisoners taken during the campaign, 1776.

August 27—Long-Island.

Commissioned Officers.—Three Generals, three Colonels, four Lieutenant-Colonels, three Majors, eighteen Captains, forty-three Lieutenants, eleven Ensigns.
Staff.—One Adjutant, three Surgeons, two Volunteers.
Privates.—One thousand and six; including nine wounded officers and fifty-six wounded privates.

September 15, 16—Island of New-York.

Commissioned Officers.—One Colonel, two Lieutenant-Colonels, three Majors, four Captains, seven Lieutenants.
Privates.—Three hundred and fifty-four.

October 12—White-Plains.

Commissioned Officers.—One Captain, two Lieutenants.
Staff.—One Quartermaster.
Privates.—Thirty-five.

November 16—Fort Washington.

Commissioned Officers.—Four Colonels, four Lieutenant-Colonels, five Majors, forty-six Captains, one hundred and seven Lieutenants, thirty-one Ensigns.
Staff.—One Chaplain, two Adjutants, two Quartermasters, five Surgeons, two Commissaries, one Engineer, one Wagonmaster.
Privates.—Two thousand six hundred and seven.

November 20—Fort Lee.

Commissioned Officers.—One Lieutenant, one Ensign.
Staff.—One Quartermaster, three Surgeons.
Privates.—Ninety-nine.

Total.

Commissioned Officers.—Three Generals, eight Colonels, ten Lieutenant-Colonels, eleven Majors, sixty-nine Captains, one hundred and sixty Lieutenants, forty-three Ensigns.
Staff.—One Chaplain, three Adjutants, four Quartermasters, eleven Surgeons, two Commissaries, one Engineer, one Wagonmaster, two Volunteers.
Privates.—Four thousand one hundred and one.

| | |
|---|---|
| Officers, - - - - - - - - - - - | 304 |
| Staff, - - - - - - - - - - - | 25 |
| Privates, - - - - - - - - - - | 4,101 |
| Total, - - - - - - - - - - | 4,430 |

Jos. Loring, Commissary of Prisoners.

—

Return of Ordnance and Stores taken by his Majesty's Troops in the Redoubts and Lines of the Enemy, from their landing at Frog-Neck, West-Chester County, from the 12*th of* October to the 20*th of* November, 1776.

At Fort Washington, now Fort Knyphausen, and Batteries depending: Iron Ordnance: Four thirty-two pounders, two eighteen ditto, seven twelve ditto, five nine ditto, fifteen six ditto, eight three ditto, two five-and-half-inch brass howitzers.

Fort Independence: Iron Ordnance: Twelve four pounders.

Fort Valentine: Iron Ordnance: Four twelve pounders, ten nine ditto, ten six ditto, thirty-seven four ditto.

Fort Lee: The Rock, Redoubt, and Batteries in the Jerseys: Iron Ordnance: Five thirty-two pounders, three twenty-four ditto, two six ditto, two three ditto, one thirteen-inch brass mortar, one ten-inch ditto; two thirteen-inch iron mortars, one ten-inch ditto, one eight-inch ditto.

On the road leading to Hackinsack, in the Jerseys: Iron Ordnance: Two twenty-four pounders, two eighteen ditto, four twelve ditto, mounted on travelling carriages, four six pounders.

Total.—Iron Ordnance: 9 thirty-two pounders, 5 twenty-four pounders, 4 eighteen pounders, 15 twelve pounders, 15 nine pounders, 31 six pounders, 49 four pounders, 10 three pounders, 2 five-and-half-inch brass howitzers, 1 thirteen-inch brass mortar, 1 ten-inch ditto, 2 thirteen-inch iron mortars, 1 ten-inch ditto, 1 eight-inch ditto.

Shot: Round, loose: 1,087 thirty-two pounders, 272 eigh teen pounders, 2,637 twelve pounders, 300 six pounders, 760 six pounders, 870 three pounders.

Case: 30 thirty-two pounders, 40 eighteen pounders, 340 twelve pounders, 290 nine pounders, 74 six pounders, 39 three pounders, 1,159 double-headed of sorts, 42 boxes for grape.

Shells: 156 thirteen-inch, 311 ten-inch, 1,140 eight-inch, 1,170 five-and-half-inch, 1,200 four-two-fifths-inch.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Powder, barrels, | | 15 |
| Muskets of sorts, | | 2,800 |
| Musket-cartridges, near | | 400,000 |
| Iron, tons, | bar | 20 |
| | rod | 5 |
| Intrenching tools of sorts, | | 500 |
| Armourers' tools, sets, | | 6 |
| Hand-barrows, | | 200 |
| Gin, complete, | | 1 |
| Sling-carts, | | 2 |
| Iron fraise of four hundred weight each, supposed to be intended to stop the navigation of Hudson's river, | | 200 |

A large quantity of other species of stores not at present ascertained.

SAM. CLEAVELAND,
Brigadier-General, Royal Artillery.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN ENGLISH OFFICER, DATED NEW-YORK, DECEMBER 3, 1776.

Most of our provisions are brought by water. As to lodging, you may rest assured we are in no want of room. The General went from hence on the 12th of October, and on the 18th the remainder of the Hessians arrived, who had hardly time to breathe before they were sent on actual service. They have suffered severely in the several actions, particularly in that of Washington fort. Ever since their first landing on Long-Island, the Provincials have borne them a grudge, and they in return have not been backward in showing their dislike.

---

COLONEL MALCOM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp at Niack, December 3d, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here yesterday with about one hundred men and several of my commissioned and non-commissioned officers as volunteers. Love of our country, respect for our General, and the reputation of the regiment, all conspired to incline us to comply with his Excellency's request "to serve until the middle of this month."

I have formed two guards about a mile distant, and opposite the fleet, which consists of two ships-of-war, two galleys, one schooner, a transport brig, and a sloop. The inhabitants are much pleased with our arrival. They were much exposed. The boats landed twice last week, plundered a house, and took off some cattle.

I mount but few sentinels; but depend upon patrols from each guard moving along shore. At this season they are more alert, and in our situation answer for the duty.

Captain Tredwell is with us; will be useful in case of an alarm at night, or their small vessels approaching the shore in the day.

I request your Honour's instructions concerning the publick arms, tents, &c. As there is a respectable guard at Colonel Hay's, perhaps you may consider that as a proper place to deposit them for the present. I also request a whale-boat, to use as a guard-boat. I could also thereby be enabled to communicate to your Honour with more despatch any thing extraordinary that way happening in this quarter.

With due respect, I am your Honour's most obedient and obliged servant,

W. MALCOM.

Honourable General Heath.

---

COLONEL HAY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Haverstraw, December 3d, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Agreeable to your desire, I have informed Colonel Lasher that he must take care of the tents, arms, cooking utensils, and others belonging to his regiment, until you send a party for them. Colonel Malcom and his regiment have consented to stay in the service fourteen days longer, consequently will want theirs. Colonels Drake and Hardenbergh have left this place with their regiments, and I do not know what they have done with their tents, &c.

I am, dear sir, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

A. HAWKES HAY.

To the Honourable General Heath, Peekskill.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Peekskill, December 3d, 1776.

SIR: Your favours of the 27th and 28th of November are before me. I should have sooner acknowledged the receipt of them, had not a multiplicity of pressing avocations prevented. It gives me the highest satisfaction to find my endeavours to serve the publick cause meet with the approbation of so respectable a body as the honourable Convention of the State of New-York.

I have the pleasure also to acquaint you, that by a letter received from his Excellency General Washington, dated at Brunswick, the 29th of November, his Excellency is pleased to express his approbation of my offers of assistance in obstructing the passage of the North River, as it is an object of so much consideration that too much attention cannot be paid to it.

I am sorry to find that a number of soldiers, both sick and well, have obtruded themselves upon you, and thank you for the kind assistance which has been afforded to them. They were not of my division; but having come within the limits of my command, I immediately gave orders for those who were fit for duty to join their regiment, and that a Surgeon of the hospital should attend the sick; and I am surprised this evening to find that the latter has been neglected. I have this evening directed Dr. McKnight to repair to Fishkill to-morrow. He has promised that he will attend, with medicines, &c.

I yesterday ordered to Fort Montgomery a quantity of sheet iron, which is to be forwarded to the Forest of Dean, in order to complete the stores for the use of the Northern Army.

I shall pay a particular attention to the posts and passes on the west side of Hudson's river, which lie within the limits of my command, and shall order over, from time to time, such reinforcements as our strength will admit of, or the exigencies of affairs require. At present, as General Lee is passing that way with a very respectable body of troops, any reinforcement of our posts there is unnecessary.

I thank the honourable Convention for the measures which they have taken to afford speedy aid, in case occasion should require it, on the west side of Hudson's river, by holding the Militia of Orange and Ulster Counties in readiness to march at a moment's notice.

A hospital for the reception of the sick of my department, is extremely wanted. Doctor McKnight, who is my principal Surgeon, acquaints me that the academy at Fishkill is well calculated for that purpose, and has been recommended to him by some gentlemen of the Committee. If it is unimproved, and it should be agreeable to the honourable Convention that it should be used as an hospital, it will benefit the publick. If it should appear disagreeable, a house must be somewhere or another built or fitted up.

I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your most obedient and very humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Vice President of the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York, Fishkill.

---

EZRA THOMPSON TO JONATHAN LANDON.

SIR: According to your orders of the 1st of December, 1776, I have measured the work done by McDonald and his workmen since his last agreement with you and Committee appointed to explore mines in this State, viz: he sunk from the west to the east, five feet depth, and extended the same twenty-four feet in length, and three feet in breadth; he also had sunk from northeast to the southwest, eleven feet in depth, and extended the same two-and-a-half feet in length, and twelve feet in breadth. The above different measures are as exact as I could make. He likewise has drawn a report, the truth of which, as far as I could understand, may be depended on.

Sir, I remain your very humble servant,

EZRA THOMPSON.

December 3d, 1776.

By agreement McDonald was to dig one hundred and eight cubick feet for ten pounds. He has dug six hundred and ninety cubick feet, which, at the rate of ten pounds for one hundred and eight, amounts to sixty-three pounds seventeen shillings and nine pence.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERAL HEATH.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, December 3d, 1776. }

SIR: A petition, supported by a number of affidavits, was this day presented to the Committee of Safety, complaining of depredations committed by Captain Ford and his company, belonging to Colonel Brewer's regiment, of the Massachusetts-Bay, and requesting the interposition of civil authority. You, sir, have, we presume, but too much evidence before you of the rapacity of our troops, who seem to have conspired with a cruel enemy, increasing the misfortunes of those who have unhappily fallen victims to the calamities of war. From your known humanity and benevolence we are fully satisfied that you cannot but resent ravages which disgrace the arms taken up in the most righteous of all causes with abhorrence.

Called upon by numberless complaints of the suffering inhabitants of this State, it has become our duty to see that at least some of the principal offenders be brought to justice, that a stop may be put to such pernicious excesses for the future; and the Committee of Safety have accordingly passed suitable resolutions, which will be transmitted to his Excellency General Washington, with a request that Captain Ford be delivered up, in order to answer for his misconduct in a court of justice. In the mean time I am directed to request you to detain Captain Ford in custody, and to give orders for securing such of the plundered effects as may still be found.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant.

By order of the Committee of Safety:

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Vice President.

To the Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO JOHN ROWE.

In Committee of Safety Fishkill, }
December 3, 1776. }

SIR: This Committee are informed by Mr. John Livingston, that he has purchased a quantity of goods of you for this State, and left in your care four hogsheads. The bearer, Mr. James Weeks, is sent on purpose to bring the goods to this place, which goods you will be kind enough to deliver to him. He has Mr. John Livingston's order to you for that purpose.

We are, sir, your most obedient servants,

JAS. CUYLER,
E. L'HOMMEDIEU,
JOHN MOORE.

To John Rowe, Esq., Boston.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN NATHANIEL PLATT.

Fishkill, December 3, 1776.

SIR: The Committee are informed that Colonel Livingston brought from Long-Island a considerable number of fire-arms. The Convention have therefore directed us that those arms will be wanted in this State. You are recommended to us as a proper person. We request you will apply to Colonel Livingston, and take the arms, appraise them, and transport them to this place, as soon as possible; and for your trouble and expense you will be paid.

We are, sir, &c.,

JAS. CUYLER,
E. L'HOMMEDIEU,
JOHN MOORE.

To Captain Nathaniel Platt, Milford.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN WEEKS.

Fishkill, December 3, 1776.

SIR: You will immediately proceed from here to the town of Boston, with the letter and order herewith delivered you, for Mr. John Rowe, who will deliver you four hogsheads of dry goods, with which you will repair here as soon as possible. For this purpose we have put in your hands the sum of eighty pounds. You will either buy teams or hire them to carry the said goods, as to you may appear most advantageous. You are to do every act in this business with despatch and the least expense.

We are, sir, yours,

J. CUYLER,
JOHN MOORE,
E. L'HOMMEDIEU.

To Captain James Weeks, Fishkill.

Memorandum.—Agreeable to an order of this Committee of Safety, one hundred pounds have been paid by Mr. L'Hommedieu, whereof eighty is paid to Captain Weeks, and twenty detained in his hands, for the removal of the fire-arms.

---

JOHN ELMENDORF TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Kingston, 3 December, 1776.

SIR: I am happy to hear that the Convention entertains such an opinion of my fidelity to our common cause, as to empower me in procuring requisites in order to make our common defence; but am sorry to inform you that at this present time I cannot accept of performing that trust reposed in me, for reason of such daily depredations and plunder of private property at my house. You are sensible when such outrages are committed, in having your doors splintered, forced, &c., it is requisite for an honest man, and a lover of his country's rights, to alleviate the distress of my good family (as they may be called by the world) with my presence. Nothing grieves me more than daily to observe, and be an eye witness to such confusion and turbulent dispositions of the people. I should willingly embrace an opportunity for the service of my country at any other time, so with reluctance might decline, and refer you to some other person for the completion of the trust I was honoured with.

I am, with the greatest esteem and regard for the welfare of the publick in general, your most obedient, humble servant,

JNO. ELMENDORF.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Vice President of the Committee of Safety, at Fishkill.

---

COLONEL GANSEVOORT TO ROBERT YATES.

Albany, 3d December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have this day assumed upon myself to issue instructions to the undermentioned persons, to recruit for my battalion, to wit: Henry Colbrath and McClannen. They are persons whom I did not know till lately, when they were recommended to me by some officers. They are at present Lieutenants in Colonel Nicholson's regiment. I was induced to do this, as they had considerable influence among the men in that regiment, and probably to get them to reengage; and having but few recruiting officers in this quarter, I am under some apprehensions that the men will be gone before I might find others, there appearing so great a reluctance in the young gentlemen in and about Albany to engage in the service, many of Colonel Van Schaick's officers having, as I am informed, declined to accept their appointment.

I shall continue to issue instructions to such gentlemen as I shall approve of, and sending you their names, until otherwise directed by your Committee. I have, however, made no other engagements with the above gentlemen, but that I would recommend them for Ensigns, and that I doubted not but that your Committee would take notice of it; and should they not, that they should be paid as recruiting officers.

I am, sir, with great respect, your very humble servant,

P. GANSEVOORT.

To Robert Yates, Esq., Chairman of Committee of Arrangement.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 27th.]

Saratoga, December 3d, 1776.

SIR: At one this day I was honoured with your favour of the 24th ultimo, covering sundry resolutions of Congress, which shall be immediately published.

The resolution respecting the Pennsylvania and New-Jersey troops, I had already anticipated; and as the troops that had been employed in this department, except the necessary garrisons, were on the march from Ticonderoga when I received the account of Fort Washington's having fallen into the enemy's hands, I ordered seven others of the regular troops to join his Excellency General Washington. The last of those embarked yesterday at Albany, under the command of General Gates.

I am very apprehensive that a sufficient body of troops for the new Army will not be engaged in time to relieve the northern garrisons. I shall make pressing application to the Eastern States to send whatever numbers they can procure.

*

As many of the officers that have served the last campaign are left out in the new arrangement, should not some directions be given to discharge them from the service? I am just now informed that a prize ship is arrived at Boston, with seventeen thousand suits of clothing. I hope the whole will be purchased for the use of the Army.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO MESHECH WEARE.

Saratoga, December 3, 1776.

SIR: The term of inlistment of the troops that now garrison Ticonderoga, Fort George, &c., will expire on the last day of this month, and I fear they cannot be prevailed upon to remain there after that. It is therefore of the utmost importance that troops should be expedited into this department the soonest possible. And agreeable to the enclosed resolution of Congress, I do myself the honour to entreat you to order such parts of each regiment to be raised in your State for this department as can be got ready, to march, so as that they may arrive at Ticonderoga by the latter end of this month.

As it is impossible to prevent the enemy from gaining intelligence of what passes in this quarter, should the troops now at Ticonderoga leave it before others come up to relieve them, General Carleton will doubtless take the advantage of it, and possess himself of that important post; and what the consequences would be are easily conceived. I do not, therefore, doubt but that every exertion will be made by your State to hasten on the troops.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Honourable President of the State of New-Hampshire.

[Same to Massachusetts Council; Governour Trumbull; Governour Cooke.]

---

In Congress, November 22, 1776.

As the necessity of obtaining an Army immediately to oppose the designs of the enemy is so evident and pressing as to render it proper to give all possible facility to that business:

Resolved, That each State be at liberty to direct their recruiting officers to inlist their men, either for the war or three years, upon the respective bounties offered by Congress, without presenting inlisting rolls for both terms, according to a former resolution, keeping it always in view, that in the opinion of Congress, the publick service will be best promoted by inlistments for the war, if the recruiting business is not retarded thereby.

Extract from Resolves.

JOHN LANSING, Jun.,
Secretary to M. General Schuyler.

---

DEPOSITION OF OLIVER JOHNSON AND OTHERS.

The testimony of Oliver Johnson, John Hall, Seth Johnson, John Gilbert, Abel Willcor, and Elisha Brown, is as follows, viz:

The deponents say that they were upon the military watch, kept by order of the Civil Authority and Selectmen of Middletown, in the night season, in the night next after Saturday last; that when they came to the guard-house, at the town-house, they heard the noise of great merriment at Governour Franklin's lodgings, at the house of Jacob Sebor, viz: singing loud, hallooing, shouting, &c., which seemed to proceed from a large company; and Seth Johnson and John Gilbert, for themselves, say, that as they passed by, about half after eleven o'clock, they heard said company roaring out a catch, which began thus: "King George's health, and it shall go round," which seemed to be begun by one, and then the whole company joined in the chorus; and said Abel Willcor and Elisha Brown say, that they heard said company sing a song which begins, "Howe's a brave commander;" and all said deponents declare and say that the noise and uproar of said company continued from the time said guard was set, at nine o'clock, until half after eleven o'clock in the evening, and might, as they judge, have been heard forty rods from said Sebor's. And the said Elisha Brown and Abel Willcor declare and say, that they were ordered by the Captain of the watch, between eleven and twelve, to patrol the streets, and that upon their return they met four of the persons who had spent the evening with Governour Franklin, who they are since informed are Mr. Walton, Colonel Corsa, Mr. Samuel Burling, and Mr. Robert Ross Wadelle, four gentlemen from New-York, supposed to be Tories, and confined here upon their parole. That they upon meeting them, thought it their duty to carry men who had made such a disturbance to the guard-house, and accordingly ordered them to stand, and required them to go with them to the guard-house, which they with some reluctance submitted to and went; when they came there they questioned the right of the guard to detain them; upon which they were desired to read the instructions to the guard, which were stuck up in writing against the wall, which some of them did, and thereupon Mr. Walton acknowledged the guard had pursued their instructions, and endeavoured to convince the other gentlemen of it; but very soon Mr. Burling and Wadelle began to show resentment that they were detained, and Burling pretended an excuse for going into the street; but as it was believed to be a mere excuse, he was not permitted; then a negro boy of Mr. Walton's, who attended them, was permitted to go down, but Elisha Brown suspecting he might intend to escape, opened a window and gave him to understand that if he attempted to escape, he would be within reach of his piece; the boy went and returned, but Mr. Wadelle took upon him to resent said Brown's conduct, and fell into a very violent passion, and threatened said Brown to beat his brains out; and the said Burling also began to abuse and insult said watch. Soon after, Captain Johnson returned, and said Walton and Corsa requesting to be dismissed, and promising to go directly and peaceably to their lodgings, Captain Johnson dismissed them; but said Wadelle and Burling continuing turbulent, and giving the watch abusive language, they were detained, and from this time till they were dismissed by Major Starr, their conduct and language was most outrageous, violent, and wicked, in the course of which said Burling called Captain Johnson a liar, a thief, and a devil, and many other vile and abusive epithets; one or other of them threatened to beat and kill Abel Willcor, John Hall, Elisha Brown and Captain Johnson; Mr. Burling damned the Congress repeatedly, cursed this Colony and all authority in it, wished the Hessians here to cut our throats, and said they would be in a fortnight; called our soldiers and Army cowards; and much more of the like nature; they further say that they uttered the most terrible oaths and curses which they ever heard; they swore by the name of God, by Jesus Christ; and with these and the like oaths, introduced almost every sentence. Mr. Burling said it was no sin to take God's name in vain, and also told John Hall he could not go to Heaven, for he had neither piety nor virtue enough, and beside had not money enough to pay the expenses of the journey. Mr. Burling damned the Continental currency, and said it was good for nothing; and the said Burling several times attempted to strike said Abel Willcor, and also attempted to wrest a large heavy cane out of the hands of said Wadelle to strike said Willcor with. And the said Oliver Johnson and Abel Willcor further say, that soon after said gentlemen were carried to said guard-house, Governour Franklin sent for said Johnson, and he and said Willcor went to him to said Sebor's gate, where he used arguments to show they ought not to be detained; and upon said Willcor replying that they ought to be taken up and detained, the said Governour Franklin replied, (speaking to said Willcor,) "You are a damned villain; I know you; you shall be come up with for this." And these deponents further say said persons were not used with any angry or provoking language, nor had they any insult offered them by any of said watch, neither do they know of any reason for said outrage, insult and provocation, but their being taken up and detained as aforesaid; and further these deponents say not.

OLIVER JOHNSON, JOHN GILBERT,
JOHN HALL, ABEL WILCOR,
SETH JOHNSON, ELISHA BROWN.

Middletown, December 3d, 1776.

HARTFORD County, ss: MIDDLETOWN, December 3d, 1776.

Personally appeared Oliver Johnson, John Hall, Seth Johnson, John Gilbert, Abel Willcor, and Elisha Brown, and made oath that the deposition written in this sheet of paper and by them subscribed, is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Before me,

MATTHEW TALLCOTT, Justice Peace.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Providence, December 3, 1776.

SIR: I think it my duty to inform you that I have just received undoubted intelligence that yesterday morning a large fleet of square-rigged vessels was seen between Block-Island and Montauk, who in all probability are designed for an attack upon this State. When the letters giving me this information were writing, eleven sail were plainly discovered, and before the expresses came away several more hove in sight. The authority of New-Hampshire will make such use of this intelligence as prudence shall suggest, and at all events prepare the force of that State to act as the exigency of affairs shall require.

I am, in great haste, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

NICH'S COOKE.

Honourable Speaker of the Assembly of New-Hampshire.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO MESSRS. PENET & SON.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, New-England, War Office, Boston, 3d December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have lately been constituted by this Government a Board of War, as for other purposes so to get from your part of the world those supplies of warlike stores we yet stand in need of. Having an opportunity from Newburyport to ship a small interest by a chance vessel, we consign it to your house for sale. There may be some small furs and oil, or perhaps oil only. Whatever effects may come to you for our account, please to sell them to the best advantage, and return us the proceeds, freight and all other charges being deducted, in good effective fire-arms, with bayonets, such as are used in the King of France his army, or those that approach nearest to them. There has been a good manufacture of this kind shown to us as a specimen, that was brought by a gentleman from Nantz, belonging to the house of Penet & Gruel, negts sur l'isle fey deau à Nante. This fusil was of a good length, had a well-sized calibre, and a sufficient bayonet and sheath. It had iron clasps and steel ramrod, and well fixed in every part, with a bridle to the lock. This fusil was offered at twenty-two livres Tournois. Please to ship upon the Montgomery, when she returns, the whole amount of this adventure in such fire-arms as above described, if you can procure them, and let them be carefully packed in chests. But as you may not be able to procure good fire-arms, and as we are uncertain at present what interest will be to ship it to you by this vessel, we will mention to you what other articles we want, and you will send them in the course they are mentioned, viz: Five hundred well-made gun-locks, with what the English call good bridles; one hundred and fifty thousand good flints, cost three and a half to four livres per thousand; fifty pounds borax purificata, cost in London about five shillings per pound; ten good brass cannon for field-pieces, carrying three pound ball—if not too dear. If any thing remains after these purchases, please to send it in good raven's duck, fit for soldiers' tents. It generally cost from twenty-two to twenty-seven shillings sterling a piece, of thirty-eight yards and seven-eighths of a yard wide.

It is probable we may make you some further consignments by our own vessels; and in the interim remain with respect your humble servant,

JAMES WARREN,
President of the Board of War.

Messrs. Louis Penet & Son, Merchants at Bordeaux.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO MESSRS. JACKSON, TRACY, & TRACY.

War-Office, Boston, 3d December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your Mr. Jackson mentioning to us your offer to freight a parcel of oil now at Newburyport to Bordeaux in your ship Montgomery, Captain Row. you will oblige us to apply to the owners of said oil, which we suppose to be train oil; and if it be of good quality, and they will take four pounds per barrel, or thirty-two pounds, lawful money, per ton of two hundred and fifty-two gallons, please to purchase the whole for account of Government, provided you will carry it in said ship. We will pay for the freight of it three pounds ten shillings sterling per ton; and if you can afford it for a less sum, we presume you will not insist upon our offer. Enclosed you have a letter to Nathaniel Carter, Esq., also to Mr. John White, with applications to them for some shipping furs they have. If either or both those gentlemen incline to part with them for the service of their country, please to receive them, and ship them per Captain Rowe, for Bordeaux. Enclosed you have a letter to Messrs. Penet & Son, at Bordeaux, which you will please to send forward to them, with an invoice or bill lading, provided you obtain any oil or furs as mentioned.

By order of the Board of War:

JA. WARREN, President.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO JOHN WHITE.

War-Office, Boston, 3d December, 1776.

SIR: This Board having been informed by Mr. Jackson that you have a quantity of small furs by you fit for shipping, and being well convinced of your strong attachment to your country in its present dispute, as they find a great scarcity of exports proper for the European market, and want a great quantity of military supplies from that country, beg leave to ask whether you will spare those furs for an export upon the account of Government. There is an opportunity from Newburyport to ship them. Messrs. Jackson, Tracy & Tracy lately bought a parcel in this town. We are willing to give the same prices they gave, and which they will furnish you with if you incline to let them go. Please to deliver them in shipping order to said Jackson, Tracy & Tracy, and invoice of them; and if you will send us an invoice likewise of the same we will soon provide payment of it.

I am, your humble servant, J. WARREN, President.

Mr. John White, of Haverhill.

[Same to Nathaniel Carter, at Newbury Port.]

---

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, December 3, 1776.

Ordered, That the Secretary be directed to publish in the several Newspapers the following Act.

A true extract from the Minutes.

Attest: JOHN AVERY, Dep'y Secretary.

---

In the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six.

An Act to prevent the forging and altering Bills of Publick Credit, and for preventing the Depreciation thereof, and for making the Bills of Credit of the United Colonies and the Bills of this Government a tender in all payments.

Whereas, by reason of the unjustifiable attacks committed against the United Colonies of America by the troops of Great Britain, and the difficulty of collecting money, plate, and bullion to support the charges of their necessary defence, the Congress of said Colonies have thought fit, for the carrying on the publick affairs and answering the demands of soldiers and seamen employed by them, to order the imprinting and signing a certain number of bills of credit of several sums, by Commissioners thereunto duly appointed and authorized: And whereas the Congress and General Assembly of this Colony have also, for the payment of seamen and soldiers employed in the defence of the same, ordered that a certain number of notes and bills of credit of several sums should be imprinted and signed by Commissioners thereunto duly authorized and appointed: And whereas several of the United Colonies have, by their Governments, severally ordered the imprinting and signing a certain number of bills of publick credit for answering the demands of soldiers and seamen by them severally employed for their necessary defence, all which bills have retained a good currency and have very much facilitated the carrying on of the present war; nevertheless, some wicked persons, intending to defraud the inhabitants of the Colonies aforesaid, and for the sake of base and unlawful gain, have forged, altered, and uttered, several counterfeit notes and bills of the same, in imitation of the true notes and bills of this Colony, thereby imposing a vile cheat on unwary and less discerning persons: For the prevention of which evils for the future,

Be it enacted by the Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That whosoever shall presume to scribe or counterfeit any note or notes, bill or bills, of the tenour, or in imitation of the bills of credit of the United Colonies, established by any resolve of the American Congress, Convention, Congress, or Government of this, or any of the United Colonies of America, or that shall utter any such counterfeit and forged notes or bills, knowing them to be such, or that shall counsel, advise, assist in, or procure the forging, counterfeiting, imprinting, or signing of any such false notes or bills, or engrave any plate, or make any instrument to be used in forging and counterfeiting such notes or bills, every person so offending, and being thereof convicted before the Superiour Court of Judicature, Court of Assize, and General Gaol Delivery, shall be punished by being set on the gallows for the space of one hour, with a rope round the neck, and shall pay a fine, for the use of this Colony, not exceeding thirty pounds, and suffer six months imprisonment, and be publickly whipped not exceeding thirty-nine stripes, and be incapable of holding any office under the Government of this Colony, or shall suffer all or any of the foregoing punishments at the discretion of the Court before whom the trial shall be, according to the nature and circumstances of the offence; and shall pay to the person or persons that shall be defrauded by such forgery treble damages, and if such offender or offenders shall not be able to pay the charges of his or their imprisonment, the Court before whom the conviction is shall order that, at the expiration of said term of imprisonment, such person or persons shall be sold in service a time sufficient to pay the same.

And it is also enacted by the authority aforesaid, That whosoever shall make discovery and give information of such vile and wicked practice of making or knowingly putting off any false and counterfeit note or bill as aforesaid, so that the person or persons guilty thereof may be rendered to justice and convicted, every such informer shall have and receive as a reward for his good services, on every such conviction, the sum of twenty pounds, to be ordered out of the publick Treasury of this Colony by the Council, on a certificate from the Court before whom the conviction shall be, that such person did inform of such offence according to this act.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That every person convicted of altering or increasing the sum of or figures set and expressed in the notes or bills of credit of the said United Colonies, or either of them, or of forging or counterfeiting any hand, name, or stamps, or other private mark that shall be, or has been made or set thereon, shall be for either of said offences punished in the same manner as is provided by this act against those who shall forge or counterfeit such notes or bills.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person shall, directly or indirectly, receive or pay any of the bills aforesaid for a less sum than is in them expressed, such persons shall be incapable ever after of holding any civil or military office in this Colony, and for every such offence pay a fine of forty pounds, to be received before any court of record by bill, plaint, or indictment; one moiety whereof shall be for the use of the person who shall sue or inform for the same, and the other moiety to the use of this Colony.

And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons shall set or offer his, her, or their goods, wares, or merchandise, at a smaller or less price in gold or silver than what they are by him, her, or them, set at in the paper currency of the United Colonies, or either of them, he, she, or they shall pay a fine of twenty pounds; one moiety thereof to the use of the person who shall sue for and recover the same, and the other moiety to the use of the town where the offence is committed.

And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the bills of credit of the United Colonies, established by the American Congress, and the bills of this Government, shall be received in all payments within this Colony, and a tender of the same may be pleaded in bar to any action brought for the recovery of any money or species of money due by deed or simple contract, or in any way and manner whatever.

And all Justices, Sheriffs, Grand Jurors, and Tythingmen, are hereby strictly enjoined and commanded to bring to justice all persons offending against this act or any part of it.

---

CAPTAIN COOK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 4th, 1776.

Honourable Gentlemen: I have got the ship at a wharf, but not without some trouble. I am in hopes, provided this weather proves good, to have the ship at Annapolis some few days before Christmas. I shall do my utmost in getting ready for sea.

In my last I enclosed you two advertisements of the sale of the snow Georgia and cargo, that you may, if thought necessary, appoint the agent for the Province. The other vessel here is all libeled, and I believe the rum in the schooner will soon be sold, as the casks are in bad condition. We shall want rum for the use of the ship, and shall be glad of your advice on that head. I have sent the tender to go in search of an anchor that's left in Potomack; and it will be necessary for Mr. Middleton and his boat to go this occasion, which I am in hopes you'll be pleased to direct.

We shall want for the ship some small sails, of which the enclosed is a list, with the quantity of canvas wanting, which I'm in hopes is in your power to supply me with. Should any thing occur to you relative to the advantage of the ship, I hope you'll please to give me your instructions, that I may closely attend thereto, and shall from time to time inform you how we go on.

The prisoner, Mr. Dennistoon, is discharged from the ship agreeable to your letter to me, and should have done it on the first application, but was informed the Board of Admiralty had the management of that business, and my not seeing them was the reason.

The rum, sugar, &c., on board the schooner Nancy, will be sold on Monday next. We shall want a sufficient quantity for the next cruise. Should be glad you'll appoint some one not belonging to the ship, either to purchase or procure what may be necessary for that purpose.

I have the honour to be, honoured gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

Geo. Cook.

The honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

---

MAT. DRIVER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

December 4th, 1776.

Gentlemen: Enclosed you have the determination of the Court-Martial for the trial of Captain John Fauntleroy. And I think it my duty to inform you, that after the Court came to the enclosed determination, Captain Fauntleroy behaved in a very rude and insolent manner to the said Court, declaring that he did not think himself bound ever to attend the said Court, nor to return to his former duty in battalion, while ever his commanding officer, who complained against him, was continued over him, and offered, in the presence of the Court, to give Colonel Stainton fifty pounds to exchange a ball with him, and at the same time said the Court had prejudged the matter, and looked upon it no more than a mock trial.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

Mat. Driver

The honourable the Council of Safety, Maryland.

---

Melvill's Warehouse, November 16th, 1776.

In pursuance to an order from the Council of Safety, bearing date the 18th day of September last, for the trial of Captain John Fauntleroy, of the Twenty-Eighth Battalion of Militia for this State, I appointed the 16th day of November, 1776, for holding a Court-Martial for that purpose, and give notice of the time and place for holding said Court, to all persons concerned.

And there was present at the time and place, Captains Vincent Price, Nathaniel Potter, John Mitchel, Peter Richardson, and Henry Casson, Sen.

And after fully hearing the allegations of Colonel Benson Stainton, and the evidences on both sides, and considering the same, the Court give judgment that Captain John Fauntleroy pay five pounds, current money, for his offence and breach of duty.

MAT. DRIVER, President.

---

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

"In Congress, December 3, 1776.

"Resolved, That General Washington be directed, in case he has not entered into a negotiation with General Howe for exchanging Governour Franklin for General Thompson, to suspend the execution of that matter till further orders."

Philadelphia, December 4th, 1776.

SIR: The Congress apprehending that in the present state of the Army, and situation of our affairs, an exchange of Governour Franklin might be prejudicial, and attended with some bad consequences, have been induced to come to the above resolution, which I transmit by their directions.

I have the honour to be, with the utmost esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

His Excellency General Washington, at Trenton.

Your favour of 3d instant just come to hand.

---

NEW-YORK DELEGATES IN CONGRESS TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, December 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We received Mr. McKesson's letter, dated the 25th November. We have, according to your request, applied to Congress for leave to our State to raise another battalion, to be commanded by Colonel Dubois, which is agreed to, and a resolve to that purpose is enclosed for employing five Aid-Majors at the expense of our State. Blank commissions for both the battalions and Aid-Majors are herewith sent. There are forty-five blanks, a few more than the number wanted, to serve in case some might be spoiled in filling up. The accounts of the officers of the five battalions is with you to settle. The Congress does not interfere under the new arrangement in the rank of officers appointed by the several States.

General Washington is at Trenton with his Army; General Cornwallis at Brunswick. The city has been in great confusion for some days. Their consternation was great from an apprehension that the enemy would march on to this place; but they have now in a great measure recovered their spirits, and are marching out in considerable numbers to join General Washington; and in a few days our Army will be strong enough to face the enemy. We have no account where our troops under General Lee are at present, but are in hopes, if they are on their march, as is said, that Cornwallis will not proceed any further this way too speedily. If he delays a very few days longer, there is nothing to fear from him.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

PHIL. LIVINGSTON,
FRA. LEWIS,
WM. FLOYD.

To the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Trenton, December 4th, 1776.

SIR: Since I have had the honour of addressing you yesterday, I received a letter from General Lee. On the 30th ultimo he was at Peekskill, and expected to pass the river with his division two days after. From this intelligence you will readily conclude that he will not be able to afford us any aid for several days. The report of General St. Clair's having joined him with three or four regiments, I believe to be altogether premature, as he mentions nothing of it. It has arisen, I am informed, from the return of some of the Jersey and Pennsylvania troops from Ticonderoga, whose time of service is expired. They have reached Pluckemin, where I have wrote to have 'em halted and kept together, if they can be prevailed on, till further orders.

The enclosed is a copy of a letter which came to hand last night from Major Clark, to which I beg leave to refer you for the intelligence it contains. The number of the enemy said to be embarked is supposed to be rather exaggerated. That there has been an embarkation is not to be doubted, it being confirmed through various channels. By Colonel Griffin, who went from Brunswick on Sunday morning with a Captain Sims to pass him by our guards, and who was detained by Lord Cornwallis till Monday evening on account of his situation, the amount of General Clinton's force, from what he could collect from the officers, was about six thousand; as to their destination, he could not obtain the least information. By him I also learn, the enemy were in Brunswick, and that some of their advanced parties had proceeded two miles on this side. The heavy rain that has fallen has probably checked their progress, and may prevent their further movement for some time.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

Tapaan, November 29, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The bearer of this, a private in Colonel Rawlin's regiment, made his escape from the enemy in New-York yesterday. He is an intelligent fellow, and brings information that upwards of ten thousand of the enemy embarked on Sunday last, under the command of General Clinton, the place of their destination uncertain. Some of them informed him they were gone to Carolina, others say to the eastward, (query, if not to the Capes of Delaware?) The number of the enemy at Fort Lee three thousand; at Hackensack about seven thousand, under the command of Lord Cornwallis. Doctor Pell has just made his escape from them. He also confirms the above accounts; but says it was believed by many, the troops under Clinton were gone to Rhode-Island.

I have the pleasure to inform you the stores are all moved from this place. One of our little scouting parties brought off a wagon and horses yesterday from the enemy within a few rods of them; 'tis marked "General Vaughan, No. 1." To-day I march my detachment, in hopes of joining you soon.

Should the above intelligence be of any service, I shall think myself happy; and am your Excellency's most obedient,

JNO. CLARK, Jun., Major.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Head-Quarters, Trenton, 4 December, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 20th last month was delivered to me by the Brigadier Le Roche de Fermoy, who is now here, but unable to render me that service which, I dare say, from his character, he would was he better acquainted with our language.

I yesterday received a letter from you without a date, mentioning that the prisoners from Yorktown were directed to halt at New-Town for my orders. On hearing they were there, I sent Colonel Moylan to conduct them, and the prisoners from Reading, who arrived nearly at the same time, over towards Brunswick and deliver them in.

I hope you have not sent Captain Price, Lieutenant Peacock, and Major Campbell on to this place, as it is highly improper they should see and know the situation of our Army here and at Princeton. They had better be sent up under the care of some person to New-Town or that neighbourhood, and there wait the arrival of some larger party, who, I imagine, will be soon forwarded from Lancaster, and go in with them.

Lieutenant Symes came over to me at Brunswick from Bethlehem without the least guard or escort, and a Lieutenant of the Seventh Regiment went through our whole Army, and was at last discovered by a mere accident. He had a pass from the Council of Safety, and that was all. Such an irregular mode of suffering prisoners to go in alone must be put a stop to, or the enemy will be as well acquainted with our situation as we are ourselves. If they are left at liberty to choose their own route, they will always take that through our Army for reasons too obvious to mention.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To Richard Peters, Esq., War Office.

P. S. I have been obliged to send down a number of our sick to Philadelphia to make room for the troops, and to remove them out of the way. Be pleased to have some care taken to have them properly accommodated. I should think part of the House of Employment might be procured for that purpose. I have ordered down an officer from each regiment, and a Surgeon Mate, if they can be spared. But I hope they will not want the assistance of the visiting physicians of the hospital.

---

GENERAL GREENE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Trentown, December 4th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I embrace this opportunity to write you by Captain Skinner, of the Connecticut Light-Horse, the posts being uncertain, and sometimes the mails intercepted. I have not wrote you a history of the state of the Army so early as I should otherwise have done if those difficulties had not been in the way.

Upon the retreat of the enemy at the White-Plains, his Excellency ordered over the North River the greatest part of the Southern troops. The enemy made a disposition of Dobbs's Ferry, as if they intended to cross the river also. I was then at Fort Lee, opposite Fort Washington. The enemy remained in that situation several days, and then decamped and marched off for New-York. By this his Excellency had arrived at Fort Lee. In three or four days from the time his Excellency arrived, General Howe demanded a surrender of the garrison of Fort Washington; it was refused, he attacked and carried it. The garrison consisted of upwards of two thousand men. The lines were too extensive for that number to defend, and when they retreated into the garrison, so much confusion, disorder, and dispiritedness prevailed, that Colonel Magaw, who commanded the garrison, could not get the troops to man the outworks. We had very few killed, and those that were killed were principally from Colonel Bolling's Virginia regiment, that defended a point of a hill on which Mount Washington was situated. The loss of the enemy, we learn from several accounts, was near seven hundred killed and as many wounded; but we have no accounts that are authentick. The loss of Fort Washington rendered Fort Lee useless. His Excellency ordered it evacuated accordingly. All the valuable stores accordingly were sent off. The enemy got intelligence of it, and as they were in possession of Harlem river, brought their boats through that pass without our notice. They crossed the river in a very rainy night, and landed about five miles above the fort, about six thousand, most accounts say eight thousand. We had then at Fort Lee only between two and three thousand effective men. His Excellency ordered a retreat immediately. We lost considerable baggage for want of wagons, and a considerable quantity of stores. We had about ninety or a hundred prisoners taken, but these were a set of rascals that skulked out of the way for fear of fighting. The troops at Fort Lee were mostly of the Flying-Camp, irregular and undisciplined. Had they obeyed orders, not a man would have been taken. I returned to the camp two hours after the troops marched off. Colonel Cornwell and myself got off several hundred, yet notwithstanding all our endeavours, still near a hundred remained hid about in the woods. We retreated to Hackensack; from Hackensack to Equaconeck, from Equaconeck to Newark, from Newark to Brunswick, from Brunswick to this place. Here we are endeavouring to collect a sufficient force to give the enemy battle, or at least to stop their progress.

We have had another convincing proof of the folly of short inlistments. The time for which the five months men were engaged, expired at this critical period. Two brigades left us at Brunswick, notwithstanding the enemy were within two hours' march and coming on. The loss of these troops at this critical time, reduced his Excellency to the necessity to order a retreat again.

Here we are endeavouring to draw our force together. The Philadelphia and Pennsylvania Militia turn out with great spirit; but the Jersey Militia behaves scurvily, and I fear are not deserving the freedom we are contending for. General Lee is on his march for this place, and part of the Ticonderoga troops. When we get collected together, I am in hopes it will be a respectable body of troops.

The enemy spread desolation wherever they go. The British and Hessian troops plunder without distinction; Whig and Tory all fare alike. I am in hopes the General will give orders to advance upon the enemy to-morrow. Our numbers are still small, not to exceed five thousand, but daily increasing. When we left Brunswick we had not three thousand men—a very pitiful army to trust the liberties of America upon. The American States should establish their Militia upon the British plan; they would be a much better body of troops. It would do less injury to husbandry, manufactures, and commerce, than upon the present establishment. The distresses of the people would be infinitely less, for then whose lot it fell to serve would naturally accommodate their business to their situation. A Militia upon the British establishment are a respectable body of troops, and afford a great internal security to a State. They are subject to such a degree of discipline and order as renders them formidable; and without that, numbers are useless, nay distressing, for you cannot bring them to act to any one point; and you have a great many useless and unprofitable mouths to feed.

The vacancies you referred to his Excellency and me to fill up, was referred to Hitchcock and Varnum. How they have completed the corps of officers I have not learned—I hope to their own satisfaction, if to nobody's else. I wish the inlisting may go on favourably; but I fear the contrary. The success of privateering has set all the troops distracted. 'Tis impossible to oppose the enemy successfully without a good firm body of troops, subject to proper discipline and well officered. Our men are good: nothing wanting, but officers and discipline, are necessary to make the American troops equal to any in the world. I have not time to look over the letter, and must beg your excuse for any defects, for I have only a few moments to write. I did not know of the opportunity till within a few moments.

I am, dear sir, with the greatest respect, your obedient servant,

Nathanael Greene.

---

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp Ramapough, 4th December, 1776.

Sir: Six companies of Colonel Tyler's regiment returned to camp last night. They have brought with them six pipes of Madeira wine; ten barrels of wine in bottles, much broken and wasted, said to be Teneriffe; one box of soap; all which wait your orders. The last article is much wanted here as it can be any where. I will venture to say as much of the wine, at least of part of it. The officers will be glad of some of it on some terms or other. Part of the wine is marked "Gabriel Ludlow."

The two other companies of Tyler's regiment are at Haverstraw; their baggage goes from us this night.

Colonel Tyler tells me there are eleven chests of armourers' tools, besides bellows, anvils, &c., in the care of Abraham Post, at Tapon, who promised to put them into a store of Abraham Maybre's, at the Slote. He thinks they are very safe with the present keeper, and that there is safe passage for boats from that to Haverstraw.

I am, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

Jed. Huntington.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Haverstraw, December y^e^ 4th, 1776.

Dear General: I have received your pressing letter; since which intelligence was sent to me that you had quitted Brunswick, so that it is impossible to know where I can join you. But although I should not be able to join you at all, the service which I can render you will, I hope, be full as efficacious. The Northern Army has already advanced nearer Morristown than I am. Shall put myself at their head to-morrow. We shall upon the whole compose an army of five thousand good troops in spirits. I should imagine, dear General, that it may be of service to communicate this to the corps immediately under your command. It may encourage them, and startle the enemy; in fact, their confidence must be risen to a prodigious height if they pursue you, with so formidable a body hanging on their flanks or rear. I shall clothe my people at the expense of the Tories, which has a double good effect—it puts them in spirits and comfort, and is a correction of the iniquity of the foes of liberty. It is paltry to think of our personal affairs, when the whole is at stake; but I entreat you to order some of your suite to take out of the way of danger my favourite mare, which is at Hunt Wilson's, three miles the other side of Princeton.

I am, dear General, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Haverstraw, 4th December, 1776.

SIR: The troops here are so distressed for rum this rainy weather, that I must request you'll immediately forward ten hogsheads of rum down to Colonel Hay's landing in Haverstraw creek.

I am, sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE, Major-General.

To Major-General Heath.

---

COLONEL MALCOM TO GENERAL SCOTT.

Camp Niack, December 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I had the honour to write you by Dr. Bowen yesterday, concerning the bounty for the men. I hope ere now he is on his way homeward therewith. The choicest of the men continue with me, are exceedingly hearty, and in high spirits. I could increase their number very speedily if there was occasion, but neither the duty nor time of service would justify my putting either this State or the Continent to that expense.

When I marched from Haverstraw on Monday, Captain Steward's men refused to follow the regiment, insisted that their time of inlistment was expiring. I thought it prudent to disarm what of them I could find, viz: five out of eight, the whole complement.

Captain Steward appeared yesterday from Convention, where he had been to settle his accounts, and in his way picked up his men at Haverstraw. Tells me he had instructions to continue with the regiment while in service; but as it would answer no purpose to keep them here, (were they even good ones,) and as their behaviour has been so indifferent that the soldiers object to stand in the ranks with them, I have advised Stewart to proceed to Fishkills, and take further orders from the Convention. With respect to him, I have considered him a sober discreet man, and I believe a brave soldier, and I dare say might have distinguished himself if his bad state of health had not prevented his attending his duty through the campaign. I have had repeated evidences of his attachment to the freedom and independency of America and honour of her arms.

As these fellows have chosen the alternative of forfeiting their pay rather than do duty, the residue, after their regiment's debts are paid, shall be at the disposal of the honourable Convention to reimburse their bounty and lost arms, unless they think proper to take another heat at making them soldiers.

I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you before I leave this part of the world, at least of having a few lines from you; being, with much respect, your Honour's most obedient servant,

W. MALCOM.

To the Honourable General Scott, Fishkills.

---

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

North-Castle, 4th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Enclosed I send you returns of some of the regiments of Connecticut Militia under command of Major-General Wooster, such as I can get; though I have called and called again and again for them, I believe there are but one of them really true, that is Major Brinsmade's, who seems to be the honestest man. The fact is, they can't make their weekly and provision returns agree; for this reason, they have made a number of brevet officers. They doubt whether these officers will be allowed extra rations: to avoid that, they return so many more men as to cover the extra rations for those officers. You'll see by adverting to the returns, that some companies have more officers than privates at best; but not content with that, and instead of sending home the officers who have very few men, almost none, and turn those few men over into other companies, they add brevet officers, not only to pick the pockets of the publick here, but also by and by those brevet officers are to be dismissed from the Militia rolls at home, and in a few times more being called forth, there will be no Militia left in the State. These things I thought it my duty to report to you, as the character of the State is at stake; and how the officers who have done these things will get along here I don't know, as we now make weekly ration returns as well as returns of the Army, by which they must be discovered The consequence is bad to the officers; however, they must take their fate. I am sorry to have the character of the State suffer by such conduct of its officers.

We have nothing material that is new. General Washington's head-quarters are at New-Brunswick; the enemy at Elizabethtown on this side. No troops this side New-York Island. It is said that a fleet of five hundred sail are lying on this side Hell-Gate, bound down the Sound with the first wind; that they are to ravage the sea-coasts as they go, and to winter at Newport; and it is added by others, that four brigades are to march along the coast at the same time on the land. This may be the case, but the numbers are too great to be credited. That smaller numbers are going is not improbable. The present weather is much against them. We may expect winter after these rains. It may be well to be in preparation, as far as may be, for such an event. I shall go to Peekskill as soon as the rain is over, and I much expect to meet General Gates and brother John there. I believe I shall go from thence to Philadelphia next week.

I am, honoured sir, your dutiful son,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

Governour Trumbull.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL MALCOM.

Peekskill, December 4th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have just received your favour of yesterday's date. The noble principles which animated you and the brave officers and soldiers of your regiment, to continue a little longer in the service at this critical time, cannot fail to ensure both you and them lasting honour. They are entitled to the thanks of their countrymen. They have mine, and heartily.

I approve of the disposition which you have made of your regiment, and doubt not but the inhabitants will be protected from any further insults from the enemy.

I intended to have ordered Captain Treadwell to this post; but as he may be of service to you, he shall remain with you for the present.

The tents, arms, utensils, and ammunition, may be lodged at Colonel Hay's for the present. If a whale-boat can be spared it shall be sent to you.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

W. HEATH.

Colonel Malcom.

---

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fort Montgomery, 4th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 2d of this instant, I just now received by way of Fort Constitution. You will see by the enclosed note from Major Barker, from Fort Independent, that there is a quantity of lime on board of Ackerman's sloop there, which Colonel Thompson received from on board of one Burnet's sloop, for the use of the barracks at that place, about the time the men-of-war came last up the river, which I knew nothing of. By what I hear there must be about two hundred bushels, which will be more than I want at present. I thought Mr. Campbell had taken the brick I acquainted him of. As he has not, there must be twenty thousand there, except a few that Colonel Thompson had for the use of the barracks at Fort Independent. I have desired Major Barker to send the sloop down that has the lime on board to where the brick kiln is; to take in seven thousand brick, and send her up to this fort as soon as possible. As there will be more lime than I want, I would be glad to know if any be wanted at Peekskill; if not, I would unload the sloop here, and if wanted, would send her down. I suppose there will be brick left at the brick kiln, which is at one Jacob Halsted's, on the west side the river, below the Dunderbergh. He was to deliver them at this fort at the rate of thirty shillings per thousand for hard brick, and twenty shillings for soft brick, as I assisted him with two men to burn them. Mr. Campbell had better send for the remainder of them if wanted at Peekskill.

I have not received the sheet-iron yet which is designed for stoves, that you ordered here for Mr. Patrick. I would be glad to see your Honour here, and have your opinion of what work is the most necessary to be done, as we will not be able to do much more than to get wood, and mend the roads, finish the barracks, &c., &c.

I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To the Honourable Major-General Heath, Head-Quarters, Peekskill.

---

WILLIAM DUER TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Fishkill, December 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I transmit you, by order of the Committee appointed by the Convention of the State of New-York for the purpose of inquiring into, detecting, and defeating all conspiracies formed in the said State against the liberties of America, copies of two resolutions of their Board of this date; the first respects the disposal of sundry prisoners who have been sent into your State for notorious disaffection to the American cause.

It was with great reluctance that this Committee found themselves necessitated to trouble you with men whose principles are so dangerous to the liberties of mankind, and they have adopted with infinite pleasure an expedient which will probably render them useful to the general cause in which we are engaged, and wean them from those poisonous tenets which have been instilled into many of them, by associating with crafty and designing abettors of the wicked usurpations of the British King and Parliament. As most of those persons who have been seduced to take part with our open enemies were flattered by the prospect of self-interest, it may naturally be expected that an operation of the same principle will by degrees lead them to support a cause by which their fortunes may be improved.

The other resolution which I have the honour to transmit you, is a tribute justly due to Lieutenant-Colonel Welch, who has been stationed at this place by order of General Washington since the 15th of October last. If a strict attention to order and regularity amongst soldiers and a deference to the civil authority, are qualifications which deserve commendation in the military officers of a free State, this gentleman is happy enough to possess them in a very eminent degree.

It was upon this principle that the Committee over which I have the honour to preside, directed me to return their thanks to that worthy officer; and to transmit you a copy of the same, in full hopes that his services may be distinguished in the State to which he belongs, and that he may have an opportunity of exerting in a higher sphere the inclination and abilities he possesses to serve his country.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

WILLIAM DUER.

The honourable the Council and General Court of the State of New-Hampshire.

---

In Committee appointed by the Convention of the State of New-York, for the purpose of inquiring into, detecting, and defeating all conspiracies which may be formed in said State against the liberties of America:

Fishkill, December 4, 1776.

Resolved, That the Council and General Court of the State of New-Hampshire be authorized to permit the Prisoners who have been removed by this Committee to said State, to enter on board any of the Continental or private ships of war, excepting such persons who are confined in Jail in said State for treasonable practices against the State of New-York; and that Lieutenant-Colonel Welch be requested to coöperate with the said Council and General Court in executing this resolution.

Resolved, That a Letter be written to the Council and General Court of the State of New-Hampshire, transmitting them a copy of this resolution.

Extract from the Minutes:

ROB'T BENSON, Secretary.

---

In Committee appointed by the Convention of the State of New-York for the purpose of inquiring into, detecting, and defeating all conspiracies formed in the said State against the liberties of America:

Fishkill, December 4, 1776.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee that Lieutenant-Colonel Welch is entitled to the thanks of the Representatives of this State, for the attention he has shown in executing the orders of this Committee, as well as for the care he has taken to support good order and regularity amongst his troops whilst stationed at this place; and therefore, that the Chairman be requested, in the name of this Committee, to express their hearty approbation of his conduct; and that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Council and General Court of the State of New-Hampshire.

WM. DUER, Chairman.

Attest: ROBERT BENSON, Secretary.

---

PETER R. LIVINGSTON TO ROBERT BENSON.

Manor Livingston, 4th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Am extremely obliged to you for your kind favours. I have just returned from New-Haven, and have occasion to send the bearer hereof down to Commissary Trumbull, and have ordered him to call on you to inquire where he may hear of him, whether at Peekskill or North-Castle, as you'll direct him, and on his return let me know where our Army is, and what force the enemy has this side King's Bridge. I shall set out the day after this express returns, as it relates entirely to publick business.

Am, sir, with regards to all the gentlemen, your very humble servant,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

To Robert Benson, Esq., Fishkill.

---

J. TRUMBULL, JUN., TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, 4th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I have none of your favours since Brown was here. Is he not coming again? As I wrote you in my last, matters this way are growing unimportant; the troops are almost all from Ty, save those who remain the winter. General Gates, with General Arnold, my brother, &c., and several regiments, are gone from here to join the Army below. Their assistance perhaps will not be needed; in that case brother Jack will be at liberty for some part at least of the winter.

I send you another piece of Indian intelligence, lately sent me per Mr. Kirkland.

The people here are much surprised, not to say uneasy, at the return of so many of their Tories, some of whom are the most dangerous of any they sent away. Was it not they fear giving offence, these Tories would not be suffered to stay a moment. I wish we knew better how to treat our enemies. I hope soon to be at Lebanon for the winter.

I am your dutiful son, J. TRUMBULL, Jun.

Honourable Governour Trumbull.

---

J. ROORBACK TO ROBERT YATES.

Albany, December 4th, 1776.

SIR: These waits on you with my sincere regards; and after informing you of my good health, which blessing I hope you enjoy, may serve to beg the favour of you to let me know for what reason my step-son, John Visscher, was passed by in the new appointment; and to beg the favour of you (if there is any remedy left) to have him appointed, as you know his military ability and zeal in the cause, his numerous family, &c.

You'll be pleased to remember that he is an old officer, having acted as Captain in two campaigns last war. In this he raised a company, and was the first that marched from this County with a company to the northward, where his behaviour was such as to merit the esteem of the late worthy General Montgomery, who took him along (when none of the Field Officers of his regiment were ever present) to Canada, where he was along-side that brave General when he was slain, and he endured the fatigue of the winter campaign, and was the last man who left Canada in the shameful retreat. He has been honoured with a Lieutenant-Colonel's commission by the Honourable John Hancock, upon the recommendations of several Generals who saw his behaviour and conduct. Now to be neglected, and boys, when he was a man in service, put over his head, chagrins him much, and I think is a discouragement to officers to behave well, and consequently a hurt to the cause in general.

Your laying these matters in their proper place, and using your interest in his behalf, for the reasons first above mentioned, will lay under the greatest obligations, not only him, but, sir, your humble servant,

J. ROORBACK.

To Robert Yates, Esq., Fishkill.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Lebanon, 4th December, 1776, half past 9 o'clock, a. m.

SIR: This moment received, under cover with mine, the enclosed for President Bowdoin, of the Massachusetts. Coming open to me, have enclosed it to you to observe the contents, to seal and forward immediately by express. General Lee was crossing the ferry nigh Peekskill, the 1st December, going into the Jerseys. Rogers, the famous, or rather infamous, Rogers, who commanded the Rangers in the British service, is disgraced.

This State have declined meeting by Commissioners at Providence, to consider and join in measures for securing the bills of credit current in these States against depreciating; the reasons were that the honourable Continental Congress were taking up the subject, and the fears we had that such step would occasion jealousies in the other States, and endanger so cordial a Union.

This State have made the Continental and its own bills of credit a legal tender in all payments, and in the Treasury. A tax of seven pence on the pound, in the publick list, is made payable the 10th of May next. The collecting warrants are now out. The prices of the most essential articles are fixed, and an embargo laid on them. We wish to assist all in our power for securing the rights of the United States.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JON'TH TRUMBULL.

Honourable Governour Cooke.

---

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, December 4, 1776:

Voted, That Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., be, and he is hereby authorized and desired to draw a letter of credit in favour of the Captain or Commander of the ship Oliver Cromwell, to be made use of to obtain necessary repairs or supplies for said ship in any foreign port where she may fall; and the said Mr. Shaw shall be indemnified by the State against all damage that may accrue to him by means thereof.

A true copy. Attest: BENJ. HUNTINGTON, Clerk.

---

New-Haven, December 4, 1776.

Saturday evening last the flag of truce lately at New-London, stopped in this port; the manner of her coming in gave some suspicion that their designs were not good, and the officer was taken into custody and examined by the Magistracy of the town, who, after a proper examination, acquitted him, and Monday morning the vessel pursued her voyage to New-York.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Providence, December 4th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received your resolve of this day, and note the contents of it. I now let you know that I have long had orders from the honourable Marine Committee to get all the vessels out as soon as I could man them. I should be glad that your honourable Board would devise some way to complete their men, and likewise some way that the great number of deserters may be sent on board, a considerable number of whom are now in this State.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island; to be laid before the Committee of said State.

---

ALEXANDER WILSON TO MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR.

December 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As you pleased to desire proposals from me to go a voyage to Europe, as master of one of the ships under your direction, I present you the following, viz: 1st, I must approve of the ship and voyage; 2dly, the cargo not to be less than £3,000; 3dly, I must have five per cent. commissions for sales and two-and-a-half for purchase clear at "Carolina;" 4thly, to have eight tons privilege out; 5thly, eight pounds per month wages; 6thly, to be despatched immediately as soon as may be; 7thly, not to have a prisoner for a mate. Two tons privilege home.

Gentlemen, I wish not to value my services more than they are worth. I doubt not men may offer to go for half of what I ask, who know nothing about the voyage, nor, perhaps, how to put the ship about.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

ALEX. WILSON.

To the honourable Committee of War.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO HUGH ORR.

Board of War, Boston, 4th December, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War being informed that you are now ready to treat for casting a number of cannon, are desirous of seeing or hearing from you as soon as may be respecting that business, as they are anxious to procure every article necessary for the defence of the State, with the greatest possible despatch.

By order of the Board:

J. WARREN, President.

Hugh Orr, Esq., Bridgewater.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO CAPTAIN AYRES.

Board of War, Boston, 4th December, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby ordered to proceed to sea, for the purpose of reconnoitering a fleet said to be off Block-Island: to look into Cape Cod harbor. If you meet with the fleet off the Cape, either return or run into Chatham. Apply to Colonel Doane, or otherwise send any accounts you may think proper by express to Brigadier Otis, of Barnstable, with directions to forward the same to the Board of War immediately. If you discover nothing off the Cape, run round the east end of Nantucket, looking if possible into the Vineyard Sound, where if you make any discoveries, run into Hyanniz, the Vineyard, or Woods's Hole, and send express as aforesaid. If you discover any thing in the South Channel, you will do well to push for Nantucket, Chatham, or Hyanniz, and send express to Brigadier Otis as aforesaid, or if you go into any other place, send by express the quickest intelligence possible; and in general, you will use your best endeavours to discover and inform the Board of the motion of the fleet.

By order:

J. WARREN, President.

Captain John Ayres.

---

MAJOR CUSHING TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Pownalborough, December 4th, 1776.

Having received the honour of an appointment to the second Majority, in the Second Regiment of Militia, in the County of Lincoln, the duties of which office, from the weakness of a declining state of health, I am unable to execute, and which a due regard to the welfare of my country forbids me longer to retain, your Honours, therefore, will please to accept my resignation of said office, with my most respectful acknowledgments for the same. Any service which may be in my power to render my country, will be done with the greatest cheerfulness.

I have the honour to be, with the profoundest respect, your Honours' most obedient and very humble servant,

ROLAND CUSHING.

The honourable the Council of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay.

---

NOAH M. LITTLEFIELD TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Wells, December 4th, 1776.

TO THE HONOURABLE BOARD: I have received a letter from the Secretary by your Honour's direction, which shows the honour conferred on me in the appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel in a battalion now raising, whereof Ebenezer Francis, Esq., is Colonel. I thank your Honours for the undeserved favour conferred on me, and am ready and cheerful to serve in the American Army for the defence of the United States of America, and hope my conduct will do honour to the appointment.

From your humble servant,

NOAH M. LITTLEFIELD.

---

M. LOTBINIERE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Translation.]

SIR: I arrived at Boston (coming from St. Pierre de Miquelon, and having passed by Chatham and Harwick to Cape Cod,) on the 19th of last month, about nine o'clock in the evening. The next morning, 20th of said month, I sent a letter, which I had written beforehand, to Mr. Franklin, not then knowing that he had sailed for France three weeks previously, and did not know it till the moment of the departure of the post. I instantly went to the post-office, and not having time enough to have the honour to write directly to you, I requested you, on the back of the cover to Mr. Benj. Franklin, to have the goodness to open that letter, as though it were addressed to you; to be pleased to make the same use of it as Mr. Franklin would have done had he been there; and to grant me the favour of supplying his place in regard to every thing it contained, both on the subject of my son and on every other subject. I hope, sir, that that letter will have been transmitted to you, as well as the one to my son, which it covered, without being sealed, in order that you might know what it contained; but in case it might have been suppressed, I will, in a few words, repeat to you what I stated to Mr. Franklin. I informed him that I had spent the whole of April and May last at Versailles and Paris; that I had there had several conferences with M. le Comte de Vergennes, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and with many other of the most important personages in France, all of whom had appeared to me to take the liveliest interest in your cause, and that I reserved myself for conversing more fully with him about every thing when I should have the honour to rejoin him at Philadelphia; that in the mean while, and knowing that I was sufficiently au fait with the profession of war to be able to give some good advice as to the present situation of affairs, my opinion was to carry on the war to the close of the campaign which is approaching in the manner of Fabius: closing upon the enemy as much as possible, taking care to keep in the rear all kinds of provisions, and also all the stores of munitions and other things; to lay waste entirely the country you should be obliged to abandon, so that he should not be able to find any resource for penetrating further, but especially to avoid engaging in a general action with him, which, if lost, would put it out of your power to collect together in time reinforcements to support you. I must add, that whatever manœuvres he may make to withdraw you from the mountainous passes of the North River, you must regard them as the most precious points for your preservation, and as the most easy to defend against the kind of troops he can bring against you with the kind of troops you have to oppose to him, who, in the woods and mountains, will have all the advantage they can ever have over regular troops, who, in such a position, are not worth the tenth part of what they would be worth in the open field: it is there where your only bulwarks ought to be located to arrest ships and the army of the enemy, which I regard as lost if it decide to bring on an engagement in those regions. Your plan elsewhere I think ought to be to keep your Army in flying camps around the enemy and to flutter continually around him, to destroy and consume him by the fire of your musketry, and especially by that of some field-pieces. When I shall have the honour to see you, sir, we shall be able to extend our ideas much further over all our war manœuvres, and even to some points of policy and precautions to be taken, which I look upon as the soul of war when we desire that it should succeed perfectly.

You will perhaps, sir, regard me as too presumptuous to pretend to be an adviser without having yet the honour of being known to you, and only to those who among your people have been enabled to be acquainted with the most accurate manœuvres of the last war in Canada; but when you shall learn that the whole system of defence in that country, after the defeat of Baron de Dieskau, until the close of 1758, was solely my own, and that it ceased to be pursued only in the campaign of 1759, in which the Sieur Pont le Roy, a much older Engineer than I, and who arrived in the summer of 1758, determined absolutely, in his mode of defence, to pursue the reverse of all that I had planned; that, besides, every one of the Generals in France of the present day, who are acquainted with the war manœuvres in Canada, and the plans laid down by me for its defence in every particular, accord in saying that it was demonstrated that it never would have been taken if they had been constantly followed, you will then know that with the most determined will to make you succeed in every thing, and accompanied with the general confidence of those whom I have cited, I am pardonable in speaking out at once without further ceremony, and in hazarding fearlessly the counsels which I esteem absolutely indispensable the moment after what I have learned since my arrival in this country and from the knowledge I have of the present theatre of the war: (five years ago I travelled from Canada to New-York, by Lake Champlain, St. Sacrament, and the North River.) A great attention, and the principal one to give, is to prevent all the evil that the Tories can do to your State. I look upon them as the enemies you have the most to fear, from the moment that I perceived all their plots at Cape Cod; and that which the Committee of this Province has just decreed is the only means of putting a sudden stop to this pest, which would ruin your State from the very moment of its birth. But the law must be put into execution without any consideration, and I will answer that only three examples will be sufficient to unite together at once all your subjects, and perhaps to drive off your enemy very promptly if he no longer sees any mode of dividing you, which, I believe, has always been his greatest hope.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest consideration and respect, sir, your very humble and obedient servant,

THE MARQUIS DE LOTBINIERE.

Boston, at Thomas Russell's, near the Towne-house, Wednesday, 4 December, 1776.

P. S. I would be very much flattered at being furnished with orders sufficiently precise to enable me to go to you, sir, without having reason to fear the slightest accident, for me, for my suite numbering only two at present, nor for my baggage.

---

VOTE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE FOR RAISING FIVE HUNDRED MEN FOR THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.

4 December, 1776.

The Committee appointed to consult upon the best ways and means for answering the late requisition of General Washington for raising part of the Militia in this State, &c., made report, (as on file,) which report is received and allowed, and thereupon Voted, That five hundred men be drafted from the several Regiments in this State as soon as possible, and officered and sent to New-York; that the wages of the officers and men be the same that is given by the State of Massachusetts-Bay; that the Field Officers of the regiments aforesaid appoint the Captains and Subalterns of the companies in their respective regiments.

Sent up for concurrence:

SAM'L CUTTS, Speaker pro tem.

In Council the same day adjourned.

E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Exeter, 4 December, 1776.

SIR: I have had of late opportunity to converse with Indians of the St. François tribe; and perceiving the Indians are informed by our enemies in Canada that it is impossible for our States to supply them with articles they need, and of course they must be wholly beholden to, and must join them;—in order to counteract their plan, I inform them that it is in our power to supply them as reasonably as they can be supplied in Canada; and have hired an Indian, with two men ordered by Captain Ames, to proceed to the Indian hunting ground, to inform the Indians that we are ready to supply, if they choose, at Upper Coos, in exchange for beaver, &c., as reasonably as they can be supplied in Canada; to inform them we are the same as to them as twelve years past; that we wonder they should make themselves strange; that we don't mean to entreat them, but to inform and undeceive them.

For the service of the Indian I promised him a blanket, and his squaw and three children one each. Should think it would be a great saving to this State if some supplies for Indians be conveyed to Upper Coos, and directed to be exchanged reasonably with them for furs, &c.; for if the Indians trade with us we need no soldiers. I thought it duty to give information.

Beg leave to subscribe myself, your very humble servant,

JACOB BAYLEY.

To the honourable the Speaker of the House of Representatives for State of New-Hampshire.

---

Memoranda of articles suitable for INDIANS, viz:

2 dozen blankets, white or blue;
2 do. shirts, coarse, white or check;
30 yards half-tick, or other cloth equal thereto;
Powder and lead.

At present the above is as much as will be needed at Upper Coos.

---

Charlestown, S. C., December 5, 1776.

By two vessels arrived here from the West-Indies, we have accounts of an armed brig of sixteen guns, commanded by Captain Christopher Whipple, being taken by the Portland man-of-war, of fifty guns. It is said that the master of a Dutch vessel, which he spoke with, led him into the snare, by informing him that the Portland, then in sight, was a large West-Indiaman; he suspected nothing, immediately bore down, and too late discovered his errour.

---

Return of the Six Independent Companies and First Regiment of MARYLAND Regulars in the service of the UNITED STATES, commanded by Major GIST.

| | OFFICERS PRESENT. Commissioned. Colonels. | Lieutenant-Colonels. | Majors. | Captains. | First Lieutenants. | Second Lieutenants. | Third Lieutenants. | Ensigns. | Staff. Chaplains. | Paymasters. | Adjutants. | Quartermasters. | Surgeons. | Mates. | Non-Com'd. Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Rank and File. Present, fit for duty. | Sick, present. | Sick, absent. | On command. | On furlough. | Total. | Wanting to complete. Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Privates. | Alterations since last Return. Inlisted. | Dead. | Discharged. | Deserted. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Captain Gunby | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 3 | 1 | 30 | - | 44 | - | - | 74 | - | - | 22 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Hendman | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 18 | - | 70 | - | - | 88 | - | - | 8 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Thomas | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 82 | - | - | 82 | - | 2 | 14 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Woolford | - | - | - | 1 | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | 36 | - | 48 | 4 | 1 | 89 | 1 | 1 | 7 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Harrison | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 2 | 1 | 2 | - | 29 | - | - | 31 | 2 | 1 | 65 | - | - | - | - |
| Late Captain Bracco | - | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | 10 | - | 74 | 2 | 1 | 87 | 1 | 1 | 9 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Stone | - | - | - | 1 | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | 25 | - | 25 | - | - | 50 | - | 1 | 14 | - | 3 | - | - |
| Captain Lucas | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | 8 | - | 5 | 2 | - | 15 | - | 1 | 49 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Ramsey | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 2 | 12 | - | 32 | 1 | - | 45 | 2 | 2 | 19 | - | 2 | - | - |
| Captain Adams | - | - | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 6 | - | 10 | 1 | - | 17 | 3 | 2 | 47 | - | - | - | - |
| Captain Smith | - | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 3 | 1 | 17 | - | 30 | 4 | - | 51 | - | 1 | 13 | - | 1 | - | - |
| Captain Sim | - | - | - | - | 1 | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | 2 | - | 18 | - | 31 | 5 | - | 54 | - | - | 10 | - | - | - | - |
| Late Captain Scott | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | - | 9 | - | 41 | 3 | - | 53 | - | 1 | 11 | - | - | - | - |
| Late Captain Bowie | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | 6 | - | 3 | - | - | 9 | 3 | 1 | 55 | - | - | - | 2 |
| Captain Ford | - | - | - | 1 | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | - | 1 | 13 | - | 10 | 1 | - | 24 | 3 | - | 44 | 1 | - | - | - |
| Total | - | - | 1 | 6 | 5 | 4 | 3 | 2 | - | 1 | 1 | 1 | 2 | 2 | 13 | 11 | 210 | - | 534 | 23 | 2 | 769 | 15 | 14 | 387 | 1 | 6 | - | 2 |

Colonel promoted.
Lieutenant-Colonel Ware, Captains Harrison, Lucas, and Ramsey, leave of absence.
Captains Thomas and Sim absent without leave.
Captain Adams sick, absent.
Two Subs on command; ten Subs, twenty-six Sergeants, and seven Drums, sick.

Major Price sick.
Taking care of the sick and guarding the baggage.....23 Privates
Ditto gone to-day.....20
43
190 present fit for duty.

M. GIST, Major.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read the 6th.]

Trenton, December 5th, 1776.

SIR: As nothing but necessity obliged me to retire before the enemy, and leave so much of the Jerseys unprotected, I conceive it my duty, and it corresponds with my inclination, to make head against them so soon as there shall be the least probability of doing it with propriety. That the country might in some measure be covered, I left two brigades, consisting of the five Virginia regiments and that of Delaware, containing in the whole about twelve hundred men fit for duty, under the command of Lord Stirling and General Stephens, at Princeton, till the baggage and stores could cross the Delaware, or the troops under their respective commands should be forced from thence. I shall now, having removed the greatest part of the above articles, face about with such troops as are here fit for service, and march back to Princeton, and there govern myself by circumstances and the movements of General Lee. At any event, the enemy's progress may be retarded by this means, if they intend to come on, and the people's fears in some measure quieted, if they do not. Sorry I am to observe, however, that the frequent calls upon the Militia of this State, the want of exertion in the principal gentlemen of the country, or a fatal supineness and insensibility of danger, till it is too late to prevent an evil that was not only foreseen, but foretold, have been the causes of our late disgraces. If the Militia of this State had stepped forth in season—and timely notice they had—we might have prevented the enemy's crossing the Hackinsack, although without some previous notice of the time and place it was impossible to have done this at the North River. We might with equal probability of success have made a stand at Brunswick, on the Raritan; but as both these rivers were fordable in a variety of places, (knee deep only,) it required many men to defend the passes; and those we had not. At Hackinsack our force was insufficient, because a part was at Elizabethtown, Amboy, and Brunswick, guarding a coast which I thought most exposed to danger; and at Brunswick, because I was disappointed in my expectation of Militia, and because on the day of the enemy's approach—and probably the occasion of it—the term of the Jersey and Maryland brigades' service expired; neither of which would consent to stay an hour longer.

These, among ten thousand other instances, might be adduced to show the disadvantages of short inlistments, and the little dependence upon Militia in times of real danger. But as yesterday cannot be recalled, I will not dwell upon a subject which no doubt has given much uneasiness to Congress, as well as extreme pain and anxiety to myself. My first wish is, that Congress may be convinced of the impropriety of relying upon the Militia, and of the necessity of raising a larger standing army than what they have voted. The saving in the article of stores, provisions, and in a thousand other things, by having nothing to do with Militia unless in cases of extraordinary exigency, and such as could not be expected in the common course of events, would amply support a large army, which, well officered, would be daily improving, instead of continuing a destructive, expensive, and disorderly mob.

I am clear in opinion, that if forty thousand men had been kept in constant pay since the first commencement of hostilities, and the Militia had been excused doing duty during that period, the Continent would have saved money. When I reflect on the losses we have sustained for want of good troops, the certainty of this is placed beyond a doubt in my mind. In such case, the Militia who have been harassed and tired by repeated calls upon them, and farming and manufactures in a manner suspended, would, upon any pressing emergency, have run with alacrity to arms; whereas the cry now is, they may be as well ruined in one way as another; and with difficulty are obtained. I mention these things to show, that in my opinion, if any dependence is placed on the Militia another year, Congress will be deceived. When danger is a little removed from them they will not turn out at all. When it comes home to 'em, the well-affected, instead of flying to arms to defend themselves, are busily employed in removing their families and their effects, whilst the disaffected are concerting measures to make their submission, and spread terrour and dismay all around, to induce others to follow the example. Daily experience and abundant proofs warrant this information.

I shall this day reinforce Lord Stirling with about twelve hundred men, which will make his number about twenty-four hundred men. To-morrow I mean to repair to Princeton myself, and shall order the Pennsylvania troops (who are not yet arrived except part of the German battalion and a company of Light-Infantry) to the same place.

By my last advices the enemy are still at Brunswick, and the account adds, that General Howe was expected at Elizabeththown with a reinforcement, to erect the King's standard and demand a submission of this State. I can only give this as a report brought from the enemy's camp by some of the country people.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

---

TIMOTHY DANIELSON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Quaker-Ridge, December 5th, 1776.

Sir: We herewith send you the beating orders, inlistments, and commissions, committed to us by the State of Massachusetts. The commissions you will be kind enough to keep safe till you may receive orders from the General Assembly how to dispose of them, unless you find Captains and subalterns that have nearly filled their companies; in that case you will oblige the State by filling up and delivering them their commissions. If any Colonels we have commissioned should stand in need of beating orders and inlistments, you will give them out on the encouragement of Congress, with the delineations and interlineations as you will see made by the Committee on some of them sent you.

As we are assured of your readiness to serve your native Colony on all occasions, must desire you to call upon the several Colonies in the new arrangement belonging to the Massachusetts State, as you have opportunity, to make a return of the number inlisted, and transmit the same to the Assembly by the post, as often as you may think necessary, that the State may know from time to time the probability of their computing their quota.

Sir, we wish you all success, with the pleasures that attend the soldier in your exalted station, in winter quarters; and are your Honour's most obedient, most humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

Timo. Danielson, Chairman.

To Major-General Heath, commanding at Peek's Kills.

---

List of Field Officers appointed for Massachusetts State, 1776.

The Field Officers commissioned are:

| | |
|---|---|
| William Shenard, Colonel. | James Wisson, Colonel. |
| Eben'r Sprout, Lieut. Col. | James Millen, Lieut. Col. |
| Warham Parks, Major. | Ezra Badlam, Major. |
| John Bailey, Colonel. | Thomas Nixon, Colonel. |
| Ben. Tupper, Lieut. Col. | Calvin Smith, Lieut. Col. |
| Andrew Petero, Major. | Joseph Thompson, Major. |
| Michael Jackson, Colonel. | Rufus Putnam, Colonel. |
| John Brooks, Lieut. Col. | David Henly, Lieut. Col. |
| Joseph Swasey, Major. | Major. |

By order the Committee:

Timo. Danielson, Chairman.

Quaker Ridge, December 5th, 1776.

---

TIMOTHY DANIELSON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Ridge, December 5th, 1776.

Sir: We have commissioned Rufus Putnam, Esq., Colonel of a regiment, and have left it with him to nominate his Major out of three Captains, viz: Wade and Warner, out of Colonel Littel's regiment, and Newell, in Colonel Hutchinson's.

We desire you to fill up a commission to either of them, as will best serve the cause and most agreeable to Colonel Putnam. You will, sir, much oblige the Committee. Your most humble servant.

By order of the Committee: Timo. Danielson.

To Major-General Heath, Peekskill.

---

TIMOTHY DANIELSON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Quaker-Ridge, December 5, 1776.

Sir: We are on our return to the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay without being recalled; and it may so happen that the post may convey further orders to the Committee before our arrival at Boston, therefore we desire you to open all letters and packages that may come within your knowledge directed to us, and examine the contents; and if they contain matter of further encouragement for raising our quota of the Continental Army, that you will communicate it to the several Colonels we have appointed, that they may proceed thereon further to inlist; as we imagine that rules and ceremony are to be dispensed with when our country's cause is in question. We have wrote the Postmaster to forward all such despatches to you immediately, and we desire you to pay the postage and charge the State.

We are, sir, your most obedient, very humble servant.

By order of the Committee:

Timo. Danielson, Chairman.

To Major-General Heath.

---

SENTENCE OF GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

Peekskill, December 5th, 1776.

At a General Court-Martial held by general orders, at the house of John Mandavel, whereof Colonel Ward is President.

| | |
|---|---|
| Lieutenant-Colonel Hamman, | Captain Bartlet, |
| Major Woods, | Captain Barlow, |
| Captain Moss, | Captain Newel, |
| Captain Wright, | Captain Pain, |
| Captain Sumner, | Captain Maxwell, |
| Captain Brown, | Captain Ladew. |

Captain Hyde, Judge Advocate.

Lieutenant William Horton, Captain Raymon's company, Colonel Nicoll's regiment, brought before the said Court for getting drunk and stripping to fight in a publick tavern, and behaving in an infamous manner, unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. Pleads not guilty.

Lieutenant Feairly, being duly sworn, saith, that he was at the tavern of Mr. Mandavell's, where the prisoner was stripping, and damned and swore he would be at Captain Graham, saying, Now I am under an arrest, damn you, I will give a flogging; or words importing the same.

John Roberson, under oath, saith, that the prisoner gave Captain Graham the lie, whereupon Captain Graham gave the prisoner a push, then the prisoner pushed Captain Graham down in the chimney corner and fell upon him, first having stripped.

Joseph Ishon, under oath, saith, that the prisoner stripped off his shirt and struck Captain Graham, and after they was parted the prisoner strove to get in the room to quarrel more with Captain Graham, and swore if he could get at him he would fight him.

Isaac Silver, under oath, saith, that the prisoner and some others got into a wrangle, and Captain Graham came into the room to still the rout. The prisoner fell to quarreling with the Captain, and cursed, damned, and swore, and stripped to fight the Captain; clinched the Captain, jammed up against the bar, and threw him down in the corner and seized him by the throat.

Captain Graham, under oath, nearly agrees with the above evidences; and the prisoner saith, that the Captain hath told near the truth.

The within Court having maturely heard the evidences, are of opinion, that the prisoner is guilty of infamous behaviour, unbecoming the character of a gentleman and soldier, and adjudge him to be cashiered and dismissed from the Army.

Attest: JONATHAN WARD, President.

I approve of the above judgment:

W. HEATH, Major-General.

---

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Murder's Creek, 5th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The weather has been so extreme bad, which, with the want of felling-axes, has hitherto prevented our doing much at the business we were sent up on. We have, however, got out some timber, and have several sloops furnished us by Convention, collecting stone and rafts of timber, and to-morrow we hope to begin to frame the first block. The blacksmiths ordered up have not yet joined us, nor have we here as yet a shop for them to work in. We have begun to build one, and have boards to cover it. Must beg you will order us about fifty pounds of twenty or twenty-four penny nails, as we have not one, and cannot do without them. I observed near your door some iron, like plow-shares. These would answer some good purpose, and be very convenient for us. Should be glad, therefore, you would order the Quartermaster to forward them here. We shall want a number of teams. These, I suppose, we must endeavour to supply with, and give certificates on the Quartermaster. It will be the cheapest way.

Be pleased to indulge me with a line respecting the situation of our Army in the Jersey, if you have heard lately from them, as our accounts are various and uncertain.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

GEO. CLINTON.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERAL HEATH.

In Committee of Safety, Fishkill, December 5th, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the Committee of Safety to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 3d instant, and assure you that General Washington's approbation of your generous aid in carrying on the obstructions of Hudson's river, and your attention to the passes in the Highlands, afford them the highest satisfaction.

The sick of Colonel Bradley's regiment we had caused to be taken care of by a physician of this place until Doctor McKnight arrived; and be assured, sir, the non-attendance of a Doctor or Surgeon was not ascribed to any inattention of yours.

Such parts of the unfinished academy as are in any wise tenantable at this season of the year, were lately assigned for a distressed party of sick from General McDougall's brigade; but we are informed by William Duer, Esq., under whose direction the barracks between Peekskill and this place are, that those in the north entrance of the Highlands, and also that near Hait's, each intended to contain upwards of one thousand men, are nearly completed. In those barracks the sick of your division may now be made comfortable; and if the building of any other hospital shall be necessary, you may be assured, sir, the Convention will be ready to afford every necessary aid in their power for that purpose.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant.

By order of the Committee of Safety. In the absence of, and for the Vice President,

JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

The Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

JAMES WEEKS'S RECEIPT.

Fishkill, December 5th, 1776.

Received of Ezra L'Hommedieu, Esq., eighty pounds, current money of New-York, in order to defray the expense of transporting four hogsheads of dry goods purchased by John R. Livingston of John Roe, Esq., for the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York, from Boston to this place, by hiring or buying teams for that purpose, as shall appear most advantageous, and to account for the same sum with the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, charging for my time, horse, and expenses, twenty shillings per day.

Witness my hand: JAMES WEEKS.

Witness, JACOB CUYLER.

---

NICHOLAS BREWER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

December ye 5, 1776.

We, as agents appointed by your Honour for hiring or impressing boats and scows for the publick service, find a difficulty in the exorbitant prices in men. We have spoke with General Clinton, who has recommended us to your Honours for the prices of boats of such and such burthen. We wait for your immediate directions; and subscribe ourselves your ever devoted servants,

NICH'S BREWER, Jun.
JER'H CLARK.

---

J. TRUMBULL, JUN., TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, 5th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I wrote you some time since a report of a letter being wrote by the Mayor of this city to the enemy, advising them to make a movement into Connecticut. The report of a flag being sent you, with the idle excuse that General Washington is not to be found, revives that idea in my mind. Is it not possible the enemy's design, by sending to New-London, is to have an opportunity of viewing that harbour, and passing up the country, seeing its strength, the situation of the people, the state of the batteries, &c., and by being at Hartford, to consult their good friends there, by which they can judge the practicability of making an attempt in that quarter? My ideas may perhaps run too fast. Jealousy in our situation is absolutely necessary. A word is sufficient.

I am, with great affection, honoured sir, your dutiful son,

J. TRUMBULL, Jr.

His Honour Governour Trumbull.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Lebanon, December 5th, 1776.

SIR: I have this day received intelligence from New-London that there are collected in the Sound, near Plumb-Island, ten English men-of-war and about eighty transports; and from another quarter have further intelligence that some hundreds of the enemy's ships and transports had passed Hell-Gate; their destination must at present be uncertain, whether at New-London or Newport, but Newport may be the most probable, though they may possibly pay us a small visit at New-London as they go along. I think it is high time for the New-England colonists to be alarmed, and almost every other consideration to be laid aside to have the great object of our defence employ our utmost attention and most vigorous exertions. I have ordered the Militia of this State, on and eastward of Connecticut river, to be on their march towards New-London, and trust we shall be ready to afford all possible assistance, whenever the appearance of the enemy shall make it necessary. I have taken the liberty to enclose a letter, containing the same intelligence, to Mr. Bowdoin, President of the Council of the Massachusetts, which hope you will be so good as to forward without delay. I have this moment received a letter from General Lee. You will note the contents, and take such measures as the exigence of the case may require. Have enclosed the original for your inspection, having not time for a copy.

I am, in great haste, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JON'TH TRUMBULL.

Governour Cooke.

N. B. There came nothing enclosed in General Lee's letter.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Lebanon, December 5th, 1776—Evening.

SIR: I have this afternoon received authentick intelligence that ten or eleven ships-of-war from New-York, and about eighty transports with troops, are just arrived off New-London harbour; and there is very little room to doubt but their design is to attack that place or Newport: the first, by all appearance, is now most probable. I have given out orders to assemble all the Militia in this quarter for our defence. No exertions on our part will be neglected, though our Militia have been much employed towards New-York, and many of them not yet returned.

I must therefore earnestly request your patriotick Assembly to take this important matter into their immediate consideration, to lend us every aid in your power. New-London or Newport, or both, are the objects the enemy have in view to attack. Your virtuous and patriotick spirit and ardour leave me no room to doubt of your vigorous and instant exertion for our assistance, even without any regard to the zeal and ardour exerted by the military force of this State when the scene of blood commenced at Lexington, as well as on other occasions. A letter just now arrived says a much larger number have passed Hell-Gate; so that it is very probable the whole had not arrived when the express left New-London, and may be hourly expected. You will believe no time can be lost, in order to afford us seasonable relief.

I am, sir, with great respect, your and your honourable Assembly's most obedient and most humble servant,

JON'TH TRUMBULL.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Providence, December 5, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: The enclosed copy of a paragraph of a letter from Mr. Adjutant Stelle I sent to Block-Island with a number of British prisoners to be exchanged, may be entirely relied upon.

The last certain information of this fleet is, that they were seen on the 3d instant, at eleven o'clock forenoon, standing for the harbour of New-London, having come round Fisher's Island Point. It is supposed that their intention is to meet a number of transports who are expected to come through the Sound.

I thank your Honours for the measures you have taken to give assistance to this State; and am, very respectfully, your Honours' most obedient, humble servant,

NICH'S COOKE.

Honourable General Court of Massachusetts-Bay.

P. S. The enclosed was forwarded to me by Governour Trumbull, with a request to send it by express.

---

Block-Island, 2d December, 1776, eight o'clock P. M.

SIR: This evening, about sunset, came to anchor off the west end of this island eleven sail of British ships, armed, four of which are frigates from twenty-eight to thirty-two guns, the others from forty to sixty-gun ships. They anchored so nigh I could distinctly count their guns. There are likewise three ships (those I suppose that are stationed here) a cruising to the eastward. I saw them to-day at twelve o'clock, about eight or ten leagues distance, bearing about E. N. E. All of which are bound into Rhode-Island, without doubt, &c., &c.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Providence, December 5th, 1776.

SIR: Yours of yesterday I have just received, and I shall take it for granted that you will take every legal method to forward the manning the ships; and as to what you refer to with respect to the wages and prize money, I now let you know that I am not Agent nor Paymaster, and that I have nothing to do in the matter further than to use my influence that right be done to every man in the Navy. I have no knowledge of any fraud in any officer under my command, and I believe there is not. Shall caution the officers to take care to keep the men on board, although I believe the greatest part of the desertion was before they came on board. And as to what you seem to desire, the ships should go round to Boston, my orders will not admit such a step; and if they would, I can see little prospect of getting them there, as I am well assured that if one of the ships there had been manned she would have sailed before now.

I am, sir, yours and the members of Assembly's humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Honourable Nicholas Cooke, Esq.

To be laid before such Members of Assembly as he may think fit.

---

WILLIAM BARTLETT TO STEPHEN MOYLAN.

Beverly, 5 December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: A few minutes after I took my leave of you Captain John Derby, of Salem, came to me and made a demand of the guns belonging to the Lee schooner, which Colonel Glover borrowed of him. I interceded with him as much as lay in my power to have them only for one cruise more, but he utterly refused, and insists upon having them immediately. Upon receiving the demand, I, together with Colonel Glover, pursued you, to give the information, but could not overtake you. What can be done about this matter must be left to you.

In haste, I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM BARTLETT.

To Stephen Moylan, Esq., Head-Quarters, Cambridge.

Sir, I would remind you of the cash wanting.

---

Newburyport, December 5, 1776.

The friends of Captain Henry Johnson, late Commander of the Yankee privateer, are hereby informed, from good authority, that he has escaped from London to France.

---

Boston, December 5, 1776.

Last Saturday afternoon, Captain St. Barbe, in a vessel belonging to Newburyport, arrived at Squam, from Bilboa, in thirty-three days, with whom came passenger Mr. George Cabot, of Beverly, merchant, who informs, that the Spanish and French ports are open to our cruisers and their prizes, and that they permit the American vessels to carry the American flag in their ports; and that both the Courts of Madrid and Versailles were determined to prevent the Russians coming to America.

Last Sunday, a number of prisoners (marines and sailors) arrived in town from the interiour parts of this State and Connecticut, and on Monday set off for Marblehead, in order to be exchanged for a number of our men who lately arrived in the cartel vessels there.

Last Saturday evening arrived in this town from Halifax, via New-York, (after a long and cruel imprisonment,) the Honourable James Lovel, Esq., to the no small joy of the inhabitants of the capital of this State.

We hear that a Beverly privateer has taken five empty transports, being part of a fleet of near two hundred sail, bound home from New-York, whether with design to bring over some Russians or fetch provisions, time will discover.

By a gentleman of veracity lately arrived from Ticonderoga, we are informed, that the noted Colonel Nesbit departed this life at St. John's in September last. He commanded the Forty-Seventh Regiment of Foot in his tyrannick Majesty's service. His skill in military matters we are strangers to; but this we can say of him, that he was master of the art of tarring and feathering, as he tried his hand on a poor countryman in this town some time before the Lexington battle.

Last Thursday arrived in town from the Continental camps at New-York, the Honourable Major-General Lincoln, who commanded the Militia of this State which was sent as a reinforcement for two months.

Commodore Manly, in the Continental ship Hancock, of thirty-two guns, came round from Newburyport last Thursday.

---

SILAS DEANE TO COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Paris, 6th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You have enclosed the duplicate of an agreement with Monsieur Du Coudray, of my orders for clothing, stores, &c.; of my agreement with Baron De Kalb, and others of his train; also with the Comte De Monau and his, which I hope will be agreeable; also the agreement for freight of the ships, which I was assured by letters from Bordeaux and elsewhere was as low as could be procured. At the same time, if it is above the stated price, in such cases I am promised an abatement. I hope the peculiarity of my situation, and the anxious desire I have of forwarding aid to my country, will be considered if any of the articles are thought high. Men cannot be engaged to quit their native country and friends, to hazard life and all in a cause which is not their own immediately, at the same easy rate as men will do who are fighting literally pro aris et focis; and it is a universal custom in Europe to allow something extra to foreigners; but my allowances are very much below the rates here for officers in the same station.

I submit one thought to you: whether if you could engage a great General, of the highest character in Europe, such, for instance, as Prince Ferdinand, Marshal Broglio, or others of equal rank, to take the lead of your armies, whether such a step would not be politick, as it would give a character and credit to your military, and strike, perhaps, a greater panick in our enemies. I only suggest the thought, and leave you to confer with Baron De Kalb on the subject at large.

I have the honour to be, with the most profound respect for the honourable Congress, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

[Translation.]

List of Officers of Infantry and Light Troops destined to serve the UNITED STATES OF NORTH-AMERICA.

| Names of Officers. | Rank. | Commencement of their Pay. |
|---|---|---|
| Messrs. Le Baron De Kalb, | Major-General, | 7th Nov., 1776. |
| Le Vicount De Mauroy, | Major-General, | 20th do. |
| De Senneville, - - | Major, - - | 7th do. |
| Le Chev. Dubuysson, | Major, - - | 7th do. |
| Le Chev. De Fayoles, | Lieut. Colonel, | 20th do. |
| Dubois Martin, - - | Major, - - | 20th do. |
| De Holtzendorff, - - | Lieut. Colonel, | 26th do. |
| Le Chev. De Failly, | Lieut. Colonel, | 1st Dec., 1776. |
| Amariton, - - - - | Major, - - | do. |
| De Roth, - - - - | Captain, - - | do. |
| De Gerard, - - - - | Captain, - - | do. |
| Philis de Roseval, - - | Lieutenant, - - | do. |
| De Montis, - - - - | Lieutenant, - - | do. |
| Loquet de Granges, - | Lieutenant, - - | do. |
| De Vrigny, - - - | Capt. d'une Comp'y Franche, - - | do. |
| Candon, - - - - - | Lieutenant, - - | do. |

The said ranks and pay at the dates marked in the present list, have been settled mutually between us, the undersigned; me, Silas Deane, in my quality of deputy of the most honourable Congress of the United States of North-America, and me, Jno. Baron De Kalb, Major-General in the service of the States General.

Done double, at Paris, this 1st of December, 1776.

DE KALB.

SILAS DEANE,
Agent for the United States of North-America.

[Translation.]

Agreed between Mr. , and Mr. SILAS DEANE, in his character of Deputy from the Congress of the Thirteen UNITED COLONIES.

1st. That Mr. Augustin François des Epiniers, nephew to Mr. , actually a Captain in the French service, shall pass over into that of the United Colonies, where he shall serve in the corps of Artillery and Engineers.

2d. That he shall be employed in that corps as Captain during the first campaign, with all appointments, &c., which a senior Captain in that corps enjoys, which commission he shall be entitled to from this date, and shall rise in proportion to his services to the degree of Major and Lieutenant-Colonel.

3d. That Mons. des Epiniers shall have this in particular and separate from all other officers of the same rank, that should peace be declared the rank of Major shall not be refused him after two years' service; that of Lieutenant-Colonel after four years; and that of Colonel after six years; provided during that time he by his behaviour should not forfeit it, and this shall be tried by a regular procedure before the Board of War, or a Court-Martial assembled by their orders.

4th. After these six years' service in war or peace, if the Sr. des Epiniers thinks fit to leave the service of the United Colonies, he shall receive always the half of the salary he enjoyed as Lieutenant-Colonel, and this pension shall be paid him in whatever corner or part of the world he pleases to retire to.

5th. He shall receive the same pension if, by the fate of war or fatal wound, he shall find himself deprived of any principal limb of his body.

6th. The said conditions being granted to Mr. des Epiniers in consideration of the important services Mr. , his uncle, rendered one year, and continues to render the United Colonies, no other officer can complain of these terms, either before Congress or the Board of War.

It is in confidence of this that the parties have mutually signed these presents, at Paris, December 5th, 1776.

SILAS DEANE,
Agent for the United Colonies of North-America.

---

[Translation.]

A List of Officers of Infantry and Light Troops destined to serve in the Armies of the STATES GENERAL OF NORTH-AMERICA, viz:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Messrs. Le M. De La Fayette, | Maj. General, | from 7th Dec. 1776. |
| Le Baron De Kalb, | Major-General, | " 7th Nov. " |
| Delesser, - - - | Colonel, | " 1st Dec. " |
| De Valfort, - - | Colonel, | " 1st Dec. " |
| De Fayols, - - | Lieut. Colonel, | " 20th Nov. " |
| De Franval, - - | Lieut. Colonel, | " 1st Dec. " |
| De Bois Martin, - | Major, | " 7th Nov. " |
| De Gimat, - - | Major, | " 1st Dec. " |
| De Vrigny, - - | Captain, | " 1st Dec. " |
| De Bedaulx, - - | Captain, | " 1st Dec. " |
| Capitaine, - - | Captain, | " 1st Dec. " |
| De La Colombe, - | Lieutenant, | " 1st Dec. " |
| Candon, - - - | Lieutenant, | " 7th Nov. " |

The mentioned ranks and the pay which the most honourable Congress shall affix to them, to commence at the periods marked in the present list, have been agreed to by us, the undersigned, Silas Deane, in quality of Deputy of the American States General, on the one part, the Marquis De La Fayette and the Baron De Kalb, on the other part.

Signed double, at Paris, this 7th of December, 1776.

SILAS DEANE,
LE MARQUIS DE LA FAYETTE,
DE KALB.

---

[Translation.]

The desire which M. the Marquis De La Fayette shows of serving among the troops of the United States of North-America, and the interest which he takes in the justice of their cause, making him wish to distinguish himself in this war, and to render himself as useful as he possibly can, but not thinking that he can obtain leave of his family to pass the seas and serve in a foreign country till he can go as a General Officer, I have thought I could not better serve my country, and those who have entrusted me, than by granting to him, in the name of the very honourable Congress, the rank of Major-General, which I beg the States to confirm to him; to ratify and deliver to him the commission to hold and take rank, to count from this day, with the General Officers of the same degree. His high birth, his alliances, the great dignities which his family hold at this Court, his considerable estates in this realm, his personal merit, his reputation, his disinterestedness, and above all his zeal for the liberty of our Provinces, have only been able to engage me to promise him the rank of Major-General in the name of the United States.

In witness of which I have signed the present, 7th of December, 1776.

SILAS DEANE,
Agent for the United States of North-America.

On the conditions here explained, I offer myself, and promise to depart when and how Mr. Deane shall judge proper, to serve the United States with all possible zeal, without any pension or particular allowance, reserving to myself the liberty of returning to Europe when my family or my King shall recall me.

Done at Paris, this 7th of December, 1776.

LE MARQUIS DE LA FAYETTE.

---

[Translation.]

Articles of affreightment of Armed Vessels and Merchandise, entered in and agreed to between Messrs. DE MONTHIEU and RODRIQUE HORTALEZ & CO. and Mr. SILAS DEANE.

We the subscribers, John Joseph de Monthieu and Rodrique Hortalez & Co., are agreed with Mr. Silas Deane, agent of the United Colonies, upon the subsequent arrangements:

That I, De Monthieu, do engage to furnish on account of the Thirteen United Colonies of North-America, a certain number of vessels to carry arms and merchandise to the burthen of sixteen hundred tons, or as many vessels as are deemed sufficient to transport to some harbour of North-America belonging to the Thirteen United Colonies, all the ammunition and appurtenances, agreeable to the estimate signed and left in my possession, and which we estimate would require the above-mentioned quantity of vessels to carry sixteen hundred tons burthen, which are to be paid for at the rate of two hundred livres the ton; and that I will hold said vessels at the disposal of said Messrs. Hortalez & Co. ready to sail at the ports of Havre, Nantes, and Marseilles, viz: The vessels which are to carry the articles and passengers mentioned in the afore-mentioned list, and are to depart from Havre, as well as those that are to go from Nantes, to be ready in the course of November next, and the others in the course of December following, on condition that one-half of the afore-mentioned freight of two hundred livres per ton, both for the voyage to America and back to France, laden equally on account of the Congress of the Thirteen United Colonies and Messrs. Hortalez & Co. aforesaid, who are responsible for them, shall be advanced and paid immediately in money, bills of exchange, or other good merchandise or effects, and the other half the said Messrs. Hortalez & Co. do agree to furnish me with in proportion as the vessels are fitting out, in the same money or other effects as above; over and above this they are to pay me for the passage of each officer, not belonging to the ship's crew, the sum of five hundred and fifty livres Tournois, and for every soldier or servant two hundred and fifty livres, and for every sailor who goes as passenger one hundred and fifty livres. It is expressly covenanted and agreed between us, that all risks of the sea either in said vessels being chased, run on shore, or taken, shall be on account of the Congress of the United Colonies, and shall be paid agreeably to the estimation which may be made of each of these vessels, agreeably to the bills of sale of each, which I promise to deliver to Messrs. Hortalez & Co. before the departure of any of the said vessels from any of the ports of France mentioned above.

Finally it is agreed that if the Americans detain these vessels longer than two months in their ports, without shipping on board them the returns they are to carry to France, all demurrage, wages, or expenses on them, from the day of their arrival to that of their departure, these two months excepted, shall be at their charge, and paid by them or by Messrs. Hortalez & Co. in our own name, as answerable for the Congress of the United Colonies. We accept the above conditions as far as they respect us, and promise faithfully to fulfill them, and in consequence we have signed this instrument of writing one to the other, at Paris, 15th October, 1776.

MONTHIEU.
RODRIQUE HORTALEZ & CO.
SILAS DEANE, Agent for the United Colonies of North-America.

---

GOVERNOUR HENRY TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburg, Virginia, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: I lost no time in laying your letter before our Assembly; and late last night they did resolve, that the troops of Horse (six) shall be marched to join General Washington. I have issued the necessary orders this morning to the Major commandant to prepare for the march; but before it can be begun I fear a considerable time will elapse, owing to the troopers being in want of many necessaries. I shall as soon as possible transmit to you an account of such things as cannot be had here for them, that they may be got with you. The prisoners of war are scattered in different places in this State, but will be collected and sent to Brunswick.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

P. HENRY, Pt.

---

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE REPRESENTATIVES OF ACCOMACK COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

Instructions and commands from the Freeholders of ACCOMACK to their Representatives in General Assembly.

Being informed that an attempt will be made this session to influence the General Assembly to subvert altogether the present establishment of the Church of England, we think it a duty we owe to God, ourselves, and the community in general, to instruct you particularly what part to act in the decision of a question in its consequences so very important. We at present feel ourselves happily and warmly united with every religious denomination of Christians in these States, in the defence of our civil liberties, against the arbitrary power of a British King and Parliament, sensible it is to this general Union, under God, we have hitherto withstood the united force of Britain and her mercenaries, in a manner to be wondered at even by ourselves; and we are convinced by experience, that disputes and division in religious matters are in their consequences most dangerous to every State, and particularly to those in their infancy: We therefore at present command you, should such a proposition be made in the General Assembly, to vote against the same. At the same time we shall cheerfully agree to any regulations which may be adopted to make the clergy accountable for their conduct, and be removed upon misbehaviour.

---

PETITION OF INHABITANTS OF CHARLES CITY COUNTY TO VIRGINIA ASSEMBLY.

Mr. PURDIE: It was intended that the following Petition of the inhabitants of Charles City should have been presented to the House of Delegates through their Representatives; but as it did not get to their hands time enough to answer the intention of the petitioners, they beg you will publish it in your Gazette, that their sentiments upon religious toleration may be generally known to their countrymen.

To the honourable House of Delegates:

The Petition of the Inhabitants of the County of CHARLES CITY humbly showeth:

That your petitioners are greatly alarmed at the rapid progress which some of the dissenters from the Church by law established are daily making in various parts of this country, by seducing the ignorant and unwary to embrace their erroneous tenets, which your petitioners conceive to be not only opposite to the doctrines which true Christianity inculcates, but subversive of the peace of families, tending to alienate the affection of slaves from their masters, and detrimental to the happiness of the publick; and while such daring attempts are made, by petitions to this honourable House, to pull down all the barriers which the wisdom of our ancestors have erected to secure the Church from the inroads of the sectaries, your petitioners apprehend that it would argue a culpable lukewarmness tamely to sit still and not make known their sentiments, so contrary to such innovations. All these bad effects your petitioners have already found, by the short experience which they have had in their own County, to be the dismal consequences of the doctrines taught by these new teachers. We have seen, with grief and indignation, by their suggestions, irreparable breaches made between husbands and their wives; we have seen meetings in the night of our slaves to receive instructions of these teachers without our consent, which, we apprehend, could produce nothing but deeds of darkness, and which have already produced their proper fruits of disobedience and insolence to masters, and glorifying in what they are taught to believe to be persecution for conscience sake. Your petitioners are not actuated by the narrow and bloodthirsty spirit of persecution. They wish to see a well-regulated toleration established, by which all those weak and conscientious brethren, who from principle cannot join with the established Church, may be permitted to serve God in their own way without molestation; but we wish also, that those nightly meetings may be prohibited under severe penalties, and that those only who, after a due examination of their morals, shall be found worthy, may be authorized to preach, and only in such publick meeting-houses as it may be found proper to license for that purpose. But your petitioners humbly apprehend that these purposes may be answered without destroying those gentle and wholesome restraints which the wisdom of ages, and the policy of our laws and constitution, have appointed, to give the Church a proper preëminence over every other sect, and gently to incline, by the obligation of interest as well as reason, a reunion of all those who have been deluded and led to forsake that Church which your petitioners apprehended to contain the genuine doctrines of Christianity, and to promote the true happiness, both temporal and eternal, of mankind. Your petitioners therefore pray, that the Church may be maintained in all its legal rights, and that the sectaries may be indulged with such a regulated toleration as to this honourable House shall seem proper.

And your petitioners shall ever pray, &c.

[Signed by 260.]

---

Williamsburgh, Virginia, 6 December, 1776.

The Officers and Soldiers of the Ninth Virginia Regiment who are absent with leave, are desired to return with all possible despatch, or join the regiment on its march, or at Philadelphia, it being ordered to reinforce General Washington immediately.

Given under my hand, this 1st day of December, 1776.

THOMAS FLEMING.

---

Williamsburgh, Virginia, 6 December, 1776.

The masters and crew of the ship Caroline, taken by the schooner privateer Harlequin, and condemned as a lawful prize by the Court of Admiralty of this State, are hereby advertised, that they are to apply to William Lux, Esq., of the town of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, for payment of the wages due to them from said ship, agreeable to a resolution of the Continental Congress.

By order of the honourable Court of Admiralty:

BEN. POWELL, Marshal.

---

CAPTAIN COOK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 6, 1776.

HONOURED GENTLEMEN: The snow George arrived the 4th instant, that we took November the 2d, and afterwards retaken by one of the Ministerial ships; soon after that the privateers, Captain Campbell, took her again. She is now libelled in their names.

As the ship Defence first took her, the Province and ship's company has a right to some part, and it will be necessary to have some attorney employed to claim that part before the Board of Admiralty, when she is to be condemned. I hope you'll please to appoint some gentleman of the law for that purpose.

I have the honour to be, honoured gentlemen, your very humble servant,

GEO. COOK.

The honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

---

SAMUEL DORSEY, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

December 7th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take this opportunity to inform you of my success in procuring coals, which has taken up most of my time till now, and have now as much as will last me twelve months. Have cast a few small guns. Should be glad you would appoint some person to prove them this next week, that in case they should not answer we might make another mixture of metal. There is Mr. Swannhum or Mr. Hommilto, that lives at the landing, if you think proper, which would be always at the spot, or any person you choose. Please appoint some one that will attend when requested in time.

Remain your humble servant to command,

SAM'L DORSEY, JUN.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

WILLIAM PACA TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, Saturday, the 7th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Congress is of the opinion that the order from the Board of War extends only to such prisoners as are natives of Great Britain, and soldiers from thence in the present war; and therefore the prisoners from Carolina and privates there lately taken in arms against us, are not comprehended, and are still to be detained. As to the two gentlemen taken by Captain Cook, whether they be prisoners or not is a matter our State must decide, and not Congress. I am told by the delegates to the eastward that persons in such predicament are set at liberty, but the property taken is confiscated. But this is not a general rule; circumstances often require them to be . You must, therefore, (I speak my own opinion only,) exercise your discretion in the present case.

The enemy is still at Brunswick. General Washington has faced about, and is moving towards them with the reinforcements from this State. General Lee has crossed the river, as we are informed, with about two thousand men, and we are also informed that General St. Clair, with about twelve hundred men, left New-Windsor last Friday week, and that by this time we hope the enemy will find themselves between two fires; and Heaven grant they may be well routed.

Great complaints have been made by the privates of our Flying-Camp of neglect and want of pay. I am afraid our officers have not been so careful and industrious in making out their rolls as they ought to have been. We are doing all we can to get them their money, which indeed has been long ago ready for them, and only detained from the want of officers' rolls. Our poor sick were much distressed till they came to this city. Here every necessary is found them, and the best care taken of them. We have declined no trouble to have these poor creatures comfortably provided for.

Your obedient servant,

W. PACA.

The honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

---

THOMAS WHARTON TO RICHARD PETERS.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: The Council has appointed a Committee to confer with the Board of War on the propriety of establishing a military hospital in this State, and would be glad to know when it will suit the Board of War to receive them.

By order of Council:

THO'S WHARTON, President.

To Richard Peters, Esq.

*

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 7th: Referred to Board of War.]

Trenton, December 6, 1776.

SIR: I have not received any intelligence of the enemy's movements since my letter of yesterday. From every information, they still remain at Brunswick, except some of their parties, who are advanced a small distance on this side. To-day I shall set out for Princeton myself, unless something should occur to prevent me, which I do not expect.

By a letter of the 4th instant from a Mr. Caldwell, a clergyman, and a staunch friend to the cause, and who has fled from Elizabethtown, and taken refuge in the mountains about ten miles from thence, I am informed that General or Lord Howe was expected in that town to publish pardon and peace. His words are: "I have not seen his proclamation, but can only say he gives sixty days of grace, and pardons from the Congress down to the Committee. No one man in the Continent is to be denied his mercy." In the language of this good man, "The Lord deliver us from his mercy!"

Your letter of the 3d, by Major Livingston, was duly received; before it came to hand I had wrote to General Howe about Governour Franklin's exchange, but am not certain whether the letter could not be recovered. I despatched a messenger instantly for that purpose.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

JOSEPH NOURSE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Ringwood Iron-Works, 6th December, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by General Lee to inform you he has had the misfortune to lose three of his best camp horses, and begs the favour you'll have some inquiry made amongst the soldiery under your command. One is a black, with a nag tail, fifteen hands high; a brown bay, with a switch tail, fourteen-and-a-half hands; and a sorrel mare, with a blaze-face and a switch tail, about fourteen hands and an inch.

The General offers three guineas reward, or a guinea for each.

I am, sir, your very obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH NOURSE, Secretary.

Honourable Major-General Heath, Peekskill.

---

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO DANIEL COE.

Cakiact, December 6, 1776.

I beg that you will assemble the Militia of the district of Cakiact, with their arms, accoutrements, blankets, and three days' provisions, and order them to join General Lee at Morristown as soon as possible.

I am your humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN,
Major-General in the Continental Army.

To Daniel Coe, Esq., Chairman of the Committee.

---

DANIEL COE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Kakiate, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: We thought it our indispensable duty to inform the Convention, that last evening we received the enclosed requisition from General Sullivan. In the present state of our country, it is not in our power, consistent with the safety of the inhabitants or the publick service, to comply with his request; and we flatter ourselves, that had the General been properly acquainted with the true state of the country he would not have issued this order. The whole Militia of our Precinct consists of but two hundred and eighty men, one third of which are disaffected to the cause. Most of the Militia are unarmed, and now employed in the service of the publick, either as guards to the shore or wagoners, or labourers on the publick roads. Besides this, we are in great distress from the exposed state of the country, which now lies open to the ravages of the enemy from Hackensack and Fort Lee; therefore we are so far from being able to afford General Lee any assistance, that we most earnestly request the Convention to send us assistance from the upper parts of the country, or we must, from our weak and exposed state, in all probability soon fall a sacrifice to the enemy. We beg you would lay this request before the honourable Convention, and entreat their immediate advice and aid. An answer by the bearer will much oblige your humble servant.

By order of the Committee:

DAN'L COE, Chairman.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., President of the Convention for the State of New-York.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Peekskill, December 6th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have just received intelligence, that on the 4th instant, about sunset, seventy sail of ships-of-war and transports, with many troops on board, sailed down the Sound, towards New-England. If you have not received the intelligence before this reaches you, I beg that you send an express immediately to Rhode-Island, and also to Massachusetts-Bay.

I have the honour to be, with respect and esteem, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

Honourable Jona. Trumbull, Esq.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Peekskill, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: I have just received intelligence, that on the 4th instant, about sunset, seventy sail of ships-of-war and transports, with many troops on board, sailed with a fair wind down the Sound towards New-England, perhaps for Newport.

General Washington, by the last letters which I received from him, was at Brunswick. A large body of troops from the Northern Army are marching down, the van of which I suppose by this time have joined the General.

General Lee, two days ago, passed over the ferry, with between three and four thousand men. The loss of forts Washington and Lee, with many stores, have been unfortunate blows; but as good and bad events have their turns in war, we against such still hope to be crowned with success.

I have the honour to be, with respect and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

W. HEATH.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Peekskill, December 6th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have just received intelligence, that on the 4th instant, about sunset, seventy sail of ships-of-war and transports, with troops on board, sailed with a fair wind down the Sound towards New-England, probably to Rhode-Island. I have sent an express to Governour Trumbull and to Massachusetts-Bay, and have desired Governour Trumbull to send an express to Rhode-Island. I have at this post three regiments of General Parsons's brigade and three of General Clinton's, and a number of convalescents, lame and ragged, left by General Lee. General Clinton is pushing the obstructions in the river. Any orders from your Excellency to move the troops, or any part of them, shall be instantly obeyed by him who has the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To General Washington.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Peekskill, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: I have just received intelligence, by letter from General Spencer, that on the 4th instant, about sunset, seventy sail of ships-of-war and transports, with many troops on board, sailed down the Sound towards New-England, with a fair wind.

I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your humble servant,

W. HEATH.

Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, Fishkill.

COURT MARTIAL ON CAPTAIN DOLSON.

Peekskill, 6th December, 1776.

At a General Court-Martial, held by general orders, at the house of Mr. John Mandivells, Colonel Ward, President.

| | |
|---|---|
| Lieut. Col. Hammon, | Captain Pain, |
| Major Woods, | Captain Ladew, |
| Captain Maxwell, | Captain Wright, |
| Captain Moss, | Captain Bartlet, |
| Captain Nowell, | Captain Barlow, |
| Captain Sumner, | Captain Brown. |

Captain Hyde, Judge Advocate.

Captain Abraham Dolson, of Colonel Nicoll's regiment, arrested by the said Colonel Nicolls for feloniously taking and marking and selling a blanket belonging to a soldier. The prisoner being arraigned pleads Not guilty.

Lieutenant Gore, under oath, saith Captain Dolson told him that he had a blanket that he would sell him; and soon after a soldier in Captain Little's company came to the tent of the prisoner and said he had lost a blanket, and thought that blanket then present was his blanket. Soon after the soldier was gone the Captain came to the tent, and I was at the fire, and told him that the blanket he offered for sale is like to have an owner, and the Captain said, Is the blanket gone? I told no. Then he said he would go into the tent and mark it, for it was not marked; and took out his knife and went to the tent; and when he came out, he was shutting his knife, and said he had marked the blanket. He asked the Captain how he came by the blanket; the Captain told him he took it up because it could not give the countersign. At another time he told him he found it by the root of a tree. After Captain Little challenged the blanket, Captain Dolson told me that Captain Little had been to him about that blanket, and says if you will stand by me, I will do well enough, for, says he, I told Captain Little I brought it from King's Bridge, and you may say that, and not tell a lie, for I brought it far enough from King's Bridge, you know; and further, says he, I told him I bought it of a New-England man, and gave him twelve shillings for it.

Rheuben Hall, Captain Dolson's waiter, under oath, saith that he heard the Captain tell the Lieutenant, that he had found a blanket, and it could not give the countersign, and he took it up. Some time after I heard Captain Dolson tell Captain Little that he bought the blanket of a New-England man at King's Bridge, and gave him twelve shillings for it; and Captain Dolson marked the blanket, and after some time sold the blanket that was in contest to Joel Frost.

Joel Frost, under oath, saith, that he was passing by the tent of Captain Dolson, and Captain Dolson offered him a blanket for sale, and I agreed and gave him two dollars for the blanket, and carried it home to my tent, and offered to sell it to my tent mates, and one of them agreed to have it; and the next morning he told me that he should not have the blanket, for there was like to be an owner for it. And after Captain Little challenged the blanket he sold me, I told him I had sent it home; he said that blanket could not give the countersign; and further saith about the time said Dolson was arrested, he asked me what I had done with the blanket; I told him I had sent it home, and I told him if he came as honestly by the blanket as I did, he would not be ashamed to have the blanket seen; and told him if he would give me leave I would go home and bring it; and he told me that he would go to the Colonel and try to get me a furlough; and he came back and told me that the Colonel would not give a furlough, and said he wished that he would, for then I could go home and get the blanket and alter or mark it so that the blanket should not be known.

George Gore confirms the above evidence of Rheuben Hall.

The within Court having examined the evidences against the prisoner, find him guilty of the charge alleged against him, and adjudge him to be cashiered and posted as described in section 14th, article 22d, in the Rules and Regulations of the Army, and be mulcted eight dollars, four to be paid the soldier that lost the blanket, and the rest to be disposed of as directed by act of Congress.

Attest: J. Ward, President.

I do approve of the above sentence.

W. Heath, Major-General.

MATTHEW ADGATE TO JOHN M'DONALD.

Fishkill, 6th December, 1776.

Sir: The Committee for exploring Lead Mines, &c., have this day had your letter of the 16th November, 1776, before them, it being the first time they have met since it was received, (on your report therein.) I am directed to inform you that it is the will of the Committee you should proceed no further in exploring the lead mine in the Great Nine Partners, on the bargain made with you by the said Committee on the 16th day of October last, until their further order, and that you do repair to the Fishkill, bringing a certificate from Ezra Thomson, Esq., of the length, width, and depth of the pit you have sunk on said bargain.

Signed by order of the Committee:

Matthew Adgate, Chairman.

To John McDonald, Miner.

P. S. The Committee desire you to procure Mr. Thomson's account against them for inspecting said mine, for settlement.

---

HENRY SCHENCK TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fishkill Landing, December 6th, 1776.

Sir: Having occasion for coming to this place, where I found a quantity of Continental stores, such as tar, tents, &c., which are a wasting to a great degree; the dock afloat with the tar; the tents on a heap in the weather, wet, &c., consequently a rotting;—I would recommend the appointment of some other person living at this place to take charge of all stores delivered at this place, with an allowance for his trouble. I am confident the States would find their account in it. I would recommend Petrus Bogardus, a good careful person.

I am, sir, with great esteem, your very humble servant,

Henry Schenck.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., President of the Committee, State of New-York.

---

PETITION OF MILES SHERBROOKE.

To the Honourable the Convention or Committee of Safety of the State of New-York:

The Petition of Miles Sherbrooke, of the City of New-York, Merchant, humbly showeth:

That your petitioner, on the tenth of February last, viewing his most critical situation on account of the approaching troubles, removed himself and his family from the city of New-York to Long-Island, with a determination, which his connexions in Great Britain he humbly conceives will fully justify, not to take part in the least in the unhappy controversy subsisting between that Kingdom and the United States of North-America.

That nevertheless your petitioner, notwithstanding his aforesaid retreat, and the well-known inoffensiveness of his character, was, upon some information, which doubtless General Washington conceived to be well founded, apprehended by his Excellency's order, on the seventh day of August, as a person suspected to be unfriendly to the American cause, and was sent a prisoner to the State of Connecticut.

That your petitioner is a partner of the commercial house of Perry, Hayes, & Sherbrooke; that your petitioner's partners reside in England, and are well known to have openly avowed and taken an active part in favour of the American cause.

That your petitioner humbly conceives he cannot be considered inimical to that cause, if no other considerations than those of interest should influence him to a similarity of opinion with his partners.

That your petitioner has received directions from his partners, who have proved themselves friendly as abovementioned, to America, how to demean himself in the present troubles, and hopes he always has exercised and shall continue to exercise so much prudence as strictly to conform to them.

That your petitioner has in every instance complied with all Convention and Committee orders, except in the single instance of not taking up arms, in which your petitioner flatters himself he will by the mere recital of his case be fully exculpated, if not justified, in the opinion of the honourable Convention.

That the General Committee of the City and County of New-York conceived your petitioner's case to be singularly hard and scarcely to be paralleled, and your petitioner is well informed that one single person only in that body held him up in a suspicious point of light, which your petitioner is informed was the only cause of his arrest.

That the property of the commercial house in America to which your petitioner belongs, is great, and therefore strongly attaches them to the American interest.

That all the title-deeds, books, and other papers belonging to that house, so much attached to the American cause, as well as a number of papers concerning the estate of the late Mr. Joseph Haynes, deceased, which affect the property of women who cannot take a part in the present controversy, have been buried under ground by your petitioner, on the south side of Long-Island, and will probably soon perish in their present situation unless your petitioner can be admitted to go for their redemption.

That besides this, he hopes that his desire to provide for his wife and family will, considering the probable reasons to suppose him to be friendly to America, have some weight with the honourable Convention.

Upon the whole, he submits to their wisdom and tenderness, both his request to be permitted to repair to the city of New-York and Long-Island, and the terms and conditions upon which he may be thus indulged.

And your petitioner shall ever pray, &c., &c.

MILES SHERBROOKE.

Fishkills, December 6th, 1776.

---

PETITION OF ALEXANDER WALLACE.

To the honourable the Convention or Committee of Safety of the State of NEW-YORK:

The Petition of ALEXANDER WALLACE, of the City of NEW-YORK, Merchant, humbly showeth:

That on the eighth day of August last your petitioner was apprehended, as he understood, by order of his Excellency General Washington, as a person suspected as unfriendly to the American cause, in consequence of which your petitioner presented a memorial to him, representing his family's distresses, a copy of which is ready to be produced.

That his Excellency, in answer to your petitioner's memorial, told him his case was very hard, and directed him to call the next morning. That your petitioner accordingly attended on his Excellency and produced to him a certificate of his good behaviour from Colonel Remsen, and that your petitioner had actually employed a sufficient man in his stead in the Continental service, as by the certificate from Colonel Remsen, ready to be produced, will appear.

That his Excellency thereupon declared that there were then so many applications to him of the like nature that it was out of his power to relieve your petitioner at that juncture, and that your petitioner should submit to the necessity of going with the other gentlemen then under arrest to New-England, and gave your petitioner reason to believe that ere many days elapsed he should return to his family.

That your petitioner while in New-England applied to his Excellency through General Putnam, on the subject of his return to his family, and received for answer that he must wait with patience a few weeks longer.

That your petitioner again applied to his Excellency through another channel, and received an answer to his application, dated the 5th November last, purporting that though his Excellency was disposed to oblige your petitioner, he had referred the matter to the Convention of New-York, to whom your petitioner must apply.

That Governour Trumbull, of the State of Connecticut, knowing your petitioner's particular distressed situation, has permitted him personally to apply to this honourable Convention, as by his certificate ready to be produced will appear.

That your petitioner's private papers, on the preservation of which the well-being of his family principally depends, are buried in the earth on Long-Island, in a place unknown to any but your petitioner and , now a prisoner in New-England, and will probably soon perish unless redeemed from their present state.

That the company papers belonging to your petitioner and his brother, Hugh Wallace, are deposited in a vault in the city of New-York, and cannot be taken from thence but by one of the partners.

That your petitioner's wife and eight small children are now on Long-Island, utterly destitute of that necessary assistance which so numerous a family must unavoidably want in your petitioner's absence, and that to add to the distress of your petitioner's family, they will be obliged to quit the house on Long-Island, in which they now reside, on the 1st February next, as the proprietor thereof is determined to occupy it himself at that time.

Your petitioner therefore, under this complication of distress, begs leave to cast himself on the benevolence of the honourable Convention, humbly requesting their permission to him to proceed to the city of New-York and Long-Island, for the necessary care of his family and his private and company concerns, under such conditions in point of time and other circumstances as to this honourable Convention shall seem fit.

And your petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

ALEXANDER WALLACE.

Fishkill, December 6th, 1776.

---

COMMITTEE OF SALEM TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

SALEM, December 6th, year 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have a number of men in the town of Salem that is absconded, and left their families and effects, and gone to the Ministerial Army; and by the advice of the Chairman of the County Committee, we have taken an account of the effects of those men, and have here sent the account, with their names; and the Committee now desires of me to know of you what shall be done with these estates, whether any thing or not. Please to give us answer by the bearer hereof, if you judge them forfeit to the State of New-York; in particular, what manner to proceed in securing them.

Ephraim Sanford is run off, and left—

| | |
|---|---|
| One horse, worth | £15 0 0 |
| Four cows, two young cattle | 21 0 0 |
| Five hogs, fifteen bushels corn | 17 0 0 |
| Twelve load good hay | 18 0 0 |
| House and barn and furniture | 300 0 0 |
| Forty-eight acres valuable land. | |

Benjamin Close has also left—

| | |
|---|---|
| Three young horses | £21 0 0 |
| One pair of oxen | 20 0 0 |
| Three cows and young cattle | 28 0 0 |
| About thirty bushels wheat | 7 0 0 |
| Twelve load hay | 15 0 0 |
| Very good house and barn. About thirty acres of land. | |

Samuel Baxter has gone, and left—

| | |
|---|---|
| One horse and young horse | £23 0 0 |
| Two cows, two-year olds | 12 0 0 |
| Two fat hogs, two load of rye | 7 0 0 |
| Six load of hay | 9 0 0 |
| Twenty-five acres land, house, and barn. | |

Job Keeler.

| | |
|---|---|
| One cow, two-year old, one calf | £9 0 0 |
| Three fat hogs, five shotes | 8 10 0 |
| Sixty bushels corn | 9 0 0 |
| Three load hay | 4 10 0 |
| Forty bushel wheat | 12 0 0 |

Thomas Smith, likewise.

| | |
|---|---|
| Two horse kind, one pair oxen | £28 0 0 |
| Four cows, six young cattle, three calves | 31 0 0 |
| Twenty-five sheep, four fat hogs | 18 0 0 |
| Five shotes, sixty bushels wheat | 23 10 0 |
| Ten bushels rye, sixty corn | 2 15 0 |
| Twenty loads good hay | 30 0 0 |
| Ninety acres land, with good building. | |

Gilbord Hunt.

| | |
|---|---|
| Two horses, one pair oxen | £35 0 0 |
| Three cows, three young cattle | 17 0 0 |
| Two swine, fat, six shotes | 8 0 0 |
| Fifteen sheep, twelve bushels wheat | 13 0 0 |
| Forty bushels corn, three loads hay | 10 10 0 |
| Fifty acres land, house, and barn. | |

Jonathan Wallace is gone, and left one horse and mare and colt, one pair steers.

Samuel Wallace gone also to the Ministerial Army, a young man.

Ezra Morehouse likewise, and left one old mare.

Jacob Wallace, ditto.

Nethaneal Palmer, ditto.

Nathan Osborn, of Salem, gone, supposed to be a Captain in the Ministerial Army; has left a house and two barns, one hundred and ninety acres land, sixteen loads of hay, thirty bushels wheat, ten bushels oats, one pair oxen, four cows seven-year olds, five calves, and two colts, seven swine.

Abraham Close, also.—Three horse kind, £15; three cows and three steers, £24; three fat hogs, £6; twenty bushels wheat and loads hay, £14; some valuable land.

Abraham Dun gone also.—One pair of oxen, one cow, one horse, two loads of hay, forty bushels corn, seven bushels wheat, sixty pounds flax.

Edward Jones.—Thirty acres land, two horses, one cow, two one-year olds.

George Butson.—House and barn, one hundred and thirty acres land, one pair oxen, one horse, two cows, one year'd colt, two load hay, six sheep, four swine.

Salem, 6th December, in the year 1776. By order of the Committee:

EZEKIEL HAWLEY, Chairman.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

ROBERT YATES TO JAMES DUANE.

Claverack, December 6th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I enclose you a letter from Colonel Van Schaick, together with a list of such of his officers as decline the service. If you can possibly form a Committee, I would recommend the filling up the vacancies. Mr. Cuyler, who is now with me, informs me that he has left the papers in the hands of Mr. Harpur.

I have not yet received an answer from General Schuyler respecting the Tryon County company. I submit it to your consideration, whether room ought not to be left for the officers of that company in case the General should recommend them.

I am, gentlemen, with esteem, your most obedient servant,

ROBT. YATES.

To James Duane, Esq., and the other members of the Committee of Arrangement for the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Saratoga, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: Your favour, without date, covering certain resolutions of the Committee of Safety of the 30th ultimo, I received this day. It gives me great pleasure to find that my worthy friend General George Clinton is engaged in so necessary a work as that of obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river. My ideas on the subject I have already done myself the honour to convey to you in a letter of the instant.

Permit me to assure the Convention, that every assistance in my power shall be most cheerfully afforded on this as on every other occasion. If the stores are not already sent to Albany, I wish measures to be taken to expedite them to that place.

I am, sir, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Honourable Pierre Van Cortlandt, Vice President, &c.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO ROBERT YATES.

Saratoga, December 6th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 28th ultimo was delivered me an hour ago. Captain McKean and Lieutenant French I believe to be good officers, and would wish their continuance in the service. The other two I can say nothing about, as I do not know them. I thank you for informing me that the Committee will be so good as to send me a copy of the arrangement as soon as it is completed.

I am very apprehensive that much evil will arise if a Government is not soon established for this State. The longer it is delayed the more difficult it will be to bring the unprincipled and licentious to a proper sense of their duty, and we have too many such amongst us.

I am, dear sir, with great respect and esteem, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Robert Yates, Esq., Chairman of Committee of Arrangements.

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fort Montgomery, December 6th, 1776.

TO THE GENTLEMEN OF THE CONGRESS OF THIS STATE:

Captain Gregg has applied to me for a recommendation in favour of George Denniston, who served this campaign a Sergeant in Captain Jackson's company, in my regiment. He wants him for an Ensign in his company, and I think he is deserving of the same, as he is a good scholar, and has behaved himself well since he engaged in the service.

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To the honourable the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO COLONEL LEWIS.

Saratoga, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 2d instant I did not receive until this day. If the Committee agrees to let Lady Johnson go down, I am sure I have no objection; but no person can be permitted to go to New-York without a pass from the General commanding the American troops in Westchester County. Her ladyship should therefore go to Fishkill, and from thence send for the necessary passport. No ill treatment I may have received can induce me to forget the laws of decorum and humanity. You will therefore, if Lady Johnson chances to be attended by an officer, apply in my name to Colonel Gansevoort for one. On your part you will see that she is properly accommodated for her passage.

I am, dear sir, your most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

[Here are some lines erased.]

The erasures are some orders from General Schuyler to me, and no ways respect Lady Johnson's liberation.

MORGAN LEWIS,
Deputy Quartermaster-General.

To Colonel Lewis, Deputy Quartermaster-General, Albany.

---

COLONEL JOSEPH WOOD TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Ticonderoga, December 6, 1776.

SIR: Captain Henry O'Hara, late of Colonel Winekoop's regiment, is a gentleman of good reputation and a soldier. He very much wants to join my regiment, and can bring a full company. He is determined not to serve again with the forces in the State of New-York. If his company could with propriety be joined to my regiment, it would be for the publick good. I should then have eight companies to perform all the manœuvres, and one company of Riflemen for light infantry. Our exercise would be much easier, and of course sooner learnt. The Rifle company would then be doing nothing else but scouting, which is very necessary here. I then should have eight companies on the ground, learning what we must at last come to—regular service—such as forming our men in a moment to face the enemy, with equal numbers, on any ground. When we are performing our evolutions with seven companies, it's left-handed work, very like advancing three steps backwards.

General Gates knows Captain O'Hara well, and that his character is that of a brave soldier. If the honourable Congress will order this company to join my regiment, I am convinced it would be greatly for the publick good. I beg I may have an answer soon.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. WOOD.

The Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the honourable the Congress.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, December 6th, 1776—

Present, his Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

There being a large fleet of men-of-war and transports at a little to the westward of New-London Harbour, and their design not being known, it was determined to be a prudent step to remove the Continental and Colonial property at New-London, up to Norwich, and also to take a quantity of wheat on board a ship in New-London, commanded by Captain Kennedy, for publick use; and Captain Ephraim Bill, Jabez Perkins, and David Mumford, of Norwich, are appointed and desired to assist Mr. Shaw in taking and removing said wheat to the mills, to be floured, and the Continental and Colonial ships' stores, &c., to the places of the greatest safety that can be up Norwich river, and to secure the same as well as they can.

Orders were given to several regiments of the Militia to march to New-London, in the defence of this country against the invasion of the enemy; also letters sent to General Washington and others for the needful assistance, and steps to be taken in this alarming time of danger, &c.

Elijah Sharp is appointed Captain of a company in Colonel Ely's company, instead of Ebenezer Holbrook, who refuses.

Voted, To give an order on Colonel Elderkin and Mr. Wales, for one hundred and fifty pounds of Powder, in favour of the Selectmen of Mansfield. (Orders delivered Colonel Storrs.)

Voted, To appoint Captain John Deshon to be a Commissary to the Militia now marching to the defence of New-London, &c., with orders by all means to furnish supplies of Continental or Colonial stores as may best be obtained.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, December 6, 1776.

Sir: It is some time since we have had any intelligence of your situation in the Jerseys, or of the enemy in that quarter. Indeed no certain account has arrived here since the evacuation of Fort Lee and our forces retiring to Hackensack.

We have to acquaint your Excellency that we now apprehend it highly probable that a very considerable part of General Howe's army intend a descent on some part of New-England, and finish this year's campaign here. We have intelligence that a large number, it is said some hundred, of the enemy's ships and transports have passed through Hell-Gate into the Sound. A few days since, ten of the enemy's capital ships-of-war came round Montaug Point, came up the Sound, just passed New-London, where they are since joined by about eighty transports, &c. This we have certain intelligence of, and that they lie off at present at anchor there, it is supposed waiting to be joined by numbers more. We are collecting our Militia as fast as possible; but how far we shall be able to repulse the enemy by this force, you'll judge, and doubt not of your utmost attention and exertion whenever the enemy demand the same, and must submit to your Excellency to give orders as you may think proper on this occasion. May it not be proper to send us some General Officers previous to the coming on of Continental troops? If the descent be on New-London or Newport, or both, a large body of them will be necessary, and of which there can be no doubt.

I am concerned for the recruiting service; wish it may be forwarded, and to be informed how it goes on. Four battalions are raising here, to serve till the 15th of March next.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Jon'th Trumbull.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

ANDREW ADAMS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Reading, December 6th, 1776.

Honoured Sir: I am to inform your Honour that the 4th instant, one John Sheapard, who said he belonged to the State of New-Hampshire, was brought before the Committee for the trial of dangerous persons in this town. He was taken up at a publick house in Newtown upon suspicion, and the enclosed papers were found in his custody. Upon his examination he freely confessed that he set out from New-Hampshire upon the request of Governour Wentworth, with a design to join the Ministerial Army; that he had obtained the enclosed warrant from General Howe, in New-York; that he was sent on shore in a man-of-war's barge in the night season, a little eastward of the Saw-Pitts, and was on his return to New-Hampshire in order to prosecute the business of inlisting soldiers, according to the warrant, when he was taken up, as above. The common jail in Fairfield was not thought a safe confinement at this juncture, as an attack is apprehended, and the people are now in preparation to defend the sea-coasts in this part of the State. A number of men-of-war are now lying off in the Sound, against Fairfield, &c., and by information from General Wooster, it appears probable that several brigades of the enemy are about marching eastward by land. The state of Litchfield jail appears also to be improper for his confinement, on account of the numbers already there, &c. That upon the whole it was thought proper to send him to Windham jail, there to remain under the direction and at the disposal of your Honour and Council of Safety. As this is an instance aside from our usual proceeding, and yet a person most highly dangerous, 'twas adjudged most proper to send him forward as above, and refer the further disposition of him to your Honour.

I am, with great truth and sincerity, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant.

Signed per order: And'w Adams.

To Governour Trumbull.

---

New-London, December 6, 1776.

The State of Rhode-Island, by a Committee which came here last week, have agreed upon an exchange of the prisoners in that State for a like number in the British fleet, which is to take place the 9th instant, at this port. An exchange of prisoners in this State is postponed for the present.

Tuesday last this town was alarmed by the appearance of eleven ships from the eastward, coming into the Sound, most of which appeared to be men-of-war, who, by their course for some time, it was apprehended, might be bound into this place; but they went further up Sound, and towards evening anchored under Long-Island shore, where they lay till yesterday morning, when being joined by other men-of-war and transports from New-York, to the number of near one hundred, they came to sail, and anchored near Black-Point, about eight miles west of this harbour, where they remain at this time. The appearance of such a formidable fleet within one hour's sail of the town, has thrown the inhabitants into great consternation.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Providence, December 6, 1776.

Sir: You will by the letter from Governour Trumbull, herewith enclosed, have the latest accounts of the strength and situation of the enemy, and his preparations thereupon. I have to inform that the Militia of this State are generally mustered and imbodied, and have no doubt of the most speedy and vigorous exertions of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay on this most important occasion.

I have likewise enclosed General Lee's letter of the 27th ultimo to Governour Trumbull. It points to an obstacle relative to raising the new Army, which really merits attention; and for the removal of which, think the Assembly of this State will readily concur in proper measures with the Assemblies of the States of Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut.

I am, sir, with great truth and regard, your most obedient humble servant,

Nich's Cooke.

Honourable James Bowdoin.

P. S. With the assistance afforded us from your State, an experienced company of Artillerymen would be of most essential service.

---

JAMES BOWDOIN TO PRESIDENT WEARE.

Boston, December 6, 1776.

Sir: The President of the Council of this State having received a letter from Governour Trumbull relative to our proposal of a conference of Committees from the New-England States respecting the further emission of paper currency, and for supporting the credit thereof, a copy of which letter is enclosed, whereby it appears that the State of Connecticut, for the reasons therein mentioned, have thought fit for the present to decline joining the Committee of the other States of New-England; and as it is apprehended by this State that the conference would be ineffectual unless all the States of New-England should join in it, we are therefore ordered to inform you that the Delegates from this State are directed not to proceed upon said conference, that in case a Committee should have been appointed by your State, they may act accordingly. It is expected this matter will be taken up again.

I am, sir, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

Honourable Meshech Weare, Esq., President of the Council of the State of New-Hampshire.

---

WILLIAM DAWES TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Boston, December 6, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your request of yesterday, I would acquaint you that I have informed myself of the situation of the forts at Dorchester Heights, by going over myself this morning. I visited forts Number Three and Two, and found but one sentinel in each; and was informed by them, that there was so few over there, it came to them in turn to be one day on guard and one day off, and that but one sentinel at a time was at each fort, Number Two and Three, either by night or day; that there was but about six or eight men to take care of the whole three forts. Was likewise informed by one of the neighbours, that the night before last, a person or persons appeared lurking round one of the forts, upon which the sentinel hailed them, and no answer being given, the sentinel fired upon them, upon which they made off. From all which, sir, I would make only one observation of my own, which will be by way of contrast, viz: since the 25th of October we never had less than between fifty and sixty men for guarding those three forts constantly by night and by day. If the above intelligence will be of any publick utility, my end is fully answered.

Am, sir, with the profoundest respect and esteem, your dutiful servant,

WM. DAWES.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

---

JAMES BOWDOIN TO MESHECH WEARE.

Boston, December 6th, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed papers were thought necessary to be communicated to the State of New-Hampshire. They are, therefore, sent to you for that purpose by order of Council; in whose behalf I am, most respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

Honourable President of the Council of New-Hampshire.

N. B. The papers sent were General Lee's, dated November 30th, enclosed in Governour Cooke's, dated December 5th, and Adjutant Settler's, of December 2d, 1776.

---

JONA. JACKSON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Boston, 6th December, 1776.

SIR: I find, upon trial, that a constant and close attendance (which is indispensably necessary) at the Board of War will be totally inconsistent with that little share of health I enjoy. In my apprehension, also, to hold a seat there and in the Assembly is incompatible with the duties belonging to both at this critical time, when both need the attendance of all their members, and will be frequently required at the same time.

You will therefore, sir, be so kind as to signify my resignation to both Houses of Assembly, begging the favour of their Honours to appoint some person in my stead, assuring them, that as I engaged in this service with a sincere desire to benefit the community, so now finding myself unable to do the service expected, I should think myself wanting in duty not to signify it to them and require a dismission.

With much respect for the worthy members of both honourable Houses, and my grateful acknowledgments to them for their favourable opinion in having appointed me to the trust I have now resigned, I am, sir, your very obedient servant,

JONA. JACKSON.

To Mr. Secretary Avery, to be communicated to both Houses of Assembly.

---

WILLIAM KENNON TO GENERAL LEE.

[Read December 31, 1776: Referred to Mr. Hooper, Mr. Heyward, and Mr. Harrison.]

North-Carolina, Halifax, December 7, 1776.

SIR: The magazines you ordered are accordingly formed, and from a conversation of yours with Mr. Southerland, my agent at Cross Creek, and your letter to General Moore, I judged it to be your wish that I should form magazines in Georgia, North-Carolina, and Virginia. I immediately prepared for doing so, in such manner as I thought best from so imperfect a knowledge of your desires, and found occasion often to regret that you had not sent for me from Cross Creek to have met you on the road, or have wrote me a line; however, I have done what I believe will answer your design, and in such a way as must meet your approbation, since the Continent will be at no expense unless the provisions should be used; for things are laid in on such terms as to produce more than prime cost and charges, either by shipping to the West-Indies or selling to the merchant exporters.

I am just returned from the southern line of Georgia, and have formed magazines on the Altamahau, on the head of Ocgechey, at Augusta, and about forty miles above Savannah. In this State I've formed them so as to answer the service here, or transport to Virginia, at an easy rate, according to orders. Such provisions as I've laid in for Virginia and North-Carolina will, by a circumstance worth the attention of the Congress, be very dear, which is the vast number of commissaries, contractors, or purchasers, appointed by the imprudence of the Virginians, and the want of integrity of the North-Carolinians; for they, in order to enhance the price of provisions, by raising of which most in this Congress live, appointed so many competitors in the purchase that I am now paying double at least to what I did a few days ago; for there are now nine Commissaries in this State, of separate interests, with a number from Virginia; and the people here are combining to advance it to a most exorbitant height; and unless there is a single purchaser appointed for your district, which must chiefly be furnished from North-Carolina with pork and beef, the Continent will suffer one hundred per cent. in all the meat used by the troops. This, sir, I hope will deserve your particular attention, and that I shall hear from you as soon as your arduous situation will admit. I am not courting the place of Commissary-General of your district, though it would be acceptable to me, but it is my duty to lay before you, sir, this extraordinary and improper expense, as I wish the business done by me should be in a way the least burthensome to the State. There are variety of reasons which might be urged against the measure of so great a number of Commissaries; but one good reason is enough for Government: the exorbitant increase in the price of provisions by thirty or forty purchasing competitors. Would any private gentleman of the Congress, having occasion for twenty thousand barrels of beef and pork, to be bought up at one certain market, employ a single factor or agent to execute that trust; or would he order thirty different agents to purchase up the provisions, maintain each of them as bidders on each other at vendue, and risk beside the want of their knowledge and integrity? Too many fingers in the publick purse will endanger the State of North-Carolina, and the Congress, as far as in them lays, should prevent it.

This will be delivered you by Captain Allen, who can explain this, and every other matter, to your satisfaction. These Commissaries are now insisting to march to Charlestown with their different regiments; and I need not tell you, sir, what an effect such a competition will have at that market, already the highest on the globe; but can be lowered by the quantity of provisions in this State, provided the purchase is left to one upright, industrious, deserving man.

Your letter to Mr. Harrison, Paymaster in Virginia, was forwarded in a few days after date express by me, but no answer received. I am this day sending for the hundred thousand dollars mentioned therein, which I hope to receive. If I do not, Captain Allen will inform you, and you will order it from Philadelphia by immediate express, as I am in great want, having borrowed large sums from private people, who have some time expected payment. It would be also necessary for me to have a further credit on the Continental Treasury, and I am ready to enter into any security, if any should be required; and as to the hundred thousand, if it is necessary, I will give security for that sum also before it is paid me at Charlestown; in which case, it may be sent to the commanding officer, with direction as to the security. I have the fullest confidence that should Mr. Harrison decline sending this hundred thousand dollars you will order it, so that I shall receive at least that sum in two months from this date. In the mean time, I shall borrow on the credit of this expectation. I have also purchased a quantity rum and osnabrigs, the latter of which the nakedness of the soldiers induced me to do. I have devoted my whole time to the service of you and your district, and shall on all occasions prove to you my desire of being serviceable to the Continent; but I wish not to be interrupted by injurious competitions, which can answer no other purpose but increase the price of provision to an intolerable height, and introduce confusion in the camp by a variety of agents.

I some time ago wrote by post from Wilmington, and lately sent you two letters, one from Mr. Bryan and the other from Hispaniola, which I hope you have received.

I have the honour to be, sir, with all duty and respect, your most obedient servant,

WILL. KENNON.

---

War Office, December 7, 1776.

I am directed by the Board of War to order all officers on the recruiting service in this State immediately to march the men they have inlisted to Philadelphia, leaving none at the several places where they now are, but such as shall be absolutely necessary for the service. Returns of the number already recruited are desired to be forthwith transmitted to the Board. All officers in the service of the United States arriving in Philadelphia, are desired to attend at the War Office and make the proper returns.

By order of the Board of War:

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

---

TO THE ASSEMBLY OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Would it not conduce to the immediate safety of the State of Pennsylvania, if a Dictator were appointed for three or six months, with full powers to exert the strength of the State in any way he should think proper against our enemies?

Has not the want of a suitable person, entrusted with such powers in time of war, ended in the ruin of several of the most flourishing Republicks of antiquity?

Are not the present ravages of the enemy in the States of New-York and New-Jersey owing to the want of suitable persons entrusted with absolute power to compel every individual of those States to concur in repelling the common enemy?

Does not the languor with which all the Legislatures in America move in the present alarming exigency of our affairs fully demonstrate that placing so little power in the hands of the executive branch of Government, is a most essential and fundamental fault in all our new Constitutions?

A CITIZEN.

Philadelphia, December 7, 1776.

---

COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

SIR: We set out this morning for Princeton. In our way we met a messenger with the enclosed. The General ordered me back upon some necessary business. He has gone forward to Princeton, where there are about three thousand men, with which I fear he will not be able to make any stand. The Jersey Militia are so few that no dependence can be placed on them. The Militia of Pennsylvania, except from the city, have not appeared, and they are very confused, the time not having admitted of any arrangement. In short, sir, from all circumstances, I am inclined to think no opposition will be given till we cross the Delaware. Our whole force, if collected, will not exceed six thousand, and they are diminishing every moment by desertion.

I can get no other paper than this. You will please to excuse it, as well as the hurry of my letter.

I am, with much respect and regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

Jos. REED.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

---

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Princeton, December 7th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Lord Stirling will write by the same express that this comes by, and enclose to your Excellency several pieces of intelligence obtained of different people yesterday. His Lordship thinks the enemy are making a disposition to advance; for my part, I am at a loss to determine whether their disposition is to advance or for defence. The enemy have got a party advanced about seven miles this side Brunswick; another at Bounbrook, with an advance of guard two miles this side of the town. 'Tis reported by some of the country people that the enemy intend to advance in two columns, one this, the other Bounbrook road. General Mercer advanced upon this road, and I should think the German battalion might be advantageously posted on the other road.

Major Clarke reports General Lee is at the heels of the enemy. I should think he had better keep upon the flanks than the rear of the enemy, unless it were possible to concert an attack at the same instant of time in front and rear.

Our retreat should not be neglected, for fear of consequences. The bottom of the river should be examined, and see if the boats can be anchored in the ferry-way. If there is no anchor ground, the bridge must be thrown over below. Colonel Biddle had better make a trial immediately, that we may not be in confusion. If a bridge cannot be thrown over, forty boats should be manned, under the care of a good officer, and held in readiness; with these boats, prudently managed, the troops could be thrown over in a very short time. Methinks all the cannon that don't come forward with the Army might be well posted on the other side the river to cover a retreat.

I think General Lee must be confined within the lines of some general plan, or else his operations will be independent of yours. His own troops, General St. Clair's, and the Militia, must form a respectable body.

If General Dickenson would engage the Militia for some given time, there might be some dependence upon them; but no operation can be safely planned wherein they are to act a part, unless they can be bound by some further tie than the common obligation of a militiaman. I think if the General was at length to engage his Militia on some such plan, your Excellency might take your measures accordingly.

This moment a Captain has returned that went to reconnoitre last night, and it is beyond a doubt the enemy are advancing, and my Lord Stirling thinks they will be up here by twelve o'clock. I shall make the best disposition I can to oppose them.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

N. GREENE.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Pompton, 7th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As there is now no doubt of the enemy's directing a considerable force towards your island, my duty to the publick, and my regard for the welfare of your Colony in particular, urge me to every expedient which may be serviceable to you; and I must entreat you not to impute the freedom with which I shall offer my thoughts upon this occasion to a petulance of disposition, but to the most pure and disinterested zeal. I have, sir, from what I have observed of the New-England troops, the highest confidence in the valour of your men and common run of your officers, particularly those who are of the younger part. They have activity and fire, and in general more knowledge than those advanced in years, who are not only destitute of knowledge, but incapable, from a certain rustiness of mind and temper, of acquiring any. In fact, the only advantage of years in any profession is, that it enables us to add to our stock of knowledge. But if we do not avail ourselves of the days which nature has made a present of to us for this purpose, the more years have passed over our heads, the more disqualified are we for the profession of a soldier of any rank. Now it unfortunately happens in New-England, that to the most disqualified the highest trusts are committed. To speak directly, the appointments of Generals in your Provinces threaten destruction; but in fact it is impossible that you should have men equal to this arduous task. Theory joined to practice, or a heaven-born genius, can alone constitute a General. As to the latter, God Almighty indulges the modern world very rarely with the spectacle; and I do not know, from what I have seen, that he has been more profuse of this ethereal spirit to the Americans than to other nations. But to come to the point: Rhode-Island will probably be attacked; your men and younger officers are good, but I am persuaded you have no man with you capable of conducting an army; no man who has sufficient knowledge as an Engineer. I have therefore resolved to send a gentleman, with whose great talents, activity, and zeal I am well acquainted. His name is Malmadie, a Frenchman. I entreat, if you cannot give him the entire command, to be directed by his counsels. You must excuse his heat of temper at times, as it is derived from a noble source of enthusiasm for your cause. Procure for him an able interpreter; and treat him, as I am sure you will, with all the respect and attention he deserves. God bless you, sir. Believe me to be, most devotedly, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

Governour Cooke.

P. S. I believe I shall send you Colonel Varnum, but I hope you will continue to give Mr. Malmedie high Colonial rank, which will lead him to Continental.

---

COLONEL MALCOM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Niack, December 7th, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour to receive your most obliging letter of the 4th instant yesterday, and am exceeding happy that the conduct of the regiment under my command hath merited the approbation which your Honour very politely expresses.

A scouting party, which went down to hover on the verge of the enemy's quarters about English Neighbourhood, brought in a stout negro fellow, the property of a Tory, (one Peck,) who is now with the enemy; and the negro has been employed as a spy to bring them accounts of our motions. I beg to know how I must dispose of him.

I request your Honour will inform me if the Treasury is moved. I expect my abstracts from Head-Quarters to-day, and would be glad to get the cash here.

I have the honour to be, with due respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

W. MALCOM.

To Major-General Heath, at Peekskill.

I have forty men just going out again.

---

WILLIAM PECK TO GENERAL HEATH.

North-Castle, 7th December, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: By express of General Spencer, just received your favour of the 6th instant. By his order would I inform you, that General Wooster, upon the first discovery of the movement of the fleet, sent forward an express to Connecticut, with a desire it might be forwarded to Newport, which occasioned my not sending. We are upon our march towards Crum Pond; shall this night be at North-Castle Church. Should you have any news from the Jerseys, pray forward it to the General as fast as possible. The stores are to be deposited at Crum Pond, where General Wadsworth's brigade will guard them until further orders.

No particular news at this post but what your Honour has been made acquainted.

In behalf of General Spencer, I am your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

WILLIAM PECK, Aid-de-Camp.

Major-General Heath.

---

DIRECTIONS TO CAPTAIN EAYERS.

Peekskill, December 7th, 1776.

SIR: You are to proceed to Fishkill with the company under your command, and as soon as your company is under cover, you will constantly keep them employed in such business as you may have already in charge from the Colonel of Artillery, or that may be most necessary or beneficial to that department. You will quarter your company in the barracks, and Mr. Duer will direct you to those most proper for your business.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH, Major-General.

To Captain Josh. Eayers.

COMMITTEE AT NEW-WINDSOR TO GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

New-Windsor, 8th December, 1776.

SIR: The Convention of the State of New-York have not received any intelligence from the General Congress or his Excellency General Washington, and are much alarmed at the progress of the enemy, and the languor that prevails in the Militia of the State of New-Jersey; which they attribute in some measure to the presence of the enemy and the little prospect they have of receiving any assistance within their State. This Convention wish to use every means in their power, (consistent with the safety of this State, which in a great measure involves that of the Continent,) to induce the people of New-Jersey to make the proper exertions for their own preservation. To this they conceive nothing can contribute more than forming an army in New-Jersey out of the troops under your command, or those that are with Major-General Lee, and such Militia as can be collected in this or the neighbouring States; which we are very well satisfied would soon be formidable to the enemy, cut off their supplies, and overawe the disaffected, while General Washington, being reinforced by the Southern troops and Militia, would be in a state to meet them in front. What measures we have taken you will collect from the resolutions which we do ourselves the honour to transmit. In addition to this, we have written to Governour Trumbull, suggesting the propriety of sending at least six thousand of the Militia of that State into New-Jersey, and requesting them to write for further aid to the rest of the Eastern States. If it is consistent with your orders, to hang in the rear of the enemy. From these steps, and the means that may be used for raising the Militia of New-Jersey, we cannot but help thinking that General Howe may soon find cause to repent his temerity.

As we know not where to find Major-General Lee, we must beg the favour of you to transmit a copy of your letter by some careful person, and the enclosed resolutions, to him. If, sir, either you or General Lee will be pleased to suggest any necessary measures in addition to those we have taken, we shall think ourselves happy in coöperating therein.

We are, sir, with the utmost respect, your most obedient, humble servants.

---

ROBERT PROVOOST, JUN., TO THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fishkills, 7th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As there is a new arrangement lately been made to form four new regiments for the defence of the Province of New-York, which is to have a Paymaster to each regiment, and my being neglected in the return made by the Colonel unknown to me, has been the occasion of my not applying, gentlemen, before. I pray, gentlemen, that I may be again appointed to one of the new regiments. I have been in the service since last April, and was then Quartermaster, and in July was appointed by his Excellency General Washington, Esq., Paymaster to the Third Regiment, commanded by Colonel Ritzema, and expected to have continued, until I was informed two days ago that I should apply to this Convention for the office. I have lost my all in Newark by the enemy; I have a large family to support; likewise an aged father and mother, who relies upon me for subsistence. I beg, gentlemen, that you will be pleased to consider my situation, and grant me an appointment.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

ROBT. PROVOOST, JUN.

To the honourable gentlemen of the Committee of Safety, at Fishkills.

---

ABRAHAM P. LOTT TO ROBERT BENSON.

Rhinebeck, December 7th, 1776.

SIR: I send by the bearer hereof three pair of cotton stockings, three pair plain thread, two pair thread ribbed, and four pair shoes. You will let Mr. Gouverneur Morris have the refusal of them. If you or Mr. McKesson wants a pair of shoes and stockings, you can have them from my house. You have the price at first cost underneath. I have been this four days about the woods looking for the salt. They have been so much frightened they don't know where the salt is sent.

*

Sir, I remain your friend to serve,

Abm. P. Lott.

To Robert Benson, Esq., at Marble Town.

Three pair cotton stockings, 31*s.* 8*d.*, New-York, - 42*s.* 3*d.*
Three pair thread, plain, - 26*s.* do. - 34*s.* 8*d.*
Two pair ribbed, - - - 28*s.* 4*d.*, do. - 37*s.* 9*d.*
Four pair shoes, English, - 26*s.* 8*d.*, do. - 35*s.* 6*d.*

N. B. If Mr. Morris don't take them you will sell them, and receive the money.

---

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Albany Committee Chamber, 7th December, 1776.

Sir: We were honoured with your resolution of the 30th November ultimo, respecting the two companies of Rangers commanded by Captains Baldwin and Bradt; and in answer thereto have only to inform you that we have this day served the said Captains with copy of the said resolution, and expect they will embark on Tuesday next.

We are, sir, your humble servant. By order:

John Barclay, Chairman.

To the President of the Convention of this State.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

State of Connecticut, Lebanon, December 7, 1776.

Sir: The General Assembly of this State, sensible of the vast importance of supporting the great cause in which you are so nobly struggling, have, at their session of the 19th of November last, made provision for raising by inlistment four battalions to serve under your command until the 15th of March next, before which time I have strong hopes our quota of the Continental Army will be completed; and I do earnestly recommend it to the brave officers and soldiers of this State now in your Army, freely and cheerfully to undertake in defence of so great, so just, and so good a cause. The misery and wretchedness to which they, their families, their friends, and their country must be reduced, if our enemies succeed, are dreadful in idea; how much more dreadful and how intolerable to be realized! How can they, how can my countrymen, born free, bred up and always possessing liberty and property, in one of the freest and happiest places under Heaven, endure the thought of submitting to the absolute will and pleasure of haughty masters, to do the drudgery of a conqueror, to drag out their lives as perpetual soldiers if he pleases, to fight against their friends and countrymen, and hold their native land in subjection to proud and imperious lords, to see every inch of soil and all other property adjudged forfeit, and the fair inheritance which God had given our fathers, and they had transmitted to them and us, wrested out of our hands and given to those who have been our betrayers and murderers! The Congress, ardently desirous to perpetuate a happy and blessed liberty to their countrymen, have offered a very large and great reward to those who will engage for the term of the war, or for the term of three years, if so long needed. Every considerate friend of his country will think it great, when they consider the whole amount, and as great as can be wished or borne by the country. 'Tis not for want of a good disposition that they did not offer more, but a virtuous mind would not expect or wish for more. We are not fighting for money, but to save our inestimable rights, which are above all price.

I trust the term will be no discouragement. It is not likely their service will be even wanted for so long as three years. It is extremely probably this controversy will be finished (we trust in God) happily before that time; and then who will grudge the labour and service of so short a period, for the unspeakably happy establishment of perpetual liberty, property, and religion? It was an exceeding grief and pain to the members of Congress, and to the Assembly of this State, that our friends, the soldiers, were obliged to suffer many hardships in the last campaign, owing to the great difficulty of procuring all the wished-for accommodations and necessaries, and to other unavoidable circumstances, which it is expected will be remedied in future, as many methods to provide and secure every suitable provision for the time to come. And, in addition to all that Congress for this purpose, our General Assembly have resolved their troops shall be provided with all proper accommodations for sick and well, and that all refreshments and clothing shall be furnished and delivered them at prime cost of purchase, which will be a great saving, beside giving them a blanket annually. I consider them as my friends and children, so do the General Assembly, and are most cordially disposed to treat them with all the tenderness of parents, and will assuredly exert themselves for their comfort. In these circumstances, and in a cause so just, so good, so great, I earnestly exhort them freely to offer themselves for the service of their country. The cause is certainly that of justice, liberty, and religion, and in which they may well expect the blessing and protection of God, almighty and all gracious. I would also most earnestly exhort them to a virtuous and religious behaviour, which will assuredly make them happy here and forever.

But should it so happen, on account of the busy scenes in which they are engaged, that there is not time to attend, or by any other means that the inlistments should not be full in season, and the General, or in his absence, the General Officers of this State, should think it necessary to request the soldiers of this State to continue in service longer than the term of their former inlistment till the quota can be completed, I have it in special charge from our General Assembly in their session the last week, and in their name, do most earnestly recommend it to the faithful soldiers of this State, to pay great attention to such request, and to be assured it will not be made but for the most pressing and important reasons; and, in behalf of said Assembly and the whole Colony, earnestly exhort them to consider the vast importance of a compliance. Perhaps the whole salvation of their country, themselves, their friends, and the families they have or may have, and all succeeding generations, may depend on their sacrificing a desire to see their friends a few days or weeks earlier; the indulging which desire may be the very means of entailing on those very friends and connexions, and on themselves, the dreadful miseries of everlasting poverty and slavery. I do also assure them, in the name of the Assembly, that they will not only gratefully remember their virtuous spirit and conduct, but will make them a reasonable consideration for their continuance over and above their other wages and allowance. What shall I say more? Let me conjure them by all the reasons and arguments aforesaid, and by every argument and motive that can render the enjoyment of life desirable, not to forsake their country in her greatest extremity, nor disappoint the hopes and earnest request of the General Assembly, the wishes and expectations of all their friends, for the sake of a supposed relaxation from fatigue, and thereby plunge themselves and country in perpetual hardship and slavery; but even this little advantage cannot be gained in the present situation of affairs, for the enemy have turned their force against New-England, and most of their ships, and near one hundred transports, with great part of their army as is supposed, are now lying against New-London, and their countrymen here are called, gone, and going with speed, in the same difficult season, to resist the enemy, and those who return from the Army must be called to join them, and can only exchange the place of service. But I trust and hope their friends, and their patrons the General Assembly, and all degrees of people, expect and believe the virtuous soldiers of this Colony will not turn a deaf ear to the pressing call and voice of Providence and their country, on this interesting and great occasion, nor let our enemies ever say there was not virtue enough among the Americans to save their country.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Jonth. Trumbull.

His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. 8 December.—Since writing the above, the enemy's fleet have quitted New-London harbour, without attacking that place, and were yesterday, above one hundred sail, between the island of Conanicut and the main, steering directly to Providence, and about thirty sail going into Newport harbour, and have doubtless attacked them before this, and our Militia are turned that way, and we expect an army must be established in New-England also.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, December 7th, 1776—

Present, his Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez

Huntington, William Williams, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, William Hillhouse, Esquires.

On receiving intelligence that the British Fleet have sailed from off New-London Harbour, eastward, his Honour the Governour gave orders to stop the several regiments ordered for the defence of New-London, but to hold themselves in readiness to march to any place that may be attacked, &c.

Voted, To suffer the Prisoners sent from General Washington when at New-York, under a guard commanded by Captain Eells, to return to Long-Island, they giving their parole to not give any intelligence to the enemy of what is done or doing here, nor take up arms, or say or do any thing against the American States; and that they will return back to this State, at any time when demanded.

Resolved by this Board, That the gentlemen sent to this State by General Washington, belonging to Long-Island, and placed at Norwich, and now residing there, be permitted, and have liberty to return to their several homes, for the present, upon their and each of them giving their parole as follows, viz:

"We do hereby severally and respectively promise and engage to the Governour of the State of Connecticut, on the faith and honour of gentlemen, that we will neither of us give notice or intelligence to the enemy of the United States of America, nor hold any inimical correspondence with them; that we will not take up nor bear arms against the United States of America, nor act an offensive part against them or either of them, but to conduct peaceably and quietly with respect to the present contest and troubles, and return back to this State when required by the Governour."

And the Committee of Inspection in the town of Norwich are hereby authorized to take their parole made and signed, and give copy thereof, and a permit to them to return.

Voted, That Captain Ephraim Bill be, and he is hereby, appointed to cause two-thirds of the Rum of the cargo taken on board the schooner Hannah & Elizabeth, to be guarded and stored for the publick use; and Captain Bruce's private adventure, as far as this State is concerned in the property or avails thereof, to be presented to him, and said schooner and the remainder of the cargo to be sold at publick vendue; and the sale of the ship Sally, if there should be any duck or spare rigging, cordage or sails, belonging to said ship or cargo, Mr. Shaw is desired to bid off the same for the use of this State, if to be had at a rate within the bounds of prudence in the purchaser.

---

RALPH ISAACS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-Haven, December 7th, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I have sent by the young gentleman, the bearer of this, a memorial to your Honour and your Council of Safety, praying that I may have the limits of the town of Glastenbury or Durham for the place of my residence, as long as it shall be thought necessary for me to be removed from New-Haven. As I propose to take my family with me, it is necessary that I should be removing my effects as soon as possible. For which reason I should be extremely obliged to your Honour if the memorial could be heard without any delay, in order that I may be determined to which place to remove my effects. The young gentleman will wait to know the event of this matter, if there shall be a possibility of its being acted on.

I am, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient and humble servant, RALPH ISAACS.

Governour Trumbull.

---

MEMORIAL OF RALPH ISAACS.

To the honourable the Governour and Council of Safety in and for the State of CONNECTICUT:

The Memorial of RALPH ISAACS, of NEW-HAVEN, humbly showeth:

That by a late act of the General Assembly in October last he was ordered to be removed and confined to the Parish of Pastbury, under the law of the Civil Authority and Selectmen of the town of Glassenbury, and that the General Assembly, holden at Hartford, on the 19th day of November last, on account of the infirmity of your memorialist, did resolve "that his Honour the Governour, with the advice of the Council of Safety, might grant such further enlargement to the memorialist within said town of Glassenbury, or remove him to some other inland town at their discretion, as they should judge might consist with the safety and best good of the publick," as by said resolve may appear. Whereupon your memorialist begs leave to observe, that he still labours under great bodily infirmity, and thinks it necessary, in order to recover his health, that part of his family should remove with him to take care of and provide for him, and also might send for those physicians who have attended on him and are well acquainted with his constitution, as he is apprehensive a relapse or return of his disorder might prove fatal unless he could have the aid and relief of those physicians who have been so successful as to give him much relief. He also conceives that in said Parish of Eastbury he could not be accommodated with those necessaries which will inevitably be wanted to attain to a confirmed state of health.

Your memorialist, therefore, humbly prays your Honour to permit him to have the limits of the town of Glassenbury, or the town of Durham, under the care of the authority of the Selectmen of the respective towns, or under such regulations as to your Honour shall seem meet. And your memorialist more particularly requests the latter town, confident removing there will be attended with much less expense, as also that he can be supplied with many necessary articles of provision from his farm at Branford; and this indulgence, from principles of economy, your memorialist is the more embolden to ask, as he has been a great sufferer during the present struggles, in the loss of two vessels, and two more not at sea, from which he can have no returns. Your memorialist thinks there could be no detriment accrue to the State from this indulgence. If any was likely to rise, he would not ask it, but willingly suffer an abridgment of his own liberty, if judged necessary for the good of the publick; but as he hopes your Honour will be of opinion it may consist with the publick safety, he humbly prays your Honour that he may have the liberty of the town of Durham, otherwise that of Glassenbury; and your memorialist, as in duty bound, will pray, &c. Dated at New-Haven, the 7th day of December, 1776. RALPH ISAACS.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Providence, December 7, 1776.

SIR: We have received a letter from General Lee, advising an embargo, in consequence of which the Committee sitting here have laid one upon all shipping until further orders.

The enemy's fleet, consisting of about one hundred and thirty sail, were seen last evening at sunset, about thirty-five miles distant from the harbour of Newport, and stretching directly for it. Yesterday morning they made a heavy cannonade upon New-London, and a feint of landing a body of troops near New-London, I suppose with a view of drawing our forces that way.

The troops before destined for the assistance of this State we have requested General Warren to march to Bristol. The formidable appearance of the enemy makes it absolutely necessary that a large force should be assembled in and about this town, and we must request the Great and General Court to give order immediately to such a body of troops as they shall think necessary to march directly for this town.

I beg the favour of you to deliver and forward the enclosed letters with all despatch; and am, sir, your most obedient and humble servant, NICH'S COOKE.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

I have the most sincere pleasure in acquainting you that Mr. Hazard, a Paymaster of one of the regiments of this State, hath just returned from the camp, and brings us intelligence of a severe check given the enemy in the Jerseys, General Putnam having attacked a body of about six thousand, entirely routed them, killed great numbers, and made many prisoners. I congratulate you on this success; and am, as above, &c.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Providence, December 7, 1776—five o'clock, p. m.

SIR: By expresses and other channels, I have certain intelligence that between ten and eleven o'clock, a. m.,

thirty sail of ships were seen coming into the harbour of Newport, and that upwards of one hundred sail were between two and three o'clock between Canonicut and the main land, steering directly up the river. The General Court must be fully apprised of our dangerous situation, and of the fatal consequences of the enemy's effecting a lodgment upon the Continent, and need not any argument to excite them to exert the force of Massachusetts-Bay upon this most important occasion, upon the event of which the fate of America may depend. I must request that the forces you send may be furnished with arms, ammunition, blankets, and such provisions as they can bring. You will also take the necessary measures to send provisions, &c., to supply them, as this State cannot afford more than is sufficient for the forces of this State. We may be attacked before morning, therefore the utmost expedition is necessary.

In great haste, I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

---

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOUR COOKE.

State of Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations.

I have just received, by express, authentick and undoubted intelligence, that the fleet of the enemy, consisting of about one hundred and thirty sail of men-of-war and transports, were seen last evening about sunset off Charlestown, in this State, about thirty-five or forty miles from Newport, and steering directly for that harbour. As it is clear that they are designed for this State, I most earnestly call upon all military officers and others of this and the neighbouring States, to exert themselves in the defence of their country.

NICHOLAS COOKE, Governour.

Providence, December 7, 1776.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, December 7, 1776.

SIR: This Court have taken into consideration your important advices of December 5th, and are desirous of affording every assistance in our power. Agreeable to the resolves enclosed, you will find, that as one quarter part of all our able-bodied effective men now at home are raised for the purpose of reinforcing the Army at or near New-York, we have ordered those raised in the Counties of Plymouth, Bristol, Barnstable, Suffolk, Middlesex, and Essex, to be marched the lower post road to New-York, in order to be ready to give assistance either to New-Port or New-London, in case it is wanted. And lest that should not be sufficient aid, we have further given orders to Joseph Cushing, Esq., Brigadier for the County of Plymouth, at Hanover, and George Godfrey, Esq., Brigadier for the County of Bristol, at Taunton, to cause all their Militia in their respective Counties to be in readiness to march upon the shortest notice, with two days' provision, ready dressed, to the assistance of New-Port, New-London, or any place on the southern shore that may be attacked, and that those Brigadiers cause their Militia to march to New-London on any message or signal from your Honour for that purpose, without any further orders from us. And in case your Honour has provided any signal for an alarm, that will be sufficient to give them notice, please to advertise those gentlemen of the same, and we doubt not they will render all the assistance in their power. We thank you for all the intelligence you have afforded us, and hope we shall never be wanting in every suitable expression of respect and regard for your State. May Heaven direct your counsels, defend and protect you against all our common enemies.

We remain, with all due respect, your Honour's obedient servant.

P. S. To prevent any interference of orders to the Brigadiers, would inform that a similar letter has been sent to Governour Trumbull.

---

COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Council Chamber, Boston, December 8, 1776.

SIR: Immediately on receiving your Excellency's intimations that it was necessary your Army should be reinforced with four thousand of the Militia from this State, orders were issued to raise the men. And since that, as our affairs grew more serious and alarming, the Court have given orders to augment the number to about six thousand. Every measure hath been adopted to forward the troops to you with despatch. We can't but indulge the pleasing hope that the intended reinforcement will arrive in season, and that they will afford every assistance and support that may justly be expected from them.

They are ordered to rendezvous at Danbury, in Connecticut, where General Lincoln, who is appointed to take the command of them, will wait your Excellency's orders.

The General Court of this State are determined vigorously to exert themselves in raising a new army, and render to your Excellency every support in their power, notwithstanding the alarm the enemy are spreading, by hovering round these coasts with a large number of ships-of-war and transports, perhaps with a view to divert us from these designs.

We congratulate you on the late happy success of our arms, and wish to be informed of the particulars of the battle near Hackensack river, and of every occurrence important to the United States which may take place.

We are, with great regard and esteem, your Excellency's most humble servants. In the name and by order of Council,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

EPHRAIM SPOONER TO MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR.

Plymouth, December 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The General Court of this State having appointed my partner, William Watson, Esq., to build the needful barracks on the Gurnet for the soldiers stationed there, we need for said business, besides the brick and lime lately wrote for per Captain Hickling, viz: 12 m. fourpenny nails, 7 m. ten-penny nails, 5 m. twenty-penny ditto, one hundred feet glass, 6 by 8. Must earnestly desire the favour you'll send them by the first vessel. Would propose they should come by Captain Benjamin Bartlett, now at Boston, in a schooner belonging to this place, as we can't proceed in building the barracks without the above articles, and the soldiers much exposed. Must beg the favour you'll send them by all means. Mr. Watson would have wrote you, but he is now confined to the hospital with the smallpox.

Am respectfully, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

EPH'M SPOONER.

To the honourable Board of War.

---

BRIGADIER HARNDEN TO GENERAL WARREN.

Woolwich, December 7, 1776.

SIR: I received your Honour's orders, and have proceeded as far as I could; but not having no acts from the honourable Court, am at a loss how to proceed, and do request of you to send them to me as soon as possible, there being none in the County that I know of; nor is there any commissions ever come for the Militia, that they might be furnished with commissions for the First Regiment. If the County of Lincoln has had none, I would pray your Honour to send both the acts and commissions, if it be agreeable to your mind.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

SAMUEL HARNDEN.

To the Honourable Major-General Warren.

---

ORDERS TO COLONEL WENTWORTH.

State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE to JOSHUA WENTWORTH, Esq., greeting:

Pursuant to a vote of the Council and Assembly, for raising and proportioning five hundred men out of the Militia in this State, to reinforce the Continental Army in the State of New-York, you are hereby requested to raise, by draft or otherwise, thirty-two able-bodied effective men, well equipped, out of the regiment under your command, to remain in the service until the first day of March next, unless sooner discharged.

In raising which men you are to call on the alarm list, as well as trained band.

The men that shall be raised, Colonel Jonathan Moulton's regiment, are to be with you, and to form one company. The Field Officers of said regiments are to appoint one Captain and two Lieutenants. The non-commissioned officers to be appointed by the company. Each Captain is to have eight pounds, Lieutenants five pounds eight shillings, Sergeants three pounds eight shillings, Corporals, Drummers, and Fifers, three pounds four shillings, privates three pounds, for one month, advance wages, and two pence per mile for travelling expense. You are appointed muster-master and paymaster of the men to be raised in your regiment, and to make return to the Assembly or Committee in recess as soon as may be.

NATH'L FOLSOM,
Chairman for Committee appointed for the purpose.

Given at Exeter, the 7th of December, 1776.

---

SILAS DEANE TO COUNT VERGENNES.

Paris, December 8th, 1776.

SIR: I received last evening a letter from my friend Dr. Franklin, at Nantes, which place he was to leave last Sunday morning, so that I expect him in Paris this day, or early to-morrow. Mean time I have and shall carefully attend to the hint given me, and am confident he will do the same. His arrival is the common topick of conversation, and has given birth to a thousand conjectures and reports, not one of which I have given ground for, having constantly declared that I am ignorant of the motives of his voyage or his business.

I have the honour to be, &c., SILAS DEANE.

---

B. FRANKLIN TO JOHN HANCOCK.

Nantes, 8th December, 1776.

SIR: In thirty days after we left the Capes of Delaware, we came to an anchor in Quiberon Bay. I remained on board four days, expecting a change of wind proper to carry the ship into the river Loire; but the wind seeming fixed in an opposite quarter, I landed at Auray, and with some difficulty got hither, the road not being well supplied with means of conveyance. Two days before we saw land, we met a brigantine from Bordeaux, belonging to Cork, and another from Rochefort, belonging to Hull, both of which were taken. The first has on board staves, tar, turpentine, and claret; the other Coniac brandy and flax-seed. There is some difficulty in determining what to do with them, as they are scarce worth sending to America, and the mind of the French Court, with regard to prizes brought into their ports, is not yet known. It is certainly contrary to their treaties with Britain to permit the sale of them, and we have no regular means of trying and condemning them. There are, however, many here who would purchase prizes, we having already had several offers from persons who are willing to take upon themselves all consequences as to the illegality.

Captain Wickes, as soon as he can get his refreshments, intends a cruise in the Channel.

Our friends in France have been a good deal dejected with the Gazette accounts of advantages obtained against us by the British troops. I have helped them here to recover their spirits a little, by assuring them that we still face the enemy, and were under no apprehensions of their two armies being able to complete their junction.

I understand Mr. Lee has lately been at Paris, that Mr. Deane is still there, and that an underhand supply is obtained from the Government, of two hundred brass field-pieces, thirty thousand fire-locks, and some other military stores, which are now shipping for America, and will be convoyed by a ship-of-war.

The Court of England, Mr. Penet tells me, (from whom I have the above intelligence,) had the folly to demand Mr. Deane to be delivered up, but were refused.

Our voyage, though not long, was rough, and I feel myself weakened by it; but I now recover strength daily, and in a few days shall be able to undertake the journey to Paris.

I have not yet taken any publick character, thinking it prudent first to know whether the Court is ready and willing to receive Ministers publickly from the Congress, that we may neither embarrass her on the one hand, or subject ourselves to the hazard of a disgraceful refusal on the other.

I have despatched an express to Mr. Deane, with the letters I had for him from the Committee, and a copy of our commission, that he may immediately make the proper inquiries, and give me information. In the mean time, I find it is generally supposed here that I am sent to negotiate, and that opinion appears to give great pleasure, if I can judge by the extreme civilities I meet with from numbers of the principal people, who have done me the honour to visit me. I have desired Mr. Deane, by some speedy and safe means, to give Mr. Lee notice of his appointment.

I find several vessels here laden with military stores for America, just ready to sail. On the whole, there is the greatest prospect that we shall be well provided for another campaign, and much stronger than we were the last. A Spanish fleet has sailed with seven thousand land forces, foot and some horse. Their destination unknown, but supposed against the Portuguese in Brazil. Both France and England are preparing strong fleets, and it is said that all the Powers of Europe are preparing for war, apprehending a general one cannot be very distant.

When I arrive at Paris, I shall be able to write with more certainty. I beg you to present my duty to the Congress, and assure them of my most faithful endeavours in their service.

With the sincerest esteem and respect, I have the honour to be, &c.,

B. FRANKLIN.

To his Excellency John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

---

B. FRANKLIN TO THE COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Nantes, 8th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: After a short but rough passage of thirty days, we anchored in Quiberon Bay, the wind not suiting to enter the Loire. Captain Wickes did every thing in his power to make the voyage comfortable to me; and I was much pleased with what I saw of his conduct as an officer, when on supposed occasions we made preparation for engagement; the good order and readiness with which it was done being far beyond my expectation, and I believe equal to any thing of the kind in the best ships of the King's fleet. He seems to have also a very good set of officers under him. I hope they will all in good time be promoted. He met and took two prizes, brigantines, one belonging to Cork, laden with staves, pitch, tar, turpentine, and claret; the other, to Hull, with a cargo of flax-seed and brandy. The Captains have made some propositions of ransom, which, perhaps, may be accepted, as there is yet no means of condemning them here, and they are scarce worth sending to America. The ship is yet in Quiberon Bay, with her prizes. I came hither from thence seventy miles by land. I am made extremely welcome here, where America has many friends. As soon as I have recovered strength enough for the journey, which I hope will be in a very few days, I shall set out for Paris.

My letter to the President will inform you of some other particulars.

With great esteem, I have the honour to be, &c.,

B. FRANKLIN.

P. S. December 10th.—I have just learnt that eighty pieces of the cannon, all brass, with carriages, traces, and every thing fit for immediate service, were embarked in a frigate from Havre, which is sailed. The rest were to go in another frigate of thirty-six guns.

---

CAPTAIN COOK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

December 8th, 1776.

HONOURED GENTLEMEN: Our people's time will expire some time this month, and the beginning of next; and as there is wages given as far as eleven pounds per month in the merchant service, it is very possible that many of them will leave the service of this State, without due encouragement. I'm informed that there is a resolve made by the honourable Convention of this State giving twenty dollars bounty for able seamen, and ten pounds for ordinary seamen. I'm in hopes this bounty will engage the whole of them, or the greatest part to the service, provided it's advertised. I hope for your instructions in this case, and should take it as a singular favour you would provide for me the resolves of this State, or Congress, that is relative to the naval department, that I may act accordingly. I'm doing all I can to get the ship away before Christmas, and make no doubt of its being so, provided we can keep our people together.

Since I wrote the above, I received your favour of the 6th instant, and it gives me pleasure I can be supplied with canvas. Mr. Hollingsworth bid for the snow fourteen hundred pounds and upwards. I believe he went as far as he thought the value of her, but was overbid. The schooner Nancy, one of our prizes, I make no doubt will answer your purpose if large enough. The Captain of her informs me she is a good vessel and well found.

As I expect to see you in a few days, I shall have an opportunity of talking further with you, therefore shall trouble you no further at present, but am, honoured gentlemen, your very humble servant,

Geo. Cook.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

DR. SHIPPEN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Bethelem, 8th December, 1776.

My dear and honoured Sir: With much difficulty and a small loss I have got all the sick, except twenty who were too ill to remove, to Easton, Bethelem, and Allenstown, where in a few days I flatter myself they will be as happy as sick soldiers ever are.

I must mention to your Excellency that the moving of Doctor Morgan's stores, that have not been used these three months, have cost the Continent I verily believe as much as their first cost. Would it not be well to have them opened here, and the useful ones be employed for the many sick who want them, and the remainder stored up? You know, sir, how particular some folks are in doing business. Your orders will be necessary. The Congress have explained their resolves, and ordered Dr. Morgan's duty to lay entirely on the east of Hudson's river.

As it is possible that an action will happen between your and General Howe's Army, I have thought it necessary that some gentleman of eminence should be near your Excellency and the Army, in case of extraordinary accidents, for which purpose I know of no one more proper or better qualified than the bearer, Dr. Cochran, who will wait your Excellency's commands in this department.

As soon as my great family can be left with propriety, I shall do myself the honour of waiting on you also. In the mean time I sincerely wish success to your arms; and am, dear and honoured sir, your affectionate and very humble servant,

W. Shippen, Jun.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 9th.]

Mr. Berkley's Summer seat, December 8th, 1776.

Sir: Colonel Reed would inform you of the intelligence which I first met with on the road from Trenton to Princeton yesterday. Before I got to the latter, I received a second express, informing me that, as the enemy were advancing by different routes, and attempting by one to get in the rear of our troops, which were there, and whose numbers were small and the place by no means defensible, they had judged it prudent to retreat to Trenton. The retreat was accordingly made, and since to this side of the river.

This information I thought it my duty to communicate as soon as possible, as there is not a moment's time to be lost in assembling such force as can be collected, and as the object of the enemy cannot now be doubted in the smallest degree. Indeed, I shall be out in my conjecture (for it is only conjecture) if the late embarkation at New-York is not for Delaware river, to coöperate with the Army under the immediate command of General Howe, who, I am informed from good authority, is with the British troops, and his whole force upon this route.

I have no certain intelligence of General Lee, although I have sent frequent expresses to him, and lately a Colonel Humpton, to bring me some accurate accounts of his situation. I last night despatched another gentleman to him, (Major Hoops,) desiring he would hasten his march to the Delaware, in which I would provide boats near a place called Alexandria, for the transportation of his troops. I cannot account for the slowness of his march.

In the disordered and moving state of the Army, I cannot get returns; but, from the best accounts, we had between three thousand and three thousand five hundred men before the Philadelphia Militia and German battalion arrived. They amount to about two thousand.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MAXWELL.

Falls of Delaware, South side, 8th December, 1776.

Sir: As it is a matter of the utmost importance to prevent the enemy from crossing the Delaware, and to effect it, that all the boats and water-craft should be secured or destroyed, I do hereby earnestly request and desire that you will take upon you the care and superintendency of the matter. At Tinicum a parcel of boats are to be collected for the transportation of the troops under the command of Major-General Lee; but of this as little should be said as possible, lest the enemy avail themselves of some advantage from the knowledge of it. These boats should be kept under a strong guard. The boats at other places ought, in my opinion, to be destroyed or removed to Tinicum, lest they should be possessed by some stratagem of the enemy.

You will see that the regiment sent up to guard the hither ferries are properly distributed and the officers instructed. At the places of passage above, you will endeavour, from the Militia of this State or that of Jersey, to obtain sufficient guards; in order to do which, I do hereby invest you with all the powers intrusted to me for that purpose, and do moreover authorize you in the strongest terms to invite the Militia of both States, as occasion may offer, to join this part of the Army, or that under the command of Major-General Lee, in the common defence of their rights, liberty, and property.

Trusting in your activity and care, in having all the boats as high up as there can be the least danger of their being procured by or for the use of the enemy, secured or destroyed, and wishing you much success in it, I am, with esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Go. Washington.

To Brigadier-General Maxwell.

---

MATTHIAS WILLIAMSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Morris-Town, December 8th, 1776.

Sir: I had the honour of receiving your Excellency's two letters of the 5th and 7th instant. I can declare to your Excellency with the greatest truth, that with the utmost punctuality and despatch on receiving Governour Livingston's orders, I wrote letters to the Commanding Officers of the Militia of this State, to draw out their battalions, and join the Army under your immediate command, or the corps under my care, as most contiguous. I am sorry to say, that although there was great necessity for them to exert themselves at this important crisis, very few of the Counties of Essex and Bergen joined my command.

At this time I have no influence in either of those Counties, but have it from good intelligence that many who bore the character of warm Whigs have been foremost in seeking protection from General Howe, and forsaking the American cause.

Colonel Thomas, of Essex County, is with us, but has no command of men. I don't think he has more than fifty men of his whole battalion.

Not above twenty privates from Newark have joined us; not one from Acquacanunck; nor a field officer from either place.

Colonel Ford's regiment makes up the principal part of the troops here, and it is chiefly owing to his zeal in the American cause, as well as his great influence with the people, that the appearance of defence at this post has been kept up.

Colonel Simes, of Sussex, has joined us, but his number of privates is inconsiderable. I should be glad to have made out a return of the brigade to your Excellency, but my indisposition puts it out of my power. Colonel Ford has had the command since we arrived here; I took so great a cold on the late march, which fell into my limbs, as has in a great measure confined me to my room, and disabled me from joining the brigade. I rode out yesterday about four miles to Passaick, our chief post, and taking fresh cold, am now entirely confined to my room.

I feel sensible pain at some expressions in your Excellency's last letter, which imply that I had not done all in my power to assemble the Militia under my command. Could your Excellency be possessed of a knowledge of my solicitousness and endeavours to bring them out, I am sure you would conclude that the man who had informed or insinuated otherwise, had used me very cruelly. I can declare before God, I have worried myself to the heart in endeavouring to serve my country to the extent of my power. General Mercer is knowing to many difficulties I laboured under to keep the Militia together, while he had the command at Elizabethtown. Upon the whole, I am so entirely disabled from doing my duty in the brigade, by my lameness, that I have wrote to Governour Livingston to request his acceptance of my resignation, and have ventured to recommend Colonel Ford as the properest to succeed in that command.

I am, with the greatest truth, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

MATTHIAS WILLIAMSON.

To his Excellency General Washington, &c., at Trenton.

P. S. Enclosed is a copy of the orders I sent Colonel Ford the moment I received Governour Livingston's command to call out the Militia, &c. Similar to this was sent to all the commanding officers of the different Counties, in the eastern division of this State.

—

Elizabethtown, 26 November, 1776.

SIR: By express just now received from his Excellency Governour Livingston, I am desired to call out all the Militia of this State; therefore, on the receipt hereof, you are ordered to bring out all the Militia in your County immediately, and march them down to Elizabethtown, and see that each man is furnished with a gun, and all his ammunition, accoutrements, blanket, and four days' provision, and when they arrive, to join their respective companies and regiments.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

M. WILLIAMSON.

To Colonel Jacob Ford, Jun.

P. S. SIR: You will please to send two men off to your County, express, with your orders to have these orders immediately put into execution. Order the express to call on me, to take a letter to Sussex.

---

GENERAL LEE TO A COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS.

[ Read 10th. ]

Morris-Town, December 8th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed is a return of the Militia already assembled. More are expected in. The whole will, it is said, make by to-morrow morning one thousand. My corps that passed the North River will amount (for we are considerably diminished) to seven-and-twenty hundred; in fact our Army may be estimated at four thousand. If I was not taught to think that the Army with General Washington had been considerably reinforced, I should immediately join him; but as I am assured he is very strong, I should imagine we can make a better impression by beating up and harassing their detached parties in their rear, for which purpose a good post at Chatham seems the best calculated. It is at a happy distance from Newark, Elizabethtown, Woodbridge, and Boundbrook. We shall, I expect, annoy, distract, and consequently weaken them in a desultory war; but we are so ill shod and destitute of light-horse, that the troops are in a bad condition for this species of service. I must do 'em the justice to say, that they have noble spirits, and will, I have no doubt, render great service to their country.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

The Honourable Richard Henry Lee and Benjamin Rush, Committee of Congress.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Morris-Town, December ye 8th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Colonel Humpton will give you a return of the Militia already assembled, and of those (if it can be called a return) expected. The whole will, as it is said, make by to-morrow morning one thousand. My corps that passed the North River will amount (for we are considerably diminished) to seven-and-twenty hundred; in fact our Army may be estimated at four thousand. If I was not taught to think that your Army was considerably reinforced, I should immediately join you; but as I am assured you are very strong, I should imagine we can make a better impression by hanging on their rear; for which purpose, a good post at Chatham seems the best calculated. It is at a happy distance from Newark, Elizabethtown, Woodbridge, and Boundbrook. It will annoy, distract, and consequently weaken 'em. As to your Excellency's idea of surprising Brunswick, the post I propose taking offers the greatest probability of success. But we are so ill shod and destitute of light-horse that this desultory war is hard upon the poor soldiers; but must do 'em the justice to say that they have noble spirits, and will, I have no doubt, render great service to their country.

God bless you, General. Yours, most sincerely,

CHARLES LEE.

His Excellency General Washington, Trenton.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Chatham, December ye 8th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Major Hoops has just delivered to me your Excellency's letter. I am certainly shocked to hear that your force is so inadequate to the necessity of your situation, as I had been taught to think you had been considerably reinforced. Your last letters proposing a plan of surprises and forced marches convinced me that there was no danger of your being obliged to pass the Delaware; in consequence of which proposals I have put myself in a position the most convenient to coöperate with you by attacking their rear.

I cannot persuade myself that Philadelphia is their object at present, as it is almost certain that their whole troops lately embarked have directed their course to the Eastern Provinces; for Spencer writes me word that half of it has passed the Sound, and the other half turned the southwestern end of Long-Island and steered eastward. I detached Colonel Warner and Mons. Malmadie to take the direction of the Rhode-Island troops, who are without even the figure of a General. It will be difficult, I am afraid, to join you; but cannot I do you more service by attacking their rear? I shall look about me to-morrow, and inform you further.

I am, dear General, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

A Return of the First PENNSYLVANIA Regiment of Foot in the service of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, commanded by Colonel JOHN P. DE HAAS.

| COMPANIES. | OFFICERS PRESENT. | | | | | | | | | | Rank and File. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Con'ssioned. | | | | Staff. | | | Non-Comm'd. | | | | |
| | Colonel. | Lieutenant Colonel. | Major. | Captains. | Subalterns. | Adjutant. | Quartermaster. | Doc. Mate. | Sergeants. | Drums and Fifes. | Present, fit for duty. | Sick, present. |
| Captains. | | | | | | | | | | | | |
| Jones | 1 | 1 | 1 | - | 2 | 1 | 1 | 1 | - | - | 4 | 1 |
| Williams | - | - | - | - | 2 | - | - | - | - | 1 | 7 | 5 |
| Harmer | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | 1 | - | 7 | 4 |
| Dorsey | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | 6 | 2 |
| Jenkins | - | - | - | - | 2 | - | - | - | - | - | 8 | - |
| Willitt | - | - | - | - | 2 | - | - | - | - | - | 12 | 1 |
| Lamar | - | - | - | - | 2 | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | 7 | 1 |
| Davis | - | - | - | 1 | 1 | - | - | - | 1 | - | 6 | 3 |
| Total | 1 | 1 | 1 | 3 | 13 | 1 | 1 | 1 | 4 | 3 | 47 | 17 |

N. B. The First Pennsylvania Regiment was raised to October 27th, 1776.

JOHN PATTERSON, Adjutant.

New German-Town, December 8th, 1776.

JOHN HARING TO GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

Clarkstown, December ye 9th, 1776.

SIR: I just now came to this place, where I found several members of our County Committee assembled together, who requested of me to send you the enclosed letter, which I now do, with much pleasure, and do not doubt but you will do every thing in your power to procure us protection.

I am, sir, your sincere friend and very humble servant,

JOHN HARING.

Brigadier-General George Clinton.

---

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Haverstraw, 9 December, 1776.

SIR: The rainy weather in our march from the White-Plains brought on a fit of the rheumatism, which has detained me here, but I am now in a fair way to get rid of it.

This State consists of but fourteen Counties. The enemy have five Counties, and part of two others. If they get possession of these, they will get a representation of the majority of the State, and make a surrender of our rights. It is therefore of the utmost importance that they should be prevented of that advantage, which they will not fail to avail themselves of, if some exertion is not made by you. The southernmost part of this County is ravaged by the enemy, plundering the friends of the country of their property, and disarming them, at Orange-Town. Some of them are flying to the country, others flying for that protection to the enemy which we do not afford them. If some speedy relief is not afforded them, I fear they will all, or the greatest part of them, submit to the enemy; and if this event takes place, they will greatly aid the enemy in crossing the mountains, to show the sincerity of their submission. The securing these passes will be greatly assisted by advanced posts; and whatever corps are there, can easily retire to the last stand. For these reasons, as well as for the honour of the State, it is absolutely necessary that three or four hundred men should be posted at Orange-Town. General Lee cannot at present give any protection to that part of the country, because he is ordered to advance as far as Morristown, if not to join General Washington. It was with great reluctance he quitted West-Chester, as he saw the lower part of the County would be exposed to the enemy, from which they can derive great support. I write this in haste, and must refer you for particulars to the bearer.

I have the honour to be, your very humble servant,

ALEX. MCDOUGALL.

To the Honourable the President of the Convention, or the Chairman of the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

COLONEL HAY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Haverstraw, December 8th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed I send you a letter from Colonel Magaw, which was delivered to me by Mr. Livingston, who came up to the place in a schooner with a flag of truce. I have consented that the schooner might proceed as far as Verplank's Point, and there wait for your answer whether they might proceed any further up the river.

I beg you will despatch the bearer as soon as possible.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

A. HAWKES HAY.

To Major-General Heath, Peekskill.

N. B. The gentlemen want to go to the Convention of this State.

---

JOHN COE AND OTHERS TO GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

December 9th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We are somewhat doubtful whether you have received any true state of the condition we are in, and how distressed many of our neighbours are; therefore, we beg leave to inform you, that the King's troops, our cruel and merciless enemies, have last Saturday been in Orange-Town, have taken some prisoners and robbed others. The English troops and the Tories make great havock; the latter insult and abuse the Whigs in a manner not to be borne with. Part of the Militia of Bergen County are now taking up arms against us, and unless we soon get assistance the southern part of Orange County will be laid waste. We beg you would consider how hard it is for the men to be taken away, their effects destroyed, and the women and children suffering. This is now the case, and will continue unless we have assistance, or unless the men will agree to take up arms against their country.

Pray lay our case before the General, who commands where you are, and endeavour to get relief for us under our present situation. If a body of men should be sent, we hope nothing shall be wanting on our part to drive the enemy out of our neighbourhood.

We are, sir, your most obedient servants,

| | |
|---|---|
| JOHN COE, | JOHN COLEMAN, |
| JOHN SMITH, | DIRCK VANDERBELT, |
| THEORUS POLHEMUS, | JOHANNES VANDERBELT. |

Brigadier-General George Clinton, at or near Fishkill.

---

GENERAL WADSWORTH TO GENERAL HEATH.

North-Castle, December 8th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: By order of General Spencer I send, under the care of Lieutenant Paine, a number of persons taken up as dangerous to the American States, a particular account of which I suppose he has or will transmit to you, he being now at Bedford and expected here to-morrow. Nothing new here. It is rumoured the enemy's fleet lately sailed are lying off New-London.

I am, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

JAMES WADSWORTH.

Major-General Heath, Peekskill.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Peekskill, December 8th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday afternoon Lieutenant-Colonel Vose arrived here from Albany, with Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's regiments, making in the whole between five and six hundred men, on their way to join your Excellency. I am furnishing them with tents, provisions, &c.; and not a moment's time shall be lost in facilitating their march. They do not disembark here, but fall down to Haverstraw, and will begin their march this day.

Generals Gates and Arnold will be at Goshen this night, with Patterson's, Stark's, Poor's, and Read's regiments.

We have information, that besides the ships which sailed through the Sound to the eastward, several large ones, the Asia, Eagle, &c., sailed round Long-Island. It is conjectured by many that they are bound to Halifax to winter, and that barracks for the reception of a large body of troops have lately been built there.

A number of valuable prizes have been taken to the eastward, in particular one with arms, clothing, &c.

General Spencer is removing to Crom-Pond, where the stores which were at North-Castle are deposited. The heavy artillery, consisting of one brass twenty-four pounder and seven iron twelve-pounders, is at this place.

General George Clinton is pushing the obstructions in the river. I have ordered Colonel De Roussie's Canadian detachment to join him.

A great number of convalescents left here by General Lee, and others collected from the Jerseys, North-Castle, Stanford, &c., many of whom can never be of any service, but a burden to the publick, I think had better be discharged, return home, and recruit, after which many of them will inlist.

I think the recruiting service is pretty successful. Should be glad to be informed if the men belonging to one State are to inlist under officers belonging to another, as there is a diversity of opinions on the matter. My own opinion is, that they ought not; but perhaps I am mistaken.

We are impatient to hear from your Excellency, and to know the truth of things, as many reports prevail here: one day that you are retreating before the enemy, the next that you have obtained some signal advantage, killed some principal officers, &c.

By a person who has just made his escape from the enemy, I am informed that they are building barracks in Fort Independence, near King's Bridge.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To his Excellency General Washington, at Trenton.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL LEE.

Peekskill, December 8th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday afternoon Lieutenant-Colonel Vose arrived at this place from Albany, with Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's regiments, making in the whole between five and six hundred men. I have advised them not to lose a moment's time, but to follow you immediately. I am furnishing them with provisions, tents, &c., and they will begin their march this day.

Captain Williams, of Greaton's, informs me this morning that General Gates had sent forward orders for the troops to rendezvous at Goshen. He had not received your letter until he heard from you that they might know what route to take.

I have advised the troops here to proceed, as it is most probable General Gates, who is to be at Goshen this night, will join them on the road.

I submit it to you, sir, if it would not be best to send an express back, with such directions as you may think proper, either to halt them on the road from Goshen, until General Gates comes up, or march forward and join you without loss of time.

I am, dear General, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

Major-General Lee.

P. S. General Gates has with him Paterson's, Stark's, Read's, and Poor's regiments.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL HAY.

Peek's Kill, December 8th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have just received your favour, enclosing a letter from Colonel Magaw. I would have you treat the flag with the utmost politeness and respect, at the same time with as great precaution.

The schooner is not to proceed farther up the river. You will acquaint the gentlemen, that if they have any letters to the Convention, they shall be safely conveyed there by a messenger who shall be appointed for that purpose; but that they are not to be permitted to pass there themselves. It will be best to converse with them at the shore; or if it should be necessary for them to advance to an house, it ought to be the first; and if any stores, provisions, &c., are at the place, it will not be amiss to blindfold those who land until they arrive at the house. But I think it will be best to treat with them at the beach.

You will give notice to Colonel Tupper to keep a vigilant look-out this night.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately, W. HEATH.

To Colonel Hay.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, December 8th, 1776. }

SIR: The confusion into which every thing has been thrown at Philadelphia by the enemy's rapid progress, has, we suppose, prevented the Congress from applying to us or you for aid, much as they at present want it, of which you will judge when we inform you that General Howe is at Brunswick with ten thousand men; that General Washington is at Trenton with an army of about six thousand strong. We think it, therefore, our duty to mention these facts to you, and to entreat you, by that regard you have hitherto testified for the glorious cause in which we are engaged, on this occasion speedily to exert your whole force. Should six thousand men cross into the Jerseys, where General Lee now is with two brigades, and unite themselves to him, or General Gates, who is likewise on his march with some troops, the panick which universally prevails in New-Jersey would be removed; a considerable body of the Militia would probably flock in to your assistance, and the enemy, shut in between two armies and having their supplies cut off, might dearly pay for their temerity. The fleet that is sailed up the Sound is evidently designed as a feint, to draw your attention from the object that ought principally to engage it, and to keep any part of the force of the New-England States from where it is most manifestly wanted. Though this embarkation ought not to be neglected, yet from the number of troops in New-Jersey, those that have gone up the Sound cannot be very formidable. We cannot but hope that so fair an opportunity of distressing the enemy will not be foregone, especially as there is no telling what consequences may attend the enemy's uninterrupted progress through a country by no means free from disaffection.

All that can be expected from us in our present weak and dismantled state has and shall be done. Nine hundred of our Militia, well armed and appointed, are ready in the field, and occupy some passes at which General Washington has directed them to be stationed. The Militia of two Counties were put under General Heath's command, and are under marching orders.

You will be pleased immediately to write to the Eastern States on this important subject, and to let us know what number of troops you are like to collect, and whether we can give you any assistance in purchasing or forwarding provisions for them.

I am, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant.

By order of the Committee of Safety:

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Vice President.

The Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the State of Connecticut.

COMMITTEE TO COÖPERATE WITH GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

At a meeting of the Committee appointed by the Representatives of the State of New-York, in Committee of Safety assembled, agreeable to a Resolution of the said Committee of December 8, 1776:

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, December 8, 1776. }

Resolved, That a Committee of three gentlemen be requested to go immediately to General George Clinton, at New-Windsor, vested with full powers in conjunction with General Clinton, to call out the Militia of Ulster and Orange Counties, and to station them at such places as they may think will contribute most to the safety of this State and the general interest of America.

Resolved, That Mr. Robert R. Livingston, General Scott, and Mr. Duer, be the said Committee.

Extract from the Minutes:

ROBERT BENSON, Secretary.

Present: Brigadier-General George Clinton, Brigadier-General Scott, R. R. Livingston, Esq., William Duer, Esq.

Resolved, That all the Militia of Orange and Ulster, not at present in the Continental service, and which compose the brigade commanded by Brigadier-General George Clinton, be forthwith ordered to march, properly armed and accoutred, and with four days' provision, to Chester, in Orange County, there to receive further orders from Brigadier-General Clinton. That the said Militia be allowed Continental pay and rations, and one penny per mile in lieu of rations till they come to the place of rendezvous.

Resolved, That General George Clinton be empowered to make use of the Arms and Accoutrements belonging to this State and now at New-Windsor, for the purpose of equipping such of the said Militia as are not armed.

Resolved, That Colonel Malcom be requested and authorized to exert all the influence which he possibly can to induce the men under his command, and such others as he can procure, and to continue in service till the last day of December, and that he be annexed to the brigade commanded by Brigadier-General Clinton.

Resolved, That General George Clinton be empowered to give a gratuity of one dollar to each man of Colonel Malcom's regiment who will consent to remain in service till the first day of January.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that General Clinton march with his Militia the companies of Rangers raised in the County of Ulster, under the command of Captain Jacob De Witt and Captain Hasbrouck.

And whereas, in the opinion of the honourable General Congress, and from the measures pursued by the enemy, it is evident that the security of the United States depends principally upon the preservation of the State of New-York, which can only be effected by preventing the passes of the Highlands, on Hudson's river, from falling into the hands of the enemy; yet it is the firm intention and earnest desire of the Convention of this State to give every assistance possible to any of their sister States, or to the United States in general, consistent with that grand object.

Resolved, therefore, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that General George Clinton be ordered either to join the Army under the command of Major-General Lee or Major-General Gates, provided it be the intention of either of these officers to form a separate army for the purpose of falling upon the enemy's rear, or cutting off their supplies, and that he vigilantly attend to the motions of the enemy in such a manner that he may be able to retain the passes of the Highlands on Hudson's river.

Resolved, That if it shall be the orders or intentions of Major-General Lee or Major-General Gates to join the main body of the Continental Army, that nevertheless General Clinton do forthwith march into the State of New-Jersey, as far as he think consistent with the preservation of the passes of the Highlands, and that he exert himself to the utmost in collecting and rousing the spirits of the Militia of the said State, and in overawing and curbing its disaffected or revolted subjects, whenever he shall be called upon by a proper civil or military authority of said State.

Resolved, That Colonel Duboys be requested to attend General George Clinton on this expedition.

Resolved, That a copy of the above Resolutions be transmitted to General Heath, and that he be requested to give every necessary assistance to General Clinton in carrying the same into execution.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Committee, the regiments commanded by Colonel Huntington and Colonel Tyler may be safely put under the command of Brigadier-General George Clinton, as he will take care, from time to time, in case the motions of the enemy should require it, that the pass at the Ramapo should be properly secured.

Resolved, That in case General Clinton shall be permitted to draw off the above-mentioned regiments from the pass at Ramapo, that he be empowered to supply their place with as many of the Militia under his command as he shall think necessary.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee that General George Clinton should be supplied with two field-pieces, forty-five thousand cartouches, tents for fifteen hundred men, and as many small-arms as shall be necessary for supplying such of the Militia who may stand in need of them, and that the same ought to be issued from the Continental stores.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee that a Deputy-Commissary and one of the Assistant Quartermaster-Generals of the Continental Army, should attend the brigade of Militia under the command of General George Clinton.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee that the sum of six thousand pounds should be advanced to General George Clinton from the Treasury of this State, in order to supply any expense which may accrue in the execution of the above-mentioned Resolutions, which is before unprovided for.

Resolved, That a Letter be sent by express to Major-General Gates, enclosing copies of these Resolutions, and that he be requested to forward copies of the same to Major-General Lee.

By order Committee: ROB. R. LIVINGSTON.

—

New-Windsor, 8th December, 1776.

SIR: The Convention of the State of New-York have not received from the General Congress or his Excellency General Washington, and are much alarmed at the progress of the enemy and the languor that prevails in the Militia of the State of New-Jersey, which they attribute, in some measure, to the presence of the enemy, and the little prospect they have of receiving any assistance within their State.

The Convention wish to use every measure in their power, consistent with the safety of this State, which in a great measure involves that of the Continent, to induce the people of New-Jersey to make the proper exertions for their own preservation. To this they conceive nothing can contribute more than forming an army in New-Jersey out of the troops under your command, or those that are with Major-General Lee, and such Militia as can be collected in this or the neighbouring States, which we are very well satisfied would soon be formidable to the enemy, cut off their supplies, and overawe the disaffected, while General Washington, being reinforced by the Southern troops and Militia, would be in a state to meet them in front.

What measures we have taken, you will collect from the resolutions which we do ourselves the honour to transmit. In addition to this, we have written to Governour Trumbull, suggesting the propriety of sending at least six thousand of the Militia of that State in New-Jersey, and requesting him to write for further aid to the rest of the Eastern States. If it is consistent with your orders to hang on the rear of the enemy, from these steps and the means that may be used for raising the Militia of New-Jersey, we cannot but help thinking that General Howe may soon find cause to repent his temerity.

As we know not where to find Major-General Lee, we must beg the favour of you to transmit a copy of your letter and the enclosed resolutions by some careful person to him. If, sir, either you or General Lee will be pleased to suggest any necessary measures, in addition to those we have taken, we shall think ourselves happy in coöperating therein.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant.

By order of the Committee: ROB. R. LIVINGSTON.

To the Honourable Horatio Gates, Major-General.

—

Dalston's Tavern, December 9, 1776, ten o'clock at night.

SIR: Since the resolutions which are referred to and enclosed in the above letter were agreed to, General Clinton and myself were requested by the Committee to proceed to Goshen, where we understood you was expected this evening, in order to know the route which the troops under your command propose taking, and to confer with you on other matters, which are the objects of these resolutions.

I am sorry we were not fortunate enough to meet with you; but from the intelligence we have received from your Aid-de-Camp, Major Pearce, and from the route which we find General Lee has taken through Princetown, we find that the intentions of both your Armies is to join General Washington, and not to form a separate Army in order to fall on the enemy's rear.

In compliance, therefore, with his orders, General Clinton will be under the necessity of confining himself to the objects specified in the resolution marked No. 7, unless he should learn from either General Lee or yourself, that your intentions are to form another army on the rear of the enemy. For this purpose he desires me to inform you, that he will immediately order his troops to rendezvous at the place called H City, near Kakeat, in Orange County, at the parting of the road which leads to Tappan and Paramus, where he will be ready to obey your orders, so far as they are consistent with the objects of the enclosed resolutions. The force he will have with him will consist of about fifteen hundred men.

By the latest accounts, we hear that General Washington is daily receiving strong reinforcements from the Militia of Jersey and Pennsylvania; in consequence of which, he might probably be induced to form an army for the purpose of hemming in the enemy in the rear, were he made acquainted with the measures pursued by the Convention of the State of New-York. I have therefore to request the favour of you to have copies of the Committee's letter to you and of the enclosed resolutions, transmitted immediately by express to his Excellency General Washington and to Major-General Lee, in order that they may pursue such measures as they shall judge best calculated for the general good.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient, humble servant,

WM. DUER.

Major-General Gates.

—

SAMUEL TUDER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Poughkeepsie, December 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Ivers having declined doing any more for the ships, and your orders being to fit them for sea by spring, would inform you that after the rigging we have spared, shall fall considerably short to fit the ships out; we shall therefore be under the necessity to get some person to relay what rigging may be wanted, out of the old rigging on board the brig Polly, Captain Redfield; for which purpose would recommend the bearer, Mr. Degrushe, who, we think, very capable. Mr. Ivers being willing to serve the cause, will either sell his tools he has here, or let them on reasonable terms. Captain Anthony Rutgers can give you Mr. Degrushe's character as a rope-maker. As the season is so favourable, we should be glad of your answer by first opportunity, that Mr. Degrushe may go to work, if you approve of him.

We expect the stuff for the gun-carriages soon; and as we must have the dimensions of the guns before the carriages can be made, should be glad to know where the guns are, and whether it would not be prudent to send a person to take measure of them.

There will be wanted a number of stores to fit the ships for sea. Would submit it to your honourable House, whether it would not be prudent to appoint Captain Anthony Rutgers to assist in providing them. Agreeable to your desire, we have appointed Mr. Stephen Hendricks of this place to take care of the stores. Should be glad you would let us know whether we shall agree with him, as you stipulate his wages, to go to the yard once a day.

I am, with great esteem, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

SAMUEL TUDER.

To the Honourable Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

JAMES CUYLER TO JAMES DUANE.

Albany, December 9th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Colonel Van Schaack has returned to the Committee of Arrangement Mr. Van Valkenbrugh amongst the number that declined to serve. Mr. Van Valkenbrugh is now here, and has requested me to write you, and begs his name may not be taken off the arrangement, and in the company he was fixed to, and that he now has consent from his parents. I think him a very fine young fellow, and should be sorry to lose him. He also assures me that Mr. Samuel Thorn will accept. He has received a letter from him. Mr. Henry Devandorph, who was given up to us as indifferent, has, since we were at Saratoga, done some very extraordinary services. This I have from Colonel Van Schaack; and I believe he will make a good officer. He is full of spirit and pride I know, and from what I can learn, he is sorry for the offence he has given some time ago to one of his Field Officers.

I am, sir, your most obedient,

JAS. CUYLER.

To the Honourable James Duane, Fishkill.

---

GENERAL WOOSTER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Saw-Pitts, Rye, Connecticut, December 8th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have not had a line from you since I left Philadelphia, therefore conclude I am entirely forgotten by Congress; but, however, I have not forgot the interest of my distressed country. If the honourable Continental Congress has any further service for me, I shall take it as a favour to be informed of it. This, sir, will be handed you by an express which have forwarded from Governour Trumbull to his Excellency General Washington, General Lee, &c., to acquaint them that on the 5th instant a fleet of about eighty transports and eight large ships-of-war, anchored off New-London, and were there on the 6th, being the last accounts from them. They passed this place on the 4th, in the evening. I learn by deserters from Long-Island, who left the fleet, that they have about eight thousand men on board—a bad situation for our eastern people, and not a General Officer in that part of the country; but I hope Providence will work deliverance for us. The express must go on; I can therefore only add, that I am, sir, with the greatest esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

His Excellency John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

PROVIDENCE (RHODE-ISLAND) TOWN MEETING.

At a town meeting of the town of Providence, especially called and convened by warrant on Sabbath day morning, December 8th, A. D. 1776, the Hon. Stephen Hopkins, Esq., Moderator.

Whereas a large body of the enemy have arrived in the Narraganset-Bay, and it is probable soon intend to attack this town; and in order that proper defence may be made: It is voted, That the Hon. Stephen Hopkins, Esq., Colonel Jonathan Arnold, Colonel John Mathewson, Mr. Joseph Browne, Colonel Barzillai Richmond, Colonel Joseph Nightingale, Colonel James Angell, and Mr. Sumner, be, and they hereby are, appointed a Committee to examine the most suitable places for erecting and making proper Batteries and Intrenchments for the defence of the publick against the enemy. And they, or the major part of them, agreeing to make report to his Honour the Governour, in order that if he sees fit he may direct the troops under his command immediately to go to erecting said Batteries, &c. That the same Committee, after having agreed upon proper places, proceed to mark out the ground, in order that said troops may as soon as possible proceed to work thereon.

Voted and Resolved, That William Wheaton, Esq., Mr. Paul Allen, Mr. Benjamin Cushing, Jun., Edward Thurber, Esq., be, and they hereby are, appointed a Committee immediately to collect all the Tools in town proper for making Intrenchments, taking down in proper lists the names of those who furnish the said Tools, with the particular articles supplied by each person.

Resolved, That all the male inhabitants of this town, of sixteen years of age and upwards, appear under the commanding officers of their respective companies, at the Court-House parade, at three o'clock this afternoon, all those who are equipped with arms, accoutrements, knapsacks, and blankets, and those who are not fully provided with those articles that they can furnish. And it is expected that no person whatever who is an inhabitant, and capable of bearing arms, will neglect to appear at time and place aforesaid. And that the Town Sergeant and the Town Crier immediately publish this vote through the town.

Resolved, That Mr. David Lawrence be empowered to procure a number of Bakers immediately, to bake a quantity of Bread sufficient for the men assembled on the present alarm.

THEODORE FOSTER, Town Clerk.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

On board the Warren, off Patuxet, December 8th, 1776, at 8 o'clock, a. m.

SIR: I received yours this morning, dated November 7th, and think we can secure what prisoners you may please to send, provided they are sailors, or to be treated as such. That or any other service which the State requires that is in my power, shall be done with pleasure. I have nothing new since my last. Have not heard any disturbance last night nor guns. You mention a handbill enclosed, but there was none in your letter. If there should be any sailors that are idle, think I could employ them to advantage. I have sent a boat to Newport for intelligence, but she is not yet returned.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

On board the Warren, off Patuxet, December 8th, 1776, at 5 o'clock, p. m.

SIR: About twelve o'clock this day the English fleet came in to the westward of James-Town, all but three, who stood to the eastward for Secunnet Point. There is in the whole upwards of one hundred sail. Some of them anchored at the north end of Connanicut, and the rest were under sail at four o'clock.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

On board the Warren, Patuxet, December 8th, 6 o'clock, p. m.

SIR: Captain Hacker, in the sloop Providence, went down this afternoon below Providence, and a ship gave him chase, but she run ashore. He saw one ship down by Dutch Island and one off Hog Island. And Mr. Barron has returned from Rhode-Island, and says the enemy landed at eight o'clock this morning eight thousand men, and took possession of the whole island, without opposition, and he thinks have got most of the stock. How many of our men have got off he can't tell.

I think if the galleys are manned they would be of service down here. Captain Chase is up Taunton river. If the men could be prevailed upon to come here, they would be of service, as it is not likely they will go far out of protection of the ships.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Providence, December 8th, 1776, ten o'clock, p. m.

SIR: It is with great concern I inform you that the great force of the enemy obliged the small body of troops we had upon Rhode-Island, to quit it with precipitation. They have left about fifteen or twenty cannon, having taken off a great part of the stock, and all the ammunition and stores. The enemy are now in full possession of that island. A detachment marched to the north end of the island, and fired upon our last boats, but without killing any body. By a letter from General West, who was upon the island, and by information from Lieutenant Baron, they have landed about eight thousand men, a force too formidable to have no other object in view than Rhode-Island. I must entreat the General Court to exert the force of the State with all possible expedition, as the fate of America may depend on the present moment. And I can't help acquainting you, that no troops from the Massachusetts had arrived at or near Rhode-Island when it was yesterday evacuated. We have also intelligence of sixty sail more of transports coming down the Sound. Without any view of giving a lead, I would beg leave to mention to you that General Lincoln possesses the confidence of the people of this State, and would be a most acceptable officer.

I am, with great esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

NICH'S COOKE.

To the Hon. James Bowdoin.

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Providence, December 8th, 1776. Past ten o'clock, p. m.

SIR: It is with great concern that I give you the disagreeable intelligence that the enemy, with a fleet consisting of seventy-eight ships-of-war and transports, entered the harbour of Newport yesterday. We had about six hundred men upon Rhode-Island, who were obliged to evacuate it with the loss of about fifteen or twenty heavy cannon, having taken off the ammunition and stores and the greatest part of the stock. The enemy having full possession of the island, I am informed by General West and Lieutenant Baron, of the Providence, that they landed this morning, about eight o'clock, with eight thousand men, who marched in three divisions, one towards Newport, the second towards Howland's Ferry, and the third to Bristol Ferry, where they arrived time enough to fire upon the boats that brought over our last men, but without doing any damage. I have sent repeated expresses to the Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut. The forces of the former are upon their march, as I believe the latter one also.

In great haste, I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

NICH'S COOKE.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. We have also intelligence of sixty sail more of transports coming down the Sound.

JAMES WARREN TO THE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Plymouth, December 8, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to represent to you that there have been seventy or more Irishmen prisoners in this town for several weeks, and that I think it high time the Council or the Court should take some order about them. If they are not permitted to go home, they must be removed from here without delay. They grow very troublesome. The inhabitants are much alarmed, and I fear some disagreeable consequences will soon ensue, either from their insolence and numbers, united with the many Tories here, or from the necessity the people may think there is for attending to their own security. This must surely be the most improper place in the world for such a number of prisoners. I beg your attention to this matter; and am, with great respect, your most humble servant,

J. WARREN.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq.

I dare not leave home unless they are removed or secured.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Council Chamber, Boston, December 8th, 1776.

SIR: Immediately on receiving your Excellency's intimation that it was necessary your Army should be reinforced with four thousand Militia from this State, orders were issued to raise them. And since that, as our affairs grew more serious and alarming, the Court have given orders to augment the number to about six thousand. Every measure hath been adopted to forward the troops to you with despatch. We can't but indulge the pleasing hope that the intended reinforcement will arrive in season, and that they will afford every assistance and support that may justly be expected from them. They are ordered to rendezvous at Danbury, in Connecticut, where General Lincoln, who is appointed to take the command of them, will wait your Excellency's orders. The General Court of this State are determined vigorously to exert themselves in raising a new army, and render to your Excellency every support in their power, notwithstanding the alarm the enemy are spreading by hovering round these coasts with a large number of ships-of-war and transports, perhaps with a view to divert us from their designs.

We are, with great regard and esteem, your Excellency's most humble servants. In the name and by order of Council,

JAMES BOWDOIN, Pres't.

---

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY TO GENERAL LEE.

Boston, December 8, 1776.

SIR: The General Court have received your favours of 21st, 22d, 27th, and 30th November last, and gratefully acknowledge your care in favouring us with all necessary intelligence. With pain we read the disasters that have befallen us, but yet are not dispirited. Immediately on receipt of your first letter, we forwarded to the camp supplies, in addition to what we had sent before, of shoes, stockings, and blankets. Are now exerting, and shall continue to exert, ourselves for affording to the Army every species of clothing in our power. We had issued orders for raising a part of all our able-bodied effective men at home when your first letter was received, and we have pursued every means we could devise for expediting their march, and hope they will all seasonably arrive in camp, to support our common cause, and that their number will not fall short of six thousand men. We are now contemplating the most effectual measures for raising with vigour our quota of the Continental Army, and are determined to call into action every power and strain every nerve in support of our liberties. We earnestly request your frequent correspondence, which will give us great pleasure. The alarming accounts we have for four or five days successively received, of a large naval force near New-Port, though it may embarrass our proceedings, yet will not divert us from our purposes. Our ardent wish is, that you may be succeeded in your exertions in the common cause, in which we shall not fail to coöperate with you.

To General Lee.

P. S. The General Court have just laid a general embargo on all shipping.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

December 8, 1776.

SIR: Immediately upon the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, communicating the important intelligence of the enemy's movements towards New-London or New-Port, and your apprehension of their designs against one or both those places, requesting the assistance of this State, the General Court took the necessary measures for succouring their sister States, by a reinforcement from our Militia, which was ordered to march for the State of Rhode-Island, &c., or Connecticut, or both, as the exigency of affairs should require. But being since informed by Governour Cooke that the enemy had cannonaded New-London, made a feint of landing there, quitted it, and were actually entering the harbour of New-Port, and proceeding with their whole force up the river, we have issued new orders, and directed our Militia to proceed to Bristol and Providence, agreeable to the most earnest request of Governour Cooke, thinking the movements of the enemy since your favour have rendered it unnecessary to throw any part of our Militia into your State. You may rely upon it the General Assembly of this State have a grateful remembrance of the virtuous and patriotick exertions of Connecticut in favour of Massachusetts in the days of our more immediate tribulation, and will in their turn vigorously exert themselves for the relief and assistance of any of the neighbouring States, more especially for yours. We thank you for your intelligence, and beg the favour of being informed of any future essential motions of the enemy.

In the name of the Council, I have the honour to be, with great respect, &c.,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

To Governour Trumbull.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, December 8, one o'clock, p. m., 1776.

SIR: This just serves as a cover to letters from Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, and General Lee, and a resolution of this State laying an embargo on all outward-bound vessels, and to request your State to pass a similar resolution.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

December 8, 1776.

SIR: Since our last of this day, sent by your express who arrived here yesterday, the General Court have further ordered the Honourable Joseph Cushing, Esq., of Hanover, Brigadier of the County of Plymouth, and George Godfrey, Esq., of Taunton, Brigadier of the County of Bristol, immediately to march the whole Militia of their respective Counties to Bristol or Providence; and have also ordered Colonel Wood's and Colonel Holman's regiments from Worcester County, and Colonel Wheelock's regiment from this County, and also a company of train, consisting of fifty men, officers included, to march forthwith to Providence. The whole are to take orders from you or the commanding officer from this State, and directed to march, equipped with arms, necessary accoutrements, and ammunition. The train take only three days' provision, and are to apply to you for further necessaries.

We thank you for the intelligence you have communicated, and beg the favour of being informed of all the important movements of the enemy.

In the name of the Council, I have the honour to be, with much esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

To Governour Cooke.

COLONEL MITCHELL TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

[December 8th, 1776.]

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: In obedience to the establishment I have ordered a Sergeant's guard, consisting of a Sergeant and nine men, to Saco river; a Sergeant and ten men to Kennebeck river; and the like number to Harpswell; who proceeded for their several stations eight days since. I should have sent out guards before, but apprehended the necessity of the works carrying on here, which are now considerably forward, demanded the presence of all the troops stationed at this place. Larger numbers, I thought, could not be spared consistent with the publick service; but if I have erred herein, your Honours' orders will determine my future conduct.

I take the liberty to represent to your Honours, that cannon are much wanting, without which our fortifications must be rendered useless, except to the enemy. I need urge no further to your Honours the necessity of having a supply of cannon, and you are not unacquainted with the importance of this post, not only to the Province of Maine, but to the preservation of all the United Colonies.

I am, with profound respect, your Honours' very humble servant,

JONATHAN MITCHELL.

To the honourable the Council and House of Representatives of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay.

CAPTAIN AYRES TO MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR.

Lynch, Cape-Ann, December 8, 1776.

SIRS: As I found it impossible to get a pilot for the shoals in Boston, and having your orders to look into Cape-Cod harbour, concluded I should be furnished there, and yesterday at forty minutes after twelve, discovered a ship and schooner at anchor there, stood in to be fully satisfied till past one o'clock, then I saw the ship loose her topsails and sheet them home; I hove about and stood to the northward, and anchored here about nine o'clock last night. Shall get a pilot and pursue my voyage instantly. I believe it's the Milford or Liverpool, with Burk's schooner.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

JOHN AYRES.

To the Honourable Board of War.

Spithead, England, December 9, 1776.

Arrived this day from Quebeck his Majesty's ship the Isis, Commodore Douglas, with General Burgoyne, his Aids-de-Camp, Sir Francis Clerke, and Captain Gardner, as also Mr. Alexander Davison, and Mr. Thomas Ainslie, and bring accounts of our Army having returned from Crown-Point, to go into winter quarters at St. John's, Montreal, Chamblé, and Quebeck. They also bring accounts of the Rebels at Ticonderoga having put a twenty-gun ship on the stocks, and are making great preparations for another engagement on Lake Champlain next spring. The Isis left Quebeck the 8th of November, when General Carleton was expected there hourly. Sailed from Quebeck at the same time the Blonde frigate, Captain Pownall, who is ordered on a cruise on the banks of Newfoundland for a few weeks. Left at Quebeck the Triton frigate, the Garland, and the Viper sloop-of-war, which are to winter there, as are also about twenty transports. On the 7th instant, spoke with the Thames ship-of-war, with fourteen sail of transports under convoy for New-York, off the Land's End, all well.

ARCHIBALD BUCHANAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore-Town, December 9th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I desired Mr. Stephen Steward, who I saw some time ago in Baltimore, to acquaint you that it was time to send up masters for the gondolas. Anchors and cables we ought to have immediately; we cannot launch them without. One of them is in my way, where I want to raise a ship. It is best to have masters before they are launched, as they sometimes want some alterations.

Captain Matthews, of Harford, mentioned to me he had some reason to expect one of them. I imagine he will be ready as soon as you please.

Your answer will oblige, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

ARCH. BUCHANAN.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

STEPHEN STEWARD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

December the 9th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I understand you have some ship-bread in town. The yard is now without. I shall be much obliged to you to order five or six barrels down by Captain Hamond, and the tallow I mentioned to you some time ago.

I am your most obedient servant,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

For the honourable Council of Safety.

N. B. When am I to get guns for the galley?

JOHN CAREY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Schooner Resolution, December 9th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honour to inform you that I am arrived safe at the Capes, and with a promising fair wind; also the pleasure to inform you that the vessel goes exceedingly better than was imagined; as coming down the bay I have had an opportunity of trying her on a wind and before it, and in all manners, but going with the wind quartering, have run the Ninety-Two hull down in less than five hours, and have several times shortened sail for the pilot boat, and of which the pilot can assure your Honours of the truth of the above.

Your Honours may depend on my doing my utmost endeavours in making the best of my way to Martinique, and in every respect fully fulfilling the orders that you have been pleased to honour me with.

I am, and shall ever remain, your Honours' most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN CAREY.

The honourable Council of Safety for the Province of Maryland.

P. S. The pilot is an able, serviceable man, and has conducted the vessel in every respect to my entire satisfaction.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

"In Congress, December 9, 1776.

"Whereas General Washington hath repeatedly applied, and yesterday has renewed his application, for an immediate reinforcement for the defence of this city and State:

"Resolved, That the Council of Safety be requested this day to send expresses, that may be relied on, to the several Counties in Pennsylvania, earnestly requesting that they march what troops they can collect, armed and provided in the best manner possible, to the Army under command of General Washington.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 9, 1776.

FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN: By all that is dear and valuable, we entreat you to march, without delay, to join General Washington's Army, now in Bucks County, agreeable to the above resolve of Congress. Every thing that is interesting to human nature depends upon it. Do not hesitate, or repentance may succeed to inactivity. Our citizens have exerted themselves like men. Let their examples prevail upon you to act vigorously, and we may yet be free, and be happy. Do not wait to collect large bodies, but send off such as are ready by detachments.

By order of Council:

THOMAS WHARTON, Jun., President.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 9th, 1776—half-past 8 o'clock, p. m.

SIR: We have undoubted intelligence that a body of the enemy's Light-Horse was at a place called the Cross-Roads, about nine mile above Burlington, and a report prevails that an advance party are at Burlington. From circumstances it may be too true; we therefore wish to call your Excellency's attention to a ferry about four miles below Burlington, called Dunk's Ferry, where the river is narrow, and may afford the enemy a better chance to pass and cut off the communication between this city and your Army than any other on the river. We intend to order one (and the only one that is now here) of the galleys up to that place to intercept their passage if they should attempt it. We submit to your Excellency the propriety of ordering the galleys down towards that pass. If you should approve it you will please to give orders accordingly.

By order of Council:

THOS. WHARTON, Jun., President.

---

JAMES MEASE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

December 9th, 1776.

SIR: The demands on me for money for pay of the Maryland troops and your Militia, are so considerable, that I want a further supply to answer them, as well as to discharge some debts incurred for the purchase of necessaries. I beg, therefore, you will be pleased to apply for a draft for fifty thousand dollars, that I may have some money in the chest in case a removal of the Treasury should be thought necessary shortly.

I am, with infinite respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES MEASE.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

---

THE MEMORIAL OF ELISHA PAINTER.

[Read 10 January, 1777: Referred to the Board of War.]

To the honourable the Delegates of the Thirteen UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress assembled:

The Memorial of the subscriber humbly showeth:

That your Honours' memorialist being honoured with a commission from your Honours on the fifth day of July last, to serve as a Major in a regiment ordered by your Honours to be raised for the Continental service, whereof Seth Warner, Esq., was appointed Colonel; and your Honours' memorialist being endowed with grateful sentiments, hath ever been disposed to pay that grateful acknowledgment which is due for the notice your Honours have taken of the faithful and arduous services of your Honours' memorialist in the defence of the rights and liberties of America, the promotion of which darling cause hath been the study and pursuit of your Honours' memorialist from the beginning of the unnatural war between Britain and the American States unto this time, and still continues disposed to the same; yet your Honours' memorialist feels himself much mortified to find (after all his unceasing endeavours to serve the publick cause, and the fatigues and hardships he hath endured therein) that two of the Captains appointed to serve in the aforesaid regiment hath manifested much uneasiness and dissatisfaction by reason your Honours' memorialist hath a commission, which they think should have been given to one of them in preference to your Honours' memorialist, which groundless uneasiness and dissatisfaction has occasioned the representation which was made to your Honours by Colonel Warner on the 10th day of September last, whereupon your Honours, on a report from the Board of War on the 12th day of the same month, resolved that your Honours' memorialist be directed to repair to the city of Philadelphia, that the matter might be inquired into. In obedience to which direction, your Honours' memorialist is now come to the aforesaid city, waiting your Honours' orders to be inquired of concerning the matter aforesaid, which matter of uneasiness and dissatisfaction represented by Colonel Warner is not through any fault or blame of your Honours' memorialist; neither is any crime or fault charged on him in said representation; and as your Honours' memorialist hath done nothing to occasion any uneasiness with the dissatisfied Captains above-mentioned, or any other person concerned in the matter, and as he is not accused of doing any thing to occasion the said dissatisfaction, he rests on your Honours' impartial inquiry into the matter; and the just settlement of the same is not doubted by your Honours' most obedient and devoted humble servant,

ELISHA PAINTER.

December 9th, 1776.

---

I, Giles Gaylord, who served in the Continental Army in Canada last fall, through the winter, and last spring, do certify, that I was a Lieutenant of Captain Elisha Painter's company, in General Wooster's regiment, from December last to the expiration of the time said regiment engaged for. I was at the siege of St. John's last fall, when the said Captain Painter belonged to Colonel James Easton's regiment, who was in the said siege also; but Captain Painter being sent on command to Sorell, with his Colonel, we did not meet again until the beginning of December, at Montreal, at which place I engaged to serve with him as Lieutenant, in General Wooster's regiment. We soon filled our company, and served out the time of our engagement, but no commissions was sent to us, nor to the other officers in the regiment; and I understood that to be the case with the officers of Colonel Easton's regiment, to which Captain Painter belonged previous to his engagement for the winter campaign. Indeed, I understood the officers in general who served in Canada received no commissions there; and about the time Captain Painter received orders to raise his company, many men in that Army, who thought themselves not well used by their officers, determined to go home when their times were out; on which the General, knowing our conquest in Canada could not be secure without men, gave orders that those men who would engage for the winter campaign might inlist into what corps, regiment, or company they should choose; on which, many of the men who would not reëngage with their old officers, being acquainted with Captain Painter's character as an officer, repaired to him to inlist, to that degree that his company soon filled up, by which means Captain Painter suffered the reproach, resentments, and ill-will of a number of those officers whose men left them and inlisted with him, some of which officers have not been wanting to try to hurt and injure Captain Painter in his character, while other men acquainted with the matter, thought their resentment ill-grounded. However, to do justice to Captain Painter, and to whom it may concern, I will describe something of a character which I think him entitled to. He is an officer who sets good examples to his men, and discountenances and reproves their bad conduct. He never uses bad language himself, or approves of it in those under his command. Hard drinking, gaming, and night routs I never knew or heard of his being guilty of; but applied himself with attention to his duty in the service of his country. He is a friend to good order, regulation, and discipline; at the same time treats his men with that tenderness and care that becomes an officer to do. He appears to be on prinipcle an established friend to the cause of liberty, and to act from a principle of honour. I found him, during my whole acquaintance with him, to be just and honest. He never detained his men's wages in his own hands, but frequently paid them faster than he received money for them. He is of a steady, regular behaviour, governed rather by judgment and reason than by passion and humour. He is an officer of true and steady courage. I never heard cowardice imputed to him, even by those who have tried to injure him. He served faithfully in Canada during the time of his service there, which was till about the last of May, at which time he came away with credit, and in as good standing as the other officers of the said Army, and about the beginning of last June I left him at Albany, on his way down, and have not since seen him till lately.

Attest: GILES GAYLORD.

October the 5th, 1776.

---

Camp on Harlem Heights, October 6th, 1776.

To whom it may concern:

We, the subscribers hereto, being acquainted with the above subscriber to the foregoing certificate, do esteem him to be a person of truth and veracity, and believe he is esteemed to be so in general, whose testimony may be depended upon.

Attest: SIMON ADAMS, Lieutenant.
STEPHEN DEWEY, Captain.
STEPHEN GOODWIN, Captain.

---

Camp on Harlem Heights, October 8th, 1776.

The above-named Giles Gaylord, doth now before me, on honour, solemnly affirm, declare, and testify, that the above and within certificate by him subscribed (to the best of his knowledge) is the truth, and nothing else.

Attest: JOHN FELLOWS, Brigadier-General.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read the 10th.]

Head-Quarters, Trenton Falls, 9th December, 1776.

SIR: I did myself the honour of writing to you yesterday, and informing you that I had removed the troops to this side of the Delaware soon after the enemy made their appearance, and their van entered just as our rear-guard quitted. We had removed all our stores, except a few boards. From the best information, they are in two bodies, one at and near Trenton, the other some miles higher up, and inclining towards Delaware; but whether with intent to cross there, or throw themselves between General Lee and me, is yet uncertain.

I have this morning detached Lord Stirling, with his brigade, to take post at the different landing-places, and prevent them from stealing a march upon us from above; for I am informed if they cross at Coriel's Ferry, or thereabout, they are as near to Philadelphia as we are here.

From several accounts I am led to think that the enemy are bringing boats with them. If so, it will be impossible for our small force to give them any considerable opposition in the passage of the river; indeed, they make a feint at one place, and by a sudden removal carry their boats higher or lower, before we can bring our cannon to play upon them.

Under these circumstances, the security of Philadelphia should be our next object. From my own remembrance, but more from information, (for I never viewed the ground,) I should think that a communication of lines and redoubts might soon be formed from the Delaware to the Schuylkill, on the north entrance of the city; the lines to begin on the Schuylkill side, about the heights of Springatsbury, and run eastward to Delaware, upon the most advantageous and commanding grounds. If something of this kind is not done, the enemy might, in case any misfortune should befall us, march directly in and take possession. We have ever found that lines, however slight, are very formidable to them. They would at least give a check till people could recover of the fright and consternation that naturally attends the first appearance of an enemy. In the mean time, every step should be taken to collect force, not only from Pennsylvania, but from the most neighbourly States. If we keep the enemy from entering Philadelphia, and keep the communication by water open for supplies, we may yet make a stand, if the country will come to our assistance till our new levies can be collected.

If the measure of fortifying the city should be adopted, some skillful person should immediately view the grounds, and begin to trace out the lines and works. I am informed there is a French Engineer of eminence in Philadelphia at this time. If so, he will be the most proper.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. I have just received the enclosed from General Heath. General Mifflin is this moment come up, and tells me that all the military stores yet remain in Philadelphia. This makes the immediate fortifying of the city so necessary, that I have desired General Mifflin to return to take charge of the stores, and have ordered Major-General Putnam immediately down to superintend the works, and give the necessary directions. G. W.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Chatham, December ye 9th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I am very much obliged to you for your welcome tidings, and have only to beg that you will direct the regiments you speak of to march without loss of time to Morris-Town. I sent an express to you last night from the General, ordering your division over the river, which, I confess for my own part, I am heartily sorry for, as I think we shall be strong enough without you, and New-England, with your district, will be too bare of troops. I am in hopes here to reconquer (if I may so express myself) the Jerseys. It was really in the hands of the enemy before my arrival.

Adieu, dear sir, CHARLES LEE.

To Major-General Heath, Peekskill.

---

TIMOTHY PARKER AND OTHERS (PRISONERS) TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Whitby Prison-Ship, New York, 9th December, 1776.

SIR: I make no doubt but your Honour long before this hath been apprised of our being prisoners in New-York. That our present situation is most wretched, your Honour need not doubt, which I likewise hope you will soon be assured of from men of undoubted veracity. There are more than two hundred and fifty prisoners of us on board this ship, (some of which are sick, and without the least assistance from physician, drug, or medicine,) all fed on two-thirds allowance of salt provisions, and all crowded promiscuously together, without distinction or respect to person, office, or colour, in the small room of a ship's between-decks; allowed only to walk the main deck from about sunrising till sunset, at which time we are ordered below deck, and suffered only two at once to come on deck to do what nature requires, and sometimes we have been even denied that, and been obliged to make use of tubs and buckets below deck, to the great offence of every delicate, cleanly person, as well as to great prejudice of all our healths.

These, sir, with many other miserable circumstances too lengthy and tedious to enumerate, are the just portrait of our present situation. In short, sir, we have no prospect before our eyes but a kind of lingering inevitable death, unless we obtain a timely and seasonable release.

From your Honour's well-known character of humanity and justice, we humbly hope that your authority will be exercised in procuring us an exchange. As Lord Howe hath set at liberty all his prisoners taken in the merchant service, but refuseth (as we hear) to exchange those taken under arms but by a like number taken in arms also; therefore, from your Honour's clemency, candour, and benevolence, we cannot but hope and expect (as we were in the service of our country, and cannot be deemed as from a common privateer) that such an exchange will be put forward, and in due time accomplished, if possible. In the mean time we rest in confidence that your authority and influence will be exerted in our behalf; and beg leave, with the utmost respect, to subscribe ourselves your Honour's most obedient, humble servants,

| | |
|---|---|
| Tim'y Parker, | William Swan, |
| William Davall, Jun., | Thomas Coffin, |
| John Tucker, | Joseph Holly. |

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

These belong to the schooner Spy, and were taken in the ship Hope. They are now prisoners with me; the others I suppose to be on board some of the men-of-war, but what ships or where I cannot tell.

---

COLONEL MALCOM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Niack, December 9th, 1776.

Sir: I had the honour to write you a few lines on Saturday. A few hours thereafter, I was alarmed by repeated expresses, with accounts that a large body of the enemy were advancing within about three miles to cut off my detachment. I formed, and took post in the gorge of the mountains, the field-pieces in the road, and the wings of my little party extended to the heights on each side. Under this disposition, I ventured out three small scouts to give me timely notice of their approach; however, they returned, after the notable exploit of cutting down a liberty pole at Toppan, making prisoner the father of one of my Lieutenants, and stealing a horse and two oxen. Yesterday I marched a party within three miles of the new bridge, at Hackensack, raised a terrible uproar among the Tories as well as in the enemy's little camp. They abandoned their houses and guard-houses as the party advanced; however, one was not so light-footed as his companions, and got taken. His name is Pierson, an arch Tory, and was with the party who came up on Saturday. I have sent him and the negro to Colonel Hay's, to wait your orders. My men seem to expect something to fall to them out of the value of the Ethiopian. If they should be destined for Fishkill, Colonel Hay can send them over very speedily.

The fleet is gone down last night, so that I shall be of little use here. I have some thoughts of moving up to Clerktown to-day. If your Honour should think fit to reinforce me, I would move downward; but dare not, (to make a road,) with my present force. I have harassed them so much that I have some doubts whether they will not endeavour to rout me, which they have threatened several days past. The country in general appears to be against us, either through fear or inclination, and I can get no intelligence upon which I can depend. I shall follow your Honour's orders; and am, with due respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

W. Malcom.

---

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Haverstraw, 9th December, 1776.

Dear General: The rheumatism has detained me here, but I am now in a fair way to get rid of it. I have taken the liberty to direct a letter to your care, for my son-in-law, Jno. Lawrence, which I beg you to take care of till he calls for it. Small parties of the enemy, with some Tories, have lately made incursions into Orange-Town, and plundered the friends of the country, and disarmed them. This practice will in all probability continue, to the great distress of the County, if some means of relief is not afforded to them. But the mischief will not end here; for the inhabitants, finding themselves stripped of their property, without any prospect of protection, will become discouraged, and yield themselves up to our common enemy for that protection which we don't afford them; and its to be feared the southernmost part of this County will be reduced to take the same disagreeable relief. It is therefore of the utmost importance that a Field-Officer's command should take post down there, to cover the country until the Congress of this State can devise some means to relieve them; and there is none what can give the necessary succour now but you.

I have taken the liberty to mention the state of this part of the County to you, from a regard to the service; and doubt not you will do every thing in your power for it. I hope you will excuse this liberty; and believe me to be, with great respect, dear General, your very humble servant,

Alex. McDougall.

To Major-General Heath, at Peekskill.

P. S. For particulars I refer you to the bearer.

---

ORDERS TO GENERAL PARSONS.

Peekskill, December 9th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I have this moment received orders from General Washington to move over the North River with the Continental troops under my command, to wit: your brigade. You will therefore immediately give orders to Prescott's, Ward's, and Wylly's regiments, to be ready to march to-morrow, at ten o'clock; tents, kettles, and light baggage only to be carried. The heavy baggage to be left with the men who are unfit for duty. Four days' provisions to be taken. Hard biscuit may be drawn.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

W. Heath, Major-General.

---

CHAIN ACROSS THE NORTH RIVER.

Fort Montgomery, December 9th, 1776.

These are to certify, that the chain that has been stretched across the North River, at this fort, has been broken twice; the first a swivel broke, which came from Ticonderoga, which was not welded sound. The second time a clevin broke, which was made at Poughkeepsie, in a solid part of the clevin, and no flaw to be seen in any part of said chain; which we do certify at the request of Messrs. Odle and Vanduzer.

James Clinton, Brigadier-General,
Abram Swartwout, Captain,
Ja. Rosekrans, Captain,
Dan'l Lawrence, Lieutenant.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO EZEKIEL HAWLEY.

Fishkills, 9 December, 1776.

Sir: Your favour of the 6th instant has this day been laid before the Committee of Safety. I am directed to acquaint you that they highly approve of the conduct of the Committee of Salem, and of the prudent measures they have taken to ascertain and secure from waste and embezzlement the property of the disaffected, who have joined the enemy. They request that you will continue your care of those effects, allowing a provision for the families who are left behind. The Convention have under consideration a report for the security and disposal of all effects under the like circumstances. It will not be long before you shall be furnished with these regulations.

I am, &c.,

Pierre Van Cortlandt, Vice President.

Mr. Ezekiel Hawley, Chairman of the Committee of Salem.

---

JOHN HULBERT TO THE COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Fishkill, December 9th, 1776.

Gentlemen: I have not the opportunity of returning you my thanks for the honour done me in my appointment by waiting upon your Committee, but take this method to acknowledge the favour; at the same time am under the necessity of informing you that it is not in my power to serve, consistent with other affairs that interfere, not from any dislike to the service. Gentlemen, I would presume to recommend Benj'n Marvin as an officer of merit, if any vacancy for an officer of his rank should offer. He has served as a First Lieutenant in Captain Griffin's company the last two campaigns, one of which I was with him, and well acquainted with his conduct.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOHN HULBERT.

To the Committee of Arrangement.

---

NATHANIEL HAZARD TO THE COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Fishkill, 9th December, 1776.

Mr. Hobart desired me at Fairfield to inform Mr. Duane or Mr. Duer that he had taken the liberty to open a letter from the Committee of Arrangement appointing John Grenell a Captain, who, he said, was at Providence; and he was so confident Mr. Grenell would decline, (as he resigned a company of Artillery,) that he begged the commission might not be kept vacant, and begged to recommend Captain Nathaniel Platt, who served in Colonel Smith's regiment, as an excellent officer.

NATH'L HAZARD.

---

MATTHEW ADGATE TO THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LEAD MINE.

Fishkill, 9th December, 1776.

SIR: John McDonald has reported the state he finds the lead mine in the Great Nine Partners, in his further exploring said mine, on which the Committee appointed to superintend that business have resolved not to prosecute the exploring of said mine any farther at present, and accordingly have settled with Mr. McDonald. We must desire you to take charge of the leaden ore dug from said mine until it shall be determined what to do with it. Mr. McDonald handed to the Committee your account for superintending at said mine; and as the account is without your signature, thereby prevents our being able to pass it. We trust you will not impute this to any want in us of serving you, as all our accounts must be so vouched as to stand fair with the publick. On receiving it properly vouched with your signature, we will endeavour to get it allowed, and pay it to you or your order.

We are, with respect, sir, your very humble servant,

MAT. ADGATE, Chairman.

---

TEMPERANCE COOK TO CAPTAIN PLATT.

December 9th, 1776.

SIR: I received a letter from the Doctor, requesting the favour of Captain Platt to use his influence towards procuring him an appointment in one of the four regiments in our Province to be raised during the war. He was not informed who are our present members of Congress, or he would have wrote on that head to you. The Doctor gives his best regards to Captain Platt.

From your friend, TEMPERANCE COOK.

To Captain Platt, Fishkills.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, December 9th, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jr., Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

On receiving intelligence that a large Fleet of British men-of-war and transports are pushing up Narragansett Bay, and towards Newport and Providence, orders were given to the Eastern Regiments to make ready, and march into the State of Rhode-Island, to the defence of the country against any depredations from said Fleet.

Colonel Henry Champion was sent for, and directed to make provision for the support of the Troops now to march into the State of Rhode-Island.

Colonel Elderkin and Lieutenant-Colonel Storrs, not being in suitable circumstances to march with the Fifth Regiment in the present emergency, the command of said Regiment was, by his Honour and this Council, given to Major Brown for the present emergency.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Lebanon, 9th December.

SIR: This morning received your favour of the 6th. The fleet you mention appeared off the harbour of New-London the 5th instant. The 7th instant Governour Cooke informs that upwards of one hundred sail of men-of-war and transports have entered Narraganset Bay, and were steering directly for Providence. When they were seen they were between Canonicot and the main. Besides these, thirty sail were seen coming into Newport harbour.

Our eastward Militia are ordered to their aid. I could wish you had given me intelligence concerning our Army in New-Jersey.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JON'TH TRUMBULL.

Major-General Heath.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Lebanon, December 9, 1776.

SIR: Is America to be lost? Is she to fall a victim to the rage of a lawless tyrant? Is New-England, that once happy land of civil and religious liberty, dearly purchased by the blood of our worthy ancestors, and for a long time continued under the smiles of Divine Providence, by their prudence, valour, and virtue, to be subjected to the worst of slavery? God Almighty forbid. What means that languor, inertion, and dispiritedness, that seems to overwhelm the New-England States? Our Army to the westward naked and barefoot, fleeing before the enemy, the last we hear as far as Trenton; a fleet of the enemy, of upwards of one hundred sail, pushing up Narraganset Bay, and no doubt a large land force on board, to get footing in that quarter. We have the strongest intimations, from General Lee and others, besides the same demonstrations in our own breasts, that unless the New-England Colonies renew their exertions by redoubled vigour, all is lost. A most melancholy prospect indeed! We may reflect on our past errours to no other valuable purpose but to steer our course with greater propriety for the future. We now see our errours in inlisting our forces or detaching them for so short a time, to have so many thousands drawing off from our Army in the very crisis of the season, since which, the enemy have continually drove and dispersed our thus mutilated Army. We were unhappy in your not consulting us, nor so much as directing your Committee, sent with your proposals for raising a new Army, to call upon us, though our Assembly was then sitting at New-Haven, whereby our counsels are divided, our modes and encouragement for raising a new army not only diverse from the General Congress, but from one another, whereby the whole plan of raising our army, if not confounded, yet we fear almost fatally delayed.

We have accounts in the publick papers that large quantities of clothing and shoes have been taken from the enemy and brought into your State and Rhode-Island. Have, or must not, our destitute Army be immediately supplied with them?

It is now but a very few days before the time of the inlistment of our present Army is expired. We are in this State raising four battalions, with all speed, to supply the deficiencies in the inlistments in the new Army, until the 15th of March next. For the encouragement for the new, it readily occurred to us that difficulties would arise in putting the same army on different pay; we have therefore, besides the Continental encouragements, undertaken to supply those who shall be raised from this State with all necessaries, besides their rations, at the first cost here, free from the charge of transportation; and that the price may not be extravagant, we have stated the price of the most necessary articles, viz: wheat not to exceed six shillings per bushel; rye three shillings six pence; Indian corn not to exceed three shillings; West-India rum of merchantable proof not to exceed six shillings per gallon per hogshead; New-England rum three shillings six pence; molasses three shillings; Muscovado sugar of the best quality not to exceed three pounds per hundred per hogshead; pork from three pence one farthing to three pence three farthings; best grass-fed beef not to exceed twenty-four shillings per hundred; butter ten pence; cheese six pence; other articles in proportion. This is done not only to convince the soldiers that while they are fighting for the country, they and their families may not at the same time be ruined by the extravagant demands of the people, and further, to check that fatal excess that seemed to prevail among almost all ranks in this time of general calamity and distress, and that overbearing oppression, so hateful to God Almighty, as well as ruinous and destructive to all civil communities. How far your leading State will see the prudence of those measures and coöperate with us therein, we must leave to your wisdom and good discretion. This we are convinced, that it is high time for us to awake out of our sleep and security, and for publick bodies to endeavour, by precept and every exertion, to bring about a general reformation in the people, to suppress every licentious oppressive spirit, and while God's judgments are abroad in the land, threatening indeed, the inhabitants thereof may learn righteousness.

*

When we had an intimation from you a few weeks past for Commissioners from the New-England States to meet at Providence, to confer on the affair of our currency, it was then thought, for prudential reasons given you in answer then, to decline; but I beg leave to suggest whether, in the present aspect of affairs, our main army drove to the southward, the communication being greatly interrupted and in danger of being totally obstructed between the Southern and New-England Colonies, whether it will not be best, as soon as the enemy are retired into winter quarters, for the New-England States to meet by their Commissioners to consult on the great affairs of our safety, and of counteracting the enemy in their future operations. We have a hint of this in a late letter from General Lee. We hope we shall soon hear from you on this subject. May God Almighty give us a spirit of wisdom, fortitude, and resolution, in this evil day; and as the day is so may our strength be; but every means and exertion must be used. Will it not be well to call for town meetings in every town, endeavour to inspirit the people, know their sentiments in the present days, whether they will yield up their lives and properties and sacred liberties to the imperious demands of Britons, and submit to that base, ignominious yoke of slavery, from which, perhaps, it will never be in their power to emerge; or will they, looking to the God of armies for help, and his blessing on their utmost exertions, stand forth in the cause of their country, and engage in the glorious struggle? If the latter should happily be their choice, it would give an encouraging presage that God Almighty will yet save his people from utter ruin and destruction, and not suffer our merciless enemy any longer to triumph over us.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant.

JON'TH TRUMBULL.

Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq., President of the Council in Massachusetts State.

---

PAROLE OF DANIEL KISSAM AND FOURTEEN OTHERS.

We, the subscribers, do hereby severally and respectively promise and engage to the Governour of the State of Connecticut, on the faith and honour of gentlemen, that we will neither of us give notice or intelligence to the enemy of the United States of America, nor hold any inimical correspondence with them; that we will not take up or bear arms against the United States of America, nor act an offensive part against them, or either of them, but to conduct peaceably and quietly with respect to the present contest and troubles, and return back to this State when required by the Governour.

As witness our hands, this ninth day of December, A. D. 1776.

DAN'L KISSAM, Jun.,
A. SEABURY,
DAVID BROOKS,
CHARLES HICKS,
WHITEHEAD CRONWELL,
CHAS. NICOLL,
JOHN CHAVE,
THOMAS JONES,
JOHN WILLETT,
AUG. N. HORNE,
JOSEPH GRESWOLD,
BENJ'N HOWLOTT,
DAVID BATTY,
WILLIAM THORNE,
ISAAC SMITH.

COLONEL LIVINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-Haven, 9th December, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: The Convention of the State of New-York having required the arms taken on Long-Island to be sent immediately to them at Fishkill, part of those arms, if your Honour remembers, were, on your order, delivered out to Colonel Coit's regiment, with this proviso, that the arms should be returned on demand, as the want of them in the State of New-York was great, and they could in no way be supplied for the value affixed to them, owing to great want of judgment in the appraisers. The arms, when lent, were quite complete, cartouch-boxes, and bayonets, belts, &c.

As those arms were only a loan, I would be extremely obliged to your Honour if you would order those arms to be collected and delivered to the bearer, Captain Plat, who will take care to forward them to our State.

A list of the above arms are deposited in his hands, of which a duplicate was delivered your Honour.

I am, sir, your Honour's obedient humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON,
Colonel Fourth Regiment.

---

An Account of the Arms and Ammunition brought off from the east end of LONG-ISLAND by Colonel HENRY B. LIVINGSTON, and delivered by his order to Captain NATH'L PLATT, the 9th December, 1776, agreeable to the directions of a Committee of the Convention of the State of NEW-YORK, numbered and valued by us.

THOMAS TREDWELL,
DANIEL ROE.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| No. 1, valued at $8 | No. 28, valued at $4 | No. 55, valued at $3 |
| No. 2....do.... 5 | No. 29....do.... 5 | No. 56....do.... 3 |
| No. 3....do.... 4 | No. 30....do.... 4 | No. 57....do.... 2 |
| No. 4....do.... 5 | No. 31....do.... 4 | No. 58....do.... 3 |
| No. 5....do.... 4 | No. 32....do.... 4 | No. 59....do.... 4 |
| No. 6....do.... 4 | No. 33....do.... 3 | No. 60....do.... 3 |
| No. 7....do.... 4 | No. 34....do.... 4 | No. 61....do.... 3 |
| No. 8....do.... 4 | No. 35....do.... 2 | No. 62....do.... 2 |
| No. 9....do.... 3 | No. 36....do.... 4 | No. 63....do.... 4 |
| No. 10....do.... 4 | No. 37....do.... 3 | No. 64....do.... 3 |
| No. 11....do.... 3 | No. 38....do.... 5 | No. 65....do.... 3 |
| No. 12....do.... 3 | No. 39....do.... 4 | No. 66....do.... 3 |
| No. 13....do.... 2 | No. 40....do.... 4 | No. 67....do.... 2 |
| No. 14....do.... 4 | No. 41....do.... 2 | No. 68....do.... 3 |
| No. 15....do.... 3 | No. 42....do.... 3 | No. 69....do.... 3 |
| No. 16....do.... 2 | No. 43....do.... 3 | No. 70....do.... 3 |
| No. 17....do.... 3 | No. 44....do.... 3 | No. 71....do.... 3 |
| No. 18....do.... 3 | No. 45....do.... 4 | No. 72....do.... 3 |
| No. 19....do.... 2 | No. 46....do.... 2 | No. 73....do.... 3 |
| No. 20....do.... 3 | No. 47....do.... 3 | 33 bayonets at 8s. |
| No. 21....do.... 4 | No. 48....do.... 3 | each.....$33 |
| No. 22....do.... 2 | No. 49....do.... 3 | 9 swords at 8s... 9 |
| No. 23....do.... 3 | No. 50....do.... 3 | 6 cartouch boxes |
| No. 24....do.... 4 | No. 51....do.... 4 | at 8s..... 6 |
| No. 25....do.... 3 | No. 52....do.... 4 | 3 quarter casks of |
| No. 26....do.... 3 | No. 53....do.... 2 | powder. |
| No. 27....do.... 1 | No. 54....do.... 3 | 2½ boxes of ball. |

New-Haven, December 10th, 1776.—Received the above articles of Colonel Henry B. Livingston, by the hand of Captain John Davis.

Pr. NATH'L PLATT.

---

Received, New-Haven, December 10th, 1776, of Captain Henry B. Livingston, by the hands of Captain John Davis, 28 guns, 33 bayonets, 33 cartridge-boxes, 8 cutlasses, one large box of bullets, 4 or 500 wt., part of another box which were taken from the Tories on Long-Island.

Per me: NATHANIEL PLATT.

---

A Return of Arms, Ammunition, &c., taken on board of the sloop.

| Guns. | Bayonets. | Cartouch boxes. | Swords. | Boxes of bullets. | Packs of oz. ball. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 84 | 46 | 22 | 12 | 1111 No. 211 No. 231 No. 26 | 756572497857 | 1 cask of loose cartridges, quantity unknown.3 small casks powder.3 boxes and 1 small bag of ball. |
| 84 | 46 | 22 | 12 | 6 | 396 | Total. |

New-Haven, November 9th, 1776.

In Congress, December 21st, 1776.

Resolved, That Officers of Troops raised for three years or during the war, receive pay on the new establishment from the time of their being appointed by their respective States, in consequence of the Resolution of Congress passed the 16th of September last.

---

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO CAPTAIN TRACY.

Norwich, December 9th, 1776.

Sir: Whereas Governour Trumbull has received application from Governour Cooke, of Providence, to afford what aid he can from this State to repel the enemy now pushing their fleet up Providence bay, and thereupon has ordered some of the eastern regiments of this State to march immediately to Providence, for their assistance, and directed me to send forward some ammunition, &c., and to appoint some proper person to proceed forward to issue the same to our Militia that shall march on this occasion: I have accordingly sent forward to Captain Eaton's, in Plainfield, one load of powder, ball, and flints, as per invoice delivered you; have ordered two loads of salt pork to be carried and delivered you at said Eaton's. There is thirty barrels of flour at , in Voluntown, which would have you take and improve for said Militia. Further provision will be ordered per Governour Trumbull, as shall be necessary. As soon as you arrive at Plainfield, leave word at Eaton's that these articles are coming on from Norwich, then proceed to Voluntown, and find the state of that flour, and if by any means not to be found, send a post immediately to Andrew Huntington, of Norwich, to send on flour from here. When at Voluntown, send on a post to Providence, to Governour Cooke, to let him know you are attending this business at Plainfield, and know of him the state of the enemy, where our Militia are to rendezvous, what provision of barracks or tents and cooking utensils are provided for them, and acquaint Governour Trumbull accordingly. Deliver out the above stores to the Militia in a prudent manner, taking into your assistance what help you have occasion for to execute the same, and keep proper accounts of your proceedings, and advise Governour Trumbull how you succeed, and observe such further directions as shall be given.

Given under my hand, in Norwich, this 9th day of December, 1776.

Jz. Huntington.

To Captain Jared Tracy, of Norwich.

---

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL CLINTON TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Newport, Rhode-Island, December 9, 1776.

My Lord: Having received General Howe's order to embark with two brigades of British and two brigades of Hessian troops, and, in conjunction with Commodore Sir Peter Parker's fleet, to make a descent upon this island, in the most effectual manner for the full possession of it, and for the security of the town and harbour, we sailed from New-York on the first of December, and arrived at Weever's Bay, on the west side of this island, on the evening of the 7th following. On the 8th, at daybreak, the Commodore having made such a disposition of the fleet as he thought proper to cover the landing of the troops, they disembarked at the above-mentioned bay without the least opposition; when, being informed that the Rebels had quitted the works in and about the town of Newport, and were retiring towards Bristol Ferry, I detached Major-General Prescott with the Grenadiers and Light-Infantry, to intercept them, sustaining him with a body of troops under the command of Lieutenant-General Earl Percy. Major-General Prescott took two pieces of cannon, a few prisoners, and obliged them to quit their fort on this side the ferry, and retire to the continent; I likewise sent a battalion to take possession of Newport, the capital of the island, in which were found some cannon and stores, which the Rebels in their sudden retreat had left behind them.

I shall, as soon as possible, send troops to the island of Conanicut and Prudence, and occupy such other posts as may be necessary for the security of the harbour.

Having had it in command from General Howe to give your Lordship the earliest intelligence of the success of his Majesty's troops, I have the honour to transmit this to your Lordship by Captain Drummond, one of my Aids-de-camp, to whom I beg leave to refer your Lordship for any particulars which you may wish to be informed of.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

H. Clinton.

---

JOHN AVERY TO COMMITTEE OF DARTMOUTH.

In Council, December 9th, 1776.

Gentlemen: The honourable Board being apprehensive that the military stores in your town, the property of the Continental Congress, which were brought into your port by a vessel from France, are in danger, have directed me to acquaint you that if John Bradford, Esq., Continental agent, should direct the removal of them into some interior part of the country, that you would give him every needed assistance. The enemy being in your neighbourhood, makes it expedient that you should assist said John Bradford, Esq., without delay, or immediately to follow the directions he shall give you relative to their removal.

John Avery, Deputy Secretary.

To the Committee of Safety in Dartmouth.

---

MAJOR LITHGOW TO JOHN AVERY.

Boston, 9th December, 1776.

Sir: Being informed that you wrote me some time since on the subject of my appointment to a Majority in one of the new regiments now raising in this State, on the Continental establishment, under the command of Colonel Ebenezer Francis, which I had not the honour to receive, and as it is my opinion that no private or interested views are a sufficient apology, at this critical and important day, to decline the service of our oppressed, insulted country, I take this method to express my gratitude for the honour done me, and also to signify to the honourable Board, though not without the most humiliating sense of my own inexperience and want of military knowledge, my cheerful acceptance of the appointment, however repugnant it may be to my private advantage or emolument.

I have the honour to be, with the most profound respect, your Honour's very humble servant,

William Lithgow, Jun.

To the Secretary of the honourable Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

---

MAJOR BULLARD TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

To the honourable Council of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay:

The following humbly sheweth: That the subscriber having received a handbill from the Governour of Rhode-Island yesterday morning, representing that the town of Providence was in the utmost danger of being attacked by the enemy, I immediately alarmed the town of Walpole, and ordered every able-bodied man, except the quarter part that was drafted to reinforce the army near New-York, to be ready to march, equipped with arms, &c., and four days' provisions, by one o'clock in the afternoon; but before that time I received verbal orders from Major Metcalf, to meet him with the men from Walpole, at Cumberland, in order to join the regiment, as he had sent the like orders to the rest of the towns in the regiment. After finding that Major Metcalf was able to take the command of the regiment, I thought it was not so proper for me to go with the regiment to Providence, as I was appointed to go with the detachment that was drafted for New-York, but be preparing for that march; I accordingly ordered the men to march yesterday about two o'clock for Cumberland, in order to join the regiment. About ten o'clock last evening I received an express from the honourable Board with orders to march the Fourth Regiment to Providence, except the quarter part as before mentioned; but as Major Metcalf had already marched with the regiment, I thought it was not prudent for me to follow after, for the reasons already mentioned; however, lest Major Metcalf had taken some of the drafted men with him, I immediately forwarded the express to him, that he might govern himself accordingly. I have also sent to the Selectmen of the several towns in the regiment, to follow their men with the necessary supplies, according to law. If I should be so happy as to meet with the approbation of the honourable Board, it will afford much satisfaction.

I am, with all proper regards, your Honours' and the State's humble servant,

SETH BULLARD,
Second Major of Fourth Regiment.

Walpole, December 9th, 1776.

---

C. BEATTY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Frederick Town, December 10th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer hereof, Mr. Boon, the overseer of the gunlock factory, waits on you in order to get some money to enable him to carry on the factory, for it cannot be supported any longer without.

Mr. Hanson, who keeps the books, is not at home, so that I cannot get to see them, in order to draw for the money the factory is entitled to; but I am clearly satisfied that it must be about four hundred dollars, by the accounts rendered, and the locks now in the factory; which sum please to forward by Mr. Boon. We have now in the factory one hundred and fifty-six locks, completely finished, as will appear by the enclosed certificate. For nearly two months past I was compelled to take money on interest to support the factory, or let the hands go idle. It is not in my power to borrow any more for that purpose here. Pray don't fail sending the money, or I shall be compelled to sell locks to pay the money that I have taken up, and let the servants shift for themselves, which will be a great loss to the publick.

I am, gentlemen, your ready friend and well-wisher,

C. BEATTY.

The Honourable Council of Safety, Maryland.

---

ROBERT CHRISTIE, JUN., TO DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

December 10, 1776.

SIR: On Wednesday night I was served by a Mr. Hopkins with a written paper, of which the following is a copy:

"Your conduct has been such in this State during our struggle for liberty, that we are at this present moment determined that unless you leave the town instantly, and the State within six days, your life shall be sacrificed by an injured people. LEGION."

Directed to Robert Christie.

Soon after the receipt of this paper, Hugh Scott and myself went into a room at Grant's, and told the people we should leave town in the morning; but this was refused, and we obliged to take our horses and leave town at eleven o'clock at night. We inquired what we had done to merit such treatment, but no reasons were given. The only thing which can be laid to my charge is the not having taken up arms; and I defy any man to say (at least to prove) that I have, directly or indirectly, done any thing in opposition to, or to the prejudice of, the present measures. Besides, if I had been ever so criminal, I surely was entitled to a hearing before condemnation.

It may be necessary to inform your Board of some of the persons who were present at this extraordinary transaction: Commodore Nicholson, Lieutenant Aquila Johns, Captain John Martin, of the armed brig, (a very busy man,) David Stewart, Daniel Bowly, Charles Ridgely, (son of John,) William Hammond, John McLure, Barnet Eichelberger, Doctor Baird, Doctor Swoope, Nicholas Norwood, Thomas Elliot, tavern-keeper, Fell's Point, (who I thought seemed to assume some command,) James Cox, and John McLellan, members of the Committee, and one Poe, a wheelwright, (who seemed at the head of the lower class,) composed this body, or at least such part of it as I can at present remember. In justice to Commodore Nicholson, I must observe that he declared in my presence his sole reason for coming there was to prevent injury to our persons, and he actually forbid the people from insulting us when we went out to mount our horses.

My chief reason for troubling you is, that Baltimore County is deprived of a Sheriff by my expulsion, and there is a considerable number of prisoners confined in jail, who must be supplied with provisions; therefore you will take such steps as you may judge proper on this occasion. After such unmerited treatment as I have experienced, I cannot again trust myself in Baltimore, nor will I come there till times alter. Since I left town it has been reported that I went off in debt to the County, which is a scandalous falsehood. On the contrary, I am considerably in advance for the year 1775; and although I cannot exactly say how the account stands for 1776, yet I am perfectly certain, after deducting my own claim against the County, which was allowed last Levy Court, I have paid away more than I have received. I shall appoint a person of character and property to transact the collection business during my absence, with directions to pay off the publick creditors as fast as he receives the money.

I sincerely wish peace and prosperity to the Province of Maryland; and am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT CHRISTIE, Jun.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer.

I am told Captain Nathaniel Smith, Robert Buchanan, and John McHenry, were all of the party.

---

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES.

In Marine Committee, Philadelphia, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: We expect this will find the ship under your command in readiness for service, and therefore you are hereby directed to proceed to sea with all possible despatch, and in a cruise of six weeks or two months to intercept as many of the store-ships and supply vessels going to the enemy at New-York as you may fall in with. You will in this cruise do as much injury to the enemy and service to the United States as it may be in your power to accomplish. When this cruise is finished, you will return to the most convenient port in the United States; and if no further orders are there lodged for you from this Board, you will proceed on a new cruise for the purpose above mentioned.

We are persuaded it is not necessary to recommend to you the practice of humanity to those whom the fortune of war may make your prisoners. We expect to hear from you by every opportunity; and wishing you success, we are, sir, your humble servants,

ROB'T MORRIS, RICHARD HENRY LEE,
FRANCIS LEWIS, WILLIAM ELLERY.
WILLIAM WHIPPLE,

To Captain John Paul Jones.

---

GEORGIA DELEGATES TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

10th December, 1776.

SIR: We have received accounts of our reappointment to represent the State of Georgia in Congress, and will be ready to take our seats in a day or two. In the mean time we request an order on the Treasury for two thousand dollars, on account of the State we are appointed to represent.

We are, sir, your most obedient servants,

LYMAN HALL,
GEORGE WALTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

---

WILLIAM ELLERY TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Philadelphia, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: Since the enemy took possession of Fort Lee, General Washington, with the division under his immediate command, hath been constantly retreating, until they have at length passed the Delaware, and I suppose mean to make a stand on the banks of the river, opposite to Trenton. To prevent their being hemmed in at Hackinsack, they passed the river of that name, and the river Pasaick, and retired to Newark. The enemy advanced, and upon their approach our Army, being insufficient to withstand them, retreated to Woodbridge; the enemy followed. From thence our Army marched to Brunswick; the British Army soon appeared on the side of the Rariton, opposite to that town. A cannonade ensued, but without any hurt on either side, saving the killing of an Hessian officer by one of our cannon shot. As the river is fordable, it would not do to continue there. Our troops decamped, and marched to Prince-Town, where General Washington left a body of twelve hundred men, under Lord Stirling, and with the rest moved to Trenton, and sent over the Delaware his principal stores, to secure them from the enemy. After this was effected, he sent a reinforcement to Lord Stirling; and hoping that he should be joined by the Militia of the Jersey and this State, and by General Lee, who, it was said, with his division, had passed the North River, and was advancing to join him, intending to make a stand at Prince-Town; but by a strange dilatoriness, and the confusion which took place in the Jersey on the enemy's penetrating their State, and the lukewarmness (not to give it a worse name) of this, the enemy had approached Prince-Town before a sufficient number of Militia from these States had joined General Washington to enable him to make an effectual stand there; he therefore retreated to Trenton, and crossed the river with his Army last Saturday night. On Sunday the enemy appeared at Trenton, and a cannonade ensued as at Brunswick. Yesterday, Generals Putnam and Mifflin came to town, and inform that the enemy had disappeared from Trenton, but they could not tell whither they were gone. I imagine we shall soon see them in that part of the Jersey opposite the city, and perhaps hear the thunder of their cannon and mortars, and feel the effects of shot and bombs. We don't hear of a fleet yet in the Delaware, which I have for some time expected. I imagine the enemy durst not venture it, for fear they shall have ice as well as chevaux-de-frise to encounter.

I hope we shall be able to keep them out of this State; and we should be able to do it, if the country would exert themselves with a tenth part of the spirit which the city hath manifested on this occasion, or if General Lee should join General Washington with five or six thousand men, which I most devoutly wish for and expect. Where he is, or what delays his coming, is unknown. I find, by a private letter from Newport, (for I have had intelligence of a higher nature for a long time,) that General Lee had wrote to our State that he thought that the embarkation at New-York was intended for Rhode-Island, and that this intelligence had thrown the town of Newport into great confusion, and that the inhabitants were all upon the wing. We have heard of transports being prepared to receive troops various ways, and for six weeks past, and that sometimes troops were really embarked, and sometimes that they have sailed for South-Carolina or Rhode-Island; but I can't find that they have ever embarked any troops, nor do I think they will, for either of these places, while they pursue such high game, and mean to secure the posts and places they have and may possess. They have not men enough to spare at present, nor do I think they will have them this winter, for any distant expedition. However, as I have often said, it is wise and prudent to be on our guard.

Captain Garzia, who will hand you this letter, cannot wait a moment longer, which obliges me to close abruptly.

I am, with great respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

WM. ELLERY.

Nicholas Cooke, Esq.

---

DONALD CAMPBELL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, 10th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The critical situation of this town makes it necessary for me to receive your directions for the preservation of the publick accounts of the campaign 1775 in Canada, being ordered by General Schuyler at Crown-Point to repair with them to this place. The cruel situation which I am in with respect to the court-martial obliges me to request your order and direction where to proceed with my charge till a full settlement is made.

The early and conspicuous part I have taken in the American cause, (well known to the enemies of my country,) and at this time deprived of the power of acting with them in the open field, urge this double prudence. I wait your resolve; and am, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant,

DONALD CAMPBELL.

To the honourable the Continental Congress.

---

ADDRESS OF CONGRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

The Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA in Congress assembled, to the People in general, and particularly to the Inhabitants of PENNSYLVANIA and the adjacent States.

FRIENDS AND BRETHREN: We think it our duty to address a few words of exhortation to you in this important crisis. You are not unacquainted with the history of the rise and progress of this war. A plan was carried on by the British Ministry for several years in a systematick manner to enslave you to that kingdom. After various attempts in an artful and insidious manner to bring into practice the laying you under tribute, they at last openly and decisively asserted their rights of making laws to bind you in all cases whatsoever.

Opposition was made to these encroachments by earnest and humble petitions from every Legislature on the Continent, and more than once by the Congress representing the whole. These were treated with the utmost contempt. Acts of the most unjust and oppressive nature were passed and carried into execution, such as exempting the soldiers charged with murder in America from a legal trial, and ordering them to be carried to Britain for certain absolution, as also directing prisoners taken at sea to be entered on board their ships, and obliged either to kill their own friends or fall themselves by their hands. We only mention these from among the many oppressive acts of Parliament, as proofs to what horrid injustice the love of dominion will sometimes carry societies as well as men. At the same time to show how insensible they will be to the sufferings of others, you may see by the preambles to the acts and addresses to the King, that they constantly extol their own lenity in those very proceedings which filled this whole Continent with resentment and horrour.

To crown the whole, they have waged war with us in the most cruel and unrelenting manner, employing not only the force of the British nation, but hiring foreign mercenaries, who, without feeling, indulge themselves in rapine and bloodshed. The spirit indeed of the Army in general is but too well determined, by their inhuman treatment of those who have unhappily fallen into their hands.

It is well known to you, that at the universal desire of the people, and with the hearty approbation of every Province, the Congress declared the United States free and independent, a measure not only just, but which had become absolutely necessary. It would have been impossible to have resisted the formidable force destined against us last spring, while we confessed ourselves the subjects of that State against which we had taken arms. Besides, after repeated trials, no terms could be obtained, but pardon upon absolute submission, which every publick body in America had rejected with disdain.

Resistance has now been made with a spirit and resolution becoming a free people, and with a degree of success hitherto which could scarce have been expected. The enemy have been expelled from the Northern Provinces where they at first had possession, and have been repulsed in their attempt upon the Southern by the undaunted valour of the inhabitants. Our success at sea, in the capture of the enemy's ships, has been astonishing. They have been compelled to retreat before the Northern Army. Notwithstanding the difficulty and uncertainty at first of our being supplied with ammunition and military stores, those we have now in abundance, and by some late arrivals and captures there is an immediate prospect of sufficient clothing for the Army.

What we have particularly in view in this address is not only to promote unanimity and vigour through the whole States, but to excite the inhabitants of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, and the adjacent States, to an immediate and spirited exertion in opposition to the Army that now threatens to take possession of this city. You know that during the whole campaign they have been checked in their progress, and have not till within these two weeks ventured above ten miles from their shipping. Their present advances are owing not to any capital defeat, or a want of valour in the Army that opposed them, but to a sudden diminution of its numbers from the expiration of those short inlistments which, to ease the people, were at first adopted. Many have already joined the Army to supply the deficiency, and we call, in the most earnest manner, on all the friends of liberty to exert themselves without delay in this pressing emergency. In every other part your arms have been successful, and in other respects our sacred cause is in the most promising situation. We think it proper to inform and assure you that essential services have been already rendered us by foreign States, and we have received the most positive assurances of further aid. Let us not, then, be wanting to ourselves. Even a short resistance will probably be effectual, as General Lee is advancing with a strong reinforcement, and his troops in high spirits. What a pity is it, then, that the rich and populous city of Philadelphia should fall into the enemy's hands, or that we should not lay hold of the opportunity of destroying their principal Army, now removed from the ships of war, in which their greatest strength lies.

It is certainly needless to multiply arguments in such a situation. All that is valuable to us as men and freemen is at stake. It does not admit of a question what would be the effect of our finally failing. Even the boasted Commissioners for giving peace to America have not offered, and do not now offer, any terms but pardon on absolute submission. And though (blessed be God) even the loss of Philadelphia would not be the loss of the cause, yet while it can be saved, let us not, in the close of the campaign, afford them such ground of triumph; but give a check to their progress, and convince our friends in the distant parts that one spirit animates the whole.

Confiding in your fidelity and zeal in a contest the most illustrious and important, and firmly trusting in the good providence of God, we wish you happiness and success.

Given at Philadelphia, December 10, 1776.

By order of the Congress:

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

---

GENERAL ARMSTRONG TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Head-Quarters, 10 December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since my coming up to the Army, I have wrote two short letters to town; the first rather gloomy, arising from a view of our Army and the credit paid to the magnitude of that on the other side. The second, of this morning, somewhat more sanguine, was built on the flattering opinion that the numbers of the enemy had been exaggerated, and the expectations of being joined by General Lee and a respectable body of Militia. These reinforcements we still hope for, and wish it may be soon; but with respect to the enemy's numbers, there is reason to apprehend they are rather above than below the first estimation, as I have lately seen an Ensign of ours, who, by the violation of his parole, has made his escape from York, where he saw General Howe's horses put into the boat for Elizabeth-Town, to which place the General came on Wednesday last, and that he is undoubtedly at the head of his Army, consisting, according to this officer's information, as he had heard, of fifteen thousand men. But although they should not be so many, we cannot suppose on an errand of so much consequence, that Howe will throw himself at the head of diminutive numbers. There are eight battalions, consisting chiefly of English and Hessian Grenadiers and Light-Infantry, with a few pieces of artillery, at Penny-Town; whether with a design to pass above General Washington, or whether with a design to intercept the junction of General Lee, is yet uncertain. On the other hand, we have heard this afternoon that they have repaired a bridge the General had torn down betwixt Trenton and Bordentown, on the Jersey side, and that a body of Infantry have already passed over it; in short they are spread for many miles along the Delaware, perhaps to distract General Washington, that he may not know what point to attend to. Your worthy General, however, maintains the full possession of himself; is indefatigable by day and night, taking every precaution, I think, as well to prevent surprise as to discover the place they intend to cross, that he may derive every advantage from the river, which if once crossed, could not, with his comparatively small army, be expected at any other place. He has sent a party to reconnoitre the creeks on the Jersey side, lest the friends of tyranny should have boats concealed in them to aid the common enemy; but thinks the Council of Safety would do well to send also some fit persons, lest such secreted boats might escape the party he has sent; and who knows but Howe's design may be to march on the Jersey side as far as Billingsport, and there meet some of his own shipping and small craft for purposes too obvious to mention; or by taking the Bordentown route, he may design to pass over below the mouth of Shamaney. A passage in the night is to us the most dangerous, and what he probably will attempt. I had, without consulting the General, wrote for Colonels Kosciusko and Romond; but as General Putnam is sent down for purposes on their way near town, I suppose they can't be sent here.

After your reading, please to send this to the Council of Safety, and believe me to be, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

To the Board of War and Ordnance.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 11th.]

Head-Quarters, Falls of Delaware, December 10, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour of addressing you yesterday, nothing of importance has occurred. In respect to the enemy's movements, I have obtained no other information than that they have a number of parties patrolling up and down the river, particularly above. As yet they have not attempted to pass; nor do any of their patroles, though some are exceedingly small, meet with the least interruption from the inhabitants of Jersey.

By a letter received last night from General Lee, of the 8th instant, he was then at Morristown, where he entertained thoughts of establishing a post; but on receiving my despatches by Major Hoops, I should suppose he would be convinced of the necessity of his proceeding this way with all the force he can bring.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. Nine o'clock, a. m.—I this minute received information that the enemy were repairing the bridges three or four miles below Trenton, which seems to indicate an intention of their passing lower down, and suggests to me the necessity that some attention should be had to the fort at Billingsport, lest they should possess themselves of it, the consideration of which I beg leave to submit to Congress. I have wrote to the Council of Safety on the subject.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, Trenton Falls, 10th December, 1776.

SIR: Yours of last evening reached me at four o'clock this morning. I immediately sent orders to Commodore Seymour to despatch one of his galleys down to Dunk's Ferry, and I shall dispose of the remainder in such manner and at such places as will be most likely not only to annoy the enemy in their passage, but to give the earliest information of any attempt of that kind. Parties of the enemy have been reconnoitring both up and down the river, and I imagine it has been one of those parties that have appeared near Burlington: for as they have not found the least opposition from the people of Jersey, they venture very far from their main body, which, from the best information, still lays about Trenton and above it.

I have desired Colonel Humpton, who is the bearer of this, to apply for a party of men to go up Cooper's and Ancocus creeks, and bring down all the craft he may find there; for it is in vain to cut down bridges if the boats are left. They cannot be trusted to the owners; for if an enemy was to appear, such is their fear that they would deliver them up upon the first demand.

I think that the fort began at Billingsport should be attended to. If there is not a party already there, one should be sent under a good officer, who would not too readily take the alarm, and come off; for you may depend that only small bodies will be sent to that distance. But I have always found that the intelligence brought by people not used to see men in arms has always magnified numbers exceedingly, and on this head the officer should be guarded not to trust to report, but be well satisfied himself before he gives up his post.

Having sent down Major-General Putnam to throw up necessary works for the defence of your city, I hope you will coöperate with him, and give him every assistance in your power to expedite so necessary an operation.

I have the honour to be, sir, yours, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

The Honourable Thomas Wharton, Jun., Esq., President of the Council.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Trenton Falls, December 10th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I last night received your favour by Colonel Humpton; and were it not for the weak and feeble state of the force I have, I should highly approve of your hanging on the rear of the enemy and establishing the post you mention. But when my situation is directly opposite to what you suppose it to be, and when General Howe is pressing forward with the whole of his Army except the troops that were lately embarked, and a few besides left at New-York, to possess himself of Philadelphia, I cannot but request and entreat you, and this too by the advice of all the General Officers with me, to march and join me with all your whole force, with all possible expedition. The utmost exertions that can be made will not be more than sufficient to save Philadelphia. Without the aid of your force, I think there is but little, if any, prospect of doing it. I refer you to the route Major Hoops would inform you of. The enemy are now extended along the Delaware at several places. By a prisoner who was taken last night, I am told that at Pennytown there are two battalions of Infantry, three of Grenadiers, the Hessian Grenadiers, Forty-Second of Highlanders, and two others. Their object, doubtless, is to pass the river above us, or to prevent your joining me. I mention this that you may avail yourself of the information. Do come on. Your arrival may be happy; and if it can be effected without delay, may be the means of preserving a city whose loss must prove of the most fatal consequences to the cause of America.

I am, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

P. S. Pray exert your influence and bring with you all the Jersey Militia you possibly can. Let them not suppose their State is lost, or in any danger, because the enemy are pushing through it. If you think General St. Clair or General Maxwell would be of service to command 'em, I would send either.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Peekskill, December 10, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The last evening, about eight o'clock, I received the honour of yours of the 7th instant, and immediately gave orders for the regiments of General Parsons's brigade which are on this side Hudson's River, to pass over, which they will do this day. I shall also order Huntington's and Tyler's to join them, and pursue the effecting the purposes which your Excellency has been pleased to point out. This post will now be left in a very defenceless condition as to men: not a single Continental regiment on this side of the river, and nearly all the field artillery gone over the river.

The enemy's fleet, which sailed eastward a few days since, by the last accounts lying off New-London, ninety-one in number. The account in Gaine's New-York paper of December 2d, is as follows:

"Thursday last several transports, full of troops and military stores, passed up the East River into Connecticut Sound; at the same time Sir Peter Parker and Mr. Hotham, with the Asia, Renown, and other men-of-war, fell down to the Narrows, in order to join the above transports, as 'tis supposed, about the east end of Long-Island. Various conjectures are raised about their destination."

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Peekskill, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: The day before yesterday a schooner came up the river with a flag, having on board the Rev. Charles Inglis and one Mr. Moor, who have come up to solicit their families. I have given orders for the vessel to stop at Verplanck's Point, the flag to be treated with the utmost politeness and respect, and at the same time with as great precaution. I informed the gentlemen that they were not to proceed either by land or water to Fishkill, but that if they had letters to send they should be carefully conveyed to the honourable Convention. I have accordingly sent forward a number.

For my own part I think the present to be a time so critical, that should I permit any persons to advance further than to such place as may be convenient to treat with them, or to consent to any going in to the enemy, would be acting entirely beside my duty. The arts and stratagems of our enemies are many; it behooves us ever to be on our guard. The French maxim, La mefiance est la mère de la sureté, which your Honour knows in English is, "Distrust is the mother of security," is worthy of our attention.

The last evening I received orders from his Excellency General Washington to cross the North River, with the Continental troops under my command, to wit: Parsons's brigade; they will pass the river this day. My orders are to "move on so as to give all possible protection to the country and vigour to the cause."

In consequence of my moving from this place and taking so many troops with me, the passes both on this and the other side of the river will be but weakly manned. However, I hope my stay on the other side of the river will be but short. Should I go any distance beyond the river, General James Clinton will command here, unless General Spencer should move up.

I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your most obedient and very humble servant,

W. HEATH.

Honourable Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq.

---

REV. CHARLES INGLIS TO JAMES DUANE.

North River, December 8th, 1776.

SIR: The calamities which threatened the city of New-York induced me to send my family to New-Windsor last October was a twelvemonth, and when two men-of-war went up the North River last summer, I judged it prudent to remove them back to Goshen, where they have remained ever since. It were needless to tell you that so long a separation and absence from their home must be exceedingly painful, and attended with much anxiety and distress, as well as numberless inconveniences to them and me.

Having obtained a flag of truce from the Right Honourable Lord Howe, I have come up as high as Peekskill in a hired schooner, in order to apply to the honourable Convention sitting at Fishkill, for their leave that my family may return. My request of you, sir, is, that you would lay my case before the Convention, and obtain their permission and consent that my family may come from Goshen to New-Windsor, and from hence by water in some sloop, or other fit vessel, to this place, where I shall receive them.

I flatter myself that this indulgence will appear reasonable in itself to the Convention; especially as a similar indulgence has been granted at New-York to women whose husbands are absent. Two recent instances I beg leave to mention: Mrs. Lewis, wife of the Honourable Francis Lewis, has got leave from General Howe to go to her husband, and carry with her such furniture and other articles as she chooses; she is also to be escorted by a military gentleman as far as the advance guards of the King's troops in New-Jersey. I mention these particulars the rather, as I myself was not only privy but aiding to Mrs. Lewis and her daughter, Mrs. Robertson, in the several steps that were taken for the above purpose. Mr. John Smith's wife, of Throg's Point, who lately came to town with her family, upon being sent for by her husband by a flag of truce, has obtained General Howe's permission also to remove with her children, furniture, and whatever else she pleases to take with her, as she herself assured me. So far as I can learn, women with their children and effects may, if they choose it, go from hence whenever they please.

With my family, I sent to New-Windsor a part of my furniture, beds, linen, books, and papers. If the Convention would be pleased to permit the return of these along with my family, it would greatly enhance the favour and increase my obligation.

It may be proper to inform you that my family at Goshen, besides Mrs. Inglis, consists of Mrs. Crooke, my mother-in-law, three children, the eldest not quite three years, the youngest about three months old, two white servant women, a nurse, and a white servant boy. Should the Convention grant them leave to come down, I would beg that they would also please to give such directions and orders as they think necessary to prevent any difficulty or obstruction in their way down.

I shall wait here to receive your answer. Your laying these particulars before the Convention, and their compliance, will greatly oblige, sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES INGLIS.

To the Honourable James Duane, Esq., or in his absence to the Honourable Robert R. Livingston, Charles De Witt, William Duer, or Anthony Hoffman, Esquires, or either of them, at Fishkill.

P. S. Enclosed is a letter from Colonel Magaw, a gentleman with whom I had the pleasure to be acquainted formerly, and whom I attended during a severe fit of sickness since the surrender of Fort Washington. He is now recovering, and I flatter myself past danger. He politely gave me this letter, which I thought proper to lay before you.

---

JOHN MOORE TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

On board the Hope, Flag of Truce, Verplank's Point, 9th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Having obtained leave from Lord Howe to come up with a flag, in order to ask leave for my family to accompany me to New-York, I was in great hopes I could have been allowed to wait on the honourable Convention on that errand, but General Heath thinking it improper I should go forward, must apologize for the trouble of this letter. Being so happy as to be intimately connected with you by marriage, I must beg the favour of you, my dear sir, to solicit the honourable Convention in behalf of myself and family, that they will be so indulgent as to grant my wife liberty to come down with her child, servants, and house furniture. Your humanity, my dear sir, will plead for me, and I cannot but indulge the hope that the Congress will be favourably pleased to grant me this request. I take the liberty of mentioning to you that Mrs. Lewis (lady of the honourable Delegate at Philadelphia) and Mrs. Smith (wife of Mr. Smith) were last week permitted to go with their family and effects, flags of truce having come to demand them. The State of New-Jersey have also permitted many ladies to come from thence.

I write this letter not certainly knowing you to be at the Convention, and therefore take the liberty of directing it in case of your absence, to some other gentlemen, with some of whom I have the honour of an intimate acquaintance, and of others I know so much as to depend upon their humanity.

The connection (though more distant) between Mr. Jay, Mr. Duane, and Mr. R. Livingston, and my wife's family, will, exclusive of my own character and the inoffensive line of my deportment, plead in her behalf, and obtain for me the only portion of happiness which these wretched times can in their nature afford me. Should the honourable Congress grant me this indulgence, I could wish for leave to go myself to bring my family down; indeed, at present I know not where they are, whether at my father's, at West-Point, in the Highlands, or at her father's, at Poughkeepsie. If I cannot go myself, I earnestly entreat the favour of you to send this letter by express to my father-in-law, Jas. Livingston, Esq., Poughkeepsie, enclosed in a line from yourself, desiring him, should my wife not be there, instantly to send this letter to her, desiring her to come down by land or water, with as much of her effects as she may be permitted to bring. I am obliged to repeat my earnest request to be allowed to wait upon you, on my way for my family. I am willing to go in any way the Congress or General may please, and am ready to pay the expense of one or more guards to accompany me.

Enclosed are two letters from Mr. Elliot to his friends Messrs. Duane and Jay; to Mr. Duer also he desires his compliments. I hope that gentleman also, and any others who may be at Congress, and who knows me, will solicit this favour for me. I need not say how highly I shall be obliged, and how much happiness it will afford a woman at present very unhappy.

Mr. Ph. I. Livingston is here on the same errand, as is Mr. Inglis; and we have sent to General Heath a letter in our favour, from the very worthy Colonel Magaw, who commanded at Fort Washington. We hope that letter also will be laid before you.

I have not time to add, but to beg pardon for this liberty, and to assure you that I am, very respectfully, your affectionate and obedient servant,

JOHN MOORE.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt; in his absence the Hon. James Duane, John Jay, Robt. R. Livingston, Mr. Duer, or Anthony Hoffman, Esqrs., or either of them, Fishkill.

---

PHILIP I. LIVINGSTON TO JAMES DUANE.

Verplank's Point, December 9th.

DEAR SIR: I am thus far in a vessel with a flag of truce, with an intention of proceeding by land from hence to the Congress, to ask their permission for the removal of my family to New-York, in any way that may be most agreeable to them. As General Heath is averse to my going to Congress without their express permission, allow me to ask the favour of your interposition and interest with the Congress for the removal of my family and their baggage to New-York. As the season is far advanced, I must entreat your immediate application on their behalf, and that they may be indulged with a sloop for their removal, as women and young children will be exposed to great inconveniences in travelling so considerable a distance by land.

As many difficulties will attend the removal of my family without my presence, even if permission is obtained from the Congress, allow me further to entreat the permission of Congress to pass to them. Any restrictions or limitations in my progress towards them, or during my stay with them, I shall willingly submit to; besides, I wish once more to see my old friends, as I propose embarking for the Island of Jamaica as soon as a convenient opportunity offers; and am therefore desirous (as far as may be) of adjusting my late official business. You will easily conceive of how much importance an allowance to pass to my family will be of to me. I must however submit to the decision of Congress. I should be glad Mr. Walter Livingston was acquainted with my intention of going to Jamaica, as I think he will wish to see me before my departure. In case I am not permitted to go from hence, be pleased to forward the enclosed letter to Mrs. Livingston. An answer by express, which I shall most willingly defray the expense of, as soon as conveniently may be, will exceedingly oblige, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP I. LIVINGSTON.

To the Honourable James Duane, John Jay, Robert R. Livingston, Mr. Duer, and Anthony Hoffman, Esqrs., or either of them, Fishkill.

If the desired permission is obtained, be pleased to furnish Mrs. Livingston with the necessary passports. As she is unacquainted with my design of going to Jamaica, I wish it may for some time be concealed from her.

---

GOVERNOUR TYRON TO REV. DR. INGLIS.

Governour Tryon presents his compliments to the Rev. Doct. Inglis, will be obliged to him if he will take charge of a packet for Mr. William Smith, and forward by the most publick opportunity that may offer while on his own business under the flag of truce, also the last newspaper, herewith enclosed.

New-York, 4th December, 1776.

---

MR. ELLIOT TO JAMES DUANE.

Mr. Elliot presents his compliments to Mr. Duane, and will be much obliged to him could he procure liberty for his son-in-law, Mr. James Jauncey, Jr., his wife and servant, to return to New-York. They are at present at Middletown, in Connecticut.

To James Duane, Esq., at Fishkill.

New-York, 6th December, 1776.

---

JACOB WATSON TO DANIEL BIRDSALL.

New-York, 12th mo. 4th, 1776.

RESPECTED FRIEND: When I last wrote thee, I requested thee not to sell my salt and molasses, which I sent to thy care; but now, as I expect these articles will be much wanted in your neighbourhood, please to dispose of them at the going price and lay the money out in flax-seed, pork, or good firkin butter. The first I should prefer. I hope thee'll get it at four shillings per bushel. There is no purchasers at any price.

If any is already sold, please to lay the money out in these articles.

A line from thee would much oblige thy respectful friend,

JACOB WATSON.

To Daniel Birdsall, Merchant at Peekskill.

---

LETTER FROM MURRAY, SIMPSON & CO.

Philadelphia, 4th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Lindsey informs me that he had left the goods in your care, with orders to dispose of some part of them; but as times now seem exceedingly precarious, we would not wish to have any Continental on hand, therefore desire that you will not dispose of any of the goods until you hear further from us. If you have sold any of them, please to lay out the money in wheat or flour or staves, but by no means keep any on our account.

In haste, your real friends,

MURRAY, SIMPSON & CO.

---

JACOB WATSON TO DANIEL TARBOSS.

New-York, 12th mo. 4th, 1776.

RESPECTED FRIEND: When I last wrote thee, I requested thee not to sell my salt in thy hands, as I intended to have purchased pork in your County to barrel; but as I expect it is an article which will be much wanted, I am willing thee should dispose of it for pork, flax-seed, or good firkins of butter. If it is already sold, please to lay the money out for flax-seed at the current price going.

If I could be favoured with a line without giving any umbrage, would much oblige thy respectful friend,

JACOB WATSON.

Daniel Tarboss, at Fishkill Landing.

---

LEVI DE WITT TO COLONEL CHARLES DE WITT.

Newborough, December 10, 1776.

SIR: Lieutenant Lounsberry, and (as he tells me) some more of the Captains of the Second Regiment, not serving, of consequence there will be some vacancies, and if it could be, would be glad that I might be appointed. Yet I leave it with you; and am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

LEVI DE WITT.

Colonel Charles De Witt, Member of the Provincial Congress, at Fishkill.

P. S. Notwithstanding the above, I am sensible of the favour done me by the former appointment as Quartermaster. If Lounsberry resigns, would recommend Charles Newkirk, now Lieutenant under Lounsberry, as a Captain.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

December 10th, 1776.

SIR: You are to assemble the Militia of your brigade as soon as possible, at Chester, in the County of Orange, and to march them from thence into the State of New-Jersey, if it can be done consistent with the security of the passes through the Highlands, which you are on no consideration ever to put it out of your power to regain. You are either to join Generals Lee or Gates, if they should command separate bodies in New-Jersey, to hang on the rear of the enemy, provided they are now and shall continue to be in such places as will enable you to do it without endangering the loss of the above passes, the regaining of which you are ever to have in view. If neither of those Generals should command such separate bodies, or be in such a situation as will enable you to join them consistent with the safety of those passes, or should, after you had joined them, or either of them, make such a movement as will leave this State exposed, you are then to form a separate corps, and to coöperate with them as far as lays in your power, in distressing the enemy, and raising and collecting the well-affected and curbing and overawing the disaffected subjects of the State of New-Jersey, and to concur in every other measure with them which may, in your opinion, contribute to the general welfare of America, without at any time losing sight of the necessity of having open your return to the above passes in the Highlands.

To General George Clinton.

---

LADY JOHNSON'S PASS.

The bearer, Lady Johnson, is permitted to go to Fishkill, in order to apply for a pass to go to New-York; and it is requested that she may pass thither unmolested.

By order:

JOHN BARCLAY, Chairman.

To all concerned.

Albany, 10th December, 1776.

---

COLONEL BROWN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 26, 1776.]

Albany, 10th December, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed is transmitted a copy of the second petition I preferred to Major-General Horatio Gates, praying a compliance with the order of Congress for a Court of Inquiry on myself, together with a complaint against, and petition for the trial of, General Arnold, for the crimes therein mentioned, as also a copy of the answer, which I obtained with difficulty, as will appear by the copies herewith transmitted; which puts me under the necessity of troubling you on a subject which ought to have been considered and determined by a different tribunal, agreeable to the rules of war. I must therefore once more request a peremptory rule of Congress for my own as well as General Arnold's trial, at such time and place as the honourable Congress shall think proper to appoint. I must nevertheless take the liberty of observing, that I think myself to have been treated in a most extraordinary and singular manner; and should my treatment be adopted as a precedent in the Continental Army, Congress would have nothing to do but hearing the trifling complaints of the officers in their service.

I must also request that proper provision be made for summoning, and compelling if need should be, such witnesses to attend the trial as shall be thought necessary.

I am, sir, with respect, your humble servant,

JOHN BROWN.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress, at Philadelphia.

---

To the Hon. HORATIO GATES, Esq., Major-General in the Army of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Commanding at ALBANY, humbly showeth:

That in the month of February last, Brigadier-General Arnold transmitted to the honourable Continental Congress an unjustifiable, false, wicked, and malicious accusation against me and my character, as an officer in their service, at the time when I was under his immediate command. That had there been the least ground for such accusation, the author thereof had it in his power, indeed it was his duty, to have brought me to a fair trial by a General Court-Martial in the country where the pretended crime is said to have originated. That I was left to the necessity of applying to Congress, not only for the charge given in against me, but an order for a Court of Inquiry on my own conduct with respect thereto. That in consequence of my application, I obtained a positive order of Congress to the then General commanding the Northern Department, for a Court of Inquiry, before whom I might justify my injured character. That the said order was transmitted to your Honour, at Ticonderoga, in the month of August last, and notwithstanding the most ardent solicitation on my part, the order of Congress has not yet been complied with. That upon my renewing my application to your Honour for a Court of Inquiry, you was pleased to refer me to the Board of War. Thus I have been led an expensive dance from Generals to Congress, and from Congress to Generals, and am now referred to a Board of War, who, I will venture to say, have never yet taken cognizance of any such matter, nor do I think it, with great submission to your Honour, any part of their duty. I therefore must conclude that this information, from the mode of its origin, as well as from the repeated evasions of a fair hearing, is now rested on the author's shoulders. I therefore beg your Honour will please to order Brigadier-General Arnold in arrest, for the following crimes, which I am ready to verify, viz:

1st. For endeavouring to asperse your petitioner's character, in the most infamous manner.

2d. For unwarrantably degrading and reducing the rank conferred on your petitioner by his (General Arnold's) superiour officer, and subjecting your petitioner to serve in an inferiour rank to that which he had been appointed.

3d. For ungentleman-like conduct in his letter to General Wooster, of the 25th of January last, charging your petitioner with a falsehood, and in a private manner, which is justly chargeable on himself.

4th. For suffering the small-pox to spread in the camp before Quebeck, and promoting inoculations there in the Continental Army.

5th. For depriving a part of the Army under his command of their usual allowance of provisions ordered by Congress.

6th. For interfering and countermanding the orders of his superiour officer.

7th. For plundering the inhabitants of Montreal, in direct violation of a solemn capitulation agreement entered into with them by our late brave and worthy General Montgomery, to the eternal disgrace of the Continental arms.

8th. For giving unjustifiable, unwarrantable, cruel, and bloody orders, directing whole villages to be destroyed, and the inhabitants thereof put to death by fire and sword, without any distinctions to friend or foe, age or sex.

9th. For entering into an unwarrantable, unjustifiable, and partial agreement with Captain Foster for the exchange of prisoners taken at The Cedars, without the knowledge, advice, or consent of any officer than those present with him on the spot.

10th. For ordering inoculation of the Continental Army at Sorel, without the knowledge of, and contrary to the intentions of, the General commanding that Northern Department, by which fatal consequences ensued.

11th. For great misconduct during his command, from the camp at Cambridge, in the year 1775, until he was superseded by General Montgomery, at Point-aux-Tremble, near Quebec.

12th. For great misconduct in his command of the Continental fleet in Lake Champlain, which occasioned the loss thereof.

13th. For disobedience of the orders of his superiour officers, while acting by a commission from the Provincial Congress of the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, and for disobedience of the orders of a Committee of the same Congress, sent from that State to inspect into his conduct; and also for insulting, abusing, and imprisoning the said Committee; as also for a treasonable attempt to make his escape with the navigators then at or near Ticonderoga, to the enemy at St. John's, which obliged the then commanding officer of Ticonderoga and its dependencies to issue a positive order to the officers commanding our batteries at Crown-Point to stop or sink the vessels attempting to pass that post, and by force of arms make a prisoner of the said General Arnold, (then a Colonel,) which was accordingly done.

JNO. BROWN, Lieutenant-Colonel.

Albany, 1st December, 1776.

---

Albany, December 2d, 1776.

SIR: Having been put to the necessity to present your Honour with a petition yesterday, must beg your answer to the same.

I have the honour to be, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JNO. BROWN, Lieutenant-Colonel.

To General Horatio Gates.

---

Albany, December 2d, 1776.

SIR: I am sorry that necessity once more obliges me to trouble your Honour on the present occasion. I really thought that the petition which I gave you yesterday contained matters of so much importance, as either to entitle me to the prayer thereof, or an answer in writing, setting forth the reason why it was rejected; as the one would have been satisfactory, the other enabled me to lay the petition at large, and your answer, before Congress. Must therefore humbly request your Honour to give me your answer in writing.

I am, sir, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JNO. BROWN, Lieutenant-Colonel.

To General Gates.

---

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL BROWN.

Albany, 2d December, 1776.

SIR: Since you are so importunate for an answer in writing to your petition of yesterday, I think proper to acquaint you that I shall lay your petition before Congress, who will, when they see fit, give such orders as they think necessary thereupon.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

Lieutenant-Colonel Brown.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Saratoga, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose you sundry returns, which Colonel Wayne, agreeable to my orders, has just transmitted. Congress will perceive from those the strength of the garrison at Ticonderoga and Mount Independence, and how very capital our wants are in this quarter.

I have every reason to believe that the troops at Ticonderoga and the other posts above will not tarry five days after the term of their inlistment is expired; and what makes this the more alarming is, the very little probability of replacing them with others. Should that unfortunately be the case, General Carleton, who cannot fail of being minutely informed of whatever passes there, will most certainly possess himself of that fortress as soon as Lake Champlain is so frozen as to be rendered capable of carrying horses on the ice. Let me, therefore, most earnestly entreat Congress to take measures to prevent a disaster which would be attended with the most terrible consequences. I have written on the occasion to the Eastern States. I have urged the necessity of hastening up the troops; but I fear, unless my application, which went by express on the 3d instant, enclosing the resolution of Congress of the 22d ultimo, is seconded by the order of Congress, it will be of little avail, as I am informed the levies are making very tardily, and that the troops will not march unless the corps are complete, for which they should not by any means wait, as there is now a plentiful stock of provisions at Ticonderoga, and nothing to fear from the enemy until the time I have mentioned. I would repair to Congress, but if I quit this quarter before the garrison of Ticonderoga is relieved, and the accident I dread should happen, the misfortune will be imputed to me. I am, therefore, under the disagreeable necessity of deferring my journey for some time.

I beg leave to inform Congress that not one General Officer is left with me. I therefore wish that some were sent up, and hope, if General Gates cannot come, that General Arnold's business at Congress may be expedited; for much, very much, is to be done, and great exertions to be used, in providing the various necessaries for the next campaign. And although whilst I continue in the command I shall most cheerfully devote every moment to this important business, yet I have too many affairs on hand to pay to each its proper attention.

Colonel Baldwin and Major Stevens, who had obtained General Gates's leave of absence, called on me in their way down. I have given them orders to procure as many of the articles mentioned in their respective lists in the Eastern States as they possibly can, but I fear all they may be able to collect will be very trifling; nor do I expect that General Ward, to whom I have also wrote, will be able to give me any material aid. I must, therefore, entreat Congress to send whatever they can from Pennsylvania. The articles marked A, I have taken measures to procure here, and hope to succeed.

Since Colonel Warner called upon me, I have received a letter from Mr. Sherman, assuring me that Congress had resolved to let Colonel Warner raise a regiment, and urging me to order him money. Although such a letter is not a sufficient authority, I have nevertheless ventured to give a warrant for half the bounty. The Colonel assures me he can raise a regiment in a few days. I must, however, confess that my expectations of his completing one at all are very little.

Since the date of the Commissary's return, about one hundred barrels of flour have been sent across Lake George. I am informed that all the care is not taken of it that ought to be. The Commissary complains that he wants storehouses.

From the account that Lieutenant-Colonel Varick gives me, who is just returned from mustering the troops to the northward, the necessity of the most pointed instructions to the Paymasters is absolutely necessary. I have long since requested of Congress to know who was to give these. Last winter I threw together my thoughts on the subject, but do not recollect whether I sent a copy to Congress or not.

I am, sir, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, December 10th, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, and Thomas Seymour, Esquires.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £1400 in favour of Captain Harding, of the brig Defence, and for the use of said brig; to render his account.—(Order given December 10th, 1776, delivered Captain Harding.)

Voted, To give order to Prosper Wetmore, Esq., Sheriff, on Captain Harding's producing and lodging with him his power-of-attorney from the officers and men on board the brig Defence, in the capture of the prize ship John, taken by them and brought into New-London, and condemned, that first deducting the charges of condemnation and all other expenses, and then one-twentieth part of the net proceeds of the avails of the ship and cargo, being the Admiral's part, settled by Congress, then the one-third of the remainder to be by him paid to Captain Harding for his and brig's crew, their share in said prize, taking his receipts therefor, and to call upon Captain Bill for the bill of expenses, and to see that they are all properly collected in order to make settlement.—(Order given out December 13th, 1776.)

Directed Prosper Wetmore, Esq., to pay to Captain Harding £716 12*s*. 10*d*., of the State's money in his hands, which, together with £683 7*s*. 2*d*., makes the sum of £1400 contained in the order given as above, on this page, to Captain Harding.

Voted, To order Captain Jabez Huntington, of Windham, to deliver to the Selectmen of Coventry, as town stock, twenty-five pounds of Powder, for the use of the Militia of Coventry, now marching towards Providence.—(Order delivered Eph'm Root, Esq.)

---

DOCTOR EUSTIS TO GENERAL HEATH.

Norwalk, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: Having under my care in this place a very considerable number of the sick troops, I think it my duty to make you acquainted with their situation, that you may determine whether some measures cannot be taken which will be advantageous to the publick, and agreeable, at the same time, to the sick soldiers.

We have in town of the new levies and Continental troops about four hundred sick, a great proportion of which are convalescent, able to walk abroad, but not so well accruited as to be able to cope with the duties of the camp. The new levies, whose term of inlistment expires the 25th of this month, I recommended for discharges as fast as they chose to take them, and had friends to carry their recommendations to camp. They belonged principally to this State, and most of them had parents or friends to assist them in getting home. With the established troops the case is very different. There are many sick from the regiments who marched from Boston in the spring, who have borne the burthen of the campaign, who have no money and no friends; or if they have them, they are at such a distance that it is out of their power to serve them. Many of them are getting their health, and are willing to be discharged; and it will certainly be for the benefit of the publick to let them go home as fast as they are able. The Continent will by this means save their pay and save their provisions, not to mention that the men will be able to take the field earlier the next campaign. None of the troops, except Colonel Ward's regiment, are engaged after the expiration of December. The time is almost gone; and whether it will not be for the good of the service to have the men discharged from the hospital as fast as they are able and willing to go home, is submitted to the superiour judgment of General Heath, by his most respectful, humble servant,

WILLIAM EUSTIS,
Surgeon of the General Hospital at Norwalk.

To the Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

On board the Warren, five miles below Providence, December 10th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Three days ago the English fleet, of about fifty-four sail of transports and sixteen sail of men-of-war, arrived in this bay; and two days ago they landed, I believe, about four thousand troops, and took possession of the island of Rhode-Island, without opposition. The inhabitants of the town of Newport favoured their operation, I believe, too much. The Militia are come in, in order to prevent their further operations. I thought it best to come up the river after the fleet was within about two leagues of us, with the Warren, Providence, Columbus, brigantine Hampden, and sloop Providence. The inhabitants are in daily expectation of an attack on the town of Providence. I have got the ships in the best posture of defence we can make them, without they were fully manned, which they are not more than half. We lay where the ships can't come up that draw much more water than we do. If we get the ships manned, shall take some favourable opportunity, and attempt getting to sea with some of the ships; but at present think we are of more service here than at sea without we were manned.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Marine Committee at Philadelphia.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

On board the Warren, off Patuxet, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: There is now at Providence of our men belonging to the fleet, Robert Relf, William Lenn, Philip Gordin, William Sceaner, Peter Cane, Pierce, J. Lambert, Jos. Merre, and five of the Cabot's people, with a number of others, which should be glad you will send with my officer, the Sheriff, or his Deputy, in order that they may be brought on board, where they will be of service. Nothing new transpires this day.

I am your Honour's humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island, at Providence.

---

M. DE GAIAULT TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Translation.]

Roxbury, December 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I came from France to this Continent with Mr. Couleaux, who will deliver you this, and many others, by which you will see who we are. I thought, gentlemen, that I acted for the advantage of your affairs, in pursuing my journey to Philadelphia and passing through your different armies, where probably they will be pleased to hear of the lively interest my country takes in the grand cause for which you contend. I shall join General Lee, and from thence I will go to General Washington, whose order I will take, and offer him my services. What has particularly determined me to this conduct, is the report of an action being soon expected, and of the great number of your brave countrymen now under arms, with whom I shall think myself happy to fight, and to be useful by the military knowledge I have acquired.

In regard to the letter of Dr. Dubourg, and to the memoirs included, I shall not conceal from you that it is necessary I should give you a just idea of what you ought to think on that head. Dr. Dubourg is a man of great probity and attachment for you; he has a great deal of knowledge, but full of this confidence, influenced by the rectitude of his heart. I fear, too, he yields his belief too easily, without examination, and that the constant study of his closet opposes in him the progress of experience, by which his zeal may suffer illusion. When I shall have the honour to see you, I will give you a detail of matters. I wait for this time with impatience; until then I shall endeavour to employ myself usefully to my country—permit me to call yours by that appellation; my sincere attachment to it gives me that right.

I am, &c.,

DE GAIAULT.

To the General Congress of the United States of America, at Philadelphia.

---

Honourable John Hancock, Esq.:

I am directed to acquaint the President of the honourable Congress of the sums advanced to the Sieur Gaiault, Chevalier, and Sieur Couleaux, on account of the Congress; which you'll perceive by the enclosed resolve that I have now the honour to transmit to you.

I am, sir, with great esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

---

Resolve on the Petition of LE SIEUR GAIAULT, &c. Passed NOVEMBER 16, 1776.

Resolved, That there be paid out of the Publick Treasury to the Sieur Gaiault, Chevalier, and to the Sieur Couleaux, the sum of sixty-six pounds thirteen shillings and four pence, to enable them to procure horses and carriages necessary for their journey to the Congress at Philadelphia, and that the said sum be charged to the Continental account; and that the Secretary be directed to acquaint the President of the Congress of the sum advanced to the said Sieur Gaiault, Chevalier, and Sieur Couleaux, on account of the Congress, that they may take such order thereon as they shall think best.

---

WILLIAM THOMPSON TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Stoughton, Tuesday morning, December 10th, 1776.

SIR: I set out yesterday at sunset and travelled here last night, and saw two of the Selectmen, who with the utmost readiness have procured a carriage to transport the powder to Attleborough. It is now ready to be loaded in the cart, and will be set out by ten o'clock this forenoon, in Mr. Blackman's cart, (one of the Selectmen,) who goes with it himself with an armed guard. So doubt not it will have proper despatch and security. I shall set out before, and hope to see all at Attleborough this afternoon or evening.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

WM. THOMPSON.

Richard Devens, Esq.

---

MESHECH WEARE TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

State of New-Hampshire, Exeter, 10 December, 1776.

SIR: Having received certain intelligence that a large number of the enemy's ships had made their appearance at Rhode-Island, the General Court of this State have sent orders to the Colonels of our Militia to hold their respective regiments in readiness to march on the shortest notice to the relief of that State, if necessary, and have in the mean time despatched the bearer, Major Samuel Philbrick, to Boston, to gain further intelligence of the enemy, and to transmit the same to us with the greatest despatch.

I am, with all due respect, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President of the Council.

To the Honourable James Bowdoin, Esq., President of the Council of Massachusetts State.

P. S. Major Philbrick can inform you that the General Assembly of this State have just passed a resolve for an embargo on our navigation, agreeable to the resolve of your State. Also, that orders have issued for the raising five hundred men from our Militia, to march forthwith to New-York, to reinforce the Army there.

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 11th, 1776.

SIR: I sent you a parcel of nails by Mr. Speer, and have bought a parcel of the rum that was on board the schooner, about five hundred pounds worth; and as soon as any of the vessels is to be sold, I will purchase the schooner or the brig, or both. I would have purchased the snow, but the best judges thought her too old. The prize ship that came yesterday is a very fine one for the Old France trade.

Captain Martin will sail to-morrow without fail. Hands are so scarce it is almost impossible to get them. I have beef enough salted, I suppose, for some time. I am picking up all the pork I can for the Defence. Butter and cheese is very high. I think Captain Martin and hands will expend in wages and repairs two hundred pounds. Please send me fifteen hundred or two thousand pounds. Money is paid away surprisingly, but I can't do with less.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

P. S. Mr. Speer, Mr. Smith, Mr. Turnbull, or Captain Cook, will be good hands to send money by. Send it soon, as I am out.

---

CHARLES THOMSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, December 11, 1776.

SIR: The President being necessarily engaged with his family, I have the honour to inform you that your letter of the 10th was duly received and laid before Congress, and to transmit you a resolution of Congress passed this day.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

CHA. THOMSON.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

Resolve of Congress recommending a day of Fasting and Prayer.

In Congress, December 11, 1776.

Whereas the just war into which the United States of America have been forced by Great Britain is likely to be still continued by the same violence and injustice which have hitherto animated the enemies of American freedom; and whereas it becomes all publick bodies as well as private persons to reverence the Providence of God, and look up to him as the Supreme Disposer of all events, and the Arbiter of the fate of nations:

Therefore the Congress hereby Resolve, That it be recommended to all the States, as soon as possible to appoint a day of solemn Fasting and Humiliation, to implore of Almighty God the forgiveness of the many sins prevailing among all ranks, and to beg the countenance and assistance of his Providence in the prosecution of this just and necessary war.

The Congress do also, in the most earnest manner, recommend to all the members of the United States, and particularly to the officers, civil and military, under them, the exercise of repentance and reformation; and further, do require of the said officers of the military department the strict observation of the articles of war in general, and particularly that of said articles which forbids profane swearing and all other immoralities; of which all such officers are desired to take notice.

It is left to each State to issue out Proclamations fixing the day that appears most proper for their several bounds.

Extract from the Minutes:

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

---

MEMORIAL OF LEWIS DE LINKENSDORFF.

To the honourable the Continental Congress:

The Memorial of LEWIS DE LINKENSDORFF, Adjutant of the GERMAN Battalion:

Humbly begs leave to refer to his petition lately presented to your honourable House, for advancing him six months' pay. The duties of an Adjutant in the present situation of affairs can hardly be performed without a horse and some equipage, of which he has lately had the misfortune to lose a considerable part, and cannot afford to replace it without some advance.

And your memorialist, as in duty, &c.,

LEWIS DE LINKENSDORFF.

Philadelphia, December 11, 1776.

THOMAS WHARTON TO DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 11th, 1776.

SIR: The present situation of this State makes it necessary to remove all the State prisoners from this city; and the honourable Board of War has advised us to send part to your care, to dispose of them in such safe place of confinement as you may think proper. In consequence of which we have sent you ; a list of their names you have annexed. They have been very active and dangerous enemies to these States, and it is of great importance that they be prevented from making an escape. Being apprised of these facts, we have no doubt of your care and attention to have them secured.

We are, sir, your humble servants. By order of Council:

THO. WHARTON, President.

To the honourable President of the Council of Safety of Maryland.

---

SAMUEL CHASE TO CAPTAIN NICHOLSON.

Wednesday morning, Philadelphia, December 11th, 1776.

SIR: It has been reported that you was coming up to this city with a body of seamen and marines. One of the frigates is ready for the sea. The other three may be soon ready for a short voyage, if men could be procured. You would render essential service if you could immediately come up with a body of seamen; and an attempt might be made to bring round all the frigates here to Baltimore town. It cannot be doubted the Council of Safety would lend the hands belonging to the Defence for this very important service. You will send an express to the Council of Safety. Not one moment is to be lost. I write this by the order of Congress.

We were informed yesterday morning that the enemy were at Burlington, Monday evening. We have certain intelligence just now, that the enemy were not there last night. It is reported and believed that some of their Light-Horse were seven miles above that place on Monday. Not one of the enemy are on the west side of the Delaware. It is believed that the main body of General Howe's Army is at Maidenhead, about six miles above, to the west of Trenton. General Lee, with between five and six thousand men, was at Morriss-Town last Sunday evening; he will join General Washington, who is with his Army opposite Trenton.

The Congress will not quit this city but in the last extremity. To prevent false reports, publish the above.

Inform Mr. Purviance that Mrs. Hancock will set off this day.

Let it be known that arms furnished to our Militia, but the want of them be no excuse.

Your obedient servant, SAM'L CHASE.

Captain James Nicholson, Baltimore Town, Maryland.

---

CAPTAIN NICHOLSON TO MR. AUTHENBECK.

In absence of Captain Cook, I would recommend to you to consider the necessity of immediately sending off all the Defence's hands that lays in your power. I will assist your officer that you shall think proper to send with them.

Please to show this to Mr. Purviance, and conduct him on the occasion, that he may send word of to the Council of Safety. I shall make the best of my way to Philadelphia.

I am yours, &c., JAS. NICHOLSON.

Mr. Authenbeck.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Referred 12 December to the Board of War.]

Head-Quarters, Falls of Delaware, 11 December, 1776.

SIR: After I had wrote you yesterday I received certain information that the enemy, after repairing Croswick's bridge, had advanced a party of about five hundred to Bordentown. By their taking this route it confirmed me in my opinion that they have an intention to land between this and Philadelphia, as well as above, if they can procure boats for that purpose.

I last night directed Commodore Seymour to station all his galleys between Bordentown and Philadelphia, to give the earliest intelligence of any appearance of the enemy on the Jersey shore.

I yesterday rode up the river about eleven miles, to Lord Stirling's post, where I found a prisoner of the Forty-Second Regiment, who had been just brought in. He informed me that Lord Cornwallis was at Penny-Town with two battalions of Grenadiers, and three of Light-Infantry, all British, the Hessian Grenadiers, the Forty-Second Highland Regiment, and two other battalions, the names of which he did not remember. He knew nothing of the reason of their being assembled there, nor what were their future intentions; but I last night received information from my Lord Stirling, which had been brought in by his scouts, which in some measure accounted for their being there. They had made a forced march from Trenton on Sunday night to Coryel's Ferry, in hopes of surprising a sufficient number of boats to transport them; but finding themselves disappointed, had marched back to Penny-Town, where they remained yesterday. From their several attempts to seize boats, it does not look as if they had brought any with them, as I was at one time informed. I last night sent a person over to Trenton, to learn whether there was any appearance of building any; but he could not perceive any preparations for a work of that kind; so that I am in hopes, if proper care is taken to keep all the craft out of their way, they will find the crossing Delaware a matter of considerable difficulty.

I received another letter from General Lee last evening; it was dated at Chatham, which I take to be near Morriss-Town, the 8th of this month. He had then received my letter sent by Major Hoops, but seemed still inclined to hang upon the enemy's rear; to which I should have no objection, had I a sufficient force to oppose them in front; but as I have not at present, nor do I see much probability of further reinforcement, I have wrote to him in the most pressing terms to join me with all expedition.

Major Sheldon, who commands the volunteer Horse from Connecticut, waits upon Congress to establish some mode of pay. I can only say that the service of himself and his troop has been such as merits the warmest thanks of the publick, and deserves a handsome compensation for their trouble. Whatever is settled now will serve for a precedent in future. From the experience I have had this campaign of the utility of Horse, I am convinced there is no carrying on the war without them, and I would therefore recommend the establishment of one or more corps, in proportion to the number of Foot, in addition to those already raised in Virginia.

If Major Sheldon would undertake the command of a regiment of Horse on the Continental establishment, I believe he could very soon raise them; and I can recommend him as a man of activity and spirit, from what I have seen of him.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Trenton Falls, December 11th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 8th instant, by the Light-Horseman, reached me last night. Having wrote you fully respecting my situation just before it came to hand, it is unnecessary to add much now. I shall only say that Philadelphia, beyond all question, is the object of the enemy's movements, and that nothing less than our utmost exertions will be sufficient to prevent General Howe from possessing it. The force I have is weak and entirely incompetent to that end. I must therefore entreat you to push on with every possible succour you can bring. Your aid may give a more favourable complexion to our affairs. You know the importance of the city of Philadelphia, and the fatal consequences that must attend the loss of it.

I am, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL THOMPSON.

Trenton Falls, December 11th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Being desirous of effecting an exchange of prisoners as far as circumstances will admit of, I shall be much obliged by your transmitting to me, by the earliest opportunity, the names and ranks of the officers who were released on parole by General Carleton. I presume you have a list in which they are specified, and without which I cannot point out to General Howe the officers who should be discharged from their paroles, in lieu of those who have been and will be sent in by us.

I am, dear sir, with great respect, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Brigadier-General Thompson, Prisoner.

P. S. Your exchange for Governour Franklin has been proposed to General Howe, who has returned no answer as yet.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Morris-Town, December, ye 11th, 1776.

We have three thousand men here at present; but they are so ill shod that we have been obliged to halt these two days for want of shoes. Seven regiments of Gates's corps are on their march, but where they actually are, is not certain. General Lee has sent two officers this day, one to inform him where the Delaware can be crossed above Trenton, the other to examine the road towards Burlington, as General Lee thinks he can, without great risk, cross the great Brunswick post road, and by a forced night's march make his way to the ferry below Burlington. Boats should be sent up from Philadelphia to receive him. But this scheme he only proposes if the head of the enemy's column actually pass the river. The Militia in this part of the Province seem sanguine. If they could be sure of an army remaining amongst 'em, I believe they would raise a very considerable number.

[The original is endorsed "From General Lee."]

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Morris-Town, December ye 11th, 1776.

Sir: I would recommend to you, if you are at Ramapouch or Pompton, to take your route either by the Great or Little Falls; if by the Great Falls, you may come by Hachquacknock. If by the Little Falls you may inquire for Newark Mountains, and come a route at a small distance from the river; but had better send an express to Springfield, seven miles west of Elizabeth-Town, where about one thousand Militia are collected to watch the motions of the enemy. Their subsequent motions must be directed according to circumstances.

Charles Lee, Major-General.

P. S. The gentlemen to whom you are to address yourself for intelligence are Colonel Ford, at or near Springfield, or the Rev. James Caldwell, near Chatham.

---

GENERAL SULLIVAN'S ORDERS.

December 11, 1776.

The whole Army to strike their tents to-morrow morning, at half past seven, and to parade in order to march by eight.

Hitchcock's brigade to march in front, Colonel Glover in the centre, and Colonel Seargent in the rear.

The wagons to march between the centre and rear brigades.

General McDougle's brigade is annexed to Colonel Seargent's, and to be commanded by him till further orders.

The same order of march to be observed as yesterday.

The Adjutants immediately to make proper returns of the troops to the Brigade-Majors, and they to the Deputy Adjutants-General.

In case an attack should be attempted by the enemy in our front, Hitchcock's and Glover's brigades are to form the first line, Hitchcock on the right and Glover on the left. Seargent to form a second line in the rear, and parade the baggage wagons in a line in his front.

---

REV. CHARLES INGLIS TO GENERAL HEATH.

Verplanck's Point, December 11, 1776.

Sir: Majors Huntington and Pullen favoured me with a visit to-day, and gave me information concerning the mode of procedure in accomplishing the business on which I came here, (and with which your Excellency is now acquainted,) which I was not so fortunate as to know before. After the best inquiry at New-York, I understood that the members of the Convention at Fishkill were the principal persons to whom I should apply for leave to bring home my family and furniture, but could not learn what gentleman was vested with chief military command at Peekskill. Even after I came here and was told that your Excellency commanded at that place, I was assured that it would be quite sufficient you should see my letter to the honourable Convention, without any particular application to yourself. The above gentlemen, however, gave me to understand that the management and transaction of such matters is committed to you. This being the case, I could not be satisfied with my own conduct till I had assured your Excellency that my omission of addressing you on the occasion did not proceed from any want of deference or respect to you, but purely from not knowing the steps that were proper to be taken; and I flatter myself that this will serve as an apology for the omission.

The gentlemen above-mentioned intimated that some difficulty in suffering my family to come away might arise from an apprehension that they would give some information respecting the country; to which I shall only say, that I am perfectly willing your Excellency should order an oath of secrecy to be administered to those of them who are to the years of discretion; and I here solemnly promise, on the word of a gentleman and a Christian, that so far from desiring them to violate their oath, I shall inculcate on them the sacredness of an oath in general, and their duty to observe this one in particular. Mrs. Antill was lately permitted by General Dickinson to come from Brunswick to New-York, on taking such an oath, and I believe she has religiously observed it. Such precautions are certainly prudent, though I am of opinion that there is much better intelligence conveyed to both armies in this unhappy contest than could be given or communicated by women.

My family have been absent from home near fifteen months. I am distressed beyond expression at the thought of their being absent another winter; and bringing them home is, believe me, the only object I have in view, without the least desire or intention of interfering with either military or political matters. Women have liberty to remove with their children, servants, and effects, from New-York. I flattered myself that the Convention and officers in the Continental service would grant a similar indulgence to such women as would choose to move from the country to New-York; and I cherished the hope of such an indulgence to my family, the rather as I had been instrumental myself in assisting some families to remove from New-York to their friends who were engaged in the Continental cause. The brave are no less distinguished by their humanity than their valour; and I am persuaded of you, sir, to use the words of Alexander, commonly called the Great—"That you do not make war on women or captives." If you are a husband and a father, your own bosom will tell you what mine must feel at this time by the absence of a wife and three helpless infants so long, and on the prospect of leaving them among strangers in such calamitous times. Place yourself in my situation one moment, and I only appeal to the feelings of your heart to decide on my case. Yet far be it from me to desire you would in the least depart from what you conceive to be your duty. I only request that after taking such precautions as prudence dictates to prevent injury to yourself, you would permit the innocent, the feeble, and helpless, to take sanctuary in the arms of those who love and would willingly protect them.

The distance at which my family is at present is so great, and there will be so many difficulties in removing them, that if I had liberty now to remove them, it would not be possible for them to be here in less than ten days. This circumstance makes me the more anxious that the matter should be speedily determined, as from the advanced season we may expect the North River will be closed by ice near that time.

Two gentlemen, Mr. Philip I. Livingston and Mr. John Moore, are concerned with me in the flag of truce, and are here with the same intention to bring home their families. I have read this letter to them, and they beg that your Excellency would consider what I say of my case as applicable exactly to theirs. Mr. Livingston desires me to inform you that he intends speedily to remove from this Continent to

Jamaica, in the West-Indies, where he has an estate, which makes him the more anxious to remove his family, as he proposes to carry them with him.

I hope you will excuse any inaccuracies that may be in this letter, which is written in the dark cabin of a schooner that is agitated by wind and tide.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

CHARLES INGLIS.

His Excellency General Heath.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Haverstraw, December 11th, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received your orders night before last for the march of General Parsons's brigade, and yesterday noon the three regiments at Peekskill began their march, making about five hundred men, which are now here. I have ordered Huntington's and Tyler's to join me. They may make about three hundred men, after leaving a Captain and fifty men as a guard at the pass in the mountains. Colonel Vose, with Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's, is now seven miles advanced. I have sent to him to halt until I come up, unless he should have received orders for his conduct either from your Excellency, General Lee, or Gates. He has about five hundred men, which will make in the whole about thirteen hundred men.

I find the inhabitants to be in the utmost distress; the Tories are joining the enemy, and insulting and disarming the Whigs, stripping them of their cattle, effects, &c. Complaints, petitions, &c., are continually presenting for relief; and the greatest complaints are from Orange-Town, Clecky-Town, and the neighbourhood of Hackensack. I cannot pass, therefore, without securing this neighbourhood. I think, therefore, to move by the way of Orange-Town and Paramus, to curb the disaffected; and if by any means it should appear that the enemy have not a body of troops at Fort Lee or the English Neighbourhood, and but a small detachment at Hackensack, to endeavour to dislodge them, if it should be possible. I should be glad to know your Excellency's further pleasure.

On Saturday last a schooner with a flag came up the river, with the Rev. Charles Inglis and one Mr. Moore on board, to solicit of the Convention their families, which are now at Fish-Kills, or in that vicinity. I gave orders for the flag to be treated with the utmost politeness and respect, and at the same time with as great precaution. I have forbid their going up either by land or water, and have stopped the vessel below the ferry. I sent the letters to the Convention after examination, and have wrote to them that I shall not consent to either of the persons going to Fish-Kill, or to their families being permitted to be sent to the city, as it appears to me that the cause may receive injury thereby. Distrust is the mother of security.

The flag waits an answer from the Convention; but my consent shall not be given unless directed by your Excellency.

I have ordered the galley to lie near the schooner, and to keep her boats rowing round her all night.

The men-of-war have sailed down the river.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To his Excellency General Washington, at Trenton.

---

COLONEL SCAMMELL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, Morris-Town, December 11th, 1776.

MUCH RESPECTED SIR: By order of General Lee, I beg leave to inform you that we have no rum for the soldiery, and but very little flour. As the Army is continually increasing, I am apprehensive that the Army must suffer. General Lee therefore recommends that you order a large quantity of the above-mentioned articles on after the Army.

Your most obedient and very humble servant,

ALX'D SCAMMELL, D. A. G'l.

Major-General Heath.

---

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Fort Montgomery, December 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yours of the 8th I received by Mr. Leonard, desiring me to send up a parcel of stoves and sheet-iron to Albany for the use of the troops at Ticonderoga. The last of them was brought down here from the furnace yesterday, and with some difficulty I have engaged a sloop to bring them to Albany, if they can possibly get up this far on account of the season. She will go off to-night or to-morrow morning.

I have but a small garrison here at present, consisting of five companies of my regiment, except the artillery, and many of them without shoes and other necessary clothes. They have received no pay since the 1st of August last; and if they had money there is no clothing nor shoes to be purchased here. The chief of Captain Swartwout's company insists that their times were out the first of this instant, and their officers acknowledge it to be so. Five of his company went off this morning without leave, almost barefooted. I have sent a party after them; but if they are taken they will be of no service here, and many more of them without shoes, and some other necessaries, which, if they were provided with, I believe they would serve a while longer contentedly; if not, in my opinion it would be better to discharge them. I wish there could be some shoes and stockings sent here for the men. The value of them should be stopped out of their wages.

My situation is not very agreeable here at present, as I can't get business to go on to my mind, on account of the new arrangement and the inlisting of men; for the officers that are appointed are inlisting as fast as they can; and those that are left out is not so forward as I could wish, on account of it. But without shoes and some clothing, we will not be able to keep up our guard and get firewood, and do the other necessary duty of a garrison. I think it would be best that the chain was taken away from here before the river freezes, and brought to some safe place. I have this day ordered the fire sloops and rafts in the Puplopen creek, for fear of the ice; and all the iron chains, &c., belonging to them, will have carted up and put in store.

Captain Israel Smith tells me he has no Ensign in his company as yet, and he is desirous to have Isaac A. Rosa, who is at present an Ensign in Captain Jackson's company, appointed in his. Mr. Smith applies to me to recommend him to Congress. I believe he is a good young fellow, and will make a good officer; but Mr. Smith is rather better acquainted with him than I am, and if he had not a good opinion of him, he would not be desirous of having him appointed. They both belonged to one company before.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

Excuse haste and incorrectness.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, President of the Provincial Congress, State of New-York, Fishkill.

---

ORDERS FOR SECURING SERGEANT TRIPP AND OTHERS.

Peekskill, 11 December, 1776.

SIR: You will take into your custody Sergeant Tripp, Sergeant Hatherway, Corporals Sears and Gray, of Captain Ford's company, Colonel Brewer's regiment of Artificers, and them safely keep—they being guilty of plundering.

EBEN. HUNTINGTON,
Deputy Adjutant-General.

To the Captain of the Main Guard.

---

COLONEL BREWER TO GENERAL HEATH.

Peekskill, December 11th, 1776.

SIR: As your Honour was pleased some time ago to recommend me as proper to command a regiment, and as you may imagine I have been placed in that station by the new arrangement, which is not the case, I have taken the liberty to trouble your Honour with this, knowing there is a regiment in the Bay Government not filled, and being informed that it is left to your Honour to nominate the Colonel, my request therefore is, that if you should think proper to bestow the command on me, I shall exert my utmost abilities to serve my country, and consider myself obligated in the very highest manner to your Honour.

I am, with due respect, sir, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

J. BREWER.

To the Hon. William Heath, Esq., Major-General.

MATTHEW CANTINE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fishkill, December 11, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the Convention of the State of New-York to transmit to your Excellency the enclosed resolves, by which it will appear that we have made every exertion in favour of our sister States which our present situation will admit. But we are extremely sorry to find by a letter received last night from General Heath, that he is ordered over to the west shore; by reasons of which the most important passes in America will be left unguarded, though within a short distance of the enemy. Your Excellency must be fully satisfied, that though they, by marching through the flat country, may distress the inhabitants, yet that measure will be productive of nothing decisive; whereas the fate of this country will probably depend upon their occupying the State of New-York, which is now in a great measure abandoned to them. We must therefore take the liberty to entreat your Excellency to countermand an order which, in our humble opinion, is putting every thing to the hazard, and leave the northwestern parts of the State of New-Jersey to be strengthened in the way proposed by the within resolutions.

If your Excellency should not be inclined to grant this request, we must beg to be favoured with your immediate answer, that we may not, by suffering our Militia to march, and leave this State entirely defenceless, and thus abandon, with ourselves, the cause of America.

Your Excellency will pardon the freedom with which we write. Our sanguine hopes of creating a diversion by the means pointed out in the enclosed resolves, without endangering the safety of this State, are, by the order to General Heath, entirely vanished.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient servant.

By order:

MATTHEW CANTINE, pro t. Chairman.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fishkill, December 11th, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of yesterday, with the several despatches enclosed, were this day laid before the Committee of Safety. I am directed to inform you that they highly approve of the precaution you have used with respect to the flag of truce, and which you will be pleased to continue until we have had time to consider of the applications mentioned in the despatches. They are now under the consideration of a Committee, and I hope a decision will take place to-morrow.

The defenceless condition to which the Highlands will be reduced on your withdrawing the Continental troops, gives us very great concern. Ardently as we wish to cooperate with General Washington, in opposing the progress of the enemy in our sister State of New-Jersey, we are compelled, by a regard for the publick safety, to direct our Militia, who were before ordered to march into that State, to be reserved for the security of the Highlands. We have at the same time despatched an express to General Washington, requesting that you and the troops you more immediately command, may be directed to resume your late stations. We hope this request will meet with your approbation.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant.

By order:

MATTHEW CANTINE, pro t. Chairman.

Major-General Heath, Peekskill.

---

CAPTAIN DUTCHER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fishkill, December ye 11th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The 22d of October last the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq, Governour of the State of Connecticut, upon a desire from his Excellency General Washington, ordered Elisha Sheldon, Major of the Fifth Regiment of Light-Horse of the State of Connecticut, to march with said regiment to this place, here to wait General Washington's orders; then was ordered to march to the White-Plains, and I with my company were left to the direction of this Convention, where we still remain.

I have sent to Major Sheldon for orders. He says I must apply to you, gentlemen. John Canfield, Esq., our Adjutant, has informed me by writing, that General Lee, when applied to, refused giving any orders, as my company were at the disposal of the Convention; and says you, gentlemen, have a right to order said company into business, or to return home, as you judge best. As my men are not clothed fit for the winter season, and some of them are a mind to go into the Continental Army, and some of my company being already discharged and gone to work at building barracks in this place, forage for horses being very scarce, hardly to be purchased at any price—I have sent near ten miles round and cannot get any suitable grain for horses at present—my company staying here greatly augmeats the publick cost, and at present, as I apprehend, are of no service. My company being small, would humbly pray you, gentlemen, to discharge me and company, or give a furlough to me and company, and send a despatch to Governour Trumbull of your proceedings, which I am ready to forward; but if you judge not best to grant my request, please to give me some directions, as you in your wisdom shall judge best.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

RULUFF DUTCHER, Captain.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York.

N. B. My company being men of business, are very uneasy to stay here under present circumstances.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

[Secret.] Fishkill, 11th December, 1776.

SIR: It is apprehended that a successful attack may be made against such of the enemy, principally if not solely consisting of Rogers's Rangers, as are now ravaging without restraint or remorse the suffering inhabitants of the County of West-Chester. I am therefore directed to request you, if it is any wise consistent with your instructions from his Excellency General Washington, immediately to repair to that State, with the troops under your command, in order to coöperate with the forces which are imbodying for this expedition. I need not add that no time is to be lost, as the operations of the enemy in New-Jersey give a favourable opening for a sudden and vigorous enterprise, which we have no reason to expect can be of long continuance.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant.

By order.

Colonel Henry B. Livingston.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Fishkill, 11th December, 1776.

SIR: The Convention of the State of New-York, alarmed at the rapid progress of the enemy, and not without apprehension for the safety of Philadelphia and New-Jersey, waited with anxiety for directions from the honourable the Congress, or requisitions from his Excellency General Washington; which having not yet been happy enough to receive, owing, as they imagine, either to the confusion occasioned by the retreat of our Army, or the little hopes that was entertained of any assistance from a State which had sustained so many and such severe losses, they therefore ventured to pass the enclosed resolutions, which appeared to them the most likely means to rouse the depressed spirits of the Militia of New-Jersey, to curb the disaffected, and divert the attention of the enemy from their principal object, as far as it is consistent with the safety of this State, on which, in a great measure, depends that of all America, and to the attack of which the enemy will most undoubtedly return, if their designs are frustrated in New-Jersey. These they hope will meet with the approbation of Congress.

They some time since represented to the honourable the Congress the impossibility of finding clothing for the troops raised in this State, owing to the enemy's possessing their only sea-port, and a variety of other causes, stated in a letter to their Delegates, of the last, praying that orders might be issued to supply them from the Continental store. This request they take the liberty to repeat, otherwise the new levies which they are daily raising must become useless, and be unable to sustain a winter's campaign, which, in all probability, they will be called upon to undergo. As much clothing has been purchased in the Eastern States, they cannot but hope that sufficient supplies to clothe at least two thousand troops may be immediately sent to this place, which, in order to prevent delays, the Convention will undertake to get made up and distributed, if none that is already made can be procured.

I have the honour to be, sir, with the utmost respect, yours, &c.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

---

Colonel DUBOIS's recommendation for Officers, December 11, 1776.

Lieut. Col., Jacobus S. Bruyn. Captain James Stewart.
Major, Jacob Morris.
Aid-Major, Levi Paulding.

Captain, Jacobus Rosekrans.
Lieutenant, Henry Dogg.....Lieutenant, Colonel Dubois.
2d Lieutenant, Samuel English.....Ensign, do.
Ensign, Edward Weaver.....Sergeant, do.
Captain, Wm. J. Smith, Jun.....Swarthout's Regiment.

Captain, Brinton Pain.....Colonel Graham's Regiment.
Lieutenant, Henry Vandenburgh...Lieutenant, Col. Dubois's do.
2d Lieutenant, James Butts.....Lieutenant, Col. Graham's do.
Ensign, Thomas Lewis.

Captain, Amos Hutchinson.....Rikeman's Regiment.
1st Lieutenant, Patten Jackson..... do. do.
2d Lieutenant, Jeremiah Clark.....Ensign, do. do.
Ensign, Henry Vanderburgh.....Sergeant, Colonel Swartwhout.

Captain, Henry Goodwin.....Captain, Colonel Swarthout.
1st Lieut., Thomas J. Brinkle.....2d Lieutenant, Dubois.
2d Lieut., John Formen.....2d do. Dubois.
Ensign, Nathaniel Buchem.

Captain, Philip Dubois.
1st Lieutenant, John Burnet.
2d Lieutenant, Ebenezer Mott.....2d Lieutenant, Col. Graham.
Ensign, Jacobus Sleght.....Sergeant, Colonel Humphrey.

Captain, Thomas Lee.
1st Lieutenant, Henry Polling.....2d Lieutenant, Humphrey.
2d Lieutenant, Samuel Dogg.....2d in Clinton.
Ensign, Arch'd Thompson.....Sergeant.

Dubois.....Paymaster.
John Coates.....Surgeon.
Henry Dubois.....Adjutant.
John McClaghry.....Quartermaster.

LEWIS DUBOIS, Col.

---

DANIEL GRIFFING TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

GENTLEMEN: I understanding that I am neglected in the last appointments by not being duly represented, I would therefore take upon myself to inform your Honours of my proceedings and of my usage, and leave it to your wisdom whether my usage has been agreeable to my deserts.

Gentlemen, I was in seven or eight campaigns the last war, and served from a soldier to a Captain of a company, which offices I sustained two of the last campaigns, and in this war I have served two years in the same capacity, having the command of the first company in the regiment both years; and for every thing that I can tell, have served to acceptance, both to officers and men. The last year I marched with my company to Ticonderoga, being myself so unwell that the General blamed me for exposing my life to the degree that I did; but the cause of my country lay so near my heart, that I was willing to hazard my life and fortune in so glorious a cause. And the last spring, when I took a company, I then was promised my rank; but no such thing being done for me, and my inferiour officers constantly rising above me in rank, hath almost worn out my patience of serving any longer; but although I leave the service, I cannot quit the cause, which I am sure is so just and righteous. I would, therefore, gentlemen, be glad if you would take my cause into your wise consideration; and what you in your wisdom shall think proper to bestow upon me in my proper rank, will be gratefully received and acknowledged by your Honours' most humble servant,

DANIEL GRIFFING.

To the honourable Congress at Fishkill.

---

COLONEL MALCOM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Clerk-Town, December 11th, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour to receive your letter of the 9th upon my way to this place, which, very fortunately, was answered by mine of same date, which I sent under cover to Colonel Hay, and I hope was duly forwarded. Your Honour very justly observes that I am "almost in an enemy's country." I cannot get intelligence beyond the circle of my quarters but what is brought by my scouts. I sent off at three o'clock this morning fifty men and three officers, with design to surprise a Tory guard-house. I hope they'll succeed, and I move downward in about an hour, with the residue of the party. I beg your Honour will send over, as soon as possible, at least two hundred or two hundred and fifty men. The country from Tappan is all in arms. On Sunday they were called together, and had King's arms and ammunition delivered out among them. Whether there is any of the enemy's regular troops below, about Fort Lee and English Neighbourhood, I cannot find out, and I really think my party insufficient to take post at Tappan; but our friends are so distressed thereabouts that I think it an indispensable duty to attempt supporting them. My people are now almost unfit for duty, on account of their clothes, and so much marching as we have had this way hath rendered them barefooted; so that I really do not think they can stay after the middle of the month. If the reinforcement appears to-day, I hope before Monday to run over the Tory ground, and scatter their gangs. They are recruiting from Hackensack, round by Pyramis, to Tappan, and even up towards Ringwood. The owner (one Peck) of the negro fellow I sent up is one of their Captains, and Parcells, the Tory prisoner which accompanied the negro, was one of their guides and spy. I have thought it my duty to remind your Honour of the near approach of my people's being disbanded, that we may be able to effect something before, and that a party may be here to supply our duty; which, be assured, sir, is very necessary, at least for the present.

I have the honour to be, with due respect, your Honour's much obliged and most obedient servant,

W. MALCOM.

The Honourable General Heath.

---

MRS. BRUCE'S PERMIT TO GO TO FISHKILL.

The bearer, Mrs. Jude Bruce, is permitted to go to Fishkill, in order to apply for a pass to go to New-York; and it is requested that she may pass thither unmolested.

By order: JOHN BARCLAY, Chairman.

To all concerned.

Albany, 10th December, 1776.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Saratoga, December 11, 1776, eight o'clock in the evening.

SIR: I am this moment honoured with yours of the 8th instant. I wish it was in my power to send down any considerable body of troops, agreeable to the request of the Committee of Safety. The garrison at Tyconderoga, which I had supposed to consist of twenty-five hundred men, is reduced by sickness, &c., to less than seventeen hundred. None of the other Northern posts are garrisoned by more than a hundred men, and, what is much worse than all, I have every reason to believe that not a man will remain at any of the fortresses after the last of this month, except Dayton's and Burrell's regiments, who are engaged to the 19th of January, and both together amount to only four hundred and thirty effectives; so that what few recruits have been raised in this quarter will be absolutely wanted to the northward, and indeed, unless the Eastern States, to whom I have wrote by express on the 3d instant, send up a body of troops, Tyconderoga will not remain in our possession until spring, as General Carleton will be minutely informed of whatever passes there, and doubtless improve every advantage. My apprehension on this head I have communicated to Congress in a letter of yesterday, which goes by this express, and have requested them to back my application to the Eastern States. In this situation of affairs it would be highly imprudent to draw any men from this communication. I shall, however, order Colonel Nicholson with his corps from Johnstown, where he may be wanted this winter.

I am astonished that General Washington should not be better supported by the States of New-Jersey and Pennsylvania. It appears as if they intended to give up the cause; and I am equally surprised that Congress should have moved until there was the utmost necessity. Such a step cannot fail of giving a most general alarm.

*

I enclose my letter to Congress under flying seal, for the perusal of the Committee. They will see that it contains information which ought not by any means to be known to the enemy. I therefore wish to have it forwarded by a very safe hand, and by such a route as to take away every probability of its being intercepted by them.

I am, sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Honourable Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Vice-President.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, December 11, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Thomas Seymour, Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, To draw an order on the Pay Table for the sum of £674 2*s*. 3½*d*., in favour of Captain Theophilus Stanton, it being the balance due in full settlement of his Pay Rolls and amounts of the galley Shark, whilst in service of the publick under his command.—(Order drawn and delivered Captain Stanton, December 11th, 1776.)

Whereas Ralph Isaacs, of New-Haven, on complaint before the General Assembly of this State, at their session at New-Haven in October last, for acting in divers instances unfriendly to this and the United States, was by said Assembly sentenced to remove to the society of Eastbury, in the town of Glastenbury, there to abide and remain under the direction of the Authority and Selectmen of said town; and application to a special Assembly since held at Hartford, the said Isaacs was indulged the liberty of the town of Glastenbury, or such other place as the Governour and Council of Safety should think proper; and whereas the said Isaacs has made his application to this Board, for special reasons therein given, viz: his being still in a very ill state of health, and his need of the help of his physicians, and has a farm at Branford, from whence he must partly draw his supplies for support, to both which the town of Durham would be much more convenient, praying that he might have liberty of residing in the town of Durham, &c.; whereupon liberty is hereby granted to said Isaacs, when his health will permit, to be removed to the town of Durham instead of Eastbury, and under the same restrictions of the Authority and Selectmen of the town of Durham as was to those of the town of Glastenbury, during the pleasure of the General Assembly or this Board.

Lebanon, December 11th, 1776.—This day was chiefly spent in writing Letters to General Wooster, Governour Cooke, and others, on the publick concerns of the present times, &c.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Lebanon, 11th December, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed are copies of a letter and resolve of the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, for your observation. Agreeable to their request, four battalions are raising here till the 13th of March, designed for the Continental service to the westward. Major-General Wooster is now at Saw-Pitts, with about seven hundred and fifty men from this State, and he will have orders to call in more of the Militia from the western regiments. The utmost exertions appear necessary at this alarming crisis. I need add no further.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

Honourable President Bowdoin.

---

COMMODORE SIR PETER PARKER TO MR. STEPHENS, SECRETARY TO THE ADMIRALTY.

Chatham, Rhode-Island Harbour, December 11, 1776.

SIR: The Commanders-in-Chief in America having thought proper, while the season would admit of it, to employ a considerable number of his Majesty's ships and troops for the purpose of making descents on the Colony of Rhode-Island, and Lord Howe having done me the honour to appoint me to the command by sea, (Lord Shuldham having leave to return to England by the most early conveyance,) I directed Commodore Hotham (agreeable to my instructions from the Vice Admiral) to proceed with his Majesty's frigates the Brune, Mercury, and King-Fisher, and also all the transports with the troops under the command of Lieutenant-General Clinton, (the Grand Duke of Russia excepted, which was judged to be too large,) by the way of the Sound, whilst I proceeded with the great ships, some frigates, and the last-named transport, by Sandy-Hook, to the southward of Long-Island. I sailed the 1st instant, and on the 5th joined Commodore Hotham in the Sound, in Black-Point Bay, a place he had judiciously chosen for the protection of the transports against the violence of a strong N. W. wind, which blew the night before. The 6th I turned down with the fleet, to be as near as possible the place of our destination. At four the next morning the wind sprung up at W. S. W., and by three o'clock in the afternoon the whole fleet came to an anchor off Weaver's Cove, Rhode-Island. The following morning, Captain Caulfield (who had the direction of the flat-boats) landed all the troops without opposition; and I have the pleasure to inform their Lordships, that Rhode-Island, with the isles adjacent, are now in possession of General Clinton.

Captain Wallace, of the Experiment, led the fleet by the west of Narragansett passage. An arrangement was made for covering the transports; but we only passed two works, without guns, and intercepted a brig of one hundred and sixty tons, (which the Experiment took,) laden with pipes and hogshead staves and beeswax. On the first appearance of the fleet, three Rebel privateers, of thirty-four, thirty, and twenty-eight guns, went up from Newport to Providence, where they are now, with several others; and I shall hope to put an effectual stop to any further mischief from the nest of Pirates. General Clinton sends one of his Aids-de-Camp in the Mercury, with his despatches, and I have directed Captain Montague to send his Lieutenant express with mine. Enclosed is a list of the Rebel privateers at Providence, commonly called the Continental fleet.

I am, sir, &c.,

P. PARKER.

---

A List of Rebel Ships and Privateers at PROVIDENCE, commonly called the Continental Fleet.

Warren, Hopkins, and John Hopkins, commanders, thirty-two guns. Columbus, Otney, thirty guns. Providence, Abraham Whipple, eighteen guns. Blarze Castle, Monro, twenty-two guns. Ship Jane Chase, (privateer,) twenty six-pounders. A brig, twelve guns. Sloop Providence, Hoisted Hacker, twelve guns.

P. PARKER.

Chatham, Rhode-Island, December 11, 1776.

---

TO THE PUBLICK.

At the present day there seems to be a very extraordinary dullness and inattention to the present state of our publick affairs; each one seems to be "looking for gain from his quarter," and all striving to be beforehand with each other in raising the price of the necessary articles of consumption among us. The merchants (many of them) first engross the saleable commodities, and then set their price as pleases them. The farmer, finding the rig they run, sets such a price upon his pork, beef, butter, flour, wool, and wood, as he thinks is in proportion to the advanced price demanded by the merchants. Thus they respectively strive to gain the topmost round of the ladder.

By this means those who have the misfortune to be poor are likely to starve, especially those poor families, the heads of which are in the Army—soldiers' wages at this time of day being far from equivalent to the maintenance of a family.

At this rate, what will become of thousands of people who depended on their absent friends in the Army for a subsistence? Must not some measures be adopted by the majesty of the people to prevent the entire death of publick virtue and the progress of internal oppression and extortion?

Shall the trader make the necessity of the buyer his opportunity, and so fleece the indigent and the needy? We have some naturally honest, fair traders, among us, but if they trade at all, they must swim with the stream, and the reason is, that a great number of forestallers and regraters have infested the country, and are the plagues and pests of society.

The same spirit of biting, in some degree, has infected the minds of many of those who are in a capacity of going into the service of their country. Though they have nothing material to urge in excuse of their inactivity, yet stand out and refuse to assist their bleeding country, unless they are allured thereto by offers or actual receipts of enormous sums of money!

In short, one would be ready to think there is a confederacy and resolution among many, not to stir in the common cause unless they can fatten themselves upon the estates of their neighbours.

Is there no love of our country left in such breasts? Can they, unconcerned, see civil war spread havock over their country, and be calm spectators of the ravages of sworn enemies? It seems they can! otherwise they would never make an extraordinary bounty the condition of their defending all that is dear! I have more to say on the subject, and will only now aver, that unless sordid self is laid aside we may never expect the smiles of Heaven!

Worcester, Massachusetts, 11 December, 1776.

---

J. WARREN TO SAMUEL A. OTIS.

Plymouth, December 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I received yours by Mr. Crocker, and have accordingly received the ship you mention. I find her a very pretty, and, I think, good ship, of about two hundred and thirty to two hundred and fifty tons, as near as I can judge. Her rigging looks well, and by the inventory I send herewith, she will appear to be tolerably provided. I wrote you before that she was sold for eight hundred pounds, and that I thought her cheap. I don't know of any hands for her here, though if I could see the old master I should like to engage him, and might then get hands. I have no prospect of a cargo here, unless it be the logwood and mahogany now landing out of another ship which we have condemned, may be bought cheap. I have a prospect of engaging two or three schooners, but the confusion has prevented my completing the business.

I am, in haste, your friend, &c., J. WARREN.

Mr. Samuel Allyne Otis, merchant, Boston.

I have sent to the furnaces about shot they are casting there, and shall know soon what quantity.

---

JAMES BOWDOIN TO MESHECH WEARE.

Boston, December 11, 1776.

SIR: The Council have received your letter of the 10th instant. They have not since the 7th instant received any intelligence with respect to the movement of the enemy's ships at Rhode-Island, excepting a letter from Dartmouth, a town belonging to this State, which informs that the enemy landed about three thousand troops on the morning of the 8th instant, near the town of Newport, in Rhode-Island; but as we have not as yet received any confirmation of this report from Providence, the truth of it is not fully credited.

Enclosed you have a copy of a letter we have just received from General Schuyler, and the resolution passed by the General Assembly of this State in consequence of it.

In the name of the Council. I am, with great respect, sir, your most humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

The Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq., President of the Council of New-Hampshire.

---

PHILIP DALTON AND OTHERS TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

GENTLEMEN: We all return you our most kind thanks for thus liberating us, and we shall so behave as not to give you any reason to repent of this your lenity to us; at the same time we most humbly beg leave to lay before you the situation of Mr. March, a gentleman that has been long confined. He likewise is much surprised at his particular confinement, and should be glad to know if any person has asserted any thing against his character, that he might be able of vindicating himself. And as he is now left alone, hopes you will take it into your consideration. It is very agreeable to him to be under the most strict inspection of the Committee, and as for his conduct hitherto, it will bear the strictest examination; and as to signing his parole, he is very ready so to do.

And we remain, with great submission, your much obliged, humble servants,

PHILIP DALTON, DAVID LAING,
RICH'D FISHER, BASIL COWPER.

To the honourable gentlemen of the Council.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO CAPTAIN MELVIL.

War Office, Boston, 11th December, 1776.

SIR: There is an order of Court directing this Board to appoint a meet person for a temporary Commissary for our Militia about Rhode-Island. Accordingly we have thought fit to appoint you to that business, if consistent with your other duties. We enclose you a copy of the Court's order, and also a schedule of the subsistence, by which your business is delineated. We have sent you this by Mr. Wendell, who, if you need, will readily afford you his assistance.

Should be glad to know what number of men are from this State in the various ports, as well under your command as from the brigade of Suffolk, Bristol, and Plymouth, and what quantity of provision is further necessary. Milk, rice, beer or cider, peas, beans, soap, and vinegar, you had better send round and purchase in the vicinity, and draw upon us for the amount. We have sent forward only bread, beef, and pork.

By Mr. Wendell we remit you £107 16*s*., for which you are to account to the Board. You will let the Board hear from you as soon as possible, and send your return.

By order of the Board:

S. P. SAVAGE, President p. t.

Captain Thomas Melvil.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO CAPTAIN MELVIL.

War Office, 11th December, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mr. James White, is sent forward with a number of cattle for the immediate supply of the troops belonging to the State now in Rhode-Island. He will, we imagine, continue to supply you until you again hear from us. We have sent forward one wagon-load of bread; we have engaged several more wagons, and shall take all possible care to supply you with what is necessary from time to time.

By order of the Board:

S. P. SAVAGE President p. t.

Captain Thomas Melvil.

---

WILLIAM THOMPSON TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Wednesday, December 11th, 1776, 11 o'clock, a. m., Attleborough.

SIR: At sunset yesterday I reached this place, where the carriage with the eighteen casks of powder is just arrived. The other carriages are not come up yet. I know not where our Militia are stationed, therefore I have desired the Selectmen of this town (who have accepted) to receive the ammunition into their care, until I go to Providence, (to which I am this moment setting out,) to inform myself what place or places it may be needful to remove it to if wanted. One of the Selectmen has told me that our Militia have received directions to be supplied out of the Rhode-Island magazines; so perhaps it may not be needful to proceed any further.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

WM. THOMPSON.

Richard Devens, Esq.

---

EMBARGO IN NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

State of New-Hampshire,
In the House of Representatives, December 11th, 1776.

Voted and Resolved, That a general Embargo immediately take place, and continue until the further order of this Court, on all Vessels of every denomination, excepting such as may be fitted out by order of the United States, or either of them, or such as may go coast-wise from one harbour in this State to another in this State, or that may go or come for the purpose of bringing firewood from any harbour in the State of the Massachusetts-Bay to the town of Portsmouth, or such as may be permitted by the General Assembly, or in the recess thereof, by the Committee of Safety in this State.

And that all Vessels departing in violation of the foregoing resolution shall, with their cargo, tackle, and appurtenances, be forfeited to and for the use of this State, and recovered by a libel to be filed for that purpose in the Maritime Court of this State at any time within one year after the offence committed, by the naval or maritime officer of this State. And in case any Vessel departing as aforesaid shall not be seized in one year after her departure, the owner or freighter thereof shall forfeit and pay the value thereof, to be sued for and recovered in the Inferiour Court of Common Pleas in the County where the offence may be committed, by the naval or maritime officer of this State, one-third to his own use, and the other two-thirds to the use of this State.

And in all trials in the Maritime Court, or Inferiour Courts, in consequence of this resolution aforesaid, any party aggrieved may appeal to the Superior Court of Judicature in this State.

Resolved, That the Naval or Maritime Officer of this State be ordered and empowered to see the foregoing resolution put into execution.

Sent up for concurrence.

SAMUEL CUTTS, Speaker pro tem.

In Council, December 12*th*, 1776: Read and concurred.

M. WEARE, President.

---

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, 12th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Just as I had closed my despatches by the Generals Du Coudray and Baron De Kalb, I was most agreeably surprised with a letter from Doctor Franklin, at Nantes, where he arrived after thirty days passage, with two prizes. I hourly expect him here; but knowing of his arrival, I despatch this, with a duplicate, to Havre de Grace, to go by the ships sailing thence; and have only time to inform you that I sent an express instantly to Mr. Lee to join us here without delay; for the news of Mr. Franklin's arrival may occasion his friends being forbid coming from London to France.

Nothing has for a long time occasioned greater speculation than this event, and our friends here are elated beyond measure, as this confirms them you will not negotiate with England; and for me, I will not attempt to express the pleasure I feel on this occasion, as it removes at once difficulties under which I have been constantly in danger of sinking. I may not add, as I shall miss the post; but am, with the most grateful and respectful compliments to the honourable Congress, &c.,

Per order: SILAS DEANE.

The King of Portugal is dead. The Comte Grimaldi, Prime Minister of Spain, has resigned, which will tend to accelerate a rupture in Europe, which I think unavoidable.

---

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO COMMITTEE AT ANNAPOLIS.

In Committee, Baltimore, December 12th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By a letter received by the post from Mr. S. Chase, we are directed immediately to send up to the Head-of-Elk and Charles-Town all the craft that can be got, in order to assist in bringing down all the publick stores, the sick, &c., which were to be removed from Philadelphia; and were requested to transmit you the same requisition, which doubt not you'll readily comply with.

We are, with much respect, gentlemen, your most humble servants. Per order,

JAS. CALHOUN, Chairman.

To the Committee of Observation at Annapolis.

---

CHARLES THOMSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, December 12th, 1776.

SIR: The President still being necessarily engaged with his family, I have the honour to inform you that your letter of yesterday was received and laid before Congress.

I enclose you sundry resolutions passed this day; and am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

CHAS. THOMSON.

His Excellency General Washington, at Head-Quarters.

---

GENERAL PUTNAM TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, 12 December, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of yesterday I have received. All things in this city remain in confusion, for want of men to put them into order. The citizens are generally with you. The Continental recruits are clothing and arming as fast as possible, and are employed on guard and fatigue duty, for which there is scarce a relief. A party are now going to the Jerseys, to bring off all the craft out of the creeks.

The Council of Safety have this day issued orders for every able-bodied man to be enrolled and put to work on throwing up the lines. I have reconnoitred the ground round the city, in company with General Mifflin, and the French Engineers, who are preparing a draft of the lines, which we are to begin to-morrow. The principal stores are removed to Christiana Bridge, by orders from Congress to General Mifflin, who sets out to-morrow by directions from that body, with a Committee of the Assembly and Council of Safety, to endeavour to animate the inhabitants of the Province to come in to your relief, which, through some unhappy circumstances, has been too long delayed.

The Continental frigate, commanded by Captain Biddle, ordered by Congress on a cruise, since the arrival of the Roebuck and two other ships in our bay, is countermanded, and, with four or five privateers, ordered to be stationed in the river.

Major Mifflin remains with me as a deputy in the Quartermaster-General's department.

Enclosed is Colonel Wybert's commission; for want of which I am credibly informed he is confined in the provost guard in New-York, because he refused to enter into the service of the enemy. Captain Herbert and other officers lately released from New-York, mention his hard treatment with great regret.

ISRAEL PUTNAM.

His Excellency General Washington, at Head-Quarters.

---

IN CONGRESS: The Delegates of the United States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia: To Anthonie Felix Wiebert, Esq.

We, reposing especial trust and confidence in your patriotism, valour, conduct, and fidelity, do, by these presents, constitute and appoint you to be an Engineer, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, in the Army of the United States, raised for the defence of American liberty, and for repelling every hostile invasion thereof. You are, therefore, carefully and diligently to discharge the duty of Engineer, by doing and performing all manner of things thereunto belonging. And we do strictly charge and require all officers and soldiers under your command, to be obedient to your orders as Engineer. And you are to observe and follow such orders and directions from time to time as you shall receive from this or a future Congress of the United States, or Committee of Congress for that purpose appointed, or Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the Army of the United States, or any other your superiour officer, according to the rules and discipline of war, in pursuance of the trust reposed in you.

This commission to continue in force until revoked by this or a future Congress.

Dated at Philadelphia, June 24th, 1776.

By order of the Congress:

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

Attest: CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

---

GENERAL ORDERS.

Philadelphia, December 12, 1776.

All Officers of the Continental Army who are now in this city by furlough or order, (those only excepted who are on the recruiting service, or who may have leave of absence in writing from the Commander-in-Chief,) are hereby required to join their respective corps before to-morrow evening.

Officers who have the charge of any sick soldiers, in or near this city, and who are included in the foregoing order, are directed to make returns to Dr. Jonathan Potts, at Mr.

John Biddle's, in Market Street, of the numbers and places of residence of their sick, that proper care may be taken of them.

The late advances of the enemy towards this place oblige the General to request the inhabitants of this city not to appear in the streets after ten o'clock at night, as he has given orders to the piquet-guard to arrest and confine all persons who may be found in the streets after that hour. Physicians and others having essential business abroad after the hour, are directed to call at Head-Quarters for passes.

ISRAEL PUTNAM.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 12th, 1776.

SIR: The Council are obliged to your Excellency for the intelligence of Colonel Humpton, and you may be assured of our strict attention to every object which your Excellency shall think proper to recommend.

The enclosed copy of a letter just received, advising of the appearance of two vessels of war at our capes, we thought it of importance to communicate it to you, and have sent off Lieutenant Butler express therewith. We are sorry to inform you that the want of men is such that we are unable to furnish Colonel Humpton with a proper number to execute your purposes fully; nevertheless we shall detach a party, who may at least answer the purpose of observation.

By order of Council.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your very humble servant,

THOMAS WHARTON, Jun., President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

Lewis, December 11th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Last evening came in and anchored in our road the Roebuck and a sloop-of-war, and remain here still. If they should move upwards, I shall give the general alarm by water and land. When the ships came in, they had the wind to the eastward, and might have fetched up the bay if they were inclined so to do.

Your humble servant, HENRY FISHER.

To the Council of Safety in Philadelphia.

---

MAJOR IRVING TO MAJOR BLAND.

Valley Forge, December 12th, 1776.

SIR: Captain Langsdale, to whom I found it necessary to apply for a halting day, informs me it is out of his power to grant my request, as your orders to him are so positive. I am persuaded, when you are informed that not half my division are arrived, nor, I believe, any of the baggage, you will join me in opinion that a halt of one day is unavoidable; and if we are to pay any attention, either to the health or comfort of the officers as well as men, a second becomes absolutely requisite, to wash linen and other purposes. We have had no halt since we left Sussex, and that was so uncertain, we could not receive any benefit from it. The officers are without their bedding; part of their baggage arrived this morning at North-Wales; there we were to change our wagons, which delayed us until one o'clock, at which hour we marched, and about a mile from our quarters we were stopped by a Provincial guard, by order of Major Correll, who was not to be found till near three o'clock, at which time we were forced to march to this place, a distance of fifteen or sixteen miles. I think it necessary to acquaint you of this matter, to enable you to prevent such disagreeable mistakes in future.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant, &c.

---

COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

December 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The gentlemen of the Light-Horse, who went into the Jersey, have returned safe. They proceeded into the country till they met an intelligent person directly from Trenton, who informed them that General Howe was then with the main body of his Army; that the Flying Army, consisting of the Light-Infantry and Grenadiers, under Lord Cornwallis, still lay at Penny-Town, and there was no appearance of a movement. That they are certainly waiting for boats from Brunswick; that he believed they would attempt a landing in more places than one; that their artillery park has thirty pieces of cannon, all field-pieces. They are collecting horses from all parts of the country. Some movement was intended yesterday morning, but laid aside; but what it was, and why they did not proceed, he does not know.

I sent off a person to Trenton yesterday morning with directions to return by Penny-Town. I told him to go to and get what intelligence he could from him. He is not yet returned. I expect him every moment. I charged him to let know that if he would watch their motions, and could inform us of the time and place of their proposed landing, he should receive a large reward, for which I would be answerable.

I cannot but think their landing will be between this and Trenton, for these reasons:

1. That Lord Cornwallis, with that part of the Army which he will lead, keeps at Penny-Town, within four miles of the river.

2. They will by that means avoid the ferry at Shaminy and the fords, which at this season of the year must be disagreeable to their troops.

3. They will derive much more assistance from the country, which is but too favourable to them.

4. They know our principal artillery is near Trenton, and the passage through the woods to Bristol must be unfavourable to them. On the road above they will find all clear, and the distance nearly the same.

The river is not, nor, I believe, cannot be sufficiently guarded. We must depend upon intelligence of their motions; to obtain which no expense must be spared. If it were possible to fix signals answering to their different movements, that would be most speedy and effectual.

The Militia are crossing over in parties. I fear they do not mean to return. I do not know by whose orders, but if their Colonels have power to give permission, in a little time there will be none left.

I do not like the situation of things at and above Coryell's Ferry; the officers are quite new, and seem to have little sense of the necessity of vigilance. I shall wait a little to see my man return, and then, unless your Excellency think my stay here of service, I will return to Head-Quarters.

I enclose you a proclamation which I got from the other side. I suppose it is one of the same kind General Dickinson saw.

I am, in haste, most respectfully, dear sir, your obedient, humble servant, JOS. REED.

To his Excellency General Washington.

Mr. Moylan desires me to mention to your Excellency the propriety of his meeting General Lee, to inform him of the state of things; and wishes to know your pleasure by the return of the Light-Horse.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 20th.]

Trenton Falls, December the 12th, 1776.

SIR: I last night received the favour of Mr. Thomson's letter, enclosing the proceedings of Congress of the 11th instant. As the publication of their resolve, in my opinion, will not lead to any good end, but, on the contrary, may be attended with some bad consequences, I shall take the liberty to decline inserting it in this day's orders. I am persuaded if the subject is taken up and reconsidered, that Congress will concur with me in sentiment. I doubt not but there are some who have propagated the report; but what if they have? Their remaining in, or leaving Philadelphia, must be governed by circumstances and events. If their departure should become necessary, it will be right; on the other hand, if there should not be a necessity for it, they will remain; and their continuance will show the report to be the production of calumny and falsehood. In a word, sir, I conceive it a matter that may be as well disregarded, and that the removal or staying of Congress depending entirely upon events, should not have been the subject of a resolve.

The intelligence we obtain respecting the movements and situation of the enemy is far from being so certain and satisfactory as I could wish, though every probable means in my power, and that I can devise, are adopted for that purpose. The latest I have received was from Lord Stirling last night. He says that two Grenadiers of the Inniskilleng Regiment, who were taken and brought in by some countrymen, inform that Generals Howe, Cornwallis, Vaughan, &c., with about six thousand of the Flying Army, were at Penny-Town, waiting for pontoons to come up, with which they mean to pass the river near the Blue Mounts, or at Coryel's Ferry; they believe the latter. That the two battalions of Guards were at Brunswick, and the Hessian Grenadiers, Chasseurs, and a regiment or two of British troops, are at Trenton. Captain Miller, of Colonel Hand's regiment, also informs me that a body of the enemy were marching to Burlington on yesterday morning. He had been sent over with a strong scouting party, and at daybreak fell in with their advanced guards, consisting of about four hundred Hessian troops, who fired upon him before they were discovered, but without any loss, and obliged him to retreat with his party and to take boat. The number of the whole he could not ascertain, but they appeared to be considerable. Captain Miller's account is partly confirmed by Commodore Seymour, who reports that four or five hundred of the enemy had entered the town. Upon the whole, there can be no doubt but that Philadelphia is their object, and that they will pass the Delaware as soon as possible. Happy should I be if I could see the means of preventing them. At present I confess I do not. All military writers agree, that it is a work of great difficulty, nay, impracticable, where there is any extent of coast to guard. This is the case with us; and we have to do it with a force small and inconsiderable, and much inferiour to that of the enemy. Perhaps Congress have some hope and prospect of reinforcements. I have no intelligence of the sort, and wish to be informed on the subject. Our little handfull is daily decreasing by sickness and other causes; and without aid, without considerable succours and exertions on the part of the people, what can we reasonably look for or expect, but an event that will be severely felt by the common cause, and that will wound the heart of every virtuous American—the loss of Philadelphia? The subject is disagreeable, but yet it is true. I will leave it, wishing that our situation may become such as to do away the apprehensions which at this time seem to fill the minds of too many, and with too much justice.

By a letter from General Heath, dated at Peekskill, the 8th, I am advised that Lieutenant-Colonel Vose was then there with Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's regiments, amounting in the whole to between five and six hundred men, who were coming this way. He adds, that Generals Gates and Arnold would be at Goshen that night, with Stark's, Poor's, and Read's regiments; but for what purpose he does not mention.

The enclosed extract of a letter, which I received last night, contains intelligence of an agreeable nature. I wish to hear its confirmation by the arrival of the several prizes. That with clothing and arms will be an invaluable acquisition.

I shall be glad to be advised of the mode I am to observe in paying the officers: Whether they are to be allowed to draw the pay lately established, and from what time, and how long they are to be paid under the old establishment? A pay-roll which was presented yesterday being made up for the new, has given rise to these propositions. Upon my objecting to it, I was told that Congress or the Board of War had established the precedent, by paying the Sixth Regiment of Virginia troops, commanded by Colonel Buckner, agreeable to the latter, as they came through Philadelphia.

I have the honour to be, with much esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

---

Extract of a Letter from Boston, dated November 27, 1776.

You may depend upon the following: Got into Dartmouth, a snow with wine, cheese, &c., being the last of eight vessels taken by the Columbus and Alfred in the gut of Canso, bound to Quebeck for the Army. The fleet consisted only of eight. The snow parted with a ship mounting sixteen guns, having on board three thousand stand of arms, and ten thousand suits of clothes for the soldiers, ten days before she got into Dartmouth. The ship was one of the eight. We are longing to hear of her being safe in.

ORDERS TO BRIGADIER-GENERAL DICKINSON.

Sir: You will post your troops at Yardley's Ferry, or somewhere near it. Find out the fording place there, and have a redoubt thrown up immediately. You and General Ewing must divide the ground between Trenton Falls and your post, and establish the proper guards and patroles to watch the enemy's motions. You will spare no pains or expense to obtain intelligence. All promises made or moneys advanced, shall be fully complied with and discharged. Every piece of intelligence worthy notice you obtain, forward it to me by express. Let the troops always have three days' provision cooked beforehand, and keep them together as much as possible, night and day, that they may be in readiness in the shortest notice to make head against the enemy. Should they attempt to land on this side, you will give them all the opposition in your power. Should you be routed from your post, you are to repair to the strong grounds at German-Town, unless you can possibly join the upper or lower division of the Army, which, if practicable, you are to do. Be particularly attentive to the boats and other vessels, and suffer no person to pass over to the Jersey shore without a permit.

Given at Head-Quarters, at Trenton Falls, this 12th day of December, 1776.

Go. Washington.

To Brigadier-General Dickinson, New-Jersey Militia.

---

ORDERS TO BRIGADIER-GENERAL EWING.

Sir: Your brigade is to guard the river Delaware, from the ferry opposite to Borden-Town, till you come within two miles or thereabouts of Yardley's Mill, to which General Dickinson's command will extend.

About one hundred or a hundred and fifty men will, I should think, be sufficient at the post opposite to Borden-Town. The principal part of your force should be as convenient as possible to the fort above Hoops's Mill, in order that if a passage should be attempted at that place you may give the earliest and most spirited opposition; the success of which depending upon good intelligence and the vigilance of your guards and sentries, will induce you to use every means in your power to procure the first, and every endeavour to enforce and encourage the latter.

Between Borden-Town and the mill, and from the mill to the extent of your line above, you are to have intermediate guards and sentries, who are to be as attentive as possible in discovering and informing you of every movement of the enemy: constant patroles are also to pass. In a word, so much depends upon watchfulness, that you cannot possibly be too much upon your guard.

As the fort from the Jersey shore leads on to the upper end of the island adjoining the mill, you are to throw up a breastwork for musketry near the landing-place, and secure your communication with it. Besides this work, another on the height on this side for a field-piece or two should be erected. Be particularly careful of your field-pieces, and do not suffer them to be left, if there is a possibility of avoiding it.

You are, as I before said, to give every possible opposition to the enemy, particularly at crossing the river; but if you should be overpowered, and obliged to retreat, join that part of the troops under my immediate command, or the other under Colonel Cadwalader; in the latter case, the best stand possible is to be made at Neshamini Ferry, bridge, and fords; but you are unable to hold these, then seize the strong grounds in the neighbourhood of German-Town, unless you receive orders to the contrary from me or some other your superiour officer.

Spare no pains nor cost to gain information of the enemy's movements and designs. Whatever sums you pay to obtain this end, I will cheerfully refund. Every piece of information worthy of communication transmit to me without loss of time. A part of Colonel Hart's battalion I have ordered to join your brigade. Keep your troops always supplied with three days' provisions, and prevent them from straggling, that they may be ready at a moment's warning to oppose the enemy in their passage of the river. Be particularly attentive to the boats and other vessels, and suffer no person to pass over to the Jersey shore without a permit.

Given at Head-Quarters, at Trenton Falls, this 12th day of December, 1776.

Go. Washington.

To Brigadier-General Ewing, Pennsylvania Militia.

ORDERS TO COLONEL JOHN CADWALADER.

Sir: You are to post your brigade at and near Bristol. Colonel Nixon's regiment to continue where it is at Dunks's Ferry; but if you find, from reconnoitring the ground or from any movement of the enemy, that any other disposition is necessary, you'll make it accordingly, without waiting to hear from me; but to acquaint me of the alterations, and the reasons for it, as soon as possible. You'll establish the necessary guards, and throw up some little redoubts at Dunks's Ferry, and the different passes in Neshamini. Pay particular attention to Dunks's Ferry, as its not improbable something may be attempted there. Spare no pains or expense to get intelligence of the enemy's motions and intentions. Any promises made or sums advanced shall be fully complied with and discharged. Keep proper patrols going from guard to guard. Every piece of intelligence you obtain worthy notice, send it forward by express. If the enemy attempt a landing on this side, you'll give them what opposition in your power. Should they land between Trenton Falls and Bordentown Ferry, or any where above Bristol, and you find your force quite equal to theirs, give them what opposition you can at Neskamini Ferry and fords; in a word, you are to give them all the opposition you can, without hazarding the loss of your brigade. Keep a good guard over such boats as are not scuttled or rendered unfit for use; keep a good look out for spies; endeavour to magnify your numbers as much as possible; let the troops have always three days' provisions cooked beforehand; endeavour to keep your troops as much together as possible, night and day, that they may be ever in readiness to march upon the shortest notice. You'll consult with the Commodore of the galleys, and endeavour to form such arrangement as will most effectually guard the river. To your directions and prudence I submit any further regulations, and recommend the greatest degree of vigilance.

If you should find yourself unable to defend the passes on the Neshamini, or the enemy should rout you from your post, you are to repair to the strong ground near German-Town, unless you have orders from me or some other General Officer to the contrary.

Be particularly attentive to the boats and vessels, and suffer no person to pass over to the Jerseys without a permit.

Given at Head-Quarters, at Trenton Falls, this 12th day of December, 1776.

Go. Washington.

To Colonel John Cadwalader, Pennsylvania Militia.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, near Trenton Falls, December 12th, 1776.

Dear Sir: Your letter of the 8th instant has come duly to hand, and I am glad to hear that Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's regiments are coming forward to join me; at the same time, I must acknowledge I should have been much better satisfied if they had contained a greater number of men than what you have mentioned. Your sending them on, with all possible expedition, was exceedingly proper; indeed, no time is to be lost, as the necessity of our affairs at present requires an immediate augmentation of our force.

I have observed in your letter you have mentioned the arrival of Generals Gates and Arnold at Goshen, with Patterson's, Stark's, Poor's, and Read's regiments, but have not mentioned whether they are on their march to join us, though I conjecture that this is the case, from the route they have taken. As every thing ought to be attempted for the preservation of Philadelphia, I hope these troops will make all imaginable haste to get here in time to be of service. Our situation at present in this quarter is truly critical. Our Army (as you have been informed) has been greatly diminished. The troops composing the Flying-Camp have mostly gone home, and we have as yet received very little assistance, except from the Philadelphia Militia. The enemy, under the command of Generals Howe, Cornwallis, and Vaughan, amounting to about twelve thousand, are posted at Trenton, Penny-Town, and downwards towards Borden-Town, waiting for an opportunity to cross over. Their views are to get possession of Philadelphia. However, it is very probable they will considerably extend them, unless we can procure a sufficient force to oppose their progress.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Heath.

P. S. With respect to the officers of one State inlisting the soldiers of another, it is not to be allowed of; and as to the convalescents, you will use your own discretion.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO DOCTOR SHIPPEN.

Head-Quarters, near Trenton Falls, December 12th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I am to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated at Bethlehem. the 8th instant. Your proposition of opening Dr. Morgan's stores I entirely approve of, and which you are authorized to do immediately, as it is, in every instance, my ardent wish that the sick be provided for in the most happy and comfortable manner our circumstances will admit of, and I know of no good reason why stores should be preserved for a future day when they are so much wanted at present.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Dr. William Shippen, Jun., D. General F. Hospital.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Trenton Falls, 12th December, 1776.

Sir: I was a few days ago favoured with yours of the 30th of last month, and this is the first opportunity that afforded me the pleasure of answering it. The event has shown that my opinion of General Howe's intentions to make an excursion into Jersey was not ill-founded. Immediately after the reduction of Fort Washington, he threw a body of men, consisting of about six thousand, over the North River, with an intention to surprise the garrison of Fort Lee; but they withdrew before he could accomplish his purpose. Finding the few troops I had with me insufficient to oppose the enemy, and knowing that my numbers would still be diminished by the expiration of the service of the Flying-Camp men from Jersey, Maryland, and Pennsylvania, which would take place on the last day of November, it was determined to retreat as far as Brunswick, where I hoped to receive a reinforcement from the Militia of the State of New-Jersey, sufficient to check the further progress of the enemy. But in this I was cruelly disappointed. The inhabitants of this State, either from fear or disaffection, almost to a man refused to turn out, and I could not bring together above one thousand men; and even on these very little dependence was to be put. My numbers were now reduced to three thousand men, and that of the enemy considerably increased by fresh reinforcements. I had sent General Mifflin down to Philadelphia, to raise what force he could in that Province, and send them on with all speed to my assistance. I fell down myself to Trenton, in order to wait for supplies, hoping that such numbers would come in from Pennsylvania as would enable me to turn upon the enemy, and recover most of the ground which they had gained. General Mifflin was very successful with the Militia of Philadelphia, who turned out in a very spirited manner, and immediately marched about fifteen hundred men up to Trenton; but the remainder of the Province continues in a state of supineness, nor do I see any likelihood of their stirring to save their own capital, which is undoubtedly General Howe's great object.

The Delaware now parts the two armies, and nothing hinders the passage of the enemy but the want of boats, which we have been lucky enough to secure. General Lee is still in the rear of the enemy, with about four thousand men, with whom he is on his march to join me. If he can effect this junction, our Army will again make a respectable appearance, and such as, I hope, will disappoint the enemy in their plan upon Philadelphia. I sent down General Putnam, a few days ago, to begin upon some works for the defence of that city, upon the salvation of which our cause almost depends.

I am informed that the inlistment of the new Army goes on very successfully to the Eastward and Southward; little or nothing can be expected from New-York or Jersey, which are, the far most part, in the hands of the enemy. Every thing must depend upon the regular force we can bring into the field in the spring; for I find, from fatal experience, that Militia serve only to delude us.

As my distance from the Eastern Governments makes me ignorant of their present circumstances, I will not undertake to direct the disposition of the four regiments you have ordered to be raised till the 15th March. I would only recommend, if they can be spared, that they should march and take post at the Highlands, and at the forts upon the North River, as much depends still upon keeping possession of the upper part of that river.

I highly approve of your plan for supplying your new Army with necessaries; our old one has suffered considerably for want of some such wholesome regulations. You may depend upon my giving due countenance to such a commendable scheme.

I am, with great truth and sincerity, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LIEUTENANT-GENERAL HOWE.

Bucks County, December 12th, 1776.

Sir: The enclosed lists, which I have taken the liberty of transmitting, comprehend the officers belonging to your Army who were returned on the 4th, 7th, and 8th current, by Colonel Moylan, in pursuance of my direction. I have affixed against their names such belonging to us as I wish to have released, and who are of the same rank, except in the instance of Colonel Allen. His exchange, on account of his long imprisonment, I have been particularly instructed to propose.

The officers whose enlargement I now require, are chiefly on parole, and of those who were sent from Canada by General Carleton. In respect to the privates, you will be pleased to direct an equal number to be returned out of those who were made prisoners on Long-Island, on the 27th of August, including six volunteers described in one of the lists.

I thank you for the ready attention that was had to the return of Major Bird, and others who came out with him, in exchange for the officers who went from Brunswick; but I must request that upon any future occasions the particular officers to be returned shall be of my appointment, or some person authorized for that purpose.

I cannot conclude this letter, without mentioning the severe treatment of Mons. Wiebert. This gentleman was made prisoner on the 16th ultimo, with the garrison on York Island, and who holds the rank of a Lieutenant-Colonel in our service, I am credibly informed has been committed to the provost guard, and is there suffering all the inconveniences of a gaol. I am persuaded this treatment is without your knowledge, and that the complaint will be removed as soon as it is discovered.

I am, sir, with due respect, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN CONNECTICUT, DATED HEAD-QUARTERS, TRENTON FALLS, DECEMBER 12, 1776.

My last to you was by Captain , of the 5th instant, from Trenton. I was then in hopes my next would have acquainted you we were advancing on the enemy. My reason for presuming this was a speedy arrival of General Lee, with his division of the Army. Our enemy, knowing how far he was in the rear, and our weak situation, made a forced march to come up with us, and were within two miles of Princetown, when Lord Stirling began his retreat with two brigades. Boats from every quarter were collected, and our stores, together with the troops remaining at Trenton, were immediately conveyed over the Delaware. On Sunday morning, having every thing over, we crossed the Delaware, and took our quarters about half a mile from the river. About eleven o'clock the enemy came marching down, with all the pomp of war, in great expectation of getting boats, and immediately pursuing; but of this we took proper care by destroying every boat, shallop, &c., we could lay our hands on. They made forced marches up and down the river, in pursuit of boats, but in vain. This is Thursday; the enemy are much scattered, some in Trenton, directly opposite, from that on their left to Bordentown and Burlington, on the river banks. The enemy are at least twelve thousand strong, determined for Philadelphia, for which purpose they are transporting flat-bottom boats from Brunswick to Trenton by land.

---

CONDUCT OF THE BRITISH AND HESSIAN TROOPS IN NEW-JERSEY.

Bucks County, December 12, 1776.

The progress of the British and Hessian troops through New-Jersey has been attended with such scenes of desolation and outrage as would disgrace the most barbarous nations. Among innumerable other instances, the following are authenticated, in such a manner as leaves no doubt of their truth:

William Smith, of Smith's farm, near Woodbridge, hearing the cries of his daughter, rushed into the room, and found a Hessian officer attempting to ravish her. In an agony of rage and resentment, he instantly killed him, but the officer's party soon came upon him, and he now lies mortally wounded at his ruined, plundered dwelling.

On Monday morning they entered the house of Samuel Stout, Esq., in Hopewell, where they destroyed his deeds, papers, furniture, and effects of every kind, except what they plundered. They took every horse away, left his house and farm in ruins, injuring him to the value of two thousand pounds in less than three hours. Old Mr. Phillips, his neighbour, they pillaged in the same manner, and then cruelly beat him.

On Wednesday last three women came down to the Jersey shore in great distress; a party of the American Army went and brought them off, when it appeared that they all had been very much abused, and the youngest of them, a girl about fifteen years of age, had been ravished that morning by a British officer.

A number of young women in Hopewell, to the amount of sixteen, flying from the ravaging and cruel enemy, took refuge on the mountain near Ralph Hart's; but information being given of their retreat, they were soon brought down into the British camp, where they have been kept ever since.

The fine settlements of Maidenhead and Hopewell are entirely broke up; no age nor sex have been spared; the houses are stripped of every article of furniture, and what is not portable is entirely destroyed. The stock of cattle and sheep are drove off; every article of clothing and house linen seized and carried away. Scarce a soldier in the Army but what has a horse loaded with plunder. Hundreds of families are reduced from comfort and affluence to poverty and ruin, left at this inclement season to wander through woods without house or clothing.

If those scenes of desolation, ruin, and distress, do not rouse and animate every man of spirit to revenge their much-injured countrymen and countrywomen, all virtue, honour, and courage must have left this country, and we deserve all we shall meet with, as there can be no doubt the same scene will be acted in this Province upon our property, and our beloved wives and daughters.

---

FROM AN ENGLISH BOOK OF ORDERS FOUND AT TRENTON.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief orders that all inhabitants that shall be found with arms, not having an officer with them, shall be immediately taken and hung up.

From another book found at Princeton:

Head-Quarters, Trenton, December 12th, 1776.

Small straggling parties not dressed like soldiers, and without officers, not being admissible in war, who presumes to molest or fire upon soldiers or peaceable inhabitants of the country, will be immediately hanged without trial, as assassins.

---

LORD STIRLING TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Blue Mounts, December 12, 1776.

Dear Sir: The intelligence which the two Grenadiers brought, is in many things confirmed; first, by the extensive fires of their encampment, which appeared last night to be about Penny-Town; and other intelligence from the other side, particularly by one person who has passed through all their encampment, and came out of Trenton about eleven o'clock yesterday, who says that the Flying Army is in and about Penny-Town, under the command of Lord Cornwallis. That General Howe is at Trentown, with some British and some Hessian troops, and thirty pieces of cannon, placed at the church; that there was to have been some movement, he understood, downward yesterday morning; why it was delayed he knows not, but they remained quiet when he came away. That there was a very long cannonade heard yesterday while he was on the road, supposed to be at or near Brunswick.

I have sent off one piece of cannon to Colonel Weeden, and as the three regiments here now lie compact and well covered with boards, and nearly centrical to Yardly's and to Corriel's ferries, I believe it best to let them be in their present situation, till some movement of the enemy makes it necessary to alter it.

I have this moment seen the two persons who sent me the two Grenadiers yesterday evening; they have reconnoitred the enemy, and conversed with several of their neighbours, who have been in every part of the Flying-Camp, which they say is scattered for two or three miles round Penny-Town in the utmost security. I shall therefore send Captain Taylor over this evening with about thirty men, to try his hand among them.

If our troops were not so much worn out, I would propose to your Excellency that about twelve hundred good men should cross over at Tinicum, and come down upon them suddenly from the north. If General Lee is in their rear this would greatly coöperate with him, and tend to disconcert their measures much. I would gladly try the experiment.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

STIRLING.

I cannot find that any of the persons who have been among them know any thing of their pontoons, or that they are building any boats.

---

REV. JAMES CALDWELL TO GENERAL LEE.

Turkey, December 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I thank you for your favour from Baskenridge of this morning, and intended to do myself the honour to wait upon you, and set out for that purpose, but found my horse would not perform the journey with sufficient expedition, and cannot procure another here. And indeed I find this the best place to observe the enemy's motions. From sundry persons who have been upon the road between Brunswick and Princeton, I learn the Army has very generally marched forward; indeed, all except guards of the several posts. Yesterday they sent a reinforcement to Elizabethtown from Amboy, of near one thousand. Some say the whole at Elizabethtown are about one thousand; others say fifteen hundred. They are carrying off the hay from Elizabethtown to New-York. At New-York there are but about five hundred men left at Fort Lee; it is said a battalion of the Scotch. At Hackensack, and from thence to Elizabethtown, none. I believe Elizabethtown is their strongest post, as they were afraid of our Militia, who have taken off many of the most active Tories, made some prisoners, and among others, shot their English Foragemaster, so that he is mortally or very illy wounded. A company of our Militia went last night to Woodbridge, and brought off the drove of stock the enemy had collected there, consisting of about four hundred cattle and two hundred sheep. Most of those cattle are only fit for stock. Colonel Ford begs your directions what to do with them. I advised that those not fit to kill should be sold, recording the marks, that Whig owners might receive the money for which they sell respectively. It will cost more than the value of them to keep them in a flock. They are driven up the country to be out of the enemy's way, and the Colonel will follow your directions as to the disposition of them.

At a council of the Field Officers this morning, a majority of them advised to remove the brigade of Militia back again to Chatham, for which they assigned these reasons: Many of the Militia, rather fond of plunder and adventure, kept a continual scouting, which kept out so many detached parties that the body was weakened; and the enemy being now stronger at Elizabethtown than they are, they thought they would better serve the cause by lying at Chatham till the expected army approaches for their support.

Colonel Ford also desires your directions with respect to the arms, horses, or other property taken with any of the enemy. The parties who take them think themselves entitled to these things.

I enclose you some examinations. Colonel Ford thinks, from the circumstances of the wagons taken up at Brunswick to go empty to Trenton, that the enemy intended to retreat. I hope their retreat will be guarded against. I have very much suspected as soon as our whole Army is over the river they will return to reduce this Province, leaving only part of their Army at the river to prevent ours returning, till they have plundered us at their pleasure.

With every kind wish for your prosperity, dear sir, your unfeigned friend and most obedient and humble servant,

JAMES CALDWELL.

The Honourable General Lee.

P. S. I have sent you Jacob Vincent and two or three more Light-Horse, in whom you can depend.

---

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Van Kemp's, fifteen miles from Sussex Court-House, 12 December, 1776.

SIR: In obedience to General Schuyler's commands, I left Albany the 2d instant, with Stark's, Poor's, Read's, and Paterson's regiments, Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's having sailed from thence the day before; Bedel's remaining to embark the next day, as sloops were not then ready to receive them. Upon my arrival at Esopus, I sent Brigade-Major Stoddard to New-Windsor, to order Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's regiments to join me upon the march by the way of Goshen; I thereupon marched from Esopus, and sent my Aid-de-Camp, Major Peirce, to Goshen, to direct the march of those regiments. He met me yesterday, and acquainted me that Major-General Lee had sent an order to those regiments to join him by a prescribed route; I therefore pursued my march by this route with the four other regiments, and hope to rendezvous them all the day after to-morrow at Sussex Court-House. I send the bearer, Brigade-Major Wilkinson, for your Excellency's orders in respect to the route you would have me take; at present, I propose marching by that delivered to Major Wilkinson.

I shall strictly observe the directions contained in Mr. Secretary Harrison's letter to Major-General Schuyler, of the 26th ultimo, a copy of which is now before me.

There was a deep snow last night at this place; it is now mild, and promises rain; in that case we shall be able to go in boats down the Delaware, which will save much time and fatigue.

With every ardent wish for your Excellency's prosperity, I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL GATES TO THE OFFICERS COMMANDING GREATON'S, BOND'S, AND PORTER'S REGIMENTS.

Esopus, December 8th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: On receiving this by Major Peirce, the General's Aid-de-Camp, you are immediately to continue your march from Goshen, or whatever place you shall receive this at, for the Minisink, on Delaware, where you will be joined by the troops from this place, and will wait the General's arrival.

By the General's Command:

JOHN TRUMBULL, D. A. General.

To the Officers commanding Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's Regiments.

---

MAJOR WILKINSON TO GENERAL GATES.

Sussex Court-House, 12 December, 1776.

SIR: The information of a person who has escaped from the enemy, corroborated by the report of an inhabitant of Gotian, just from Philadelphia, obliges me to inform you that the enemy are arrived at Trent-Town on Saturday or Sunday last, and that General Washington was on the opposite shore. The numbers of either Army I have not been able to collect, and am in equal uncertainty respecting General Lee's present situation or force. The latter informant left Philadelphia on Monday morning last, (the Congress sitting, the city in great confusion,) and crossed the Delaware about forty miles distance, though I can't learn how far above Trent-Town. Pursuant to your orders, I shall proceed to General Washington with all possible speed, by the most convenient route, and making every necessary precaution, and flatter myself I shall be able to meet you at Bethlehem.

*

I am, sir, with every respect, your much obliged, most obedient, humble servant,

JAS. WILKINSON.

N. B. The troops who have marched for this place I have ordered to stop. I believe it will be as convenient for them to pass from this to Bethlehem or East-Town as by any other route.

---

ISAAC NICOLL TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Peekskill, 12th December, 1776.

SIR: I received two letters to-day from Convention, one for General Heath and one for General McDougall, which I have sent forward to them, they having both passed to the west side of the river, together with the principal part of troops under their command, except three regiments of General George Clinton's; so that we have but a very few men at this station. General Heath left the command with me until he returns, which expect will be in a few days. No news material.

I am, in haste, your most obedient, humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL.

To John McKesson, Esq.

---

HENDRICK WYCKOFF TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fishkill, December 12th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Being appointed some time ago to act as Commissary for the New-Hampshire troops and artificers, the Hampshire troops being now discharged; and whereas a number of troops have here arrived these two days past, some of them artificers, the best chiefly invalids out of different brigades and out of different regiments and companies, as their returns will show, which I will produce whenever required, these troops are all applying to me for provisions, and I would willingly act safe. Thought proper to petition to your honourable House to know whether I must supply them all at the usual rations; and if they must be supplied here, how I shall get some salt for them to season their fresh provision with, understanding the salt at Mr. Week's will not be more than enough for the artificers.

Begging further to know whether it will be your pleasure to continue me longer in this business, the reason why, because that if I am certain to continue any longer, it would be high time for me to buy up a number of fat cattle, which if I do now neglect, almost all the cattle among us will be engaged, so that I shall be at a nonplus for beef.

And lastly, I must beg leave to acquaint your honourable House, that whereas I have not as yet drawn any cash from Convention, and have expended all my ready money which I had with me, am now out of cash. Have applied to Major Schenck, who tells me that he cannot pay out any of the money he has in hand to me, unless it be by an order from your honourable House. Must therefore beg of your honourable House, if I am continued, for an order to draw some money. In hearing your humble petitioner's request, will greatly oblige and ever be acknowledged, by your most humble and obedient servant,

HEND'K WYCKOFF.

To the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

MAJOR LEDYARD TO THE COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Fishkill, December 12th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take the liberty to recommend Lieutenant Theodosius Fowler to your notice for an appointment in the new arrangement. Having served a twelvemonth's campaign with him in late Colonel McDougall's regiment, I know his merit as a good active officer, and a sincere friend to his country, standing firm against all the persuasions of his father and unfriendly relations. Captain Walker, I understand, wants a First Lieutenant, who would be well suited with Mr. Fowler.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

BENJA. LEDYARD,
Major of the Fourth N. Y. Regiment.

The respectable the Committee of Arrangement for the State of New-York.

---

SAMUEL TUDER TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Poughkeepsie, December 12th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your resolve of 5th instant, also yours of yesterday by Mr. Degrushe, we have this moment received, and note the contents. We shall use our best endeavour to get the cannon and other necessary stores. As to the cables and anchors ordered to General Clinton, we would acquaint you that in a few hours after we received your orders, we put on board a sloop four anchors and two cables, which was all we had on board the ships that would answer; and the reason they are not down is, that Mr. Livingston thought it best for the sloops to go down with a raft of timber for the docks which were then ready, by which we imagine the sloop must be detained.

We should have sent the other two cables, which we must have taken from the privateer sloops, but could not then be spared, as they were going up to Esopus with the ships, and it would not do to leave them at single anchor.

As soon as our sloop returns, (which is all the boat we have,) we shall send the other two cables down. The ship Congress got into Esopus creek yesterday, and we have reason to think the ship General Montgomery has got in this day, as the tide has been much higher to-day than it has been for some time past.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

SAM'L TUDER.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

HENRY SHERBURNE TO GENERAL GATES.

Esopus, December 12, 1776.

SIR: Captain Paterson arrived here, with about two-thirds of the men that were put on board the river sloop, last evening; the remainder of them are coming in this morning. The vessel proving very leaky and without a pilot, they were obliged to land at the distance of forty miles from this place, and march the men down here by land, which has greatly fatigued them. I have provided the detachment with three days' provision, and design they shall march for the Minnisinks to-morrow morning, by which am in hopes they will be sufficiently refreshed.

By a gentleman from Skeensborough am told that Bedel's regiment has gone home, he having met a considerable number of them near Wood creek. This information I think probable, as I have not heard nor seen any thing of them since you left this place, more than this gentleman informs me. The same person further adds, that there was not any troops in Albany when he passed through, which is now four days since.

I shall leave no stone unturned to expedite the forwarding those troops now here with the greatest despatch.

I am, with respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

HY. SHERBURNE.

Major-General Gates.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, of Connecticut, December 12th, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, William Williams, William Hillhouse, Thomas Seymour, Benjamin Huntington, Nathaniel Wales, Esquires.

William Howard is appointed Lieutenant and Commander of a company of Militia and others, in the Second Society in Windham, to march into the State of Rhode-Island for the present expedition, and to be under the Commander-in-Chief. A commission is granted, December 12th, 1776.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, December 12th, 1776.

SIR: Among the variety and important objects which I have no doubt every moment press on your mind and command your attention, I beg leave to suggest to you the distress of our prisoners in New-York, which, upon every principle of humanity as well as policy, demands the most speedy method to be come into and accomplished for their relief.

Major Wells, of one of the battalions of this State, among the prisoners in New-York, is now suffered, on his parole, to come from thence into this State to solicit relief for the prisoners there. By him I understand Colonel Miles is permitted to go to Philadelphia on the same errand. The representation made to us by Major Wells is, that we have in New-York between three and four thousand prisoners, the privates all close confined, upon about half allowance; great number of them almost naked; their confinement is so close and crowded that they have scarce room to move or lie down, the air stagnate and corrupt; numbers dying daily, arising principally from their close confinement. Applications have been made to General Howe for relief, but in vain. He expresses himself with great humanity, but yet the number is so great, and not having a country to dispose them in, as we have for our prisoners, and giving enlargement in New-York would be attended with great hazard, he most heartily wishes for an exchange; and that it does not lie at his door that it is not accomplished before this time; he has been both ready and willing, but the delay is on our part; besides, he is willing to exchange officer for officer of equal rank, private for private; and when that is done, to release the remainder to return to their homes on their parole. We entertain not the least doubt of your great humanity, and that the relief of these unhappy sufferers lies near your heart. We are also in some measure sensible of the amazing weight and burthen that has, especially for some months past, lain upon you; and also of the disadvantages you have been under to accomplish this exchange. We are convinced of your inclination, by the early attention you have paid to that subject, manifested by your letter to me, to make the necessary preparations therefor; but, sir, you will suffer me to give one hint more to your Excellency, to show the necessity of speedily attending to this matter if possible, that is, the privates suffer so amazingly, their lives in danger every moment, though they abhor the thought, and it is only despair drives them to it—as "skin for skin; all a man has he will give for his life"—if they cannot soon be relieved, they must yield to the offer made to them, and inlist themselves into the King's service. Necessity will soon compel them. About three hundred have already yielded to the temptation. The effect a delay of this matter has upon the present inlistments for the new Army, will not escape your consideration.

I thought it my duty to acquaint your Excellency with these matters, and have no doubt you will attend to every object according to its weight and merit. It may be convenient to send the prisoners in this State, from the several towns where they are kept, under guard of the troops of our four new-raised battalions, who are to continue in service till the 15th of March next. Parties from those several towns going on to their service may very conveniently do it, and the prisoners going in such small parties will not be dangerous, and it may be so concerted that they arrive at the place appointed near at the same time.

I have sent forward Mr. Alden with this, who will wait on you for your answer, and advice for my future conduct herein, with such other intelligence as you may think convenient to transmit me.

I have to advise you that the enemy seem to be spreading in every quarter. A few days since about ten of their ships of war, with about eighty transports, lay off New-London harbour; since which they have proceeded to Rhode-Island and up Providence bay, having from five, and some say to eight thousand land forces with them. An attack upon Providence is every day expected. We are alarmed for our neighbours and the near approach of the enemy. Are sending forward all the force we can from our Militia nearest that State for their relief, and at the same time we are called upon for an additional force westward, on the borders of New-York, as by the removal of so great a part of the Continental forces west of Hudson's river, leaves us in a great measure naked and defenceless on this side.

Hope to hear your Excellency is supported by a numerous accession to your Army, from Pennsylvania and the Jerseys; and that God Almighty may yet so prosper our arms as to give a check to the rapid progress of the enemy, and that he will yet crown this year with victory over the enemies, and salvation to his oppressed people.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JON'TH. TRUMBULL.

To his Excellency George Washington, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United States, New-Jersey.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, December 12th, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 3d instant was received not till this day. The approaching expiration of the term of the troops at the garrison of Ticonderoga, Fort George, and under the circumstances you mention, and the danger of losing these important posts, is truly alarming and demands our first attention. The calls for aid from this, in the various threatened quarters, eastward as well as westward, of which you must by this have been made sensible, and for which we are making provision, will prevent our doing all that could be otherwise wished or expected for the Northern department. Every reasonable exertion, however, shall be made. I have therefore this moment issued the most pressing orders to the officers expected to go in the Northern service, to engage and fill up their companies, and move them forward in small parties. We shall rely upon your chest for the premiums and encouragements offered by Congress to induce the inlistments. This will be a most essential point for the speedy effecting the desired purpose, and your earliest advice upon the subject will be material. For if the money cannot come from you, don't know when or how it will be had from Congress in the present situation of affairs.

Some of the officers for the new Army are now at Ticonderoga, and am in hopes they may engage some men on the spot, especially if the money could be had. Am fully sensible of the great advantages the enemy have in gaining intelligence from your quarter, and the improvement General Carleton will make of our every weakness.

A large fleet of the enemy have lately been upon our coast, consisting of more than one hundred sail, which much alarmed us. They are now at Newport, and actually taken possession of that island, with some say five, others eight thousand troops. The town of Providence is much threatened and the ships tending that way. We are, as you must reasonably think, sending troops to their relief.

I wish you to find every expedient for manning the posts at Ticonderoga and Mount Independence. Permit me to mention Colonel Elmore's regiment. I know not yet its destination. Also, may not Colonel Warner be able to raise a regiment on the Grants, of good and faithful men, for the purpose? May not some of the Militia in Albany city and County be a temporary relief?

This express is to go forward to Ticonderoga, with letters to some of our officers there, to be recruiting.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Lebanon, December 12th, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 8th instant by express last evening, acquainting us with the critical situation of our Army at the westward, the advantage which might arise by reinforcing Generals Lee and Gates in the Jerseys, your efforts on this occasion, and the necessity of further and speedy aid from this and the other New England States, &c. We are of opinion with you, that the enemy's fleet sailing up the Sound is designed to draw off our attention from our western Army, and to prevent our throwing in our force that way; and it is impossible to prevent its effect in some measure. That fleet, consisting of eight or ten capital ships of war, and eighty or ninety transports, first came to anchor off New-London; which gave us the alarm, and obliged us to rally our Militia and send them forward to that place. The fleet, after a day or two, came to sail, and steered their course for Newport, and with their land forces, to the amount of five, and some say eight thousand, took possession of that island, part of the fleet pushing up the bay towards Providence. This gave a most sensible alarm to Providence, a considerable part of the Continental fleet, with the two new frigates, a large number of privateers and prize ships, being in that port; the town full of the wealth of the enemy, which had been taken from them, whereby their apprehensions were greatly raised, that the design of the enemy was to attack that place. We were immediately earnestly called upon for aid, as were the Massachusetts, who have sundry valuable towns lying on the eastern side of that bay. But we learn that the Massachusetts are drafting every fourth man to send westward to supply the deficiency of their proportion in the new Army. We have ordered, and are raising, four battalions for the same purpose, and have directed their march in parties as they are raised, as soon as twenty are inlisted in a company. We are in great hopes so many of the troops raising in this and the Massachusetts States will soon arrive, as to be a guard and check against the enemy on the eastern part of Hudson's river; and should hope some part of General Heath's division might be sent forward to reinforce Generals Lee and Gates; but that must submit.

We immediately sent off an express with a copy of yours to the Massachusetts. Hope the advanced season will soon put a stop to the further progress of the enemy.

Thank you for your kind offer of assistance in purchasing or forwarding provisions. Shall give notice when there is occasion.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JON'TH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esquire, President of the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Lebanon, December 12th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of your application for that purpose, I encouraged the Committees in the seaport towns within this State to give all possible assistance in the time of it to the good people on Long-Island, in the removal of their families and effects here for a shelter from the enemy. That in pursuance hereof, as well as from other laudable motives and a concern for their suffering brethren in your State, the Committees exerted themselves much in their favour and at considerable expense.

An account of what was done from the port of New-London now enclose you, in order for your allowance and reimbursement. Among the particular undertakers employed by the Committee who have signed the account, and are gentlemen of character, you'll find a certain John Field, the bearer of this, amount of his bill being forty-four pounds five shillings, lawful money. As he is a native of New-Jersey, and in want of his pay, have referred him to your Board for satisfaction. The rest of the undertakers being generally in want of their dues, you will please point out in what method and when they may apply. The other bills of expense in the same service, in other parts, will be forwarded you, and have no doubt of your proper attention to the whole. Have also enclosed you a second account of John Vails, come to hand since the first, for the same service.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JON'TH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esquire, President of the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

New-London, December 13, 1776.

The fleet of men-of-war and transports from New-York came to sail on Friday morning, the wind easterly and small. At about twelve o'clock they came abreast of the harbour, making a very formidable appearance, and for the space of half an hour it was apprehended were bound in; but after that they stood out, and that night anchored the south side of Fisher's Island, and the next night came to near Rhode-Island; since which we learn they have landed about eight thousand men at Newport, and taken possession of that town.

It is reported that about forty sail more of transports, &c., came through Hell-Gate a few days ago, bound this way, it is probable to join the above fleet.

Last Monday, Captain Thomas Chester arrived here from Demerara, with a cargo of rum. The day before he got in he was chased by a British frigate, but his vessel being a good sailer got clear.

Last Wednesday, three British frigates were seen in the offing, and yesterday one appeared off Goshell reef.

---

EBENEZER WILLIAMS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Pomfret, December 12th, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: Your several orders of the 5th, 7th, and 8th instant, I have received and executed as far as was in my power. My infirm state of health rendered it impossible for me to enjoy the honour of leading out my regiment in the present campaign. The prospect at present is, that I shall not be further serviceable in the military department. While I was able, I ever rejoiced to serve my country, but esteeming it highly proper and reasonable that those who are called out into action should receive the honour and the reward due to their services, I would by no means stand in the way of others. But after properly acknowledging the honour conferred on me by the authority of the State, and expressing my gratitude for it, I crave leave to resign my commission into more suitable hands. To such I could wish it might be given; and am, sir, with proper respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

EBENEZER WILLIAMS.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief in and over the State of Connecticut.

---

WILLIAM THOMPSON TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Attleborough, December 12, 1776, Thursday Evening.

SIR: Yesterday, after taking necessary measures for safely depositing the ammunition that arrived here from Stoughton, and that which was expected from Watertown, (which is since arrived,) I rode forward to Providence, where I found only a regiment of our Militia, of about two hundred and thirty men, just arrived from Uxbridge and that neighbourhood, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Nathan Tyler, who had taken up present quarters in the College, and were waiting for further orders. Him I informed of my charge, and desired him to inform all other officers he could. From thence after dark I rode to Rehoboth, and this morning to Warren, next town to Bristol, where I saw Brigadier-General Godfrey, and acquainted him of my business. He has desired me to send forward the ammunition to Rehoboth Green, that being, in his judgment, the most suitable place to accommodate all the Militia, who are posted in different places. I am now returned, and have applied for carriages to remove it thither, and expect they will take it on to-morrow morning if fair weather. This supply will be welcome, for I understand numbers are deficient. I shall conform to the letter of my instructions as near as possible, but in any instances wherein that may be impracticable, I shall endeavour to fulfill the spirit of them, by delivering to regiments or detachments agreeable to applications I may have from commanding officers, informing them of the obligations they will be under to return or account for whatever ammunition shall not be necessarily expended in the service. In this I hope for your approbation, and beg you would write me about it as soon as possible. A letter directed to be left at Mr. James Daggett's house, in Rehoboth, will be duly forwarded to, sir, your humble servant,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

Richard Devens, Esq., Commissary-General.

Friday, eleven o'clock.—The carts are loading, and will go on immediately to Rehoboth.

---

SILAS DEANE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Paris, December 13th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am indebted for two letters, and the same cause of my neglect, viz: a hurry of business still subsisting, I cannot make amends by a long letter in this, but the substance will be agreeable, which is, that Dr. Franklin is arrived at Nantes, and I expect him at Paris to-morrow. He left Philadelphia the last of October, and every thing was favourable in America. On his passage the ship he was in made two prizes on this coast. I received a letter from my venerable friend on his landing, who was in high spirits and good health. Here is the hero, and philosopher, and patriot, all united in this celebrated American, who, at the age of seventy-four, risks all dangers for his country. I know your heart rejoices with me on this occasion.

I am, with respect, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN AT BORDEAUX, DATED DECEMBER 13, 1776.

Doctor Franklin arrived at Nantz, in France, on the 7th instant, in a ship of sixteen guns, and has gone to Paris. His business, which must certainly be very important, is matter of much speculation among the French. I am very glad he has got here safe, as his superiour abilities and experience will probably at this juncture be of the greatest advantage to America. The ship brought in two prizes with her, taken in the bay. The French are now, and have been for four months past, preparing both by sea and land. Their marine force is at this day very formidable, and the Spaniards are not much behind them. A war with Spain and Portugal is thought to be unavoidable; should that take place, France and England will necessarily be engaged in it. The arrival of Dr. Franklin will probably hasten it. It is very confidently reported, and said to come from good authority, that Russia has engaged to furnish England with twenty thousand men for the American service in the spring. France and Spain will not, I think, see this, and remain idle spectators. The Dutch, who are attached to their interest, seem very generally disposed to retard and clog the Americans, both in their publick and private business, as much as they can. Lord Chatham is said to be very near his end. We have not yet heard of the fate of King's Bridge. The French and Spaniards will greatly rejoice to hear of a decisive action in favour of America. Hope they will soon have that pleasure. Hearing that lead was much wanted in America, induced me to purchase so large a quantity; should there be occasion for it, I hope it will do good execution.

---

CAPTAIN WICKES TO THE COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Quiberoon Bay, 13th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take this opportunity to inform you of my safe arrival in twenty-nine days, as from Cape Henlopen, at Quiberoon Bay, where I landed Doctor Franklin and his suite in good health. He has been very kindly received in France, as I am informed, but had no letter from him as yet, but expect one every hour.

We have taken two prizes on our passage, both small brigs, one from Bordeaux, loaded with fifteen thousand pipe and barrel staves, thirty-five hogsheads claret, bound for Cork; the other from Rochefort, loaded with four thousand bushels flax-seed and sixty-three hogsheads Cogniack brandy, bound for Hull. I have no doubt but we shall be allowed to sell our prizes here, as there has been ten or a dozen merchants on board to purchase the two prizes now in my possession.

We have been detained here this fifteen days, waiting a wind to proceed to Nantes, and I am in hopes of getting there soon, where I shall be able to give you a more full and satisfactory account of my reception and proceeding. I am informed that there is now sixteen sail line-of-battle ships and ten frigates manned and fitted at Brest, ready for sea, but cannot learn their destination. They also inform me they are now fitting a large fleet of ships in England, but don't hear of any more soldiers raising for the American service. I can form no idea yet of my future proceedings, as I shall proceed according to the information I may hereafter receive; but shall take particular care to give the earliest information of every thing in my power. It is reported that Captain Anderson is arrived at Nantz, in the ship Success, from Philadelphia. Our people is all well and in good spirits.

From, gentlemen, your most obliged, humble servant,

LAMB'T WICKES.

To the honourable Committee of Secret Correspondence at Philadelphia.

---

ROBERT CHRISTIE, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Nottingham Furnace, 13th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I did myself the honour of writing to your President the 10th instant, acquainting him that on the night of the 4th of this month, myself and a number of the inhabitants of Baltimore have been drove from their houses by a mob. I mentioned all the circumstances of the transaction so fully then, that it is useless to say any thing more on the subject now. I have every reason to believe that none of us can return again to Baltimore with any prospect of safety to our persons until times alter. For my own part, I am so fully convinced of this, that I am determined to retire into some remote corner of the Province, at least for some little time. By my absence the publick business of the County will be thrown into some confusion, especially the collection; not above one fourth of which is yet made, and consequently many of the publick creditors are unpaid. If the Council of Safety think proper that I should finish the collection, I propose putting it into the hands of Mr. Moses Galloway, who is a person of property and unexceptionable character; and I shall give him directions to apply every shilling he collects to the payment of the County debts, and I am content to wait for my own claim until the others are paid. Or if you think proper to take it out of my hands, I am ready to settle an account with the County; and if, after deducting my own claims, which have been levied by the Court, there appears any balance due by me, I am ready to pay it to any person you direct. The last mode will be most agreeable to me. I apprehend it will be necessary to publish some resolve on the subject, as too many of the people are ready to catch at any excuse, and will not pay without something of this sort is done.

It has been said by some of my enemies since my departure, that I am considerably indebted to the County. The contrary will appear to be the case upon examination; for I am considerably in advance for 1775; and although I cannot exactly say how the account stands for the present year, yet from the smallness of the collection, I am pretty confident, that after deducting my own claims, which were allowed at the Levy Court, little or nothing remains in my hands; which, as I said before, I am able and willing to pay.

It is necessary something should be speedily done in this affair. And as you are much better judges of the mode than I can pretend to be, I shall say nothing further on the subject.

Please to favour me with an answer by Mr. Galloway; and believe me, with much respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROB'T CHRISTIE, JUN.

The honourable the Council of Safety at Annapolis.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read, December 20, 1776: Referred to Mr. R. H. Lee, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Harrison, and Mr. S. Adams.]

Philadelphia, December 13, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed letter from the General was delivered to me open by Mr. Walton, who judged it prudent to examine the contents before it went forward, and in which I concur with him, as it was probable some service might result to this place from their being known; and I flatter myself that essential service will be rendered to the Continent thereby. As soon as I saw this authentick account of the enemy's design to cross Delaware above the falls, I waited on General Putnam and proposed that the frigate Randolph and sloop Hornet should be sent to sea immediately, as it was plain to me they would be of no use here, and I had received certain advice that there was not any British men-of-war in our bay. The General very readily consented; and I have this afternoon given Captain Biddle and Captain Nicholson their instructions, signed by me on behalf of the Marine Committee. They will depart early in the morning, and I entertain the most sanguine hopes of their escape. The Hornet goes for Carolina with the shot; but part of the flour was landed previous to this new determination. I have presumed to go one step farther in this Navy business, and flatter myself I shall be entitled to the approbation of Congress, whether I meet it or not, for my intentions are good, and I procure myself much trouble with the sole view of serving the cause: On viewing the frigate Delaware, I thought it possible to get her away before General Howe could get here. I have therefore set about it stoutly. A number of people, scarce as they now are here, are at work on her. The sails will be bent, anchors to the bows, stores on board, and every thing in some forwardness to-morrow. I have sent an express to the General, informing him of my design, and requesting him to send down Captain Alexander, his officers, and such seamen as are willing to go with him; and if it is possible to get her away I shall order her to Baltimore, under your own care. If I fail in this attempt you only add a little expense of labour to the loss, for the ship may in that case be destroyed. However, if General Howe will but give me a few days more, and Lord Howe keep away his myrmidons, I shall have the pleasure to despatch the Randolph, Hornet, Delaware, Security, Fly, and a large ship laden with tobacco; all which you may deem as saved from the flames. The removal of Congress has left me much other business. I am paying your debts, at least those of the Marine Committee, and directing fifty necessary things to be done; and, with General Howe's permission, shall be glad to finish the business you would wish to have done here. But if Mr. Howe advances, I shall push off, and leave him to finish the business in his own way.

I am told there is a letter in town that mentions General Clinton's arrival at Rhode-Island, and that he took peaceable possession of it, as all the inhabitants to a man abandoned the island; but tell Mr. Ellery I have not seen this letter, nor will I vouch for its authenticity.

You will please to receive enclosed some pleasing letters for the Marine Committee; and with perfect esteem and respect, I remain, sir, yours and the Congress's most obedient and most humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, 13th December, 1776.

SIR: At the particular desire of General Mifflin, we have undertaken to give you a detail of our publick affairs, as Major-General Putnam is otherwise engaged in his very important department, and General Mifflin about setting off on a tour through the Counties, to try his influence with our Militia, too many of whom remain in a state of supineness and infatuation, which is altogether unaccountable, especially in the Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Berks, Lancaster, and Northampton. These Counties lie nearest to this city, and from them we have but little prospect of drawing much succour. What the frontier Counties will afford we cannot determine, as we have no certain intelligence of their disposition.

Our Assembly has offered a bounty to draw out the Militia. Enclosed is a copy of their resolutions for the purpose. We know not what effects can be promised from it; possibly it may influence some. All our fencible men are already drawn from this city, who can be prevailed upon to take an active part in our favour; indeed, the city is amazingly depopulated by the detachments made to Head-Quarters, and the fears of the timid and disaffected, who have sought an asylum in the country.

General Putnam is preparing to draw out the people which remain, to throw up works of defence. What numbers he will be able to procure cannot as yet be ascertained; a day or two perhaps will determine. A floating bridge will be finished to-morrow over the middle ferry at Schuylkill. Mr. Casdrop has been employed by order of this Council for some days about that business. We cannot spare or raise men to station at Billingsport. That place is entirely evacuated, and in fact, we have drawn almost the whole of our force from below this city to reinforce the Army at Head-Quarters.

Our stores are in some confusion, and we are uneasy about our powder magazine at the Continental mill, which has been filled from hence; and a great many valuable stores are at Norrington, which must inevitably fall into the enemy's hands, should our Army retreat to Philadelphia without allowing a few days to prepare for them, as we cannot draw a sufficient number of wagons from the country to remove the inhabitants, their effects, and those publick stores. Our tenderness to our fellow-citizens has induced us to suffer them to make use of a part of the wagons to remove their families and effects.

We fear if our Army retreats to Philadelphia, the Militia of this city will not be prevailed upon to leave it again, should your Excellency think proper to evacuate the city; by which means the Army will be much reduced. General Mifflin desired us to hint this matter.

The Council have exerted every nerve to raise the Militia, and are still devising means to support our opposition, and shall from time to time give such intelligence as they may think useful.

By order of the Council. I am your Excellency's very humble servant,

OWEN BIDDLE, Chairman.

His Excellency General Washington, near Trenton Ferry.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO WILLIAM ATLEE.

In Council of Safety, December 13, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 11th instant, and are happy to find that you have taken the proper measures to procure wagons to be sent to this city. We send you by express some resolves of the House of Assembly and of this Board, which we hope will contribute to induce the Militia to turn out in defence of their country. You will distribute them with all speed through your country. The enemy are now obstructed by the river Delaware; but if not discouraged by the numbers we may collect to oppose them, will probably pass the river into this State on the first opportunity. Your utmost exertions we are persuaded will not be wanting with the Militia of Lancaster. We have sent express to the wagons who conveyed the prisoners' baggage.

By order of Council. I have the pleasure to subscribe myself, sir, your very humble servant,

THOS. WHARTON, Jun., President.

William Atlee, Esq.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 13, 1776.

Major-General Putnam being arrived in this city, and having taken upon him the command by General Washington's orders, this is therefore to give notice to all Officers of the Militia who arrive from the country, to apply to General Putnam immediately, and receive his directions.

By order of the Council:

T. WHARTON, Jun., President.

---

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Philadelphia, December 13, 1776.

The General has been informed that some weak or wicked men have maliciously reported that it is the design and wish of the officers and men in the Continental Army to burn and destroy the city of Philadelphia. To counteract such a false and scandalous report, he thinks it necessary to inform the inhabitants who propose to remain in the city, that he has received positive orders from the honourable Continental Congress, and from his Excellency General Washington, to secure and protect the city of Philadelphia against all invaders and enemies. The General will consider every attempt to burn the city of Philadelphia as a crime of the blackest dye, and will, without ceremony, punish capitally any incendiary who shall have the hardiness and cruelty to attempt it.

The General commands all able-bodied men in the city of Philadelphia, who are not conscientiously scrupulous against bearing arms, and who have not been known heretofore to entertain such scruples, to appear in the State-House yard to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, with their arms and accoutrements. This order must be complied with, the General being resolutely determined that no person shall remain in this city an idle spectator of the present contest who has it in his power to injure the American cause, or who may refuse to lend his aid to the support of it, persons under conscientious scruples, as before mentioned, only excepted.

All persons who have arms and accoutrements which they cannot, or do not, mean to employ in defence of America, are hereby ordered to deliver them to Mr. Robert Towers, who will pay for the same. Those who are convicted of secreting any arms or accoutrements will be severely punished.

ISRAEL PUTNAM, Major-General.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 20th.]

Head-Quarters, Trenton Falls, 13th December, 1776.

SIR: The apparent designs of the enemy being to avoid this ferry, and land their troops above and below us, have induced me to remove from this place the greater part of the troops, and throw them into a different disposition on the river, whereby I hope not only to be more able to impede their passage, but also to avoid the danger of being enclosed in this angle of the river. And notwithstanding the extended appearances of the enemy on the other side, made, at least in part, to divert our attention from any particular point, as well as to harass us by fatigue, I cannot divest myself of the opinion that their principal design is to ford the river somewhere above Trenton, to which design I have had particular respect in the new arrangement, wherein I am so far happy as to have the concurrence of the General Officers at this place.

Four brigades of the Army, under Generals Lord Stirling, Mercer, Stephen, and De Fermoy, extend from Yardley's up to Coryel's Ferry, posted in such a manner as to guard every suspicious part of the river, and to afford assistance to each other in case of attack. General Ewing, with the Flying Camp of Pennsylvania, and a few Jersey troops under General Dickinson, are posted from Yardley's Ferry down to the ferry opposite Bordentown. Colonel Cadwalader, with the Pennsylvania Militia, occupies the ground above and below the mouth of Neshaminy river, as far down as Dunk's Ferry, at which place Colonel Nixon is posted, with the third battalion of Philadelphia. A proper quantity of artillery is appointed to each brigade, and I have ordered small redoubts to be thrown up opposite every place where there is a possibility of fording. I shall remove further up the river, to be near the main body of my small Army, with which every possible opposition shall be given to any further approach of the enemy towards Philadelphia.

As General Armstrong has a good deal of influence in this State, and our present force is small and inconsiderable, I think he cannot be better employed than to repair to the Counties where his interest lies, to animate the people, promote the recruiting service, and encourage the Militia to come in. He will also be able to form a proper judgment of the places suitable for magazines of provisions to be collected. I have requested him to wait upon Congress on this subject; and if General Smallwood should go to Maryland on the same business, I think it would have a happy effect. He is popular and of great influence, and I am persuaded would contribute greatly to that State's furnishing her quota of men in a little time. He is now in Philadelphia.

I have the honour to be, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Honourable John Hancock.

---

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL GATES.

Basking-Ridge, December ye 13, 1776.

MY DEAR GATES: The ingenious manœuvre of Fort Washington has completely unhinged the goodly fabrick we had been building. There never was so damned a stroke; entre nous, a certain great man is most damnably deficient. He has thrown me into a situation where I have my choice of difficulties. If I stay in this Province, I risk myself and Army; and if I do not stay, the Province is lost forever. I have neither guards, cavalry, medicines, money, shoes, or stockings. I must act with the greatest circumspection. Tories are in my front, rear, and on my flanks. The mass of the people is strangely contaminated. In short, unless something which I do not expect turns up, we are lost. Our counsels have been weak to the last degree. As to what relates to yourself, if you think you can be in time to aid the General, I would have you, by all means, go. You will, at least, save your Army. It is said that the Whigs are determined to set fire to Philadelphia. If they strike this decisive stroke, the day will be our own; but unless it is done, all chance of liberty, in any part of the globe, is forever vanished.

Adieu, my dear friend. God bless you.

CHARLES LEE.

Hartford, December 23, 1776.

On Friday, the 13th instant, about eleven o'clock, his Excellency General Lee, being at a house in Baskenridge, in New-Jersey, at a great distance from the enemy's Army, the house was on a sudden surrounded by sixty of the Light-Horse, who immediately fired sixty or seventy shot into the house, when his Excellency, seeing there was not a possibility of making his escape, surrendered himself a prisoner of war. Upon this, the enemy mounted him upon a horse, without hat or cloak, and rode off with the utmost expedition.

Intelligence of General Lee's unguarded situation was given to the enemy the evening before by an inhabitant of Baskenridge, personally known to the General, and who had made great pretensions of friendship for the American cause, though at heart the greatest villain that ever existed. This Judas rode all the preceding night to carry the intelligence, and served as a pilot to conduct the enemy, and came personally with them to the house where the General was taken.

---

WILLIAM CLAJON TO GENERAL GATES.

SIR: About half an hour after we came to this place, Mr. Demont brought a man, whom he intends to conduct this night to you, that you may examine him. That man, who believes Mr. Demont an officer in the King's service, declares he is an emissary from General Howe, sent up into these parts to purchase flour, iron, &c. The enemy's Light-Horse are to be here to-morrow, and their parties will stop the ferries between this place and Trentown. I can scarcely believe this; and as your positive orders are that we do not move from this place before you come, or send orders, I shall not attempt to break through them, without greater certainty of danger than we have hitherto obtained. However, we shall move towards the shortest cut to Delaware river, if to-morrow, before noon, we receive no orders from you; for then we shall suppose you have left Mr. Van Camp's, before Mr. Demont's arriving to that place from this.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WM. CLAJON.

P. S. Our wagoner cannot get food for his horses, because the people here say the Congress money is not good. You may judge how uneasy our situation must be.

The Honourable Major-General Gates.

---

JOSEPH TRUMBULL, COMMISSARY GENERAL, TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Morris-Town, 13th December, 1776.

SIR: I came on to this place, intending to wait on General Washington and Congress; but find here that it will delay my time too much to go forward. I have determined to return into New-England, where my presence is very necessary at this time, and send forward Captain Doughty and Mr. Bate, to General Washington and Congress. I have been making preparations for salted provisions in New-England, agreeable to order of Congress. Now is killing time, and I am out of cash. I shall need six or seven hundred thousand dollars for that purpose and paying off the troops, their rations, &c., at the 1st January, which is near. I also wrote Congress some time since, and mentioned to General Washington my sending to Virginia and Maryland for flour, to be brought into New-England during the winter. To this I have had no answer or direction. I must beg Congress to give me directions thereon, and also to send me by Captain Doughty and Mr. Bate, who come with this, the cash above-mentioned, and such other directions as may be thought necessary. I conceive they had best return through the back country to Fishkill, with a good escort.

I have secured my books and papers, and sent them all to Hartford, where I hope to have some time to prepare them for the inspection of Auditors from Congress, who, I hope, will attend the business there some time in February, by which I hope to be in forwardness for them. I hope that place will be convenient to them, as I have already near two wagon loads of books and papers, vouchers, &c.

The fleet that left New-York and sailed eastward some time since, come to near New-London, lay there two or three days, weighed anchor the 6th instant, and stood eastward. A boat from New-London dogged them till they doubled round Point Judith, the same day, and stood in for Newport, since which I hear nothing certain from them.

We have unhappily lost General Lee, who was this day taken prisoner by a party of Light-Horse, led by a Tory Spy, near Baskenridge, about nine miles from this place; particulars of this unhappy event you'll have from General Sullivan.

I wish all possible despatch may be given Captain Doughty and Mr. Bate. In the mean I will endeavour to borrow cash of the State of Connecticut or individuals, or both, till their return, that the service may not suffer.

I am, with greatest respect to yourself and Congress, sir, your most humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

I left General Heath, with about two thousand, at Haverstraw, going down to Hackensack. I have wrote to and empowered Mr. Carpenter Wharton as my Deputy with the Army. Hope it will be agreeable, and that he will have such direction and support from Congress, from time to time, as may be necessary.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

---

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Morris-Town, 13th December, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The night before last I left Haverstraw, with intent to come to Head-Quarters, expecting by the intelligence we had then, to have found your Excellency at Brunswick. But on my arrival here, I find matters in a very different situation in this quarter, and that I can't expect to see your Excellency without going by Easton, and thence I know not whence. Therefore, on the whole, I have engaged Captain Doughty to come to your Excellency with this, and then go on to Congress, or stop, as you shall direct.

I conceive, in the present situation of affairs, that the great supplies of salted provisions for the Army another season must be made in New-England. The killing season is now fast advancing, and will soon be passed. I have been making preparations; have salt procured; but am nearly or rather quite out of cash for that purpose, and have little or none to pay off the return troops at the 1st January, which will soon be here. I have also in charge from the officers to say to your Excellency, that their men would inlist fast, but they have no money. I must also mention the matter of sending to Virginia for flour during the winter, to be brought into New-England by water. These matters I wished to see your Excellency upon, and to have gone to Congress, but the situation of affairs in New-England, with respect to cash for salted provision, the uncertainty where I shall find yourself, or Congress, (who I am told here are gone to Lancaster, and by some that they are gone even to Yorktown)—therefore for me to go on will spend too much time and be of no especial service—have determined me to write and send Captain Doughty on to yourself and Congress, and get back to New-England as soon as I can, and borrow money of the Colony of Connecticut or individuals, till I can receive a supply from Congress. I conceive six or seven hundred thousand dollars will be necessary for me. The Boston and Albany chests, I conceive also will need to be supplied for my Deputies in those departments. I wish your Excellency to forward Captain Doughty to Congress, and write on these subjects as you shall think proper. In mean time I shall return to Peekskill, and so to New-England, and pay the utmost attention to laying in the best magazines in my power, and to preparing my accounts to lay before Continental Auditors, who I hope will attend that business at Hartford, where I have sent all my books and papers, and hope by some time in February to be ready to attend them.

I have a letter from Mr. Shaw, dated the 7th instant, by which I am informed that the fleet which was off New-London, consisting of about eighty sail of transports and near twenty sail of armed vessels of different sizes, with about five thousand troops, sailed from thence the day before. They sent a boat to dog them, which had just returned, and informs that the fleet doubled round Point Judith, and were standing in for Newport. The country were all alarmed and flocking in to support the country.

I came to this place this day, about ten o'clock, and stopped with Colonel Remsen to feed my horse, and inquire the way to follow General Lee. Captain Doughty told me he would pilot me in two hours. Before that time was expired, a gentleman came in and told us that a party of the enemy's Light-Horse, led by a Tory, who had dogged General Lee for two or three days passed, had taken General Lee a prisoner, at White's Tavern, near Baskenridge, about ten o'clock this morning; which disagreeable account is since confirmed by several of his guards who have escaped, some wounded, some not. I sincerely condole with your Excellency on this unfortunate loss to the country. They said the Light-Horse used General Lee very ill, off by the hair of his head. Major Bradford is come in. At present it seems no body about the General was taken but himself, one Light-Horseman, and one of the French gentlemen.

Since writing thus far, Mr. Bates, one of my clerks, is come up with me, who comes on with Captain Doughty, and will go on to Congress, if necessary.

I shall be exceeding glad to receive your Excellency's commands; and am, with greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

I have constituted Mr. Carpenter Wharton my sole Deputy with the Army, with power to employ such persons as are necessary, and beg your Excellency's directions and support to him accordingly, in money, &c., as needed.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

COLONEL NICOLL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Peekskill, 13th December, 1776.

SIR: That day you crossed the river, General Wadsworth came here, and has ordered the two regiments of his brigade to march to North-Castle; in consequence of which the fatigue party is much reduced. Should be glad of your instructions in the matter as early as possible. As the guard at General Parsons's was ordered to march, I have sent another guard there.

I am, with the most profound respect, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL, Commanding Officer.

---

REPORT ON THE APPLICATION OF JOHN MOORE, CHARLES INGLIS, AND OTHERS.

Your Committee, appointed on the 11th instant to consider the Letters brought by the flag of truce for the purpose of procuring liberty for sundry persons to go with their effects to the city of New-York, having deliberately considered the above several matters committed to them, do report thereon as follows, to wit:

1st. With respect to the application of John Moore, your Committee is well informed that he demeans himself in New-York, ever since the commencement of the present controversy, as an insolent opponent to the American cause; that he held appointments under the Crown of Great Britain in the departments of the Customs and Revenue; and your Committee have no doubt that, in adherence to the enemies of the United States, he still holds those appointments, and that he is publickly advertised, as your Committee is credibly informed, as being Deputy Secretary of the State of New-York, appointed by authority derived from the King of Great Britain, to officiate in that office during the absence of Samuel Bayard, Jun., who was formerly Deputy Secretary of this State, and is now a State prisoner.

2d. That with respect to the Reverend Charles Inglis, your Committee has the utmost reason to believe that he has ever been a dangerous and insidious enemy to the liberties of the United States, and that he was strongly disposed to adhere to their enemies, otherwise he would doubtless have removed into Ulster County, where his connexions by marriage would have rendered his residence with his family much more agreeable than at New-York; and which he probably would have preferred, had not his attachment to the unjust designs of the King and Parliament of Great Britain overbalanced all other considerations. That your Committee have been credibly informed, that through his connexions in

Ulster County, he has maintained a dangerous correspondence with the disaffected in that part of this State, and that he has been lately in Dutchess County, for no other purpose, as your Committee conceives, than to invigorate the seeds of disloyalty to this and the other United States, which have been so plentifully disseminated in that County; and that to finish his political character, your Committee is well informed, that under the sacred protection of a flag of truce, he is now possessed of a great number of copies of the late proclamation of Lord Howe and General Howe, calculated to debauch the subjects of the United States from their most just and righteous allegiance, and which your Committee conceives he would not have brought with him under that protection but for the purpose of dispersing them by his agents through the country.

3dly. With respect to the application of Philip I. Livingston, your Committee report, that he has been Sheriff of the County of Dutchess, which office has, from its nature, given him great influence in the County; that while he resided in it, he committed sundry overt acts of disloyalty to this and the other United States, and not only fled, from a sense of guilt, but voluntarily put himself into the hands of the enemy.

4thly. With respect to the application of James Jauncey, Jun., Esq., your Committee do report, that he lately was, and doubtless still claims to be, one of the Council and Master of the Rolls under the late Government of the State of New-York, and was apprehended and conveyed into the State of Connecticut as a prisoner, not only on account of his holding those offices, but also on account of his connexions by marriage with Sir Gilbert Elliot, a member of Parliament, active against the liberties of America, and one of the Cabinet, as well as of the Privy Council, of the King of Great Britain.

5thly. That with respect to his father, no application being personally made by him, it would, in the judgment of your Committee, be a depreciation of the honour of this Convention to take any notice of the application of his son in his behalf.

6thly. That with respect to Frederick Philips, your Committee are well informed that he has exerted himself in promoting an association in West-Chester County, highly injurious to the American cause; that his great estate in that County has necessarily created a vast number of dependents on his pleasure, and that your Committee verily believe that the shameful defection of the inhabitants of that County is in a great measure owing to his influence.

7thly. With respect to Jacob Watson, your Committee, or some of them, know him to be a Briton born, a Quaker by profession, and in principle inclined to submit to the British Government. That his religious profession has exempted him from all services in this State, by which means he has had ample leisure and opportunity to pursue his private interest; which, they have been informed, he has industriously improved, by monopolizing large quantities of salt and other articles of merchandise, the distribution of which, by sale in small quantities, in due season, would have tended much to the health and happiness not only of the Continental Army, but also of the loyal inhabitants of this State. That from his two letters, the one to Daniel Terboss, the other to Daniel Birdsell, referred to your Committee, it appears as follows: That he had deposited in the hands of the former a quantity of salt, which he had forbade him to sell, intending to apply it in the package of pork; but that since, understanding the salt was much wanted, he directs him to dispose of it for pork, flax-seed, or good firkin butter, and that if the salt should already be disposed of, his consignatory should lay out the money in flax-seed; and it also appears that he had deposited in the hands of his other consignatory, Birdsell, not only a quantity of salt, but also a quantity of molasses, which, expecting they will be much wanted in Birdsell's neighbourhood, he directs him to sell, and lay out the money in flax-seed, pork, or good firkin butter; and further, that if any of the salt or molasses should be already sold, to lay out the money in those articles. From all which it appears to your Committee, that while the said Jacob Watson voluntarily lives under the protection of a Government inimical to this and the other United States, he is pursuing a commerce unfriendly to the inhabitants of this State, and in its prosecution dangerous to the liberties of America, as it affords the means of a communication which may be improved by the enemies of the American cause to the injury of the United States. That your Committee has been further informed that the said Jacob Watson is possessed of large quantities of salt in the County of Albany, and that the inhabitants of this State are very much distressed by the want of salt and molasses.

8thly. With respect to the case of Mrs. Jane Knox, as she is a widow, enjoying no great affluence, your Committee conceives, that though she has evinced her attachment to them by voluntarily remaining in New-York, when she had it in her power to remove herself, with her effects, into the country, yet that she cannot do mischief to the American cause.

9thly. That the case of Lady Johnson merits, in the opinion of your Committee, a particular attention. They are informed that she is a lady of great art and political intrigue; of great firmness of mind, and most warmly attached to that interest which is so inimical to the freedom and independence of the American States, and has, in your Committee's opinion, done great mischief, by her address, to the American cause. That her situation at Albany renders the communication between herself and her husband, who has, by a breach of his parole, forfeited both his honour and estate, extremely easy, and therefore dangerous to the publick safety.

Your Committee, having thus stated the political characters of the several persons whose cases have been submitted to their consideration, beg leave to advise:

1st. That the applications of John Moore, the Reverend Charles Inglis, and Philip I. Livingston, be rejected, not only because they conceive it would be dangerous to permit them to pass up into the country, but because a permission to their families to go to New-York, with their effects, would, besides furnishing a dangerous channel of intelligence, prove an incentive to rebellion, and be an act of direct aid and comfort to the enemies of the freedom and independence of the United States of North America.

2dly. With respect to the application of James Jauncey and Frederick Philipse, your Committee beg leave to advise that a permission to the former to go to New-York would imply the consent of this Convention to his exercise of two most important offices under a Government which, on account of its tyranny, the good people of this State have thought proper to reject; and that a like indulgence to the latter, who requests liberty to return to his family at Philipsburgh, would put it in the power of a professed enemy of the American cause not only further to disaffect the inhabitants of West-Chester County, but to put many of them in arms against the United States of America.

3dly. With respect to Jacob Watson, your Committee are of opinion that, independent of his personal attachment to that Government which the enemies of American liberty aim at establishing over us, discovered by his voluntary continuance among the enemy, his commercial scheme, in which he may have monopolized at least two necessary articles of consumption, and his intention to dispose of them at high prices, not for Continental money, but for articles either fit for exportation, under the countenance of the enemy, or for their consumption, recommend his case to the particular attention of this Convention, not only on account of a dangerous intercourse that may be maintained through a mercantile channel, but from the evident proofs of his intending to exact high prices for the most necessary articles, and his clear intention to maintain a commerce prejudicial to the American States. Your Committee do therefore advise, that proper commissioners be appointed, to seize such commodities within this State belonging to the said Jacob Watson, as may be necessary either for the consumption of its inhabitants or the use of the Continental Army, and to inventory, report, and detain the same, subject to the order of this Convention.

4thly. With respect to Mrs. Jane Knox, your Committee beg leave to recommend that her effects may, by permission of this Convention, be conveyed to her by the vessel provided with a flag of truce, and now lying at Cortlandt's Point, under the command of the Continental galley; but that previous to their embarkation, proper persons may be appointed carefully to inspect the same, to the end that no dangerous intelligence may be secretly conveyed in any of the packages.

5thly. Your Committee further report it as their opinion, that all the applications above committed to them, whether consisting in letters or memorial, except the case of Jane

Knox, be rejected, and that the flag of truce, and the persons who came up with the same and are now protected thereby, be immediately ordered to return in the most direct manner to the city of New-York; and that Major-General Heath, or the officer commanding in his absence at Peek's Kill, be furnished with a copy of as many of the resolves of this Convention on the above subject as respect the matters referred by Major-General Heath to the consideration of this Convention, and be requested to attend to the return of the said flag of truce in such manner as, if possible, to prevent the communication of any person on board with others on the land.

6thly, and lastly. Your Committee being fully of opinion that the residence of Lady Johnson at Albany, under the above-mentioned circumstances, may be highly detrimental to the American cause, and that a permission to her to return home will be equally if not more injurious to it, do therefore earnestly recommend her immediate removal to one of the New-England States, under such circumstances as may be consistent with her rank and her sex.

By order of the Committee:

AB'M YATES, Jun., Chairman.

Fish-Kill, December 13th, 1776.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, December 13th, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Thomas Seymour, Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, That a Letter of Credit for £500, be drawn on Messrs. Rapalje and Miles Sherbrook, of the State of New-York, in favour of Major Levi Wells, for the use of the Connecticut troops in captivity in New-York, to be by Major Wells paid out as wages among said captives, at his discretion, as their necessities require, and to take their receipts, and keep his account thereof, and lay the same before the Paymasters of the several regiments to which they belong. (Letter of Credit delivered Major Wells, December 13th, 1776.)

Voted, To refer a number of Sick bills from New-Haven Selectmen to the Committee of Pay-Table for adjustment, and to draw for what is due thereon.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £12 10*s.*, in favour of Mr. Hezekiah Sabin, of New-Haven, for his expense in mounting a Field-Piece for publick use.—(Order delivered Timo. Jones, Jun., December 13th, 1776.)

Voted, To refer the liquidation of the Accounts of Captain Jehial Tinker, of the row-galley Crane; the Accounts of Mr. James Rice, for the row-galley Whiting; the Accounts of cost of Gaol yard at Hartford, and Lynde Lord's Account for mustering Soldiers, to the Committee of Pay-Table.

On application to this Board, by Mr. Timothy Jones, Jun., and Colonel Thompson, a Committee from New-Haven, &c.:

Ordered, That the six Field-Pieces left at New-Haven by the Minerva, be properly fitted up and furnished with suitable field-carriages at the expense of the State, provided said carriages be well and properly made, at a reasonable price, not exceeding £10 for each; and that the sum of £12 10*s.* be paid Captain Sabin, of New-Haven, for the carriage and apparatus to a Field-Piece which he has lately procured to be done there, and that the same be for the use of this State.—(N. B. There is a vote and order drawn on the preceding leaf for the sum of £12 10*s.*, above-mentioned.)

Whereas by an act of the General Assembly at New-Haven, at their session in October last, among other things, it is provided, that the Militia of said town of New-Haven hold themselves equipped and in constant readiness to defend said town, and not be liable to be removed:

Resolved, That Colonel Thompson take the most effectual care that the Militia of said town be every way equipped and accoutred, and in constant readiness, according to the true intent and design of said act.—(Order delivered Colonel Thompson, December 13th, 1776.)

Voted, That Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., Esq., be, and he is hereby, empowered and instructed to propose and negotiate an exchange of the following prisoners, taken on board the ship John, the ship Clarendon, and ship Sally, brought into this State, for prisoners of equal rank and degree, as near as may be, to wit: Captain Dunbar, of the ship John; James Watta, passenger on board; Captain Jackson, of the ship Sally; John Wright, Surgeon, Captain John Deniston, of the ship Clarendon; Peter Hunter, passenger on board do.; Daniel Crawford, Mate, Thomas Moore, Boatswain, James Deniston, a boy, Murdock McCloud, a sailor, and divers others whose names are unknown. And that he take their parole not to give any intelligence, act, or do any thing against the United States of America; and in case such exchange cannot be effected, that they return immediately to this State again.—(Copy delivered Captain Jackson, December 13th, 1776.)

---

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

State of Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, In General Assembly, Providence, December 13, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: We have not as yet perfect intelligence of the force of the enemy upon Rhode-Island, but by the best accounts we have been able to collect, their numbers do not exceed eight, nor fall short of five thousand men.

The Militia of the Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut, with a spirit and an ardour that does them honour, have marched to our assistance; and with the Militia of this State amount to between six and seven thousand, who are at present posted in many different places around the bay, but without form, not having a leader nor any general plan of offence or defence.

In this situation of affairs, being sensible that although the blow hath first fallen upon us, the safety of New-England, and perhaps the fate of America, depends upon establishing an Army with the utmost expedition, capable of opposing that body of the enemy which hath taken possession of Rhode-Island; and fully convinced that the authority of this State will prove inadequate to the giving form to and regulating an army collected from different States and to the directing of their operations, we have appointed a Council of War, with full power to exert the force of this State, in concurrence with Committees that may be appointed from the other New-England States, in the necessary measures for the common defence, &c.

We transmit you by express a copy of the vote, not doubting your immediate attention to this most important object, and the most vigorous exertions of the powers of your State for the publick safety.

We are, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant.

Signed at the request, and in behalf of, the General Assembly.

NICH'S COOKE.

Honourable General Assembly of the State of New-Hampshire.

P. S. The Legislature of this State have appointed a Committee to draft a bill for fixing the price of necessaries for the Army and the inhabitants, as we have intelligence the State of Connecticut have done; and we hope your State will enter into a like measure.

[Same to General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay.]

---

Resolve of the RHODE-ISLAND General Assembly, December 13, 1776.

To the House of Magistrates:

GENTLEMEN: Whereas a large body of the enemy have taken possession of the Island of Rhode-Island, and are endeavouring to penetrate the country, so that it has become necessary for the publick utility of this State that a Council of War be immediately appointed:

Therefore Voted and Resolved, That his Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour, the Honourable Stephen Hopkins, Esq., Ambrose Page, Esq., Mr John Fanner, John Dexter, Esq., the Honourable Joshua Babcock, Esq., Mr. Cromel Child, the Honourable William Greene, Esq., and Henry Ward, Esq., be, and they are hereby, appointed a Council of War; that they, or the major part of them, be fully empowered to do, act, and transact, all and every thing and matter for the well-being and security of this State and the United States in general. That they make and ordain all such rules, orders, and regulations for the well-governing, ordering, disciplining, clothing, and supplying the Army now raised or about to be raised by this State, and the other neighbouring States, in conjunction, if such an Army should be raised, as to them shall seem right and just. And that all such rules, orders, and regulations by them made in the recess of the General Assembly shall be of as full force and authority to all intents and purposes as though made and passed by this General Assembly.

Voted and passed.

Per order: J. LYNDON, Clerk.

In the Upper House, read the same day and concurred.

Per order: R. J. HELME, Secretary p. t.

---

December 13, 1776.

To the House of Magistrates:

GENTLEMEN: Resolved, That his Honour the Governour be requested to write to the States of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, and Connecticut, enclosing the resolve of this General Assembly appointing a Council of War, and requesting that each of said States appoint a Committee to meet the twenty-third day of this instant, or as much sooner as possible, in the town of Providence, in this State, with said Council of War, to confer upon the expediency of raising an Army for the immediate defence against the British Fleet and Army now within this State, whereby the Militia may be relieved; and in general to consult upon every measure necessary to be taken for the support of the common cause.

Voted and passed.

Per order: J. LYNDON, Clerk.

In the Upper House the same day, read and concurred.

Per order: R. J. HELME, Secretary p. tem.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

SIR: Your important letter of the 9th instant was received yesterday. We join with you most fervently in your prayer that America may not be lost, nor fall a victim to the rage of a merciless tyranny; on the contrary, we trust there is virtue and spirit enough in the United States to produce exertions sufficient, with the blessing of Heaven, to prevent it. It has been a capital errour to inlist or detach our forces for so short a time; but as you well observe, to reflect upon past errours answers no other valuable purpose than to produce a propriety of conduct in future. We are sorry our Committee did not take New-Haven in their way to General Washington, which would have given them an opportunity of informing you of the terms on which it was intended they should reinlist the troops belonging to this State, which might have prevented some of the inconveniences that have happened. Our Assembly, from the advanced price of things, apprehended it highly improbable our men would again engage in the service unless their wages were increased, which induced them to add twenty shillings per month to the Congress allowance; and afterwards, in consequence of a resolve of Congress disapproving the addition to the wages, they granted a bounty of twenty pounds to each soldier inlisting for three years or during the war; which mode of encouragement they hoped would not appear so exceptionable to Congress. The inconveniency of different establishments for different corps of the same Army was foreseen, but the necessity we were under of raising our quota, without which the common cause might suffer, obliged us to risk it. The regulation of the price of things, (the mode you have adopted,) was thought of, and might have been the best, but many objections arose, which at that time prevented it. However, as we have renewed our application to you to join with the other States of New-England in the appointing a Committee to consider this and other matters, we hope you will approve the measure, and that great good will result from it. By our proposal their commission is to be so extensive as to include the important business you mention of consulting on the great affairs of our safety, and counteracting the enemy in their future operations. But if this is not expressed in terms sufficiently explicit, you can agree to our proposal with such additions as you think proper, and there is no doubt we shall concur with you.

The General Court was on the 11th instant adjourned to Tuesday, the 24th instant. Besides providing for the inlistment of our quota of the new Army, they passed an act for raising a fourth part of the Militia at home, to march as soon as may be to recruit the Army, and be in service for three months from their march, before the expiration of which time it was hoped and expected that our said quota would be inlisted, and at the place of their destination. Since the invasion of Rhode-Island, the said fourth part from the Counties of Barnstable, Plymouth, and Bristol, with all the Militia from the two latter Counties, also the said fourth part of the Counties of Suffolk, Middlesex, and Essex, with one regiment most contiguous from Suffolk, and two of the nearest regiments from Worcester County, together with one company from our train of artillery, have had orders to march to the assistance of that State, and were intended, either in part or whole, as circumstances should require, for your State, as we informed you in our letter of the 8th instant in answer to yours of the 5th. The said fourth part, in case they are not needed there, General Lincoln, the commanding officer, after consulting with Governour Cooke, is to order to join the Army to the southward, with the fourth of our other Militia, except Berkshire, whose fourth, and except Hampshire, one half of whose fourth, are ordered to Ticonderoga, by way of Albany, in consequence of a letter received the 11th instant from General Schuyler.

It is true that there has been a quantity of clothing and shoes taken from the enemy and brought into this State, but not so large as the publick papers represented it. However, our Committee for providing clothing have been directed to take it, and procure as much more of the like articles as they possibly can, and send them to the Army. A quantity is already on the road.

We understand there is a cartel now at New-London for the exchange of prisoners; and as we have a number of them in this State, we wish to be informed upon what terms the exchange is to be made, that we may know what rank or condition of prisoners it will be proper to send; particularly whether sailors taken on board merchantmen will be received in exchange for sailors taken on board privateers.

At the next meeting of our Assembly your letter will be laid before them, and they will consider the other matters contained in it.

Since writing the above, we have received your letter of the 11th instant, enclosing copies of a letter and resolves of the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York. We are fully sensible of the critical situation of affairs at the westward, and shall afford all the assistance in our power. The fourth part of our Militia, ordered to be raised as aforesaid, it is supposed will amount to about six thousand men. About half of these are ordered to march by the way of Providence, to assist the States of Rhode-Island and Connecticut, if necessary, otherwise to proceed immediately to New-York; about nine hundred are to march to Albany, to be under the direction of General Schuyler; the remainder, about two thousand, are to take the middle road, and the rendezvous is to be at Danbury, in Connecticut. We are informed that some regiments marched this day, and it is expected that several others will begin their march on Monday next. On every occasion we shall heartily cooperate with you in support of the great cause we are engaged in.

In the name and by the order of the Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

I have the honour to be, with very great esteem, sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the State of Connecticut.

The twenty pounds bounty above-mentioned, is by notes given by our Treasurer, each for ten pounds, and payable with interest at six per cent.

---

JOHN MURRAY TO SAMUEL A. OTIS.

Winnisimmet Ferry, December 13th, 1776.

SIR: At the instance of Captain Paul Reed, the bearer of this, I write you on this scrap, that he and his brother David are my neighbours, and men of good reputation. That I know they were the sole owners of the brig Rosanna when I left Booth-Bay; that she was then unrigged and hauled up a creek in Booth-Bay, to avoid the hands of the enemy; that the said David then proposed sending her to the West-Indies as soon as his brother returned from sea, and I never heard of the property of said brig being altered, either in whole or part; and I do not believe it ever has.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most humble servant,

JNO. MURRAY.

To Samuel A. Otis, Esq., at the honourable the Board of War.

---

Boston, December 13, 1776.

Thursday last the Militia of Salem were ordered to muster, in order to draft every fourth man to reinforce the Army at the southward, when eighty-seven turned out volunteers, among whom were gentlemen of the first character in the place.

---

ORDERS TO COLONEL BELLOWS.

State of New-Hampshire, Exeter, December 13, 1776.

Pursuant to directions from the Committee of Safety for this State to me, you are hereby required and authorized to take up any soldiers inlisted by this State for the Continental service, who have neglected to march forward to join their respective companies, or any who have deserted, or may desert hereafter, and confine or send them forward to the corps they belong to as occasion or convenience offers, and to call on the military officers under you to assist therein.

NATH'L FOLSOM, Major-General.

To Colonel Benjamin Bellows, Jun.

---

E. THOMPSON TO MATTHEW THORNTON AND WM. WHIPPLE.

Exeter, December 13th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The new General Court is to meet next Wednesday. The votes for the members of Council were examined by the Committee appointed for that purpose for the County of Rockingham, on Wednesday last, when they declared Meshech Weare, Josiah Bartlett, Nicholas Gilman, George King, and Timothy Walker, Jun., Esqs., to have the majority of votes. I hear John Langdon, John Pickering, and George Gains, Esquires, are elected members for Portsmouth. Londonderry have chosen the same as last year. The election of Councillors in the other Counties are not come to hand. Captain John Emery, of this town, is just arrived from Nantz, in France, but last from Bilboa, in Spain, and brought a very valuable cargo. Says greater preparations for war appear in Spain than has ever been known there in the memory of those he was conversant with. That the present commotions, din of war, and shedding human blood, might cease in America, and justice, truth, peace, and happiness, be the portion of this land, is the prayer of your most humble servant,

E. THOMPSON.

Hon. Matthew Thornton and William Whipple, Esqrs.

---

London, December 14, 1776.

On Tuesday last Lieutenant-General Burgoyne arrived from North-America. When he left Crown-Point, Sir Guy Carleton was preparing to put his Army into winter quarters in Canada.

The reason publickly assigned for the return of General Burgoyne was, that the season was so far advanced it was impossible to proceed in the intended operations of the campaign; but it was pretty generally understood that the true reason was, a difference had arisen between him and Sir Guy Carleton, which prevented the former from carrying into execution the orders he had been entrusted with at home.

A packet (the Swallow, Captain Marshal) sailed from Falmouth, September 1, with despatches for Sir Guy Carleton and General Burgoyne; but meeting with very violent north winds on the coast of America, she could not get into the river St. Lawrence, and was blown away to the West-Indies, and after again attempting it, and finding it impracticable, she returned, and arrived at Falmouth on the 1st of December. The despatches were reported to be orders to Sir Guy Carleton to return to the Civil Government of Quebeck, and to General Burgoyne to continue and go on with the Army; the appointment of Mr. Livius, Chief Justice, &c.

At the same time sailed the Union, Captain Hamilton, also for Quebeck, laden with camp-equipage, some clothing, and sixty thousand guineas. She also found it impossible to get into the river St. Lawrence, and was obliged to put into Halifax for the winter. Colonel Maclean, who had this money in charge, finding the Colony in danger from the incursions of the New-Englanders, departed with the money for New-York.

Another rich transport, (the Thomas, Captain Bell,) laden with army clothing for sixteen thousand men, thirty thousand shirts, thirty thousand pairs of shoes, thirty thousand pairs of stockings, all likewise for the Army in Canada, was taken by an American privateer, and carried into Boston. The loss of these two transports will be severely felt during the winter by the Army in Canada.

---

LETTER FROM A FRENCH MERCHANT.

At L'Orient, December 14th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: There is no one in France but what interests themselves in your success, and very few who would not desire to contribute towards it; but the doubts we are in of your actual wants, whether supplies from private persons would be agreeable, joined to the risks of the voyage, would still have deterred us from this undertaking, had not Mr. Deane, your Ambassador in this kingdom, convinced us that it would be agreeable to you, and that you would grant your protection to those merchants who, by exposing their fortune, might carry succours and become useful to Pennsylvania.

These considerations, gentlemen, and having a vessel which sails faster than merchant ships do in common, I have got partners with me and we have resolved to undertake a voyage to Philadelphia, where I expect to arrive towards the latter end of February, or the 15th of March next.

As I am unacquainted with the entrance of your river, I take the liberty, gentlemen, to beg you to order a pilot at Cape Hatteras and on the northward, and another to the southward of the Delaware, though I intend to make the land about Cape Hatteras if I can. The signals shall be as follows: in the day, a Dutch flag twisted at the foretopgallant-mast head, and a gun fired to leeward; in the night, two lights, one over the other, hoisted to the ensign staff, and a gun. I beg you will give a copy of those signals to your coasting pilots from Cape Hatteras to Cape May.

I have the honour to be, with profound respect, gentlemen, your most humble and obedient servant,

ROCHE.

---

STEPHEN STEWARD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

December the 14th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Hamond went from here last Tuesday, in one of the Province boats, to Annapolis. What he went after I don't know. He has not been here since I got his schooner ready to sail, bent his sails for him, and every thing else. I am in want of some thin canvas to make a gib and square-sail for another schooner. I have been told you have now a large quantity come in. Please to send me down two bolts of the thinnest you have, number 3, 4, 5, or 6. Would want four bolts. The horse can't bring more than two conveniently.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

The honourable Council of Safety.

---

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JR., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 14th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of letters to our Committee and myself, received by Thursday's post, Captain Nicholson went off yesterday evening, with about thirty or forty of his best hands and some of his officers, with near twenty sail of small craft, for the Head of Elk, to assist in bringing down the publick stores and sick that might be moved from Philadelphia. About an hour after his departure, I received the enclosed letter for him, which I despatched after him by a barge. He returned it to me late last night, and, agreeable to his desire, I now forward it to you by express, for your consideration. Should you think fit to order the Defence's men to follow after Captain Nicholson, I would beg leave to suggest whether it would not be advisable to take a few of the nine-pounders from the fort, and send up along with the Defence's guns, to put on board the frigates, should they attempt sending them around to this bay. We have plenty of craft here to carry up the Defence's people, &c., to Elk.

Our Committee, agreeable to Mr. Chase's requisition, wrote the Committee of your city to send up to Elk what craft were at Annapolis. I have since learned there is no Committee. There will be no necessity of sending any more craft, as we can get plenty here.

Our Committee are preparing the Court-House in the best manner the time will admit for the reception of the Congress, should they be obliged to leave Philadelphia, in which case, Mr. Chase writes, it is intended to come here.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

SAM'L PURVIANCE, Jun.

To the honourable the Council of Safety at Annapolis.

---

MARINE COMMITTEE TO WILLIAM BINGHAM.

December 14, 1776.

SIR: We expect this will be delivered to you by John Nicholson, Esq., who commands the Hornet sloop-of-war, belonging to the Continent. She will carry you some rice and indigo, by order of the Secret Committee, which you'll please to receive expeditiously. As this sloop touches at Carolina before she sails for the West-Indies, it is uncertain when you may see, therefore orders must be discretionary; and when she arrives, if you have any advices, or any goods to send that you think of importance to these States, you may despatch Captain Nicholson therewith immediately. Should this not be the case, you may assist him to procure more men, and let him go a cruising during the winter months, only despatching him so as to be here by the beginning of April. If our trade in the Islands is interrupted by any privateers or tenders that this sloop can match, they should be her object. If there be none such, she may cruise where there is the best chance of good prizes.

If Captain Nicholson is lucky enough to send any in to you, sell such parts as are suited to the island consumption; but be careful what you sell is the property of none but British subjects not resident in Bermuda or New-Providence. Whatever you sell, render regular accounts of it. Make the seamen, &c., necessary advances, and transmit us their receipts with the accounts sales, &c., for what you sell, that just distribution may be made on their return. If Captain Nicholson meets with any cannon more suitable for the Hornet than those on board, assist him in buying them, and getting them mounted. Supply him with money and necessaries he may want for the service; his receipts will be your vouchers, and your drafts on us will be paid. When you despatch him for the Continent he will take on board any goods you have to ship.

We are, sir, your very humble servants.

William Bingham, Esq.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 20, 1776: Referred to Mr. R. H. Lee, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Harrison, and Mr. S. Adams.]

Philadelphia, December 14, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you last night, and inclosed a letter from the General, and several other letters, then expecting to send that letter by Mr. Walton this morning; but that gentleman having just now delivered me another open letter from the General, dated yesterday, at Trenton Falls, I do myself the honour to enclose it herein; and as Mr. Walton does not set off so soon as he intended, I have sent out after an express; but have some expectation that Colonel Jenifer will be the bearer of both these letters, as I understand he is just going off for Baltimore. They will certainly go in half an hour by one or the other.

As our enemies are still kept at bay, on the other side Delaware, I cannot help flattering myself with the expectation of some favourable event that will save this city. I shall certainly remain here as long as I can with safety; and, during my stay, the Congress may depend on my utmost exertions for the publick service. The Randolph and Hornet are gone down this morning. We are at work on the Delaware, and a chartered brigantine. Captain Green, sails in an hour. If they give us time, I shall attempt to get the Washington frigate into a place of safety.

I have the honor to remain, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

ROB'T MORRIS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, President of Congress.

---

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Philadelphia, December 14, 1776.

Colonel Griffin is appointed Adjutant-General to the troops in and about this city. All orders from the General through him, either written or verbal, are to be strictly attended to and punctually obeyed.

The General, to his great astonishment, has been informed that several of the inhabitants of this city have refused to take the Continental currency in payment for goods. In future, should any of the inhabitants be so lost to publick virtue and the welfare of their country, as to presume to refuse the currency of the American States in payment for any commodities they may have for sale, the goods shall be forfeited, and the person or persons so refusing, committed to close confinement.

In case of an alarm of fire, the city guards and patroles are to suffer the inhabitants to pass unmolested at any hour of the night; and the good people of Philadelphia are earnestly requested and desired to give every assistance in their power with engines and buckets to extinguish the fire. And, as the Congress have ordered the city to be defended to the last extremity, the General hopes that no person will refuse to give every assistance possible to complete the fortifications that are to be erected in and about the city.

ISRAEL PUTNAM, Major-General.

---

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Philadelphia, December 14, 1776.

All Officers and Soldiers in and about this city are ordered immediately to repair to the State-House, (except the Jersey Militia,) with their arms and accourtrements.

By order of the General:

SAMUEL GRIFFIN,
Deputy Adjutant-General.

---

AMOS TAYLOR TO SAMUEL CHASE.

Philadelphia, December 14th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By the bearer, George Fox, I send the several bills relating to the clothing a company of troops late commanded by Captain Watkins. The bills are the same that I presented to you at your lodgings in Philadelphia last Saturday.

Gentlemen, I must entreat you will consider the circumstance of a couple of poor tradesmen, one of whom is now in the service of his country and has left a family behind him. The bills are acknowledged by Lieutenant Richard Grace, who had the command of the company when the clothes were made, (under the direction of Thomas Stone, Esq.) Mr. Grace I expect will be thought a sufficient voucher. I have likewise got a gentleman of good character in this place to write a few lines to Mr. Heligar in my favour, to whom I refer you for further satisfaction. I doubt not but you will pay the amount of said bills to the bearer, which will greatly oblige, gentlemen, your friend, &c.,

AMOS TAYLOR.

To Samuel Chase and William Paca, Esquires, Delegates from the State of Maryland, at Baltimore.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GEN. WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 14, 1776, } Eight o'clock in the Evening. }

SIR: The Council this moment received a letter from William Atlee, Esq., of Lancaster, extract from which we despatch to you by express. He says (dated 13th instant): "The enclosed is copy of a letter from Colonel Burd last night, by express," "I march with my whole battalion on Monday next." "Colonel Galbreath's battalion, we are told, will move on Saturday next. The Militia of Lancaster seem rather backward, owing principally to this, that many of our spirited officers and young men are gone to escort the prisoners sent from hence, and upon their return have hopes they will turn out to the assistance of their brethren. There are a few of the Militia from Cumberland County arrived here, who say that large numbers are on their way down. The battalion from Northumberland are also soon expected."

From these and other circumstances we have reason to hope a considerable reinforcement may join you in a few days, if the enemy can be kept at bay.

We shall communicate every piece of intelligence to you which may appear to deserve your notice, and thank you for such information as you may think proper to give this Board.

By order of the Council.

I have the honour to be, your Excellency's very humble servant,

DAV'D RITTENHOUSE, Vice President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 14th December, 1776.

SIR: I was last night favoured with yours of the 6th. In a letter which I did myself the pleasure to write to you two days ago, I gave you a full account of my present situation, and the occurrences that have happened since I left the neighbourhood of Fort Lee. The want of means of transportation has hitherto hindered the enemy from making any attempt to cross the Delaware; and I hope, unless the course of the season entirely changes, that the weather will soon prevent their making use of boats, if they should build them.

Your situation to the eastward is truly alarming; and I wish it were in my power to afford you that assistance that is requisite. You must be sensible that it is impossible for me to detach any part of my small Army, when I have an enemy far superiour in numbers to oppose; but I have immediately countermanded the march of General Heath's division, who were coming down from Peekskill; they are ordered to return again to that place, and hold themselves ready to move as occasion may require. General Lee's division are so necessary to support this part of the Army, that without their assistance we must inevitably be overpowered, and Philadelphia lost.

I have ordered General Arnold, who was on his way down from Ticonderoga, immediately to repair to New-London, or wherever his presence will be most necessary. The troops that came down with him and General Gates are already, from the advices I have received, so far advanced towards this Army, that to countermand them now would be losing the small remainder of their service entirely, as the time of their inlistment would expire before they could possibly reach you; whereas by coming on, they may, in conjunction with my present force and that under General Lee, enable us to attempt a stroke upon the forces of the enemy, who lay a good deal scattered, and, to all appearance, in a state of security. A lucky blow in this quarter would be fatal to them, and would most certainly raise the spirits of the people, which are quite sunk by our late misfortunes.

In the interval between the dissolution of the old and the inlistment of the new Army, we must put our dependence on the publick spirit and virtue of the people; which, I am sorry to say, has manifested but too small a regard to their rights and liberties in the States of New-Jersey and Pennsylvania, the citizens of Philadelphia excepted; but I hope such a spirit still exists among your people as will convince these bold invaders, that although they may by a superiour naval force take possession of your sea-port towns, yet that they cannot penetrate and overrun your country with impunity.

I have the honour to be, with great respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. I have just received a letter from General Heath, of the 10th instant, in which he informs me that his division was to cross the North River on that day; so that they must be at Morristown by this time, which is but fifty miles from hence. Upon this consideration, I have changed my intention of countermanding him, for the same reasons as given in my letter above respecting the troops under Generals Gates and Arnold.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 14th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I last night received your letter of the 11th instant by Major De Hart. I am much surprised that you should be in any doubt respecting the route you should take, after the information you have had upon that head, as well by letter as from Major Hoops, who was despatched for the purpose. A large number of boats was procured and is still retained at Tinnicum, under a strong guard, to facilitate your passage across the Delaware. I have so frequently mentioned our situation, and the necessity of your aid, that it is painful to me to add a word on the subject. Let me once more request and entreat you to march immediately for Pitt's Town, which lies on the route that has been pointed out, and is about eleven miles from Tinnicum Ferry. That is more on the flank of the enemy than where you are. Advise me of the time you will arrive there, that a letter may be sent you about your further destination, and such other movements as may be necessary.

The enclosed for Generals Gates and Arnold you will forward by an officer without delay. The former I have requested to come on with the regiments he has, with all possible expedition; the latter to go to the eastward, on the intelligence received from Governour Trumbull. Part of the enemy have advanced as far as Burlington, and their main body, from the best information, is in the neighbourhood of Trenton and at Penny-Town.

The Congress have adjourned from Philadelphia to meet at Baltimore on the 20th instant, and, sensible of the importance of the former, have directed it to be defended to the utmost extremity, to prevent the enemy from possessing it. The fatal consequences that must attend its loss are but too obvious to every one. Your arrival may be the means of saving it; nothing but a respectable force, I am certain, from melancholy experience, can induce the Militia to come in and give their aid. The Roebuck and a sloop of war have arrived in Delaware-Bay, and from the last advices were laying not far within the Capes. I have wrote to General Heath to proceed with his troops, with all possible despatch, to Pitts-Town, where I hope to hear of the arrival of General Gates with the regiments that are with him in a short time, if my information is true.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

P. S. The letters for Generals Gates and Arnold I have sent by another conveyance.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL GATES.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 14th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Before this comes to hand, you will have heard of the melancholy situation of our affairs. I do not mean now to detail our misfortunes. With a handful of men, compared to the enemy's force, we have been pushed through the Jerseys, without being able to make the smallest opposition, and to pass the Delaware. General Howe is now on the other side, and beyond all question means, if possible, to possess himself of Philadelphia. His troops are extended from Penny-Town to Burlington; the main body, from the best advices, at the former, and within the neighbourhood of Trenton. I wish it were in my power to tell you that appearances were much against him. At present I confess they are not. But few of the Militia of this State have yet come out, except those belonging to the city, nor have I any great hope of their assistance, unless we can collect a respectable force; in such case perhaps they will turn out and afford their aid. I have heard that you are coming on with seven regiments. This may have a happy effect; and let me entreat you not to delay a moment in hastening to Pitts-Town. You will advise me of your approaches, and of the time you expect to be there, that I may meet you with an express, and inform you of your destination, and such further movement as may be necessary. I expect General Lee will be there this evening or to-morrow, who will be followed by General Heath and his division. If we can draw our forces together, I trust, under the smiles of Providence, we may yet effect an important stroke, or at least prevent General Howe from executing his plans. Philadelphia is now the object of our immediate care; you know the importance of it, and the fatal consequences that must attend its loss. I am persuaded no aid with you to give, will be withheld a single instant; your arrival may be a most happy circumstance.

The Congress have adjourned to Baltimore, but previously resolved that Philadelphia should be defended to the last extremity. Lord Stirling is going over to meet General Lee, and concert with him a plan of operations. I wish you could be there; and would advise you not to wait the slow march of your troops. I have wrote to General Arnold to go to the eastward, on account of the intelligence from that quarter. His presence there will be of infinite service.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Gates.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LORD STIRLING.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, 14th December, 1776.

Dear Sir: Lest the enemy should in some degree avail themselves of the knowledge, (for I do not doubt but that they are well informed of every thing we do,) I did not care to be so particular in the general orders of this day, as I mean to be in this letter to you.

As much time, then, would be lost (in case the enemy should attempt crossing the river at any pass within your guard of it) in first sending you notice, and the troops to wait for orders what to do, I would advise you to examine the whole river, from the upper to the lower guard of your district; and after forming an opinion of the most probable crossing places, have those well watched, and direct the regiments or companies most convenient to repair, as they can be formed, immediately to the point of attack, and give the enemy all the opposition they possibly can. Every thing in a manner depends upon the defence at the water edge. In like manner, one brigade is to support another, without loss of time, or waiting orders from me.

I would also have you fix upon some central spot convenient to your brigade, but in the rear a little, and on some road leading into the back road to Philadelphia, for your unnecessary baggage, wagons, and stores; that in case your opposition should prove ineffectual, these things may not fall, but be got off, and proceed over Neshamini Bridge towards German-Town, agreeable to the determination of the Board of Officers the other day.

Let me entreat you to cast about to find out some person who can be engaged to cross the river as a spy, that we may, if possible, obtain some knowledge of the enemy's situation, movements, and intention. Particular inquiry to be made by the person sent, if any preparations are making to cross the river; whether any boats are building, and where; whether any are coming across land from Brunswick; whether any great collection of horses are made, and for what purpose, &c. Expense must not be spared in procuring such intelligence, and will readily be paid by me. We are in a neighbourhood of very disaffected people; equal care, therefore, should be taken that one of these persons do not undertake the business, in order to betray us.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Brigadier-General Lord Stirling.

[The same to B. General Mercer. The same to B. General Stephen. The same to B. General De Fermoy.]

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, State of Pennsylvania, 14th December, 1776.

Dear Sir: Having received advice from Governour Trumbull, of the 6th instant, that a large fleet of the enemy's men-of-war and transports had appeared off New-London, without doubt with an intent to make a descent either there or on some part of the coast of New-England, and he desiring that some General Officers might be sent to take the command of the Militia who were assembling, I must desire that you would immediately repair to the States of New-England, and in whichsoever of them you find the enemy landed, or likely to land, that you will, in conjunction with Major-General Spencer, who I have ordered upon the same service, take such measures as in your opinion will be most likely to give opposition to, and frustrate the intents, of the enemy. I shall be glad to hear from you upon your arrival in New-England, with a state of matters as you find them.

I have full confidence in your exerting yourself in this as upon former occasions; and am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Brigadier-General Arnold.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 14th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I last night received your favour of the 10th instant. I am extremely pleased by the ready attention you have paid to my orders, and have only to request that you will proceed with your troops, with all possible expedition, to Pitts-Town, pursuing General Lee's route, and where I expect you will join him. Lose not a moment. The situation of our affairs demands industry and despatch on all hands. Advise me from time to time of your approach, and use your best endeavours to accommodate your troops, and supply them with provisions. Supposing that the enemy mean an impression, I am led to conclude from your letter that you would have advanced so far this way before I could have countermanded your march, that the return of your troops could not afford much assistance, as their time of service would be near expiring, if not out, ere they could arrive; and if we can collect our force speedily, I should hope we may effect something of importance, or at least give such a turn to our affairs as to make them assume a more pleasing aspect than they now have.

I am, dear sir, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Heath.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SPENCER.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, State of Pennsylvania, 14th December, 1776.

Sir: I have just received advices from Governour Trumbull, that a large fleet of the enemy's ships of war and transports were lying off New-London, with an intent to make a descent on some part of New-England. He desires me to send some General Officers to take the command of the Militia who are assembling, to make the best opposition in their power. I must therefore request that you would immediately repair to New-England, and take the command at such place as you may find your presence most necessary. I have ordered General Arnold upon the same service, and beg you may coöperate with him in such measures as will be most conducive to the publick good. If any Militia should have arrived from New-England to replace those who have lately gone home, you will please to leave as many as will, in your opinion and that of the commanding officer at the Highlands, be necessary to guard those passes, and take the remainder with you; or, if you should meet any on their march up, you will please to let as many proceed as will be necessary for the above purpose, (of guarding the Highlands,) and take the remainder back with you.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Spencer.

---

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL HEATH.

German-Town, December 14, 1776.

Dear General: I must beg you to hasten your march as fast as possible, as General Washington writes in the most pressing manner for our troops to come on.

Your most obedient servant,

Jno. Sullivan.

Major-General Heath.

---

COMMISSARY HUGHES TO GENERAL HEATH.

[December 14, 1776.]

Dear General: Colonel Nicoll communicated what of yours related to our department, and I immediately furnished the teams, &c., yesterday morning, and then went to General Spencer's. When I returned last evening, I learnt that they were at King's Ferry, and that the Commissary had not directed them where to proceed; on which I went down and sent them over, with forty-eight barrels of flour and two hogsheads of rum, and sent a note to Colonel Hays to forward them on, &c. Paulding is out of the way, and those here seem at a loss what quantity to send unless it is mentioned.

If any more is wanted, as I expect there will, please to particularize. Can't the provisions be got to your post, sir, by land, if it is sent by water to the slote at Tappan? I should be glad to be informed, as it is very easy to convey it there, no enemy being in the way.

There is a report here, which I cannot credit, and that is, that General Lee is taken. If so, I shall be sorry, and sympathize with him most unfeignedly.

I am, dear General, with great regard and respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

HUGH HUGHES.

The Honourable Major-General Heath.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL GATES.

Tapan, December 14, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I did not receive your favour of the 9th instant until the last evening. Colonel Vose, with the three regiments I before mentioned, arrived at Paramus yesterday morning. I have sent your letter directed to the commanding officer of the troops from Ticonderoga, to him this morning. But that detachment is so short of provisions that they cannot move until a supply comes forward, which will not reach them before to-morrow. In consequence of your request by Colonel Scammell, I have wrote back to Mr. Pawling to send on rum, flour, &c. I am purposing in an hour or two to sweep Hackensack, &c.

I am, dear General, your humble servant,

W. HEATH.

P. S. It is said a reinforcement is sent for to Hackensack, and that wagons are gone to Hobuck for their baggage.

---

CAPTAIN PAINE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Tarry-Town, December 14th day, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As I think it my indispensable duty to let your Excellency know the situation that I and my company are in at present, and what has passed with us: On Wednesday last I dressed myself in disguise and went from Colland, below that place where I now am, and returned the same day. After I had rested one day, I marched with my company to this place, where I am scouting into every quarter, and hope to give a good account of them—of our enemy—soon.

I have this moment heard from the King's Bridge, that the enemy keep a guard near Holland's house, consisting of two or three hundred men; also there is about thirty Hessians at the foot on the hill, and there is no more of the enemy in all that quarter. If you think it best, I will engage them with only my small company; however, I am very certain that a reinforcement of two hundred men will wholly disquiet all the enemy on this side York-Island, which I think will be of the last importance to the poor distressed inhabitants of these parts.

Since the above intelligence, I have seen a man that tells me he has seen two deserters that run from the enemy last night; they say that they consist chiefly of Tories, and of those that was taken on Long-Island, that was lifted out of prison, and wish that we would come.

I shall wait for orders from your Excellency, on whose ability I depend; and am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

BRINTON PAINE.

To Major-General William Heath, near Hackingsack.

---

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO JAMES DUANE.

Fort Constitution, 14th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: When I was at Convention yesterday, old Mr. Lawrence applied to me to recommend his son (a Lieutenant in Colonel Swartwout's regiment, in my brigade) to your Committee, in which case he said you would appoint him an officer in the new Army. I was surprised at his application, as I had recommended him for a Lieutenancy in a former letter to your Committee. I did not choose to give him a second recommendation, lest I might have been mistaken in his character, and did not know but you might know more of him than I did. I thought it therefore best to refuse, till I could see his Colonel and inform myself more fully about him, which I have this day had an opportunity of doing. His Colonel tells me (on his honour) that he believes him to be brave; that though he has been a wild young lord in times past, this campaign he has been attentive to duty and sober, and that he will, in his opinion, make a good First Lieutenant, which is the office he now bears. Indeed, he says he has had the charge of the company the most of this campaign, and has executed it well. This is the Colonel's character and opinion of him, and I place confidence in the Colonel.

I am this far on my march. Several of the Militia regiments are already at the place of rendezvous, near Kakeate, and I must hurry on to join them, to prevent discontents, as they are without covering, provision, and ammunition.

I am your most obedient servant,

GEO. CLINTON.

To James Duane, Esq., Fishkills.

---

JOHN M'KESSON TO JAMES DUANE.

Fishkill, December 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: At the request of Captain Stewart, frequently repeated, and through his solicitation mentioned to me this evening by Colonel Nicholson, I take the liberty to inform you that I have known Alexander McArthur from his infancy; that from many circumstances too tedious for a letter, I know him to be a young man of the strictest integrity, and who has a high sense of honour. He was taught parade discipline by Colonel Ritzema, in the first company which he trained in the city, and devoted himself to a military life in one way or another since that time. He is not deficient as a penman, and has frequently been employed by Colonel Malcom in that way, while in his late regiment.

I beg leave, gentlemen, to recommend to your notice Mr. John I. Myers, a young gentleman who spent several years in my office. His ardent desire for a commission in the service would have been gratified in the year 1775, by an appointment in Colonel McDougall's regiment, if his parents would then have consented. He was a Lieutenant in the company of Militia trained by Major Abner. He has served this campaign as Lieutenant of Captain Henry Brasher's company, in Colonel Malcom's regiment, in which he had a good character. He is stout and active, and has had the charge of that company since Captain Brasher left the regiment. Near a year of his time prior to this campaign, was devoted to the business of guards, detachments of Militia on various occasions, working at fortifications, &c.

In my humble opinion a Second Lieutenancy at least would be well bestowed upon him.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN MCKESSON.

To the Hon. James Duane and John Jay, and to Colonel Charles De Witt, Wm. Duer, Robert Harper, and Lewis Graham, Esquires, and the other Members for arranging the Continental Battalions raising in the State of New-York.

---

ANTHONY RUTGERS TO JAMES DUANE.

Fishkill, December 14th, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty to recommend Lieutenant Cornelius Becker to be provided for in the new arrangement of the Army. I know him to be sober, active, and well-disciplined. He has served this past summer in Captain Lyon's company, of the First New-York Regiment of Continental forces, and is now in service with that regiment in General McDougall's brigade.

I am, with great respect, sir, your very humble servant,

ANTHONY RUTGERS.

To James Duane, Esq., one of the Committee of Convention for arranging the Army, present.

---

APPLICATION OF ANN LEAKE.

Peekskill, 14th December, 1776.

The favour I would ask of the honourable the Convention is, that I may be permitted, with my daughter, servants, and effects, to remove on board your flag, and go to New-York with the family that have got leave to go, (Messrs. Engliss, Moore, and Livingston,) and that if your favour is granted me, my horses, carriage, and coachman may be permitted to go by land, as its most likely there won't be room on board your vessel for them.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your most obedient servant,

ANN LEAKE.

The honourable the Convention.

P. S. If the gentlemen who has obtained the flag should object to our going in it, will it be permitted to get a boat?

JACOB CUYLER TO WILLIAM DUER.

Albany, December 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer hereof is Mr. Barent J. Ten Eyck, who has, in a very serious manner, applied to me why he was not on the last arrangement of officers for the State of New-York. I candidly told him that his character and conduct during the last campaign was of such a nature as that he could not with propriety be appointed as an officer, and that he had been too frequently drunk, and was too apt to pursue such a scandalous practice. He frankly acknowledged it was in a great measure too true, but begged of me to mention his name to some of my friends of the Committee of Arrangement, and has made me all the promises to a reformed life, and that he will accept of a company, which I believe he will soon be able to fill. He certainly is brave, and a very strict officer, and is remarkable to keep his men in the best order. His connexions are great, and very well attached to the American cause. From those motives I am chiefly induced to comply with Mr. Ten Eyck's request, to write you upon the subject, and leave it to the consideration of the Committee.

Colonels Hasen and Livingston, who served in Canada under the late General Montgomery, have directions from Congress to raise each a regiment in any of the States, and to appoint such officers as they may judge proper, who are now in this city and its neighbourhood recruiting, which much deters the filling of Van Schaick's and Gansevoort's regiments.

I am sorry the Regulars continue their march uninterrupted; indeed, it surprised me not after I had seen Mr. Sands's letter. But I must confess I had not expected that Jersey would have behaved so cowardly. Are those the people who cried aloud for independency? Why don't they now support it? I have nothing new from this quarter.

I am, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

JACOB CUYLER.

To William Duer, Esq., Fishkill.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, December 14th, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Thomas Seymour, Benjamin Huntington, Jedediah Elderkin, Esquires.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for one hundred Pounds, in favour of Nathaniel Miner, Esq., Commissary for the Troops at Stonington, and to be in account.—(Order drawn December 14th, 1776; delivered to Mr. Miner.)

Voted, That the Committee of Pay-Table do adjust the accounts of the expense for taking and bringing one John Sheppard to Windham Jail, sent under the care of Mathew Curtiss, Jun., from Newtown, and also the account of the expense and pay of the escort who conducted seventeen Prisoners, by order of the Assembly's Committee, under command of Captain Ezra Starr, and draw orders on the Treasurer for the sum found reasonably and justly due, and that said Committee receive the money found in the hands of said Sheppard, now in the custody of said Curtiss, and lodge the same with said Treasurer, taking his receipt therefor.—(Copy delivered to Colonel Seymour, December 14th, 1776.)

Voted, That Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., be, and he is hereby authorized and desired to draw a letter of credit in favour of the Captain or Commander of the ship Oliver Cromwell, to be made use of to obtain necessary repairs or supplies for said ship in any foreign port where she may fall, and the said Mr. Shaw shall be indemnified by this State against all damage that may accrue to him by means thereof.—(Copy delivered Captain Coit, December 14th, 1776.)

His Honour the Governour is desired to give orders, and to permit Mr. Andrew Huntington and other Commissaries to transport Pork and Flour out of this State to the State of Rhode-Island, to be delivered into the hands of Colonel Champion, Captain Jared Tracy, or Asa Waterman, Jun., for the use of the Connecticut troops in the service in that State.

Resolved by this Board, That Colonel Erastus Wolcott, now at New-London, be requested and ordered to employ all the men under his command he can spare to be cutting and making Fascines as fast as possible, and employ such further number of hands as he thinks proper, in New-London and vicinity thereof, as labourers for said purpose, and have them prepared and brought to Fort Trumbull, in New-London, as soon as may be, and preparations there make for placing of them, so as on any sudden occasion the vacancy on the back of said fort may be filled up with fascines, so as to secure the men who may be in said fort on any sudden attack.

Doct. Albigence Waldo is appointed Chief Surgeon of the ship Oliver Cromwell.

Voted, That an order be drawn on the Pay-Table, in favour of William Lax, for making Carriages, for the sum of £60, and to be in account.—(Order drawn December 14th, 1776, and delivered to Mr. Lax.)

After the Council broke up, drew an order upon the Pay-Table for Gamaliel Babcock, going express to Ticonderoga, for £10, to enable him to bear his expenses, and to be accountable.—(Signed by the Governour.)

---

Providence, Saturday, December 14, 1776.

Saturday morning last, Commodore Sir Peter Parker, with about seventy sail of men-of-war and transports, came into our bay from New-York, and anchored above the harbour at Newport. On Sunday they landed a body of troops under the Generals Clinton and Percy, who took possession of the town, the inhabitants having previously determined that the place was not defensible against the enemy's shipping. The few troops we had on the island retreated to Bristol, leaving behind them some pieces of artillery. By the best accounts yet received, the enemy's troops do not consist of more than five thousand men; among them are a number of Hessians, some Horse, and many invalids. They are intrenching, it is said, at a place called Meeting-House Hill, three miles distant from Bristol Ferry.

From the first appearance of the fleet, the Militia and Independent companies of this State have been in motion, and are since joined by a large body of troops, with some companies of artillery, from the neighbouring States.

The readiness and zeal manifested on the occasion by the troops of this and our sister States, reflect on them the highest credit, and we hope will prove a happy presage of their success, should the enemy attempt to gain a lodgment in this town or penetrate the country.

We hear that the enemy's troops were escorted into Newport by a set of well-known infamous Tories, who have long infested that town, and who may yet possibly meet with the fate justly due to their atrocious villainies.

We learn that two of the enemy's frigates lie at or near Seconet passage, another near Bristol, and a fourth at the north end of Prudence Island.

Some persons, it is said, have been taken up and committed to jail at Newport, for the heinous crime of bearing arms against the King of Great Britain.

Thursday last, a person by the name of Wood was brought to town and committed to jail, having been detected in carrying provisions to Newport.

Thursday last, the honourable General Assembly of this State met here.

Saturday last, two frigates landed some men at one of the Elizabeth Islands, where they burnt two houses and killed and carried off a few sheep. A number of our people landed soon after on the island, killed three of the pirates, and drove the rest on board their ships.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO COLONEL GOLDING.

War Office, Boston, December 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Board having occasion for a quantity of pork and beef, and hearing by Mr. Brown you inclined to contract, herewith send you the terms upon which any quantity within five hundred barrels of beef and one thousand barrels of pork, will be taken in: For good merchantable pork, three shillings, old tenour, per pound; for good merchantable beef, twenty-six shillings, lawful money, per hundred weight.

The Board allow four shillings per barrel for every good white-oak barrel. The Board also find salt. It is expected the beef be delivered at Watertown. You will observe the pork must be delivered there also. The easiest and cheapest method will be to drive and kill near our magazine.

*

In behalf of the Board:

SAM'L P. SAVAGE, President pro tem.

Colonel John Golding and Mr. Malachy Merril.

P. S. What money is necessary will be advanced, security for the performance of the contract being given.

---

MESHECH WEARE TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE DELEGATES AT CONGRESS.

Exeter, December 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By order of the General Assembly, I transmit a resolve of theirs, enclosed in the letter to the President, and desire your attention in getting the money forwarded as soon as possible, as our Treasury is nearly empty. The plenty of paper money, and the depreciation thereof, has such an effect we are fearful of making more. Very considerable quantities of shoes, leather breeches, and some other articles, can be procured here; and if the sum of money requested can be augmented, I think it can be laid out for clothing here.

Great sums have been advanced to the Militia sent to Ticonderoga, New-York, &c. Six hundred are now raising, to march in a few days for New-York, in consequence of a request of General Lee. Such has been the hurry and the amazing difficulties we have had to wade through, (many of which you are well acquainted with,) has hitherto hindered our accounts from being forwarded, but they are now considerably forward, some few outstanding accounts only hindering. And as upon a hasty reflection we have raised, supplied, &c., it will appear that a very large sum is due to us. If some could be transmitted it would now put us in a situation of going forward in the general defence much better than otherwise we can do.

No money can be procured here for the Continental bank, or any other, under six per cent.; and indeed I think no great sums for that. Privateering, buying up prize cargoes, and monopolizing them at any price, seems to be the attention of the mercantile part, who have the money in their hands.

I enclose you an address of several towns in the County of Grafton, to the people at large, (fabricated, I suppose, at Dartmouth College,) and calculated to stir up contentions and animosities among us at this difficult time, especially as our Government is only temporary, and the state of matters not allowing a revisal. However, this pamphlet, with assiduity of the College gentlemen, has had such an effect, that almost the whole County of Grafton, if not the whole, have refused to send members to the new Assembly, which is to meet next Wednesday.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE.

To Matthew Thornton and William Whipple.

---

VOTES OF TOWNS OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE ON ELECTING REPRESENTATIVES.

State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE:

The Government and People of said State to the Selectmen of HANOVER, in said State, greeting:

You are hereby required to notify the legal inhabitants paying taxes in the towns of Hanover, Canaan, and Cardigan, (giving them fifteen days notice,) to meet at some convenient place in your town, to elect one person, having a real estate of the value of two hundred pounds lawful money in this State, to represent them in the Assembly, to be held at Exeter, on the third Wednesday in December next, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and to empower such Representative, for the term of one year from their first meeting, to transact such business and pursue such measures as they may judge necessary for the publick good. And the person who shall be elected you are to notify that he attend at time and place above-mentioned.

And at said meeting, each voter, as aforesaid, on one paper, is to bring in votes for one person, being a reputable freeholder and inhabitant within your County, having a real estate of two hundred pounds, to serve as members of the Council for the year ensuing.

And the Clerk of your town is hereby directed to seal up all such votes under cover, and send them to the house of Mr. Green, in Wentworth, in your County, by the second Wednesday in December next, directed to Francis Worcester, Charles Johnson, and Abel Chandler, a Committee appointed to receive them.

And it is Resolved, That no person be allowed a seat in Council or Assembly, who shall, by himself or any person for him, before said choice, treat with liquor, &c., any elector, with an apparent view of gaining their votes, or afterwards on that account.

And make return of this writ, with your doings thereon, into the Secretary's Office at Exeter, by the third Wednesday in December next.

M. WEARE, President.
P. WHITE, Speaker.

By order of the Council and Assembly:

E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

Exeter, September 30th, 1776.

---

Hanover, November 27th, 1776.

Pursuant to the within precept, we notified the inhabitants paying taxes in the towns of Hanover, Canaan, and Cardigan, to meet at the Meeting-house in said Hanover this day, for the purposes within mentioned, who being met, passed the following Votes, viz:

1st. Voted unanimously, That the Address of the inhabitants of this and other towns, to the people of the several towns through this Colony, published by their Committees in July last, is truly expressive of our sentiments respecting representation, and the unconstitutional formation and procedures of the present Assembly of this State.

2d. Voted unanimously, That we will not choose a Representative, as directed in the precept issued by the Assembly of this State, for the following reasons, viz:

1. Because no plan of representation is as yet formed in this State consistent with the liberties of a free people, in that the people have not universally had a full representation in any Assembly since the State was declared independent of the Crown of Great Britain, by which declaration we conceive that the powers of Government reverted to the people at large, and, of course, annihilated the political existence of the Assembly which then was; notwithstanding which they have since presumed to act in the name of the people, and in their precept undertake to prescribe and limit the mode of proceedure in our choice of a Representative, while it does not appear that they are to be chosen for the purpose of recognizing the rights of the people and assuming such Government as shall be agreeable to them, though nothing of that nature has at any time been done in this State, except a plan formed by the Representatives of a part of this State, by which the whole rights of the people are assumed by that House.

2. Because the precept, in consequence of which this meeting was called, is inconsistent with the liberties of a free people, in that it directs to have different corporate towns (who have a right to act by themselves in all cases) to unite for the purpose of choosing a Representative and Counsellor.

3. Because it limits us in our choice to a person who has real estate of two hundred pounds, lawful money; whereas we conceive that there ought to be no pecuniary restriction, but that every elector is capable to be elected.

3d. Voted unanimously, That the Selectmen be directed to make return of the foregoing vote, with the reasons annexed, together with the precept, to the Assembly proposed to be held at Exeter, on the third Wednesday in December next.

4th. Voted unanimously, That we will not give in our votes for a Counsellor as directed in the precept:

1. Because we can see no important end proposed by their creation, unless to negative the proceedings of the House of Representatives, which we humbly conceive ought not to be done in a free State.

2. Because every elector ought to have a voice in the choice of each Counsellor, (in cases where they are needful,) and not be restricted in his choice to any particular limits within the State. For which reason we protest against any Counsellor being chosen in this County as directed in the precept.

5th. Voted unanimously, That the Clerk be directed to make return of the last Vote, with the reasons annexed, and our Protest, as the precept directs, relative to vote for a Counsellor.

6th. Voted, That this meeting be dissolved.

And it was accordingly dissolved.

Attest: ICHABOD FOWLER,
THOMAS DURKEE,
Selectmen of Hanover.

—

At a meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Lyme, legally warned, and convened at the house of Ebenezer Green, Esq., on Monday, the 25th of November, and continued by adjournment to Monday, the 2d of December instant:

1st. Voted, That the pamphlet lately published by the Committee of the towns of Lyme, Hanover, Lebanon, and Plainfield, is truly expressive of our sentiments on Representation, and the unconstitutional formation and proceedings of the present Assembly.

2d. Voted, That we cannot comply with the precept issued to this town, in conjunction with five other towns, for choosing a Representative, for the reasons following, viz: Because the present plan of Representation is entirely inconsistent with a free State, where every corporate town hath an undoubted right to act for themselves in choosing a member of the Legislative body; because the elections are limited to persons of £200, lawful money, real estate, for their choice, whereas every elector in free States is capable of being elected.

3d. Voted, That the Clerk be directed to make returns of our reasons for our non-compliance, to the proposed Assembly that is to sit at Exeter, on the third Wednesday of December next.

Voted, That we cannot comply with the direction to the choice of a Counsellor in manner proposed in the precept, for the reasons following: First, Because that in every free State the people have an undoubted right to their voice in the choice of the whole Council, either by themselves or their Representatives; secondly, because we cannot see any good proposed by confining the electors to certain limits within the State for their choice.

3d. Voted, That the Clerk be directed to make return of our reasons for non-compliance to the Committee appointed for the receiving of the votes for a Counsellor, and also to enter a protest against the choice.

Test: JONA. CHILD, Town Clerk.

—

The reasons why we do not join with the towns of Unity, Acworth, Lempster, Saville, Croydon, and Newport, as we did last year, in choosing a Representative, is this, viz: Then we supposed they was to act only upon the present exigencies of the Government; but now the case is much altered. The honourable Continental Congress has declared their independence of Great Britain; therefore we think that the present Assembly has not taken right methods in issuing out their precepts for the choice of Representatives and Counsellors for the year ensuing; for, in the first place, they have, as to Representatives in some incorporated towns, allowed two or three Representatives; to others they have joined five or six towns together, whereas we think every incorporated town ought to be represented by themselves. Then, as to Counsellors, in one County they have ordered five, in some two, and in one County but one, which we look upon not according to liberty; for as this State is but one body, we think they ought to be chose by the people at large. And also they have ordered that neither of these shall have a seat in the Assembly without they have real estate to the value of two hundred pounds, lawful money; whereas we think every lawful elector is a subject to be elected.

Voted, That the above reasons be sent to the Council and Assembly of this State, which is to convene together at Exeter, the third Wednesday of this instant, and that the Town Clerk shall sign it in behalf of the town.

This done at a legal town meeting, Acworth, December 9th, 1776.

THOMAS PUTNAM, Moderator.

A true copy. Attest: SAM'L SILSBY, Town Clerk.

To the honourable Council and Assembly of the Colony of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, to be convened and assembled at EXETER, on the third WEDNESDAY of DECEMBER instant:

The petition of the inhabitants of the towns of Marlow, Alstead, and Surrey, humbly showeth: That whereas it is the advice and direction of the Continental Congress relative to the assuming Civil Government in this Colony, have advised and directed the Provincial Congress of this Colony, previous to their assuming a form of Civil Government, that they at their Convention do grant warrants for a full and free election of Representatives in this Colony; and whereas various coupling of various towns together in the western parts of Colony, and allowing but one Representative to a coupling, and we being differently treated from the major parts of this Colony, who are allowed a Representative to each town; and whereas the towns of Marlow, Alstead, and Surrey, are towns incorporated with all invariable privileges and immunities that any other towns do or may enjoy in this Colony, and being thus coupled together, as aforesaid, are abridged or curtailed of the privilege of each individual town electing a Representative, which we humbly conceive cannot be construed to be a full and free election or representation of the said Colony, agreeable to the advice of the Continental Congress above recited; we, therefore, your humble petitioners, would beseech the honourable Council and House of Representatives, that previous to the further pursuing the plan of Civil Government, that there may warrants be granted for a full and free election or representation of each of the individual towns above-mentioned, pursuant to the advice of the Continental Congress aforesaid; thus shall your humble petitioners, as in duty bound, ever pray.

SAM'L GRISTIN, WOOLSTON BROCKWAY,
ABSALOM KINGSBURY, JONATHAN SMITH,
Committee from Marlow, Alstead, and Surrey.

Dated Colony of New-Hampshire, Marlow, December 11th, A. D. 1776.

—

To Mr. MICHAEL CREASY, Representative for the Town of CHESTERFIELD, in the State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE:

SIR: Whereas it having pleased Almighty God to humble the people of this land, by permitting the tyrant of Great Britain and his minions, in the fullness of their rage, to prevail against them, by subverting the civil constitution of every Province in his late American dominions, affecting thereby the activity of law and justice, and the introduction of vice and profaneness, attended with domestick confusion, and all the calamities attendant on a dissolution of the power of Civil Government, which, in this alarming progress, have made it absolutely necessary for each State to separate itself from that land from whence their forefathers were exiled by the cruel hand of tyranny, and to form for itself, under the Ruler of all the earth, such plans of Civil Government as the people thereof should think most conducive to their own safety and advantage. Notwithstanding the importance of an equitable system of Government, as it affects ourselves and our posterity, we are brought to the disagreeable necessity of declaring, that it is our candid opinion that the State of New-Hampshire, instead of forming an equitable plan of Government, conducing to the peace and safety of the State, have been influenced by the iniquitous intrigues and secret designations of persons unfriendly, to settle down upon the dregs of Monarchical and Aristocratical tyranny, in imitation of their late British oppressor. We can by no means imagine ourselves so far lost to a sense to the natural rights and immunities of ourselves and our fellow men, as to imagine that the State can be either safe or happy under a constitution formed without the knowledge or particular authority of a great part of its inhabitants; a constitution which no man knows the contents of, except that the whole Legislative power of the State is to be entirely vested in the will and pleasure of a House of Representatives, and that chosen according to the sovereign determination of their own will, by allowing to some towns sundry voices in the said House, others but one, and others none; and in a Council of twelve men, five of which are always to be residents of Rockingham County, who, by the assistance of two others of said Council, have the power of a casting voice in all State affairs. Thus we see the important affairs of the State liable to be converted to the advantage of a small part of the State, and the emolument of its offices, by reason of the other part of the State not having an equal or equitable share in the Government to counterbalance the designs of the other. You are therefore authorized and instructed to exert yourself to the utmost to procure a redress of the afore-mentioned grievances, and in case they will not comply, to return home for further instructions.

SOLOMON HARVEY, per order Com.

Chesterfield, December ye 12th, 1776.

---

The Inhabitants of the Towns of HAVERHILL, LYMAN, BATH, GUNTHWAIT, LANDAFF, and MORRISTOWN.

At a meeting legally warned, in consequence of a precept from the Assembly at Exeter, for the purpose of choosing a Representative, as also to give in their votes for a Counsellor for the County of Grafton, having refused a compliance with said precept, have chosen us, the subscribers, a Committee to return the precept, together with the reasons of their non-compliance; which reasons are as follows, viz:

First. Because no plan of Representation has yet been formed in this State consistent with the liberties of a free people; and it is our humble opinion, that when the Declaration of Independency took place, the Colonies were absolutely in a state of nature, and the powers of Government reverted to the people at large, and of consequence annihilated the political existence of the Assembly which then was.

Secondly. Because the precept directs to have a number of different towns (who have an undoubted right to act by themselves separately) to unite for the purpose of choosing a Representative and Counsellors.

Thirdly. Because we are limited in our choice of a Representative to a person who has a real estate of two hundred pounds, lawful money; whereas we conceive that every elector is capable of being elected.

Fourthly. Because that no Bill of Rights has been drawn up, or form of Government come into, agreeable to the minds of the people of this State, by any Assembly peculiarly chosen for that purpose, since the Colonies were declared independent of the Crown of Great Britain.

Fifthly. We refuse to give our votes for a Counsellor, because we conceive that in a free State there ought not to be a Council invested with the power to negative the proceedings of the House of Representatives.

Sixthly. Because, if a Council is necessary, every elector ought to have a voice in the choice of each Counsellor, and not to be restricted to any particular limits within this State.

For which reasons we protest against a Counsellor being chosen in this County, as directed in the precept.

EPH'M WESSON, ELISHA CLEAVELAND,
JOHN YOUNG, JAMES BAYLEY,
JOHN CLARK,
Committee.

Haverhill, December 13th, 1776.

---

CLAUDE CRESPIGNY TO RALPH IZARD.

Bath, England, December 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: It is near a fortnight since I was favoured with yours. I am much ashamed not to have thanked you for it before. No news yet arrived from New-York. I begin to think that Sir W. Howe will be satisfied with New-York for his winter quarters, and will finish the glorious campaign without attempting to force Washington's lines. Mr. Burgoyne, since his return, I find, affects great silence, and only says, that Carleton intends to begin the next campaign as early as possible with the attack of Ticonderoga. Dacre, who was sent home with the account of the success upon the lakes, does justice to Arnold, and acknowledges that the disposition of his force, the defence he made against so superiour an enemy, and the management of his retreat, all did him great honour. Every one, as you may imagine, is impatient to hear from the Howes. The Ministerialists pretend to fear that they are treating with the Rebels, and are inclined to give too good terms, before they have given them a hearty drubbing—their very words. For my own part, I totally despair of any amicable settlement of the dispute, and sincerely lament the bruises that both parties must receive. At the same time I most heartily execrate the authors of the mischief, and detest still more, if possible, their senseless addressors, who are still crying out for more vengeance, and for risking every thing, rather than not have their full of it.

As to the French and Spaniards, they hold in contempt the idea of their interference; and if they should be such fools, why, we will kill them too.

Admiral Keppel has (upon being applied to) accepted the command of the grand fleet of observation, which is intended for the protection of this country against our natural enemies, at the same time fully declaring his perseverance in his sentiments of the impolicy of our contest with our fellow-subjects of America. He seems just the same as last year—very well in health, but still afflicted with the spasms in his legs. He desires, as does Mr. Rogers, his best compliments to you and Mrs. Izard. When you have fixed upon your time for leaving England, I hope you will acquaint me with it. My wife unites with me in best regards to you, Mrs. Izard, and all your family.

I am, dear sir, very heartily, yours,

CLAUDE CRESPIGNY.

---

ANDREW BUCHANAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore County, December 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received yours per Colonel Ewing, and have given the necessary orders to your Militia to hold themselves ready to march at short notice. I am asked by the Militia how they are to be provided with tents, arms, baggage wagons, &c. It would be necessary to let me know how they are to be procured. If those necessaries are not provided before orders are given for the Militia to march, it will retard them much.

I am, gentlemen, yours, &c., AND. BUCHANAN.

The honourable Council of Safety, Maryland.

---

GENERAL ARMSTRONG TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, 15th December, 1776.

SIR: I am now ordered by General Washington to attempt sundry pieces of publick service, part whereof were to have been verbally opened to Congress; but as your late adjournment forbids me that pleasure, I can only by this letter inform you what these intended services are.

The General, under the last necessity, not knowing how far a strong and elated enemy may design to avail themselves of your circumstances by a rapid winter campaign, has desired me, as far as weather and strength will admit, to traverse the sundry parts of the State of Pennsylvania, to inspirit the Militia occasionally to turn out, and to aid the recruiting service by prompting the younger men to inlist, and to appoint proper places for magazines of provisions on a certain direction, naming the quantities to be laid in at each place. I mean quantity in the first instance; and have accordingly ordered the Commissary, Mr. Wharton, to lay in at the gulph mill, on the west side of Schuylkill, eight days' provisions for ten thousand men; at Lancaster, three months' ditto for twelve thousand—and further thought, would now rather direct half the last quantity at Right's Ferry, which yet may be easily corrected; at York-Town for five thousand, three months; with quantities of forage at each place.

Carlisle and Lebanon left to further consideration for the same purposes, and the above sent to the General for his inspection, &c. I am of opinion that too much cannot well be got, and that three months' salt provisions for forty thousand men ought to be in reserve for next summer.

Give me leave to inform your Honour, I am charged by the General to signify to Congress his earnest wishes that an augmentation of the Continental Army at least to that of one hundred battalions in the whole, may early be thought of and concluded; as, considering the efforts of the enemy to bring more foreign troops, and the uncertainty of our Militia, the expediency of the measure appears beyond a doubt; nor can any man answer, from the present prevailing spirit in several of the middle States, that the arms of tyranny will not be augmented from this side the water.

Permit me to mention the article of small-arms, by which I mean at least the middle size musket and bayonet, and salt, as perhaps requiring the first attention. Please to forgive the notice taken of these last; is not meant to offend the anxiety and vigilance of Congress already exerted to procure them, but only to revive the idea, and show the pressing necessity of more, persuaded as I am that a number of men may be got, but without arms; and of those you have, many are insufficient, and the scarcity of salt like to discourage our people at large.

I thought to have talked with the General on the subject of Light-Horse, but forgot it through the pressing in of other things.

If Congress should have any further commands, I may be at Carlisle about three weeks hence, or from that place they may be sent to me; and have the honour to be, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

P. S. General Smallwood is immediately required to proceed on the business of inspiriting the Militia, as there may be an occasion, through the State of Maryland, and encouraging the recruiting service in the same. That gentlemen, now in Maryland, should have early notice given him.

The Hon. John Hancock.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GEN. WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 15th, 1776.

SIR: General Mifflin sent three hundred suits of clothes to Neshamine Ferry, with orders that they remain there until your Excellency should direct them to be sent forward. On the representation of the commanding officer of the Pennsylvania regiment, that his men are greatly distressed for want of necessary clothing at this very inclement season of the year, we have ordered the said clothes to the quarters of that regiment, that, should your Excellency think proper to direct a distribution to them, they may be at hand for that purpose.

A quantity of clothing had been provided by this State for their regiment, which we found necessary to give out amongst the new recruits for Continental service raised in this city out of the men lately returned from the Army, that they may be distinguished; for want of it, some of them had inlisted many times over, and it was found impossible to imbody them, or command their services. We take the liberty to hint these particulars, that your Excellency may judge of the propriety of having these clothes distributed among said regiment in lieu of their clothing, which was supplied to the recruits. Nevertheless, we would by no means presume to dictate to your Excellency, nor would we wish such an appropriation should in any wise interfere with the publick good, of which your Excellency must be a more competent judge, and in whose determination we have the most implicit confidence.

We have sent a quantity of old clothes, collected from the charitable and well-disposed inhabitants, to be presented to such of the Army as are most necessitous, until we can provide such as are more suitable for the soldiery.

Since we had the honour of writing the 14th instant to your Excellency, we have reason to believe the Militia of Lancaster, York, and Cumberland, are turning out with becoming spirit. We are likewise certainly informed that two battalions, amounting to several hundred men, Jersey Militia, are at Cooper's Ferry; two battalions are on their march from Dover, three from Lancaster, and one from Chester; so that we have no doubt your Excellency will soon have a sufficient reinforcement to check the progress of the enemy.

By order of Council.

I have the honour to be, with much respect, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. WHARTON, Jun., President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

COLONEL CADWALADER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Bristol, 15th December, 1776.

SIR: I received your despatches to-day, and have sent Captain Alexander's company to Philadelphia.

Mr. Symes (Lieutenant in R. H. Emigrants, who now acts as assistant Aid-de-Camp to General Howe) came over from Burlington this morning, with a number of officers and privates, to be exchanged. He says that General Lee was taken by surprise last Friday afternoon, by about thirty Light-Horse. Captain Murray, one of the prisoners, informs me that Captain Montresure told him the same story at Trenton, and he has no doubt of the fact.

Symes tells me that a considerable body of the enemy are near Burlington, and will march in about noon. Captain Murray confirms this, but cannot certainly ascertain the number, but gives the following account of the arrangement of the enemy's Army for the winter: That the main Army was at or near Trenton; a large body had prepared to march to Brunswick yesterday, for the winter, which place was to be Head-Quarters; five hundred men at Burlington, five hundred at Bordentown, five hundred at Trenton, and a number to each town in that part of the country, equal to its size. This was the conversation at Trenton among the officers and inhabitants, who have submitted and joined the enemy. I have sent several persons over for intelligence, and last night sent Captain Shippen, with twenty good men.

One of the men sent yesterday morning to Mount Holly to inquire whether the enemy had gone that way, he there conversed with a man well known for his attachment to our cause, who informed him that six hundred lay last night at the Black-Horse, about nine miles from Burlington. He saw them on their march in the following order: the advanced party of two hundred near the Black-Horse; two hundred at Mansfield Meeting; two hundred at the Rising-Sun, or Square. The line extended about three miles; but the whole were to march to the Black-Horse. They had five brass field-pieces. On his return he came through Burlington, and was there informed that the troops seen at Black-Horse were the advanced party of about two thousand Hessians. General Ewing informed me yesterday that upwards of two thousand Hessians were seen going into Bordentown, in the afternoon. I have sent off the man who came over this morning to ascertain the facts.

If there is not more than five or six hundred men in Burlington to-night, and no body to sustain them if attacked, I shall attack them about daylight to-morrow morning.

The person sent over to-day is a very intelligent, spirited officer in the Jersey regulars, and I hope will give me information time enough to make the necessary preparations. I have ordered two officers to go up Neshaminy, and make the observations you recommended, and shall transmit the report to you as soon as possible.

General Howe is certainly gone to New-York, unless the whole is a scheme to amuse and surprise. I shall, from time to time, inform you of every material piece of intelligence.

I am, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient, very humble servant,

JOHN CADWALADER.

P. S. Messrs. John, Andrew, and William Allen, are at Trenton. Captain Murray saw them.

---

COLONEL CADWALADER TO ROBERT MORRIS.

Bristol, 15th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Lieutenant Symes, of R. H. Emigrants, came over to-day from Burlington with a number of prisoners for exchange. He says that General Lee was surprised and taken on Friday afternoon, by about thirty Light-Horse. Captain Murray, one of the prisoners of Colonel Atlee, tells me there is no doubt of this report, and that Captain Montresure informed him of it at Trenton. He says Messrs. John, Andrew, and William Allen, are at Trenton; that General Howe set off yesterday for York. The main Army was near Trenton, but a large body was to set off yesterday for Brunswick. About five hundred Hessians are now on their march for Burlington. Whether there is a large body behind we cannot yet learn; but the story abroad was, that the main Army was to quarter at Brunswick; the small town on the river to be garrisoned. Perhaps this may be given out to amuse. A Captain Alexander went off yesterday, agreeable to orders. I should have sent him sooner, but I received only a verbal message. Damn dark! But now is our time, if the people have virtue. For God's sake, why did you remove from Philadelphia? You have given an invitation to the enemy; you have discovered a timidity that encourages our enemy and dispirits our friends. You have given a stab to your credit; and, if you can pay off your present Army, I believe you cannot find money to raise a new one. The city cannot be taken by surprise. You should have left the city when our troops retreated to it. The only way to remedy the evils that may follow from this impolitick step is to return. It will have the effect, almost, of a victory. Some good stroke may revive the spirits of some, and the ravages of the enemy will enrage others, so as to produce an Army in the spring equal to our wants. The sky may fall, or some lucky circumstance happen, that may give a turn to our affairs. A good face among men in power keeps up the spirits of the people, and one cheerful countenance may do wonders. I have run off with complaints, and am lead to make them by the d——d gloomy countenances seen wherever I go except among the soldiers. Are the people coming from the back country?

I am, sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

JOHN CADWALADER.

To the Hon. Robert Morris, Esq., Philadelphia.

---

[COLONEL WILLIAM GRAYSON] TO COLONEL CADWALADER.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's House, December 15th, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency has desired me to acquaint you that, by advice received last night from a prisoner who was servant to Captain Bell, Aid-de-Camp to General Vaughan, he is informed that the enemy intend to return back; indeed, the number of wagons which have been moving down towards Borden-Town, seems to favour this intelligence. His Excellency thinks they have a design of sending their forage wagons and baggage by the route of South-Amboy, and that they present us a front on the river for the purpose of effectually covering them, while by sending them that road, they secure them against a forced march from General Lee; for should he cross their line, they would have it in their power to cross his. However, the General is by no means certain that this is the case; he therefore desires you will exert yourself to the utmost of your ability, and by every method in your power, in discovering the movements and intention of the enemy; in particular he requests you will be extremely attentive in finding out whether any number of wagons have filed off across the country towards South-Amboy, either at Borden-Town or Burlington. Should you, upon inquiry, discover that these are their views, and that these forage wagons have small escorts, and that there is a strong probability that an attempt on them may be made with success, then you are to endeavour to effect so salutary a purpose, by sending proper parties to secure them.

I am, sir, with great respect, &c.,

W. G., A. D. C.

To Colonel John Cadwalader, Pennsylvania Militia.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 20th.]

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 15, 1776.

SIR: About one o'clock to-day I received a letter from General Sullivan, a copy of which you have enclosed. I will not comment on the melancholy intelligence which it contains, only adding, that I sincerely regret General Lee's unhappy fate, and feel much for the loss of my country in his captivity.

In respect to the enemy, they have been industrious in their attempts to procure boats and small craft, but as yet their efforts have not succeeded. From the latest advices that I have of their movements, by some prisoners and others, they appear to be leaving Trenton, and to be filing off towards Princeton and Allentown. What their designs are, whether they mean to retreat or only a feint, cannot be determined. I have parties out to watch their motions, and to form, if possible, an accurate opinion of their plans. Our force since my last has received no augmentation; of course by sickness and other causes has diminished. But I am advised by a letter from the Council of Safety, which just came to hand, that Colonels Burd and Galbraeth are marching with their battalions of Militia, and also that some small parties are assembling in Cumberland County.

By Captain Murray, who is just returned from his imprisonment, we are informed that Messrs. John, Andrew, and William Allen, are at Trenton. The fact I suppose is to be depended on, as Captain Murray is acquainted with them, and saw 'em himself, according to the report he has made.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Germantown, December 13, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: It gives me the most pungent pain to inform your Excellency of the sad stroke America must feel in the loss of General Lee, who was this morning taken by the enemy near Vealtown. He ordered me yesterday morning to march for this place early, which I did, and by some fatality he was induced to go to Barnett's Town, nearer the enemy by three miles than we were. Some Tories doubtless gave information, and this morning seventy of the Light-Horse surrounded the house, and after a gallant resistance by him and his domestics, he was made a prisoner. I have taken every step to regain him, but almost despair of it. I received your Excellency's letters to him of the 10th and 11th instant, and shall endeavour to join the Army as soon as possible. A French gentleman, whose name is wrote on the cover that encloses this, (Captain De Vernejoul.) behaved with great bravery in defending the General; and had his advice been taken, the General would have escaped.

Dear General, I most heartily sympathize with you and my country in this affecting loss; and am your most obedient servant,

JNO. SULLIVAN.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 15th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: About one o'clock to-day I received your letter of the 13th, and sincerely regret, with you, the unhappy fate of General Lee. I know his feelings upon the occasion, and I know the loss our country must sustain in his captivity. The event has happened, and I refer you to the several letters which I had wrote him, and to one which now goes to Lord Stirling, and to my Lord himself, who, I presume, is with you, and who was fully possessed of my ideas when he left me, for the measures you and he may judge necessary to adopt.

I am, dear sir, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Sullivan.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 15th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: With the utmost regret I must inform you of the loss our Army has sustained by the captivity of General Lee, who was made a prisoner on the morning of the 13th, by a party of seventy of the enemy's Light-Horse, near a place called Vealtown, in the Jerseys. For the particulars, I refer you to the enclosed from General Sullivan.

The spirit of disaffection that appears in this country, I think deserves your serious attention. Instead of giving any assistance in repelling the enemy, the Militia have not only refused to obey your general summons and that of their commanding officers, but I am told exult at the approach of the enemy and our late misfortunes.

I beg leave to submit to your consideration, whether such people are to be trusted with arms in their hands. If they will not use them for us, there is the greatest reason to apprehend they will against us, if opportunity offers. But even supposing they claimed a right of remaining neuter: in my opinion we ought not to hesitate a moment in taking their arms, which will be so much wanted in furnishing the new levies. If such a step meets your approbation, I leave it to you to determine upon the mode. If you think fit to empower me, I will undertake to have it done as speedily and effectually as possible. You must be sensible that the utmost secrecy is necessary, both in your deliberations on, and in the execution of, a matter of this kind; for if the thing should take wind, the arms would presently be conveyed beyond our reach, or rendered useless.

Your favours of the 13th and 14th instant are this moment come to my hands. I am glad to find, from the latter, that the Militia of Lancaster County are in motion; and I am in hopes that General Mifflin's appearance in the different Counties will have as good an effect as it had in Philadelphia. I have received information that the body of the enemy which lay at Pennington, under Lord Cornwallis, moved this morning back towards Princetown; if so, it looks as if they were going into quarters; and this corresponds with the account brought last night by a prisoner, a servant belonging to General Vaughan's family, who says he heard his master talk of going soon into winter quarters. The body, that lay at Trenton, are likewise filing off towards Allentown and Bordentown, with their baggage; which makes me conjecture they are taking the road to South-Amboy. I have a number of small parties out to make discoveries; and if the motions of the enemy are really such as I have mentioned above, I shall soon have information of it. In the mean time, my troops are so stationed as to prevent them from crossing the river at any place without our knowledge. But I am in great hopes that the disappointment in boats, and the lateness of the season, which now begins to put on the face of winter, will prevent their making any attempt upon Philadelphia till spring. This, however, should not in the least slacken your exertions in making the necessary preparations for the fortification and defence of the city, by land and water; for you may be assured that will be their first and great object in the spring.

I have the honour to be, &c., Go. Washington.

To the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania.

---

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL HEATH.

Sir: I have altered my route to Easton, where I now intend to cross Delaware if possible this night, as I have intelligence of a large body of the enemy being about twenty miles yesterday afternoon on my left. They may possibly intercept your march, therefore would advise you to take no notice of my line of march here, but follow the straightest direction to Easton. This, I am informed, is from Morris-Town to Black River, thence to or near Hackett's Town, thence to Easton is, I am told, a good road to facilitate your march.

Dear sir, I am your most obedient servant,

Jno. Sullivan.

Major-General Heath.

---

COLONEL MOYLAN TO GENERAL HEATH.

Morristown, 15th December, 1776.

My dear General: I had hopes of meeting you or Gates at this place, but am informed that you are at or about Topan; that General Gates is passed across the country higher up. My business was to push on Lee's and Gates's armies to join with General Washington. I have hopes that they will both effect it, though I must own I have my apprehensions of those under Sullivan being intercepted, except he puts in execution what I recommended to him, which was to make a forced march yesterday, to get to the ferry last evening; if he did, the troops could be got across in the night. As it was but eighteen miles from the place he was at, it might have been executed, and he could have sent his baggage higher up the river, to the place where Gates will cross. I had no orders for you. What the General gave me in command was, to proceed to General Lee, to push him forward. The day I came up with his Army was the day when he was so unfortunately taken prisoner. I was to proceed from him to push on Greaton's, Bond's, Porter's, Patterson's, Stark's, Poor's, and Reed's, which, I suppose, are with Gates and Arnold. I will follow this day, if I can find out their route, which is a very difficult matter. Should you come this way with your troops, it will be necessary to send some person two days before you, to provide bread and other provisions for you; without this, you will find this place very destitute of all sorts of necessaries. There is neither hay or grain for your horses.

God bless you, my dear General; believe me your assured, humble servant,

Stephen Moylan.

---

DEPOSITIONS RELATIVE TO THE CONDUCT AND BEHAVIOUR OF THE BRITISH ARMY.

Samuel Young, being solemnly sworn and interrogate: That he was taken prisoner at Fort Washington, by the English Army, on Saturday, the day of ; that he was carried a few miles with the other prisoners that night, and kept in some out-houses till Monday, when they came to New-York, and there were confined, he and others, to the number of about five hundred, in a stable, and that all this while they had no victuals given them of any kind till the Monday night; that their enemies then threw into the stable, in a confused manner, as if to so many hogs, a quantity of old biscuit, broken and in crumbs, mostly moulded, and some of it crawling with maggots, which they were obliged to scramble for, without any division; that the next day they had a little pork given to each of them, which they were obliged to eat raw, and that afterwards they got sometimes a bit of pork, and at other times biscuit, peas, and rice. Being confined about two weeks in a church in New-York, that afterwards they were carried on board a ship, where about five hundred of them were confined below deck; that during their confinement they suffered greatly with cold, not being allowed any fire; that they are all along treated with the greatest indignity, and insulted by soldiers, by the inhabitants of New-York, by numbers of women, and even by negroes; that great numbers died in this confinement, some times three, sometimes four, or more, every day, and one day nine died; and that they themselves are in a frail state of health, occasioned by this barbarous usage; and many of them who were released died upon the road before they reached home.

Samuel Young,
William Houston.

Sworn before us, December 15th, 1776:

Robert Smith,
James Proudfoot, } Ministers.

James Shannon in all things says the same, except as to his present state of health, which is now good, though formerly very poor, and declares he cannot write.

Samuel Young, being solemnly sworn after the manner used in Scotland, by lifting up the right hand, and interrogate, deposeth, &c.

Mr. William Houston, being sworn in the same manner, deposeth in every thing the same as Samuel Young, above.

William Houston, James Shannon, also sworn in the same manner, says the same, &c.

William Darlington, a private in Captain Wallace's company of the Flying-Camp of Pennsylvania, on his solemn oath, testified, that they, the prisoners, were very roughly used at Harlaem, on their way from Fort Washington to New-York; that at New-York eight hundred of them were stowed into a house called New-Bridewell; that it was a cold, open house, the windows not glazed; that on the Monday they received their provisions; that they had not one mouthful from early on the unfortunate Saturday morning until then; that then, and so on afterwards, their rations for three days, each individual, were one half pound of biscuit, half a pound of pork, a half pint of peas, half a gill of rice, and half an ounce of butter; the whole not more than enough for one good meal; that they were defrauded of this petty allowance, two days' rations, each week; that they had no straw or hay to lie on; and no fuel, but one cart-load, per week, for the eight hundred men; that at nine of the clock at evening, the Hessian guards would come in and put out the fires, and lay on the poor prisoners with heavy clubs for sitting round the fire; that the water was very bad, as well as their bread, beyond all comparison bad, except once, good biscuit, and once good baker's bread; that they began to die like rotten sheep, with cold, hunger, and dirt; that those prisoners who had any good wearing apparel, such as buckskin breeches or good coats, were necessitated to sell them, to purchase bread to keep them alive; that the enemy seemed to take a kind of infernal pleasure in their sufferings.

Signed by Wm. Darlington.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Hackensack, December 15th, 1776.

Dear General: On the 12th instant I reached Tupan, and yesterday made a forced march to this place with so much secrecy and despatch that the inhabitants had no knowledge of my coming. The enemy had left the town some days since, except five, whom we took; two of them sick. We have taken about fifty of the disaffected, and about fifty or sixty muskets, the greater part of which had been taken from the Whigs, as is supposed, and stored. At the dock we found one sloop, loaded with hay, house furniture, some spirits, &c., which we have this day unloaded. A brig, loaded, run down the river about seven miles, and got aground. I am afraid that we shall not be able to secure the effects. A schooner, loaded with hay, furniture, &c., which had sailed from the dock, ran on the bank of the river, the wind being very fresh, and in the night overset, by which the goods were damaged, if not lost.

Two or three companies have been raising here and in the vicinity, and field officers appointed; one Buskark Colonel. At his house we found fifty barrels of flour, a number of hogsheads of rum, &c.; and at one Brown's, who is Lieutenant-Colonel, about one thousand pounds of cheese, &c. One Ten Penny is Major. They are all gone down to York, to have matters properly settled, get ammunition, arms, &c., and were to have returned on yesterday. I believe we have luckily disconcerted them. Such of the inhabitants as are friendly receive us with joy, but are almost afraid to speak their sentiments; and indeed little or no intelligence can be got from the inhabitants. The disaffected have sent down a petition for troops to protect them, and expect them every moment, (as they say:) and by some reports from New-York, several regiments are in motion, and their destination said to be up by the North River. This report is so much credited that I think it will be rather hazardous to move the troops which I have in this neighbourhood much more to the westward, as I shall thereby leave the passage on the back of Fort Montgomery too much exposed. I think, therefore, after having secured every thing here, to move to Paramus, at least for a few days, as I can from that place protect this part of the country, and should they attempt the pass in the mountains, be beforehand of them.

Colonel Vose, with the three regiments from Ticonderoga, have marched to the neighbourhood of Chatham, where they will arrive, I suppose, this night or to-morrow. I shall move in such manner as best to protect the country and harass the enemy. Your Excellency is sensible that General Wardsworth's brigade go home in a few days, and I cannot learn that any Militia are coming from Connecticut.

I should be glad to know if your Excellency has wrote to the State of Massachusetts-Bay for any number of their Militia, and whether they are expected.

I regret the loss of the brave General Lee, and much more the manner in which he was taken.

If the enemy should not be able to pass the Delaware, I think they will take a turn this way. Several thousands landed at Elizabeth-Town on yesterday, or the day before, and General Howe has lately gone after the Army to your quarter.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. Heath.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

COLONEL HAY TO THE COMMANDING OFFICER AT PARAMUS.

Haverstraw, December 15th, 1776.

Sir: Agreeable to orders from the honourable Major-General Heath, I have sent to Paramus a drove of cattle for the use of the Continental Army, by Captain Hyatt. I request that the cattle may be killed as soon and as fast as possible, that Captain Hyatt may not be detained; and if he can't dispose of the hides and tallow, please order a wagon to bring them back; for if they are lost, it will be a loss to the Continent.

I am, sir, with esteem, your most obedient servant,

A. Hawkes Hay.

---

COLONEL HAY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Haverstraw, December 15th, 1776.

Dear Sir: Just this moment I received your orders to send you down fifty barrels of flour, thirty of pork, and four bushels of salt. I am sorry to acquaint you that it is not in my power to comply with the orders, as I have neither pork nor salt; and cannot get any wagons, as all the wagons belonging to this neighbourhood are already in the service with General Lee.

If I had the above-mentioned articles, I should not know where to send them. In Major Huntington's letter he desires me to forward them to Paramus; and in a note that is enclosed in the letter writes thus: "The General does not think it safe that any more articles should be sent through Paramus, but prefer it being sent through Kakiate."

The gentlemen on board the flag of truce are very anxious to know if they are to be favoured with their wives and children.

I congratulate you on your late success; and may God crown all your endeavours with success.

The Militia are not all yet collected. General Clinton came down this day, and I suppose will soon join you. My regiment is not ordered out.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

A. Hawkes Hay.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath, Hackensack.

---

COLONEL HAY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Haverstraw, December 15th, 1776.

Dear Sir: Yesterday afternoon I received your orders to send down to Tappan thirty barrels of flour, and to Paramus eighty barrels of flour and thirty barrels of pork. I have myself, and two hands that I hired, been out all night, and cannot get any teams to convey the flour to Paramus. All the wagons and horses are already in the service with General Lee. We found a few ox-teams, but their owners will not let them go; and I have nobody here to take them away by force. I am at a loss what to do. I must beg your advice in this affair. As for pork I have none. If you want beef, I can send you down plenty of that article. This day Captain Hyat sets out to Paramus with a drove of cattle.

It is out of my department to press teams; but I have hitherto done it, to forward our glorious cause, and have been at vast expenses and trouble, without any assurance of even being repaid my expenses; therefore must request that you will be so good as to desire the Quartermaster-General to appoint one on this side of the river to transact that branch of business. I would willingly accept of that berth if I was appointed, and duly supplied with money to pay off the charges, provided I was allowed a reasonable recompense for the great trouble I have had, and what I may expect to have.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

A. Hawkes Hay.

Major-General Heath, at Tappan.

P. S. I have sent thirty barrels of flour to Tappan.

---

ALBERT PAWLING TO COLONEL DUBOIS.

Fort Constitution, December 15, 1776.

Sir: Mr. Philip Hoornbeck, Sergeant in Captain Kortwright's company, my father's regiment, being desirous to continue in the service, provided he may be provided for in your regiment, I think him a worthy man, and to my certain knowledge has faithfully discharged his duty in the capacity he served in. I mentioned his name to General Clinton, and informed him of his inclination, who desired me to write to you, in order to procure him an appointment; which I should be glad you would do, of either a Lieutenancy or Ensign.

I have nothing new, only I am now on my way thus far to the Jerseys, therefore conclude with my kind respects to you, and remain yours, &c.,

Albert Pawling.

Colonel Lewis Dubois, Fishkills.

---

LADY JOHNSON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill Landing, December 15th.

Sir: I enclose a pass from the Committee at Albany, and beg the favour of one to proceed with Captain Man to New-York.

M. Johnson.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

JUDITH BRUCE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill Landing, December 15th.

Sir: I enclose a pass from the Committee at Albany, and beg the favour of one to proceed to New-York with Captain Man.

Judith Bruce.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

ANTHONY RUTGERS TO COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Fishkill, December 15th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I beg leave to recommend to your particular attention Lieutenant Cornelius Becker. He is a very active young man, and well disciplined; has served this campaign, and is now in service as a Lieutenant of Captain Lyon's company, in the First New-York Regiment of Continental troops, in General McDougall's brigade.

I also beg leave to recommend Henry Becker, Jun., as an Ensign. He is a very active young fellow, well used to fire-arms, though he has never been in the service.

I am, respectfully, gentlemen, your humble servant,

ANTH'Y RUTGERS.

To the Hon. James Duane and John Jay, Esquires, and to Rob't Yates, Wm. Duer, Charles De Witt, Robert Harper, Jacob Cuyler, and Lewis Graham, Esqs., Committee for arranging Battalions.

---

JAMES YANCEY TO COMMITTEE AT BENNINGTON.

Albany, 15th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to request of yours by letter handed by Mr. Clark, your express, I sent you four hundred pounds, which informed you of by letter forwarded same time.

The Commissary-General for the Northern Department has ordered flour, &c., &c., to be stored in Bennington, by Mr. Farmsworth, who resides at that place. I think it might produce some difficulty were I to contract at present for any flour at Bennington, as Mr. Farmsworth doubtless will be able to receive all the flour you or he can procure at that place. I therefore take this opportunity of informing that I have left your receipt for the above-written sum, with Elisha Avery, Esq., Commissary-General for this district, who will settle with you for what flour you was kind enough to forward to me at Tyconderoga.

If any flour remains on hand, you will draw it to his orders. A hogshead of flour, which was forwarded to me, lies on the road, (as I am informed;) I must entreat you to have it secured, or delivered to Captain Farmsworth.

Please make out your account, and settle as Elisha Avery may direct. He will pay you, gentlemen, if a balance is due, and receive what may be coming to me.

The situation of my affairs has been such that it was out of my power to pay that polite attention your patriotick spirit merits. The hurry I am in at present, in proceeding on publick business, prevents my paying you a visit which I intended.

As soon as I may return to my post, I will call on you, when I may in person have the honour of acknowledging the most earnest desire of convincing you how much, gentlemen, I am your most humble servant,

JAS. YANCEY, Deputy Commissary.

To the Committee of Safety.

---

GEORGE MEASAM TO GENERAL GATES.

[Read to the Board the 15th January.]

Ticonderoga, December 15th, 1776.

SIR: I have not been able to put the troops in any tolerable order with respect to clothing, to enable them to do the fatigue of a soldier in these frozen regions. This day three men are returned frost bit. It gives me pain to see our men so badly clothed, which is the reason I have not been able to return to Albany to regulate that department and Fort Schuyler, and write you from thence as I expected. Providence sent some pedlers to the camp with thread. I have bought it, and am making up the clothes in store into such necessaries as they are capable of making and most wanted, without which the men must many of them perish, for I have not received any kind of clothing from Albany, or any other place, since you left this garrison. The shoes and stockings (much wanted) which Lieutenant Lucas informed me were on the road, are not come to hand.

Fearing I shall not be able to return to Albany soon enough to make a general return of clothing wanted for all the Northern Department in the spring, I judge it the interest of this State to transmit for your perusal a return of clothing wanted for this garrison, in order for you to lay it before the Board of War, or any other board you shall think proper, with such alterations as you will be pleased to make, and the necessity of the times may require, hoping all that can be got will, for the credit of the Army and interest of the States; for when a soldier wants for nothing his duty may with strictness be required. Upon these principles I shall conduct myself in the execution of my office; and in obedience to a resolve of Congress, shall transmit to all the States north of Maryland (they being likely to send troops to this department) copies of the enclosed return for their guide, to be proportioned according to the number of troops each State shall send to compose the Northern Army.

I am, with all respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

GEO. MEASAM.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. Yesterday the violence of the wind parted the bridge to Mount Independence, and this day the lake froze across strong enough to walk over. The boom was carried away soon after you left the garrison. If General Arnold is with you I beg my compliments. I have received his letter respecting my saddle.

---

GEORGE MEASAM TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Ticonderoga, December 15, 1776.

SIR: The Congress having done me the honour of appointing me Commissary of Clothing for the Northern Army, it is therefore my duty to send for your government a return of clothing wanting for the troops in this department. But as I have not the detail of the troops each State will furnish for this department in the spring, I cannot at present furnish you with a particular return of the clothing wanted from your State; nor have I been able to complete the regulation of this office, and clothe the troops wintering here, so as to return to Albany, to make a general return for all the Northern Department; therefore fearing such delays should be injurious to the publick service, I send you the enclosed return for this particular post, that your Government may have time to provide the clothing for their troops to be ordered to the Northern Department, and regulate the same with regard to numbers agreeable to the enclosed return.

I beg leave to transmit for your Government also a copy of the resolve of Congress relative to the establishment of this office; and am, with all regard, sir, yours and the publick's most obedient and faithful servant,

GEO. MEASAM.

To the honourable the President of the Convention for the State of New-York.

[Same to Massachusetts Assembly, and New-Hampshire Assembly.]

---

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee, Baltimore, 16th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed we send you a list of the companies which compose Colonel Cockey's battalion; but as there has been some difference in the choice of Captain Cockey's subalterns, and the matter not yet determined, we must wait until they have another choice. We are of opinion that sending commissions agreeable to this list would be serving the common cause.

We are, gentlemen, your humble servant. Per order,

JAS. CALHOUN, Chairman.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

CAPTAIN COOK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 16th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In my absence Captain Nicholson borrowed sixty-five of the ship's small-arms, so that there is but few left. I shall endeavour to procure arms for the men. If they are not to be got, will not wait, as I imagine we can be supplied at the Head of Elk or Philadelphia. I flatter myself that the greatest part of my company will go with cheerfulness. I shall lose no time, but set off as quick as possible.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GEO. COOK.

The honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

*

JAMES CLAYPOOLE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Chester-Town, 16 December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have sent per Rock-Hall boat one hogshead, containing two hundred pair shoes, and expect to send two hundred pair more in four weeks. I have been disappointed in hands, or should have complied more fully with my contract, which I hope you'll excuse. If you think proper to let me have one hundred pounds, should be greatly obliged by you sending it to me per first opportunity.

From your humble servant,

JAMES CLAYPOOLE.

To the President of the Council of Safety, Maryland.

---

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Frederick-Town, 16th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 14th instant, by express, came to me this moment, twelve o'clock, and I shall not lose a minute in sending to the Colonel as you direct. I am afraid we shall be able to arm only a small proportion of the men, these parts having been much drained of arms, and those of the Flying Camp who have returned having left their guns behind them.

I am told no Field Officers are yet appointed to the battalion of which Wells was recommended to be Colonel. If there's no capital objection, I wish the commissions were sent. I would not obtrude advice, but if no steps are already taken for the purpose, I wish to submit to your consideration whether it would not be well to remove our magazine further into the country. It appears to me if our enemies succeed against Philadelphia, our stock of powder may be an object.

I intended to have set out in the morning for Baltimore, but shall now wait till I hear from you, or am well-informed of a considerable change in our affairs.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

TH. JOHNSON, Jun.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 20, 1776: Referred to Mr. R. H. Lee, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Harrison, and Mr. S. Adams.]

Philadelphia, December 16, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed letter from General Wooster was delivered to me by Mr. Walton. It contradicts the report respecting Rhode-Island, mentioned in my last, and I am glad of it; but it still appears as if that was Mr. Clinton's object.

I take the liberty to enclose you a letter I received yesterday from Colonel Cadwalader, and am truly sorry to add that the intelligence respecting General Lee comes confirmed through another channel, with several circumstances that stagger my faith, although I was yesterday very unwilling to give credit to Mr. Symes's and Captain Murray's stories. The person who came to town last night has been examined by the Council of Safety, who, as I am told, believe his account. Being out of town yesterday, I have not seen any of them or him, therefore am not master of all the particulars; but he reports that some of the Tories had given notice to the enemy that the General lodged at a certain house five miles distant from his Army. In consequence, a party of Light-Horse, about fifty, surrounded the house at daybreak. The General had an Aid-de-Camp and ten men with him; they defended themselves in the house for two hours, when the men offered to surrender, alleging that the General was not there. They answered, they knew he was in that house, and if he did not immediately surrender himself, they would burn the house and him in it. In short, the General was obliged to appear, and he promised to surrender on condition they would treat him like an officer and a gentleman. The moment they got him they mounted him on a horse and galloped off with him, not even allowing him time to get his hat, nor did they take any of his party, but left them to do as they pleased. The Aid-de-Camp is wounded. These are the only particulars that I have heard, and I do not pretend to vouch for the truth of them, but pray Heaven the whole may be a fiction. The loss of General Lee at this time is in itself a severe stroke, and the effect it will have on the spirits of our shattered Army will add greatly to it.

The express I sent to General Washington is returned, and brings me a letter from him, of the 14th, at night. He was then some miles beyond Coriell's Ferry, but says nothing to me respecting the military operations.

The enclosed letter for Messrs. Adams, Gerry, Ellery, and Whipple, came under cover, and Mr. Peters has desired me to send the letter from the Governour of Virginia.

The sudden departure of the Congress from this place seems to be a matter of much speculation, and people who judge by events, think they have been too precipitate. Be that as it may, many things are thrown into great confusion by it; and I find ample employment in applying remedies wherever I can. The unfinished business of the Marine and Secret Committees, I intend to confine myself to; but I hear so many complaints and see so much confusion from other quarters, that I am obliged to advise in things not committed to me. Circumstanced as our affairs now are, I conceive it better to take liberties and assume some powers, than to let the general interest suffer. Much money is wanted for the publick service, and it must be sent up immediately, as the Militia of our country are at length turning out, and call for the advance. The lower parts of New-Jersey are also in motion, and they want money. The troops returned from Canada call aloud for their pay, and they should have it instantly, as they very generally promise to reinlist when they have spent what is due to them.

Mr. Smith, the loan officer, is not here, or I believe it would be in my power to procure a good deal of money through that channel. On his return I will assist all in my power.

I suppose Congress will not determine on a hasty return to this place, nor do I think it advisable, until the enemy are actually gone into winter quarters, for a severe frost may in a few hours enable them to cross Delaware, above the falls, so that if they remain in that neighbourhood, you would here be subject to perpetual alarms. At the same time it may be depended on, that great inconveniences will arise daily in every department during your absence. To remedy this as much as possible, I think a Committee should be sent here, with such powers as Congress may judge proper, in order that they may regulate the business of the Continent necessary to be done here. There is the greatest scene of confusion in the management of the Continental horses, wagons, and expresses, that ever was exhibited. It was bad enough before Congress departed, but it is ten times worse now; and Jacob Hittziemer, a very honest man, will run mad soon if not properly assisted or relieved in this department. In short, the Committee you send should have full powers to do whatever may be necessary to put every department on a systematick footing. Mr. Clymer, Mr. Walton, and myself, will bestir ourselves, and advise or assist in such things as we think absolutely necessary, until you appoint a Committee. And as the Board of War did not leave any orders for their Secretary, we have desired him to stay and assist us until he receives orders. We hope the Board will excuse us for taking this liberty, as Mr. Peters will be useful here. The Committee must have the command of money to answer various purposes, as the calls for it are loud, large, and constant. Should the enemy retire to Brunswick or New-York, it may, and I believe will, be best for Congress to return as soon as that is certain. Upon the appearance of their retiring, I have detained the cruisers intended to turn inward-bound vessels from our Capes, and shall not send them unless the scene changes again, and it should be evident this city must fall into their hands. Captain Alexander is come down from camp, and we are at work on the Delaware; but if the enemy go back, I will attempt the getting her regularly fitted for sea.

I have despatched the ship laden with tobacco for France; but in the present situation of things, it did not seem eligible to write on political subjects to any of our agents there. If fortune will once more smile on us, I will find opportunities to communicate the glad tidings.

You will please to receive herewith sundry French letters lately brought here by Mons. Coleaux, who will visit you in Baltimore in due time. As I do not recollect any members of Congress that are perfect masters of the French, I put them in the hands of Paul Fooks, the sworn interpreter, and his translations go with the originals. I also send herewith some letters to the Marine Committee, particularly a very pleasing one from Captain Jones, of the Alfred.

I have sent to General Putnam to inform him of this express, and am now expecting his despatches.

The papers and books of the Marine Committee, Secret Committee, and Committee of Correspondence, I sent to Christeen, with a proper person to take care of them; so they are convenient either for this place or Baltimore.

I shall take the liberty to address you whenever occurrences require it; and with sincere regard, remain, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.

Philadelphia, December 16th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since I wrote the President this morning, a young gentleman came up from Chincoteague, where he had landed out of the sloop Independence, Captain Young, belonging to the Continent. This sloop was from Martinico, bound hither, but was chased into that place by a large frigate. The sloop has on board a quantity of blankets, coarse cloths, and near one thousand muskets, which I will take care of. Captain Young staid behind, sick, and she is now commanded by Lieutenant Robinson, who had no paper to write on, but sent up word he would push round for this place soon as he could. The goods are what was ordered by the Secret Committee, and the Andrew Doria will bring a good cargo from St. Eustatia, where she is arrived. The Sachem is also arrived at Martinico, but no news yet from Mons. Hortalez.

You have enclosed the letters from Mr. Bingham and Mr. Deane; the latter complaining, as I have long expected he would, for want of advices and remittances. In short, if the Congress mean to succeed in this contest, they must pay good executive men to do their business as it ought to be, and not lavish millions away by their own mismanagement. I say mismanagement, because no man living can attend the daily deliberations of Congress and do executive parts of business at the same time. I do aver there will be more money lost, totally lost, in horses, wagons, cattle, &c., &c., for want of sufficient number of proper persons to look after them, than would have paid all the salaries Payne ever did or ever will grumble at. Mr. Deane has had a hard situation. I foretold it long since; and unless you employ some man of talents to collect materials and keep the Commissioners abroad constantly informed of what is passing here, you never will have that consequence, nor your agents that dignity, they ought to have.

I should be glad you would return me these letters, or copies of them, and I will reply from hence. They have been with me but a few minutes, and I will not keep the express any longer, as I expect you are hungry as hawks after news from France. I cannot keep a copy of this; but in haste remain, very sincerely, gentlemen, your devoted, humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

To the honourable the Committee of Secret Correspondence.

---

WARRANT FOR COMMITMENT OF MATHEW M'HUGH.

LANCASTER County, in the State of PENNSYLVANIA, } Sct.

[L. s.] To the Keeper of the Common Jail at Lancaster, in the County of Lancaster, aforesaid:

These are in the name of the State of Pennsylvania aforesaid, to command you that you receive into your custody and jail the body of Mathew McHugh, late of Lebanon town, in said County, Innholder, taken and brought before me for suspicion of being inimical to the freedom of America; and, upon examination, he declaring repeatedly "that with both his hands he is against independence declared by the American States against the tyrannical proceedings of Great Britain." Wherefore you are safely to keep the said Mathew McHugh in your said Jail until he shall be regularly discharged by the Council of Safety, or a Committee thereof.

Given under my hand and seal, the 16th day of December, 1776.

JOHN THORNE.

To the Constable of Lebanon, and such Assistants as he may lawfully call upon on this emergent occasion.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Head-Quarters, Keith's, December 16, 1776.

SIR: In a late letter which I had the honour of addressing you, I took the liberty to recommend that more battalions should be raised for the new Army than what had been voted for. Having fully considered the matter, I am more and more convinced, not only of the propriety, but of the necessity of the measure. That the enemy will leave nothing unessayed in the course of the next campaign to reduce these States to the rule of a most lawless and insufferable tyranny, must be obvious to every one; and that the Militia is not to be depended upon, or aid expected from 'em but in cases of the most pressing emergency, is not to be doubted. The first of these propositions is unquestionable, and fatal experience has given her sanction to the truth of the latter. Indeed, their lethargy of late, and backwardness to turn out at this alarming crisis, seem to justify an apprehension that nothing can bring them from their homes. For want of their assistance, a large part of Jersey has been exposed to ravage and to plunder; nor do I know that Pennsylvania would share a better fate could General Howe effect a passage across the Delaware with a respectable force. These considerations have induced me to wish that no reliance, except such as may arise from necessity, should ever be had in them again; and to make further mention to Congress of the expediency of increasing their Army. I trust the measure will meet their earliest attention.

Had I leisure, and were it necessary, I could say much upon this head; but as I have not, and the matter is well understood, I will not add much. By augmenting the number of your battalions, you will augment your force. The officers of each will have their interest and influence; and, upon the whole, their numbers will be much greater, though they should not be complete. Added to this, from the present confused state of Jersey, and the improper appointment of officers in many instances, I have little or no expectation that she will be able to raise all the troops exacted from her, though I think it might be done were suitable, spirited gentlemen commissioned, who would exert themselves and encourage the people, many of whom, for a failure in this instance, and who are well disposed, are making their submissions. In a word, the next will be a trying campaign; and as all that is dear and valuable may depend upon the issue of it, I would advise that nothing should be omitted that shall seem necessary to our success. Let us have a respectable Army, and such as will be competent to every exigency. I will also add, that the critical situation of our affairs, and the dissolution of our present force, (now at hand,) require that every nerve and exertion be employed for recruiting the new battalions. One part of General Howe's movements at this time I believe is with a design to distract us, and prevent this business. If the inclemency of the weather should force him into winter quarters, he will not remain there longer than necessity shall oblige him. He will commence his operations in a short space of time, and in that time our levies must be made up to oppose him, or I fear the most melancholy of all events must take place

The enclosed extract of a letter from the Commissary-General will show his demands for money, and his plans for procuring salted provisions, and a quantity of flour from the southward. The whole is submitted to the consideration of Congress; and I wish the result of their opinion to be transmitted him, with such supplies of money as may be necessary for himself and the departments he mentions.

The clothing of the troops is a matter of infinite importance, and, if it could be accomplished, would have a happy effect. Their distresses are extremely great, many of 'em being entirely naked, and most so thinly clad as to be unfit for service. I must entreat Congress to write to the agents and contractors upon this subject, that every possible supply may be procured and forwarded with the utmost expedition. I cannot attend to the business myself, having more than I can possibly do besides.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, near Trenton, 16th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 13th instant came safe to hand. I have taken an extract of that part of it which relates to the business of your department, and shall forward it to Congress by the first opportunity. I can have no objection to your going to New-England instead of coming this way, upon the representation you have made of the necessity and superiour advantage arising from your going; and at the same time confiding in your judgment in determining upon that plan of conduct which will conduce most to the benefit of the service.

I am glad to find you have been making preparations for laying in a large supply of salt provisions for the Army, and approve of your plan of sending to Virginia for flour during the winter, as I don't see but it may be rendered practicable; but these matters will doubtless be fully answered by Congress when they receive the copy of your letter, as also the necessary supply of cash which you mention. In the mean time, I think it will be very advisable for you to borrow money in the manner you propose, till you receive the necessary supplies from Congress. Indeed, there is so little cash in the Paymaster's hands here at present, that it is not in my power to afford you any assistance in that particular.

As I conclude you have informed yourself sufficiently with respect to the abilities and capacity of Mr. Wharton, I shall make no objection to the appointment, but only observe that, circumstanced as affairs are at present in the Jerseys, it will require an officer of much sagacity and diligence to discharge the duties of that office faithfully and to satisfaction. I have enclosed you a list of such persons in Virginia as I think will be most likely to supply you with flour on good terms. Mr. Wharton's acquaintance there will also help, probably, to procure it with greater facility and despatch.

I thank you for your condolence on the universal loss America has sustained in the unfortunate captivity of General Lee, and am, with due regard, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Col. Joseph Trumbull, Commissary-General Provisions.

---

Colonel John Tabb, or Colonel Jno. Banister, on James River.
Colonel Fielding Lewis, on Rapehannock River.
Colonel Syme, upon York River.
Mr. Thos. Lawson, upon Powtomack River.

P. S. I shall send some money to General Heath for the recruiting service.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, near Corryel's Ferry, December 16, 1776.

Dear Sir: I received your favour of the 11th instant, advising me of the march of Parsons's brigade from Peekskill to join us. I am now to acquaint you, that from information received of the enemy's movements, it appears to me that they intend leaving this part of the country, and to retire towards Brunswick, and the towns contiguous to it, perhaps for the purpose of going into winter quarters, (if the whole is not designed as a feint;) therefore there does not appear the same necessity for your advancing as was conjectured at the time my orders for your marching were determined on. I, for this reason, should conceive it expedient that you return with Parsons's brigade to your former station; indeed, the conduct of the forces, (as mentioned in your letter, and the danger the Convention of New-York have represented to me, which that State will be exposed to,) has rendered this step the more necessary. You are to post these troops in the most advantageous manner to answer the purposes of defending the country from the incursions of the enemy, and of curbing the insolence of the disaffected. However, previous to your departure from the Jerseys, I entirely agree with you in sentiment, that the troops cannot be better employed than in surprising any of the enemy's posts, either at Hackensack or the parts adjacent, that are so situated as to admit of a strong probability of success. An enterprise of this sort will encourage our friends, and advance the recruiting service, which is a circumstance of infinite importance.

As to Colonel Vose, with Greaton's, Bond's, and Porter's regiments, I would choose they should move forward with all possible expedition, to join General Gates. With respect to the families of Mr. Inglis and Mr. Moore, who are desirous of going to New-York, I cannot perceive any political objection, as I should suppose they are capable of doing less mischief there than by remaining in the country and giving intelligence to the enemy. They ought, however, to be informed that they will on no account whatever be permitted to return.

I am, dear sir, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Heath.

P. S. I beg you will encourage the recruiting service by every means in your power. I shall in a short time send you money for the different recruiting officers.

---

RECRUITING ORDERS.

To Elisha Sheldon, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel and Commandant of a regiment of Cavalry to be raised:

Sir: The Congress having thought fit to appoint you Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of a regiment of Horse to be raised, and to empower me to appoint the officers under you, reposing especial trust and confidence in you, and knowing how much your honour and reputation depends upon the proper choice, I am willing you should have the nomination of all the officers, (reserving to myself a negative of any one and all such as I shall think unfit for that service,) and doubt not you will be particularly careful in fixing none but gentlemen of true spirits and of good characters; observing, at the same time, that gentlemen of fortune and reputable families generally make the most useful officers.

You are immediately to repair to the State of Connecticut, and as soon as possible nominate your officers, and send them out on the recruiting service. They are to be particularly attentive to take none into the corps but young, light, active men.

The privates are to receive twenty dollars bounty and a suit of clothes on entering the service, and pay as per schedule annexed. They are to be raised to serve during the war, unless sooner discharged by Congress.

Each non-commissioned officer and private is to be furnished with a good horse, saddle, bridle, and other accoutrements belonging to the Horse service, at the expense of the Continent; and I will recommend to Congress that the commanding officer be also furnished at the publick expense with the same, but cannot absolutely engage it, as I believe is it not customary.

In procuring the horses, you are to have no stallions, mares, white or grey horses, but likely, serviceable trotters, of sufficient size. It is expected you will purchase them at the most reasonable rate, and not upon an average to exceed one hundred dollars per head, carefully describing and keeping an exact account of the cost of each horse.

Saddles, bridles, carbines, broadswords, pistols, and every other accoutrement necessary, (agreeable to a pattern herewith given you,) you will procure as cheap as possible.

Your regiment is to consist of one Major, an Adjutant, Surgeon and Mate, and six Troops; to each troop one Captain, one Lieutenant, one Cornet, (commissioned officers,) one Quartermaster, two Sergeants, two Corporals, one Trumpeter, one Farrier, and thirty-four Privates.

In order to enable you to defray the expense of raising and equipping this regiment, you are herewith furnished with a warrant upon the Paymaster for the sum of fourteen thousand dollars, and a letter to Governour Trumbull to advance you such further sums as may be necessary, on Continental account. In case of the latter failing, you are to advise me of it; and if no publick money is to be had in that department from a Paymaster to be appointed, send a careful officer for such sum or sums as may be wanted.

As fast as you can raise and equip a troop, they are to be sent to the Army under my immediate command, agreeably to the resolution of Congress directing the raising of said regiment.

Given at Head-Quarters, this 16th day of December, 1776.

Go. Washington.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Elisha Sheldon.

---

| | Lawful money. | | Lawful money. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lt. Colonel and Commandant, | £22 10s. | Surgeon, | £0 0s. |
| Major, | 18 0 | Mate, | 0 0 |
| Captain, | 15 0 | Quartermaster, | 5 0 |
| Lieutenants, | 10 0 | Sergeant, | 4 10 |
| Cornets, | 8 0 | Corporal, | 3 0 |
| Adjutants, | 10 0 | Trumpeter, | 3 0 |
| | | Private, | 2 10 |

The above is the pay which his Excellency will recommend Congress to establish for the officers of Colonel Sheldon's regiment of Cavalry.

The foregoing is a copy of the orders and instructions given Lieutenant-Colonel Sheldon.

R. H. Harrison.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, 16th December, 1776.

Gentlemen: I have just the pleasure of receiving yours of yesterday. I shall give the Deputy Quartermaster-General orders to have the clothing, both new and old, brought up to the Army, and have it distributed as it is most wanted; but you may depend, if the old clothes which have been so charitably contributed by the inhabitants of Philadelphia can answer the present necessities of the other regiments, that the new shall be all applied to the regiment particularly belonging to your State.

I am glad to find the Militia from the eastern parts of your Province, the lower parts of Jersey, and the Delaware Counties, are turning out with proper spirit. I hope, with their assistance, we shall be able to check the enemy, if they should still determine to pass the Delaware.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania.

P. S. I beg you will by all ways and means facilitate and encourage the recruiting service, for on that every thing depends.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 16th December, 1776.

Gentlemen: I was last night honoured with yours of the 11th instant, enclosing sundry resolutions of your Board. I have also to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 23d November, which should not have remained so long unanswered, had not the continued motion of our Army for some time past put it out of my power to sit regularly down to business. Indeed, I have now so much on my hands, and such a choice of difficulties, that I hardly know which first to attend to. I know you have had your difficulties too, indeed more than any other State; and you have, therefore, my thanks, not only for the complete arrangement of your officers for the four battalions allotted to your share, but for your determination to raise a fifth to be commanded by Colonel Dubois. As the office of Aid-Major has been hitherto unknown in the Continental service, perhaps by introducing it among your regiments umbrage might be given to the others, if they were not likewise provided with an officer of the same kind, and therefore, to avoid disputes, I could wish the matter might be waived. Major Sheldon, who commands the Connecticut Horse, will return in a few days. He will either take the troop with him from Fishkills, or post them where they are more wanted.

I thank you for the great confidence you are pleased to repose in me, and you may be assured that whatever military powers shall be intrusted to me shall ever be exerted, first to establish, and then protect the civil.

I come now to answer yours of the 11th. When I ordered down General Heath from his post at the Highlands, it was done in consequence of a determination of a Council of General Officers, who agreed that we had no other means of stopping the progress of General Howe, who was evidently making a grand push to make himself master of Philadelphia. The advantages of keeping possession of the posts in the Highlands were not unattended to; we considered that the enemy had thrown the main body of their Army over into Jersey; that they were about to make a considerable embarkation, (which has since turned out to be against New-England;) and that it would take most, if not the remainder of their Army, to keep up the garrisons at New-York, &c.; and that, therefore, they had not a sufficient force left to attempt the strong posts at the Highlands, though only guarded by General George Clinton, with the force of the State of New-York.

General Howe easily forced our small Army to retreat before him to the Delaware; but not finding boats to transport his troops, (we having had time and precaution to secure and destroy them,) he seems, by his late motions, to be moving back towards Brunswick for winter quarters, or intending a feint. Upon this change of measures, I have immediately ordered General Heath to return to Peekskill, with General Parsons's brigade. If he finds any of the enemy's posts at Hackensack or elsewhere weakly guarded, he is to endeavour to beat them up.

As the inlistment of the greatest part of the Continental Army expires on the first of January, every State must exert itself in forwarding the new inlistments, and procuring temporary supplies of Militia till the new levies can be brought into the field.

I have the honour to subscribe myself, gentlemen, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To the New-York Convention.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, State of Pennsylvania, in Bucks County, December 16th, 1776.

Dear Sir: The Congress have been pleased to appoint Elisha Sheldon, Esq., of your State, to be Lieutenant-Colonel and commander of a regiment of Cavalry.

For the purpose of raising them he now sets off for Connecticut. Having to pass through an enemy's country on his way there, I cannot think it prudent to advance him the sum necessary for his immediate use. I have to request you will furnish him with what money he may want from the Treasury of your State, or in such other way as you may think best, which sum you will please to draw on the Continent (through me) for.

I am, with due regard, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

Hon. Jonathan Trumbull.

---

GENERAL GREENE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Corryell's Ferry, Delaware, December 16th, 1776.

Sir: I take the liberty to recommend Doctor Warren to the Congress as a very suitable person to receive an appointment of a Sub-Director, which I am informed they are about to create a number of. Doctor Warren has given great satisfaction where he has had the direction of business. He is a young gentleman of ability, humanity, and great application to business.

I feel a degree of happiness that the Congress are going to put the hospital department upon a better establishment, for the sick this campaign have suffered beyond description and shocking to humanity. For my own part, I have never felt any distress equal to what the sufferings of the sick have occasioned, and am confident that nothing will injure the recruiting service so much as the dissatisfaction arising upon that head.

I am, dear sir, your obedient servant,

Nathanael Greene.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress, at Philadelphia.

---

GENERAL LORD STIRLING TO GENERAL HEATH.

Easton, December 16th, 1776.

Dear Sir: I came up from Head-Quarters in hopes of effecting a junction of the troops under the command of yourself, General Gates, and General Sullivan, and attempting something on the enemy; but this is now too late, as the troops under General Sullivan and General Gates are already on the west side of Delaware. It was proposed that if any of the troops crossed the river, it should have been at Sherard's Ferry, at Tinicum; but as General Sullivan has taken this route, I believe it will be best you do the same.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Stirling.

To Major-General Heath.

---

JOHN TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Bethlehem, (Pennsylvania,) 16th December, 1776.

Honoured Sir: I arrived at this place last evening, with General Gates. A part of our troops will come in to-day, the others to-morrow. But I despair of joining General Washington. His Army is still inferiour to the enemy, and the country quite stupid. I shall not be surprised to hear that the enemy are in Philadelphia.

The Army lately commanded by General Lee is to cross at Easton this day. You have doubtless heard his misfortune. He was betrayed at a house nigh Basken Ridge, and surrounded by a party of Horse, at twenty-one miles distance from the enemy's camp. The French gentleman who arrived lately at Boston with powder and arms, a Lieutenant-Colonel in the French service, is taken with him. The inhuman rascals would not permit the General to take his hat and coat, but carried him off almost naked. This is a misfortune that cannot be remedied, as we have no officer in the Army of equal experience and merit.

My situation is droll, but I cannot desert my country in so critical a time, however ungenerously I may have been treated. I think to offer myself a supernumerary Aid-de-Camp to some General Officer.

Our affairs have never been in so critical a situation: New-York and Jersey totally lost, except the backwoods, the Army inferiour, and at the time when most wanted, deprived of the best, almost the only officer who could rescue them from a situation so nigh desperate.

I am informed that nine thousand British have made an excursion to the eastward. I hope to hear a better report of them than of the eight thousand here.

Adieu, my honoured parent. I am your dutiful son,

J. Trumbull.

The Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

---

COLONEL SYMMES TO GENERAL HEATH.

Chatham, December 16th, 1776.

Sir: I beg leave to represent to your Honour the distressed situation we are in with respect to salt. The brigade at this place has been destitute of that article some days. The men suffer exceedingly, and we have information of there being salt at Hackinsack, Second River, and Newark. As we understand your Honour takes that route, we beg the favour of a party's advancing from your Army on the road, and gathering all the salt to be had. Wagons can be pressed on the road to bring it forward. Captain Hasker waits upon your Honour with this. His orders are to wait your pleasure, until we can be acquainted with the success of the undertaking. If salt can possibly be sent to our relief, I beg your Honour will interest yourself in the affair.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

John Cleves Symmes,
Colonel of Sussex Militia.

To Major-General Heath, near Hackensack.

---

JOHN JOHNSON TO ROBERT HARPER.

Morris-Town, December 16, 1776.

Honourable Sir: I am on my way to Philadelphia, which place am in hopes to arrive at in three days, and to return to Peekskill as soon as possible. You were so good as to desire me to write to you where you might find me, and that the Congress was disposed to do something handsome for me, as Paymaster to a regiment, or some such office. Pray keep it open for me, if nothing better offers. Mr. Duer offered to write to General Mifflin to appoint me an Assistant Quartermaster. I should be glad to serve, so as it could be done with honour. There is your old servant that served with approbation as Commissary at New-York, I mean Richard Norwood, would serve as Paymaster to a regiment. I think he is a fit person. He is well known by Comfort Sands.

I am, dear sir, your friend and servant,

John Johnson.

To Robert Harper, Esq., Member of New-York Congress, at the Fishkills.

P. S. This day drank a glass of wine with General McDougall, at Mr. John Van Cortlandt's, near this place. He expressed a hearty sorrow that I left the service. It's too true that General Lee is taken—so much for Tories.

JOHN COE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Orange County, New-Hempstead, December 16, 1776.

Whereas the Commissioners appointed for the County of Orange to secure the perishable effects of those that are gone to the enemy, has not as yet acted, by reason of their being so near the enemy, and, as it were, within their lines; and as it appears now not so difficult, as our District Committee is about removing the families of those persons that are gone to the enemy, and their movable effects will then be lost or taken away by such persons as have no right, I have thought it my duty now to act as one of the Commissioners, as formerly appointed by the Convention of this State; and the difficulty that now arises is, that Thomas Cooper must attend the Council of Safety and the Assembly of this State, so that he cannot act. If you think proper, please to appoint another person with me, and we shall endeavour to act agreeable to your direction. As the former resolve you sent me is lost in removing my papers, please to send the resolve how we are to act.

I am yours to serve,

John Coe.

To the President of the Council of Safety of the State of New-York.

N. B. I would recommend Colonel Gilbert Cooper.

---

PHILIP BARTELL TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Claverack, 16th December, 1776.

Gentlemen: I beg your liberty to resign my commission as an Ensign in the Eighth Regiment of Militia, whereof Robert Van Rensselaer, Esq., is Colonel, as I am very unwell and not able to execute the duty of my appointment. And you will greatly oblige, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

Philip Bartell.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

FRANCES LIVINGSTON TO JOHN WILLIAMS.

Sir: I received your favour of the 14th, and am now to thank you for the information and permission I have of going to New-York. I shall take the first opportunity of coming down to Fishkill, and imagine I shall be there with my family on Friday next.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

Frances Livingston.

To John Williams, Esq., Chairman of the honourable Convention of New-York.

December 16th.

---

CAPTAIN WALKER TO WILLIAM DUER.

Fishkill, December 16, 1776.

Gentlemen: You were pleased some time in November to honour me with the command of a company in the Fourth New-York Regiment. The gentleman who was appointed my First Lieutenant, thought proper to resign. My Second Lieutenant, for particular reasons, is not allowed to serve, and an Ensign was not appointed. Thus I have been without any assistance, and myself sick most part of the time; notwithstanding which I have made shift to inlist near thirty men, upwards of twenty of whom are now suffering. I am now laid up with a violent fever, at Dr. Graham's, and cannot walk alone.

I hope, gentlemen, this representation of my case will induce you to be quick in appointing me some assistance, that I may get my men in the barracks and clothed.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your very obedient, humble servant,

Ben. Walker,
Captain 4th New-York Regiment.

Colonel William Duer, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangement.

---

EBENEZER HAZARD TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Carpenter's Ferry, Fishkill, December 16th, 1776.

Sir: I fully intended while in the town of Fishkill, to let the Convention know I had received credible information that the records of the city of New-York were buried near King's Bridge; but as I was in a hurry to set out on my journey to Philadelphia, it escaped my memory. I am not very certain who was my informant, but I think it was Colonel Palfrey, the Paymaster-General; and as nearly as I can recollect, he told me the records were deposited in Colonel Cortlandt's family vault, and that he received the hint of it from Mrs. Van Cortlandt, who happened inadvertently to mention it to him. Perhaps Convention may have been informed of this before; but as I do not know this to be the case, I think it incumbent upon me to let them know it now, that proper measures may be taken to secure those authentick documents, which may be of great service in a future day.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

EBENEZER HAZARD.

To the honourable the President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Albany, December 16th, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 10th instant I was honoured with on the 14th. I am happy to find that in all probability the rapid progress the enemy lately made, has been checked. If they are not more numerous than report makes them, I hope General Washington will be enabled to make them retreat in turn.

I have given order to have the resolution respecting the Tryon County Rangers put into execution.

As no clothing has been sent hither for the recruits of this State, I have ordered them to be furnished out of the Continental stores upon an appraisement, that the difference between what they may receive and what they are allowed, may be accounted for, which way soever it may be; but we have unfortunately not a blanket, nor can any be procured in this quarter, and without a supply, I shall not be able to send the troops to relieve part of the garrison of Tyconderoga. The Committee will therefore please without delay to send up blankets, or some sufficient substitute.

Every account I receive from Tyconderoga confirms me in the belief that not a man will remain there beyond the term of their inlistment.

Colonel Frey has applied to me to mention his case to Convention. It was last winter delivered to me by the Committee of Tryon County, as one amongst others to be sent down the country. Several gentlemen of Schenectady interceded and became responsible for his conduct, on which I suffered him to remain at home. Some time in the summer, either the Committee of Tryon County, or of Albany, sent him to Hartford, from whence he returned on his parole; and as the gentlemen who became his security are willing to continue so, he applied to me for leave to remain; but never interfering with what the civil have done, I could only answer, that so far as he was my prisoner, I was contented with the security he had given me. He will advise you of the reasons the Committee of Tryon County assign for refusing to let him remain at home.

I am, sir, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Matthew Cantine, Esq., Chairman of Committee of Safety of New-York.

---

MEMORANDUM OF THE AGREEMENT SIGNED BY THE ARTIFICERS, NORTHERN ARMY.

Memorandum of agreement made and entered into this sixteenth day of December, 1776, between Colonel Jedu'n Baldwin, Chief Engineer on the Northern Department, of the first part, and Mr. Jedi'h Thayer, of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay, Gentleman, and Mr. Nathaniel Emerson and the persons whose names are hereunto subscribed, and seals affixed, of the second part, all good workmen at the carpenter's business, to the number of sixty men; the said parties of the second part, each for himself, promises and agrees that they will immediately repair to such place as the said Colonel Baldwin shall direct, and there employ themselves in constructing such works or buildings as the said Engineer shall order.

That each of the parties of the second part shall, during the time he shall be in the publick employ conformable to these resolutions, each day continue at their said work and employment not less than ten hours.

That if any of the said parties of the second part shall leave the said work, or go from the post where they shall be employed, the leave of the said Colonel Baldwin, or the commanding officer of the post where he shall be so employed, being first obtained, he or they so going off shall forfeit all the wages that shall be due to them on account of their service performed in consequence of this agreement.

In consideration whereof, the said Jedu'n Baldwin, Engineer, promises and agrees, that the said Jedi'h Thayer shall have and receive twelve shillings per day, and Nathaniel Emerson ten shillings per day, and every other of the said parties of the second part the sum of eight shillings per day, New-York currency, for every day that they shall be in actual employment. That over and above that sum, the said parties of the second part shall severally receive one and a half ration of provisions and one gill of rum per day. That the said wages shall commence from the time the said parties of the second part shall respectively leave their usual places of abode, allowing at the rate of one dollar for every twenty miles travel. And the said parties of the first and second part do hereby agree with each other, that if any of the said parties of the second part is taken sick during the time which they shall be employed as above, the person so taken sick shall not be entitled to wages for the time he absents from working by reason of sickness, unless the said Colonel Baldwin, or the commanding officer of the post where they shall be so stationed, shall, on application to him made, refuse to discharge them, and then they shall be entitled to wages from the time of such refusal.

In testimony hereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, at Albany, this sixteenth day of December, 1776.

The General approves of the raising of a company of Artificers on the terms above mentioned.

By order of the General:

JOHN LANSING, Jun., Secretary.

Head-Quarters, Albany, December 16th, 1776.

---

J. TRUMBULL, JUN., TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, 16th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Since Brown has done riding, I seem almost to be an exile from my home. I can hear nothing from Connecticut, and know nothing that is passing; indeed, we are almost excluded from intelligence from every quarter, and we have nothing material here. A laughable alarm has happened at Ty, since the troops came off, occasioned by the appearance of a hay boat on the lake, which, to the timid apprehensions of its beholders at Crown-Point, was magnified into a large ship of force, with guns, &c., supposed to be the enemy approaching. They fled to Ty, the alarms took, all hands were at work, every one busy, remounting their cannon, &c., and making every preparation for defence, when the poor harmless boat arrived at the wharf, and relieved their anxious fears. All is now quiet, and will be now, unless the enemy take it in their heads to venture on the ice, which may possibly be. I hope by new-year to leave this place. My love, respects, and compliments to all friends; and am your dutiful son,

J. TRUMBULL, Jun.

His Honour Governour Trumbull.

---

GEORGE PITKIN TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, 16th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: My zeal for the safety and deliverance of my country obliges me to ask a dismission from my office as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Nineteenth Regiment of Militia of this State, to which I had the honour of an appointment. The only reason I have to excuse myself is want of health, which I have never had since my first campaign; and holding the same, may prevent some able and robust gentleman from rendering his country service therein, which I am prevented from doing by a shattered constitution, which is peculiarly mortifying in this day of general danger. Wish your Honour Divine support under the heavy weight of Government; and remain, with great truth, your and Assembly's most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE PITKIN.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Militia of the State of Connecticut.

JOSEPH YOUNGS TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

In Committee of Safety for the County of Westchester, White-Plains, December the 16th, 1776.

To his Excellency Major-General Wooster: We send you under guard three deserters from Colonel Rogers's regiment, for your examination, for your Excellency to dispose of as you may think proper. The reason of our troubling your Excellency is, because we are at this moment entirely destitute of guards. One of the prisoners that was the bearer of a late letter from your Excellency to our Committee, desiring us to deliver up to him his guns, behaved in such an insolent and audacious manner before the Committee, that they considered him as a very dangerous person, and thought it most expedient to send him back again to your Excellency for your further disposal, as your Excellency has guards at hand.

By order of Committee:

Joseph Youngs, Deputy Chairman.

To his Excellency Major-General Wooster, at the Saw-Pitts.

---

COLONEL HENRY B. LIVINGSTON TO MATTHEW CANTINE.

Fairfield, 16th December, 1776.

Sir: I received the honour of yours last night at this place, being on my march for Fishkill, in my way to Fort Constitution, being directed by General Washington whenever I thought necessary to quit New-England to repair thither. Whether I shall be excusable should I undertake any other expedition, I will leave you and others, the gentlemen of the Convention, to determine. On their opinion I will even risk the loss of my commission. Sensible of the great honour done in permitting me a share in as honourable an expedition, I shall do my endeavours to be with you on Thursday, or sooner if possible.

I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

Henry B. Livingston.

To Matthew Cantine, Esq., Chairman of Convention of the State of New-York, Fishkill.

---

THOMAS MELVILL TO SAMUEL P. SAVAGE.

Providence, December 16th, 1776.

Sir: The Council of this State would be glad if the Board of War would send a number of intrenching tools immediately, as there is great want of them.

Thos. Melvill.

Samuel Phillips Savage, Esq., Boston.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Council Chamber, Boston, December 16th, 1776.

Sir: Your letter of the 3d instant was received by the President of the Council on the 11th instant, and was immediately communicated to the Assembly. Besides providing for the inlistment of our quota of the new Army, the Assembly have passed an act for raising a fourth part of the Militia at home, to march as soon as possible to recruit the Army, and be in service for three months from their march, before the expiration of which time, it is expected that our said quota will be raised. The fourth part of the Militia of the County of Berkshire and the one half of the fourth part of the Militia of the County of Hampshire, are ordered to march immediately to Albany, there to follow your orders; and I hope they will be on the spot by the time your orders reach that place.

I am, with respect, your most humble servant,

Thos. Cushing.

General Schuyler.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, December 16, 1776.

Sir: The Council have received your letter of the 13th instant. We are glad to hear that our Militia have marched with such spirit and ardour to the assistance of your State, and that they, together with those collected from Connecticut and your State, make up a body of six or seven thousand men. Might not this body of troops be immediately employed to attack the enemy, and, by a coup de main, drive them from Rhode-Island into the sea? If this should be delayed, will not the enemy so effectually intrench themselves as to render such a manœuvre very unsafe, if not impracticable? This is a matter worthy of attention. We submit it to your consideration.

We have taken into consideration the resolve passed by your Assembly appointing a Council of War, and proposing to this State the appointment of a Committee to confer with said Council of War, at Providence, upon the expediency of raising an army for the immediate defence of the New-England States. Our Assembly, on the 16th of November last, had appointed a Committee to confer with such Committees as the other New-England States might appoint, upon the measures necessary to be taken for supporting the credit of our publick currencies; but as the State of Connecticut declined, at that time, joining with the other Colonies in this measure, as they apprehended the Congress had taken the subject-matter of it under their consideration, and they feared it might give them umbrage, our Committee did not proceed to Providence; and our Assembly have since renewed their application to that State upon this subject, and enlarged the power of the Committee; and Governour Trumbull, in a letter lately received from him, has signified that their Assembly are not desirous of such a conference; the Council therefore have resolved, that it is highly expedient and necessary that the Committee first appointed should proceed to Providence, and meet and confer with your Council of War upon the matters particularly specified in the resolve of the Board, now enclosed; and a Committee from this State will accordingly meet your Council of War at Providence, the 23d instant, the time and place appointed by your State.

I am, with great respect, (in the name and behalf of the Council,) your most obedient, humble servant,

James Bowdoin, President.

We have but this moment received your letter of the 8th instant, by which we are glad to find that General Lincoln possesses the confidence of the people of your State. He will probably be with you to-morrow.

Governour Cooke.

---

J. WARREN TO MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR.

Plymouth, December 16, 1776.

Sir: This will be handed you by Captain Morton, of the schooner Ellen, which I have chartered for Maryland or Pennsylvania, as you shall choose, for either one or two trips. I could have wished this vessel and one other I have since chartered had been a size larger; but I was too late to pick and choose, and I believe they will do very well upon the terms agreed on. She now goes to Boston to attend your orders, supposing you would choose to ship some goods by her. I have paid the advance wages to the people; you have, therefore, nothing to do but victual and give your orders.

I am, with great respect, your most humble servant,

J. Warren.

If you choose to consign to the master, I believe Captain Morton capable of transacting the business.

December 17.—I have this bought a schooner, some lumber, and pickled fish. I have made some contracts for shot, and some for spears. The shot contracted for are none larger than twelve pounds, and two or three tons grape. Mr. Lothrope is manufacturing a large quantity by contract with the Commissary.

The President of the Board of War.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO WILLIAM THOMPSON.

War Office, Boston, December 16, 1776.

Sir: Should either of the General Officers of the Militia who have marched to the aid of Rhode-Island, direct the whole or any part of the ammunition now at Rehoboth to be removed to any other place or places for the publick service, you are to comply with such direction, and deliver the same to such person or persons as said General Officer may appoint; and when you deliver up the remainder of the ammunition to the Selectmen of the town where it may be deposited, you are to leave directions with them for the above purpose.

By order of the Board.

S. P. Savage, President p. t.

To William Thompson, Esq.

WILLIAM PYNCHON, JUN., TO SAMUEL P. SAVAGE.

Springfield, December 16, 1776.

Yours of the 27th of November, I received, wherein was enclosed the resolve of the General Court and the order of the Board of War to forward to Richard Devens, Esq., at Boston, two hundred barrels of flour. In compliance with your letter, and the above-said orders, I have sent twenty barrels of ditto to the said Devens. But on Saturday last I received another letter, with your signature, without any date, wherein you directed me to consign the same flour to you, which I shall comply with as soon as possibly I can procure teams sufficient to transport the same to you. I yesterday loaded two teams with twelve casks, and directed them to lodge the same at your house, and agreed with them to carry twenty hundred neat weight for two shillings, lawful money, per mile, and in the same proportion for all over the ton. The price will be various, according as I can agree with the teamsters; which sums, as I have or shall agree with them for, I must beg the favour of you to remit to them, as I have no money in my hands belonging to the Province whereby I can defray the expense of transportation. Be pleased to let me know your determination respecting the matter as soon as may be.

I am, sir, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM PYNCHON, Jr.

To Samuel P. Savage, Esq., Weston,

---

Boston, December 16, 1776.

Thursday last, Captain Palmer, in the brig Elizabeth, belonging to the United States of America, arrived in a safe port from Marsailles, which he left the 7th of October, with a valuable cargo of linens and coarse woolens. He informs that great preparations for war were making in France when he left that place than had been known there for twenty years past; and that two large squadrons, one from Brest, the other from Toulon, were to sail on the first of January next, on an expedition some where, but that their destination was a profound secret. Mr. Silas Deane was well in Paris a day or two before he sailed.

The enemy are in possession of Newport, in Rhode-Island, but what number we have not learnt; and we hear that the noted Joseph Wanton, Esq., is appointed Governour of the same, and has given orders to those who desire protection from (what is called) Government, to affix a white flag to their respective houses.

---

JAMES TILGHMAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, December 17th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When Col. Smallwood's battalion marched into this city, his men were greatly distressed for the want of salt, and the Quartermaster (Mr. Maubry) hearing that there was some at Doctor Stewart's, where I then lodged, applied to me for a small quantity to answer the immediate and pressing call. Though I had not any authority from Mrs. Stewart, who had removed to the country, to dispose of any part of it, I could not withhold it, but told the Quartermaster to take what he thought might be sufficient, not exceeding eight or ten bushels, provided he would engage to replace it out of the first he could spare, which he promised to do.

I really do not know the exact quantity he took out, as he did not give me any report. Indeed, I did not apprehend it at that time at all necessary that he should, presuming he would render fair accounts from time to time to your Board, and that the quantity would appear from thence; but as nearly as I can recollect, he informed me that he had about five bushels. As Mrs. Stewart is now in want, and the salt has not been replaced, I shall be much obliged to your Honours for an order for that quantity, or what other your Honours may think proper. If it should appear hereafter that he had not so much, the surplus shall be returned.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,

JA. TILGHMAN.

The honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 17th, 1776.

SIRS: Captain Martin has sailed at last, with a fair wind. I wish him a good voyage.

Captain Cook has sailed this day with his marines for Elk. I have received one thousand pounds by Mr. Speer, and five hundred by Captain Cook. Shall pay all Captain Martin's bill, but his expense is greater than I could imagine. His bills are coming in still. I am purchasing pork for the ship, and all such things as Captain Cook has directed me to provide. I intend purchasing the brig and schooner, if to be got on any terms. But their sails have not come on.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

P. S. I shall set off for the camp to-morrow morning, but the business will go on.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 20, 1776: Referred to Mr. R. H. Lee, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Harrison, and Mr. S. Adams.]

Philadelphia, December 17th, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Walton, Mr. Clymer, and myself, thought it advisable to open the enclosed letter last night, that we might judge if the expense of another express should be incurred, or detain it for the post, which we concluded to do, as I had wrote you the unfortunate fate of General Lee before. I am sorry to inform you that the Roebuck and Falcon men-of-war are in Delaware Bay, and two bomb-ketches said to be in the offing. On receipt of this news, (which is certain,) I hired a pilot boat, and sent her with a letter to Captain Biddle, and all the other vessels outward bound, desiring them to stop, or come back. So that my labours appear to be lost, and sorry I am for the disappointment. However, it's likely the first smart northwester may give us an opening to push them out.

I have just heard that a party or parties of the enemy were yesterday at Moorstown and Haddonfield, in the Jerseys, opposite to this, and distant about seven to nine miles. What their views are I cannot say, but by the appearance of the men-of-war below, and the bomb-ketches being said to have sailed from New-York, it would seem as if their parties meant to make their way to Red-Bank, erect works to command the chevaux-de-frise, and then to come up with the ships. This, however, is mere matter of speculation. Colonel Griffin is, I understand, gone over with about eight hundred men, but I fear he will not be strong enough for them.

I have the honour to be, very respectfully, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO GENERAL HEATH.

Philadelphia, December 17th, 1776.

SIR: Since I saw you I am informed that a person in New-York, who had an opportunity of being acquainted with the motions of the enemy, had advised a friend to move her effects from Fishkill to some place of safety. I am not at liberty to mention names; but make no doubt that such message was sent, and that the person sending might be acquainted with their motions. This, I understand, was before any movement of your division.

I have the honour to be your very humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

General Heath.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 17, 1776.

SIR: We lament the loss of General Lee, both as it relates to the publick and to a General whom we so highly esteem and respect; yet we hope it may be in the power of your Excellency to close the campaign with honour to yourself, and to leave General Howe in a situation which may afford him little reason to boast.

We assure you, sir, this Council will not suffer any thing to abate their exertions, but that they will use every hour which the enemy shall delay their approach in preparing for the defence of this city and State in the best manner possible, and shall most cheerfully afford your Excellency every assistance in our power.

By the enclosed resolution you will see the sentiments of the Council respecting the Militia who refuse to do their duty on the present occasion.

*

A servant of Brigadier-General Dickinson's, last Friday afternoon, requested a pass to your camp, he having, as he said, a letter from Mr. Dickinson to his master. The Council thought it proper to examine the contents, a copy of which we have enclosed. The original appears to be in the handwriting of John Dickinson, Esq. General Dickinson has requested that the letter may be sent to him, but we think it proper to retain the original in our hands, and have referred him to your Excellency for the copy, if you shall think proper to deliver it to him.

By order of the Council. I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your obedient servant,

THO'S WHARTON, Jun., President.

His Excellency General Washington.

—

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 17, 1776.

Resolved, That it be recommended to General Washington to issue orders immediately for the Militia of Bucks and Northampton Counties forthwith to join his Army, and to send out parties to disarm every person who does not obey the summons, and to seize and treat as enemies all those who shall attempt to oppose the execution of this measure, and likewise every person in those Counties who are known or suspected to be enemies to the United States.

Extract from the Minutes:

JACOB S. HOWELL, Secretary.

—

Receive no more Continental money on your bonds and mortgages. The British troops having conquered the Jerseys, and your being in camp, are sufficient reasons. Be sure you remember this. It will end better for you.

[Copy of a Letter found in the possession of Brigadier-General Philemon Dickinson's servant, directed to the said General, at camp.

JACOB J. HOWELL,
Secretary to the Council of Safety.]

—

LETTER TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD VISCOUNT HOWE.

17th December, 1776.

MY LORD: Whatever errour the Court of Great Britain may have fallen into in the commencement and prosecution of the present unhappy contest with America, it was certainly a most politick step to commit the conduct of this important affair to your Lordship, and the General your brother.

The name of Howe is dear to America, and amongst the many distressing difficulties we have to surmount, it is certainly no inconsiderable one to overcome the predilection we feel for your family. The exalted virtues of your heroick brother, whose bones are embraced by that soil you are now drenching with blood, often rise in painful remembrance. We are ready to acknowledge the amiable dispositions that distinguish your private character; and whilst we feel the smart of the wounds you inflict, wish they had been administered by another hand. We consider you as the executioner of another's wrath, not your own; and forgive with as much sincerity (pardon the allusion) as the condemned wretch forgives the appointed officer who is about to torture him into another state of existence. The idea I have of your Lordship's character compels me to suppose that, before you undertook this fatal task, your judgment was fully convinced that the inflexible rules of honour and equity, the spirit of the British Constitution, and the sacred rights of mankind, fully authorized the claims of the British Court over her American subjects; and that a refusal of, and resistance to those claims on the part of America, is, and ought to be, deemed rebellion against Government. Under such a conviction, can we blame your Lordship for asserting and enforcing the rights of your Sovereign? For my own part, I can lay my hand upon my heart, and with sincerity declare, if you are so convinced, I blame you not. Let the same candour, my Lord, be extended to the poor Americans! If they think, and are firmly persuaded, that neither honour nor equity, neither the spirit of the British Constitution nor the rights of mankind, can authorize the unbounded expectation of the British Court, and that it is an indisputable duty they owe to themselves and their unborn posterity to defend their Constitution against such claims, ought they not to be respected, as then acting upon the best principles, however ill-founded you may suppose those principles to be; and ought you not to pity whilst you punish?

The present dispute is, what the rights of the Crown and Parliament are with respect to America, and what they are not. Great Britain would have us acknowledge that her claims are just, and that without much reasoning upon the subject. She will not reason upon it; she will not hear what we have to say in our own defence, but we must acknowledge her claims are just. And when, my Lord, were acknowledgments of this kind forced upon mankind with success? To own the supremacy of the British Legislature over the lives and properties of the people of America, or to own the supremacy of his Holiness over our immortal souls, are doctrines which can only be established by the sword and the fagot, amongst men who have the free use of their reason. But I am, perhaps, going too far. I mean not to offend your Lordship, nor would I be wanting in that respect which is due to your character and station. If my zeal upon so interesting a subject should appear somewhat intemperate, your Lordship will make the proper allowance. Suffer me, then, to shed a few tears over the mangled limbs of my bleeding country. Know, then, that ruin and devastation, plunder and riot, insult and murder, mark the way of your savage mercenaries over this hospitable, cultivated, and once happy land. It is not enough that the hopeful youth, with fire in his eye, and a heart high beating in his country's cause, is called forth and cut down in the field of battle, where the crimson glow of health fades from his cheek, and he yields his breath an early sacrifice at the shrine of liberty; but the voice of the trembling virgin cries aloud to Heaven against the brutal force of the salacious ravisher, who, having accomplished his infernal purpose, spurns at the body he has compelled to give the unlicensed joy. Take a view of the country before you: villages demolished, cities abandoned, and the miserable inhabitants driven from their comfortable houses, where they had long enjoyed all the endearing sweets of domestick felicity, to seek shelter, at this inclement season, they know not where; whilst the remains of their property, acquired by long labour and industry, are left a prey to unpitying foreigners, who destroy, without remorse, what they cannot immediately use or conveniently take away. Think not, my Lord, that this is an exaggerated picture, overcharged in the colouring. Facts have justified the assertion, and the mournful occasion prompts the style.

Such is the nature of the commission you are come to execute amongst us. Cruel as it is, I am nevertheless firm in opinion that your Lordship thinks you are only brandishing the sword of justice, not exercising the rod of oppression. But how you can think so, is hard for an American to conceive. I have been told, and fondly encourage the belief, that your Lordship holds in contempt those parricides who, through a selfish motive of securing themselves, basely betray their country's cause, and that, although you think yourself obliged to take advantage of the treason, you despise the traitors. This is a principle of honour worthy your character, and perfectly consistent with the sentiments of a liberal mind.

But I hasten to a conclusion of this address. The unpardonable fault of America now, it is said, is the Declaration of Independence. When our faults were less, they were as hardly thought of and as highly censured. Even our modest complaints were called presumption, and dismissed with reproach. No lenient hand was held out to bring matters to a happy issue; no alleviation offered to the griefs we thought we suffered; no friendly shield interposed between us and the ruin we apprehended. Independence was so far from the wish of America, the very idea was distressing. But hard and cruel necessity drove us to the desperate determination. God only knows what the event will be. In the mean time, we would press upon you to call forth that humanity which, like a healing balm, lubricates every generous mind; and though you carry on your master's work, let not the hand of rapine spread unnecessary desolation through our suffering country. Arrest the plunderer's greedy grasp, and let not the cries of the despoiled virgin call to Heaven for vengeance on those who regard not God, and who trample on the sacred rights of humanity. Wrongs like these fix a stain even on victory itself, which the floods of ages cannot wash.

Yours, &c.

LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA, COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the Court-House in Lancaster, the 17th December, 1776—

Present: Edward Shippen, William Atlee, Lodwick Lowman, William Bowsman, Christopher Crawford, Henry Dehuff, George Moore, Mathias Slough. William Atlee in the chair.

Ordered, That Mr. Atlee, out of the moneys in his hands for the poor families of Associators, pay to Eve Freena, the wife of James Freena, a soldier in one of the battalions of this Province, the sum of thirty shillings, she being in a distressed situation, with a small helpless family.

And that he pay to Druchenbrode, the wife of Andrew Druchenbrode, a soldier in one of the battalions of this Province, the sum of thirty shillings, her husband being prisoner, and she in a distressed situation, with a small helpless family.

And that he pay Shrode, the wife of Samuel Shrode, a soldier in one of the battalions of this Province, the sum of thirty shillings, her husband being prisoner, she being just brought to bed, and in a distressed situation.

Mr. Atlee is directed, out of the publick moneys in his hands, to pay Mrs. Jordon her expenses for attending and burying a poor soldier from the Flying-Camp, who died there a day or two ago.

Mr. Atlee is directed to request a meeting of the inhabitants at the publick square to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, to endeavour to fall on measures for marching the Militia of the town and County to join General Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LIEUTENANT-GENERAL HOWE.

Head-Quarters, December 17th, 1776.

Sir: I would beg leave to recall your attention to the proposition for the exchange of prisoners, to the several letters I have lately written on that subject, and to inform you that I have not received such officers in exchange as were requested by me.

I am persuaded, sir, that this mistake has arisen from Mr. Commissary Loring's zeal to facilitate the business; but I would at the same time desire that you would give him orders, whenever any of your officers are sent in by me, not to send others in exchange till he is furnished with a list from me of such as I would choose to prefer, which shall always be done as soon as possible. For as the prisoners seldom pass my Head-Quarters on their way, it is not in my power to transmit such lists by them without occasioning their delay. If this mode is not complied with in future, I shall be under the disagreeable necessity of stopping others from going in, as my ideas and expectations are by no means answered from what has happened.

I enclose you a list of seven officers, who were sent in from Bristol on the 14th, and of two officers and two privates, who accompany the present flag. As the remainder of all those who were in the State of Pennsylvania are on the road and expected here daily, I shall defer making a demand of those I would choose in exchange till the whole come up.

I am, with due respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL MAGAW.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 17th December, 1776.

Dear Sir: As an exact return of the officers, with their names and ranks, and the number of non-commissioned officers and privates, taken at Fort Washington, will be necessary to carry an exchange into execution, you will please to furnish me with it as soon as convenient. And as General Howe only transmitted me an account of the number of officers returned by Sir Guy Carleton, under parole, from Canada, without specifying their names and ranks, be pleased to apply to Mr. Commissary Loring for the same, and send it to me with your own return.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Colonel Robert Magaw, Fifth Pennsylvania, Prisoner.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO COLONEL PALFREY.

Head-Quarters, December 17th, 1776.

Sir: I am commanded by his Excellency to inform you, that as there may be several demands for money at Peekskill for recruiting and other purposes, he thinks you had better send by Mr. Sheldon such a sum as will be sufficient for every purpose, to be paid on General Heath's warrants. The opportunity by the Major will be the best that may happen for some considerable time, as his Excellency has consented to the return of the Connecticut Light-Horse, who will take it in charge, with one of your clerks, or convey it to such person as you may appoint to receive it there. You had better advise General Heath of it by a scribere.

I am, sir, your, &c.

R. H. Harrison.

To Lieutenant-Colonel William Palfrey, Paymaster-General.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 17 December, 1776.

Gentlemen: Since I wrote to you yesterday, I have received information that the enemy are still moving downwards; and by their making fascines, they either have not yet laid aside their designs upon Philadelphia, or they mean to quarter in the small towns along the river; in which case I suppose they would throw up small works to prevent a surprise. In either case, if there are any artillery or stores at Billingsport, they should be immediately removed, as I find from a late letter from you, that you have not a sufficient force to protect the works that have been erected.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect,

Go. Washington.

Council of Safety of Pennsylvania.

---

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Bethlehem, 17th December, 1776.

Sir: General Arnold this moment received from me your Excellency's letter to him of the 14th instant. From intelligence which he thinks authentick, Rhode-Island has been some time in possession of the enemy, and so considerable a force from Connecticut had assembled opposite to Bristol Ferry, as to render any further attempt of the British forces impracticable in that quarter. Upon mature consideration, I think it is best for the publick service that General Arnold should previously wait upon your Excellency, communicate the intelligence he has received, and take such ample instructions as the importance of the service he is designed to execute may require.

I am your Excellency's, &c., &c., &c.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

WILLIAM SHIPPEN, JUN., TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Bethlehem, Tuesday, December 17, 1776.

Dear Sir: After much difficulty and expense, I have removed all the sick to Easton, Bethlehem, and Allentown; their number is now much reduced, and all in a good way. I send twenty or thirty weekly to join the Army. There is no Paymaster or General near us, and I am almost out of cash; I must therefore beg the favour of you to procure me five thousand dollars, and send them by the bearer, Dr. Halling, for the use of the Hospitals. You will please to give a receipt for me, &c. Mrs. Shippen and the children arrived safe on Thursday morning, and are happily settled in this peaceful town. I have not heard of my clothes and old wine; fear the varlets have them as secure as poor General Lee. Oh! what a damned sneaking way of being kidnapped. I can't bear to think of it. I saw all his troops, about four thousand, this morning, marching from Easton, about two days' march from Washington, in good spirits, and much pleased with their General (Sullivan.) General Gates, with nine hundred men, marches from this place this afternoon and to-morrow. We hear General Heath is within four days' march, with three thousand men. God send that all joined may save Philadelphia, and disappoint the cursed Tories this winter. Where are your good ladies? My love and best compliments to them, and desire they will take care of themselves, lest our retrograde soldiers will run them down. I wish you would introduce a new step into your army; I am sure they are perfect in the back step by this time. Compliments to the Adamses, &c., &c.

I am yours, very affectionately,

W. Shippen, Jun.

Colonel Lee, of the honourable Continental Congress, Philadelphia.

P. S. From a tedious experience I have learned what is necessary in a military hospital, and think it my duty to give my opinion thereon, to my friends in Congress. I have attended to this matter more carefully, because I saw on my first entering the Army, that many more brave Americans fell a sacrifice to neglect and iniquity in the medical department, than fell by the sword of the enemy. I saw Directors, but no direction. Physicians and Surgeons, but too much about their business, and the care of the sick committed to young boys, in the character of mates, quite ignorant, and, as I am informed, hired at half price, &c., &c., &c. Some I found honestly doing the duty of their stations. How far my own department has been better filled does not become me to say, and I am not ashamed to own that I am conscious of many imperfections, but flatter myself that none of them have arisen from want of care and integrity in the Director, or skill and industry in his Physicians, Surgeons, and Mates; all the latter, he can with pleasure declare, have done more than their duty cheerfully. Some have arisen from my inexperience, some from the scarcity of many articles necessary for the sick, and some from the distracted, flying state of the Army. All these causes, I persuade myself, will in a great measure be removed in the next campaign, if our cruel enemies risk another. I would humbly propose the following arrangement as necessary, and I hope adequate to making the sick soldiery comfortable and happy: Suppose three armies, a Northern, Middle, and Southern; to each of these the following officers:

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 Director and Surgeon Gen'l, at | 35 | 0 | and 8 | rations. |
| 3 Sub or Assistant Directors, - | 22 | 6 | and 6 | do. |
| 10 Surgeons or Physicians, - - | 20 | 0 | and 4 | do. |
| 20 Mates, - - - - - - - - | 7 | 6 | and 2 | do. |
| 1 Apothecary-General, - - - | 20 | 0 | and 4 | do. |
| 4 Mates, - - - - - - - - | 7 | 6 | and 2 | do. |
| 1 to act as Quartermaster-Gen'l and Commissary-General, | 12 | 6 | and 4 | do. |
| 3 Deputies, or one to every hundred sick, - - - - - | 7 | 6 | and 2 | do. |
| 1 Steward to every hundred sick, | 5 | 0 | and 2 | do. |
| 1 Matron to - - do. - - - | 3 | 9 | and 2 | do. |
| 1 Ward-Master to do. - - - | 5 | 0 | and 1 | do. |
| 1 Nurse to every fifteen sick, - instead of one to every ten, at 7*s*. 6*d*.; they are not to be had at 7*s*. 6*d*. | 10 | 0 | per week, | |
| 1 to act as Secretary and Storekeeper to every Hospital, | 7 | 6 | and 2 | rations. |

The Directors-General and Sub-Directors to be chosen by the Congress; the Physicians, Surgeons, and Apothecaries, by the Directors; the Mates by the Physicians and Surgeons, after a strict examination; all other officers by the Directors.

Not less than this, in my opinion, will induce men properly qualified to engage; and any others will be dear at any price.

I have the honour to be, dear sir, your very humble servant,

William Shippen, Jun.

No Regimental Hospitals will now be necessary. To every regiment should be appointed by the Congress, after being examined and recommended by the Directors and Physicians and Surgeons of the Hospital, or by three or four of the most eminent in any State appointed by that State for the purpose,

1 Surgeon, at - - 12*s*. 6*d*. and 4 rations per diem,
and 2 Mates, - - - 6 3 and 2 do.

To be supplied with one case of amputating and trepanning instruments, one case of pocket ditto, and such a chest of medicines as the Directors shall think proper.

Bethlehem, December 20, 1776.

COLONEL PALFREY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Newtown, 17th December, 1776.

Dear General: Agreeable to orders I have received from General Washington, I have sent in the care of Colonel Sheldon one hundred and thirty-four thousand dollars, for paying the troops, recruiting, and other purposes; also twenty-two thousand seven hundred and fifty more for paying General Wadsworth's brigade, to be paid by your warrants. He has ordered me to appoint a Deputy in your department. I would choose Mr. Hazard, if he is at Peekskill; if he is absent, Mr. Nat. Glover, who was my clerk, and left sick at the house opposite to where Colonel Putnam lived. If neither of them are at hand, appoint any person most agreeable to you, and I will send them proper authority. You'll be so kind as to send me a receipt from the person in whose hands the money is deposited. They are to make returns to me as often as possible of what money they pay, and the demands they may have.

I most heartily wish you happiness and success, and am, dear General, yours sincerely,

Wm. Palfrey.

Excuse my great haste.

Hon. Major-General Heath.

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Morris-Town, December 17th, 1776.

My dear General: I arrived here the next day after the distressing intelligence of General Lee's being made a prisoner. The enemies of the country and their secret agents are so many, that the friends of the cause judged it not advisable for me to follow General Lee's division, as it was thirty miles ahead, without a guard. I therefore determined to wait the arrival of the troops under the command of Colonel Vose. I found Colonel Moylan here the evening I arrived, in quest of the troops of General Gates's division, in order to quicken their march to join General Washington; but Colonel Vose's detachment was not then arrived, nor did it reach this until this day at noon.

By the enclosed copy of General Lee's letter to the Colonel, with the assertions of Colonel Ford and the Rev. Mr. Caldwell, it appears that General Lee gave them assurances that this corps should not cross the Delaware, but be left here to support the drooping spirits of the Militia of the Counties not in hands of the enemy, who are greatly fatigued by constant duty, and the inhabitants greatly distressed by the incursions and ravages of the enemy. And there is great reason to apprehend, if the Militia are not supported by the aid and presence of Continental troops, they will be dispirited, and perhaps disperse. Colonel Ford and Mr. Caldwell, in support of General Lee's intention, adduce your letter of the 15th instant, wherein you say "Lieutenant-Colonel Vose, with three regiments from Ticonderoga, marched this day from Paramus towards your quarter. I am in hopes that with his aid you will be able to effect every purpose which you wish." Which they say could not be accomplished if those troops continued their march to join General Washington. In this state of things I wish to have your direction; for if I advise the Colonel to proceed, and the consequences apprehend take place, I may be blamed. If I detain him, after Colonel Moylan's coming in quest of the Northern troops, I am subject to be censured; and therefore think it expedient to wait your express orders for this corps before they move.

I have the honour to be your very humble servant,

Alex. McDougall, Brigadier-General.

Major-General Heath, at Hackinsack.

P. S. Since I wrote the above, a part of the Militia under Colonel Ford had a skirmish with the enemy at Springfield, in the night, in which our people obliged them first to retreat to their main body; when we were obliged in our turn to retire, with some loss. It will greatly advance the service if you quicken your march towards Springfield, through Newark mountains.—Twelve p. m.

COLONEL FORD TO GENERAL HEATH.

Chatham, 17th December, 1776, ten o'clock in the Evening, and twelve miles west of Elizabeth-Town.

Dear Sir: We have since sunset had a brush with the enemy, four miles below this, in which we have suffered, and our Militia much disheartened. They are all retreated to this place, and will in all probability be attacked by daybreak. The enemy, we have reason to believe, are double our numbers. General McDougall is with the northern battalions that were coming on with Colonel Vose, and intends marching directly to General Washington. He is this night in Morris-Town, eight miles west of this, and we have no expectations of his assistance. If in your wisdom you can assist us, we may possibly beat them yet; but without your aid we can't stand. They are encamped (say one thousand British troops) at Springfield, and will be joined by four hundred and fifty Waldeckers from Elizabeth-Town, by the next morning's light. I know, sir, it is not for me, nor would I presume, to direct you, but if you can consistently, I beg and pray you would come to our assistance. I you think proper to come to our assistance, the bearer will give you our situation and that of the enemy, and be your guide; after which you will be a proper judge whether to beat up their rear or march in their front and join us, or rather suffer us to join you, and march the whole down upon them.

Am your most obedient servant,

JACOB FORD, Jun., Colonel.

To the Hon. General Heath, at Second River or Hackinsack.

---

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Pyramus, 17th December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I arrived at the City near Kakiate on Sunday, where I found Colonels Woodhull's, McClaghry's, Hawthorn's, and Alison's regiments of Militia, consisting of about twelve hundred men, exclusive of commissioned officers, waiting with the utmost anxiety for orders to move forward. I found that General Heath had marched his division down to Orange-Town, and from thence had proceeded to Hackensack; but as I could not learn what reception he had met with on his arrival there, and could not know but for want of succour he might fail in his expedition, I thought it most expedient to proceed thither myself, accompanied by some of my officers and a small detachment of Light-Horse. I did so accordingly. I arrived there yesterday afternoon, and found that the enemy, who were but few in number, on the General's approach had precipitately fled, accompanied by a number of principal Tories, leaving in town, at the bridge, and on board of vessels in the river, a large quantity of valuable stores, great part of which were removed to this place, and on the road hither. Just before I arrived, a considerable body of the enemy were discovered by our out scouts to cross from Fort Washington to this shore, in two bodies, a number moving from the southward towards Totoway Bridge, and another party was seen opposite Hackensack Ferry. In consequence of which the General had ordered a retreat to this place, to cover the stores he had sent forward here, and prevent their encircling him. I thought prudent, considering the movements of the enemy and his strength, which consists only of about six hundred privates. It was effected in the night.

By the General's advice, I have ordered down Colonels Woodhull's and McClaghry's regiments to this place, and hourly expect them in. I hope the different situation of our affairs since the issuing of my orders will justify me in the opinion of the honourable the Convention in this small deviation from them, especially as General Heath cannot effect any thing without great risk, without this small reinforcement. I thought to have disposed of the remaining regiments under my command in the manner mentioned in the enclosed letter to Colonel Allison, which I wrote and intended sending him, but feared it might be considered as too great a deviation from my orders. I therefore thought it best first to transmit it to you, and if it should meet the approbation of your honourable House, beg you will forward it by express to him. The reasons why I wish to have a regiment at Tappan is not only to protect our friends there, but if the enemy should advance while we attack them in front, that regiment might fall upon their rear.

The two regiments from the north end of Ulster County are not yet arrived. I mean to station them near the passes in the Highlands. The Tories who remained in Hackensack were in the utmost consternation on General Heath's to them unexpected and sudden entry into the town. He took and sent hither about sixty of them, five regulars, and upwards of one hundred small-arms, &c.

I am, with due respect, your most obedient servant,

GEO. CLINTON.

I forgot to mention that Colonel Malcom's regiment were dismissed before I could see him. I have shown General Heath your order or request respecting Malcom's and Thomas's regiments, but have not yet received his orders respecting the latter. I enclose you a letter from some of the Committee of Orange-Town, which I received on my way hither.

To the Honourable the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO COLONEL ALLISON.

Peyeamies, 17 December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On receipt hereof you are to move with your regiment down to Orange-Town, and there continue till further orders. You'll be careful on your march thither to keep out proper advanced and flank guards, and when there the necessary guards and scouting parties to prevent your being surprised by the enemy.

You'll give every protection in your power to the friends of the United States in that quarter of the country. At the same time you'll endeavour to discover, apprehend, and secure the enemies of said States, who may be found lurking or under arms in that quarter, that they may, if taken alive, be delivered over to the civil authority, to be dealt with according to their crimes. Take special care, however, that your troops do not plunder the inhabitants under any pretence whatever. If the British troops should approach you with superiour numbers, or under such advantages as to render it imprudent to give them battle, in either of these cases retreat in order, so as to regain the passes in the Highlands near Sydenham's. Colonel Hathorn's regiment will continue where they now are, and stand ready to sustain you in case of necessity, and to strengthen the pass near Sydenham's. Colonel Hasbrouck's regiment, which must ere this have arrived, must occupy Haverstraw, in order to secure the passes in the Highlands near the river, and to reinforce Fort Montgomery in case any attempt should be made against it. You'll therefore deliver the commanding officers of those regiments copies of this order, that they may govern themselves accordingly. You'll take the proper steps to ensure your being furnished with provisions at Orange-Town, and your Quartermaster will draw the necessary ammunition from the Army Quartermaster-General, Major Taylor, at Haverstraw, of which you must be very careful, that if not used it may be returned.

I am, your humble servant,

GEORGE CLINTON.

To Colonel William Allison.

---

ISAAC NICOLL TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Peeks-Kill, December 17th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I last night received the disagreeable news of General Lee being taken a prisoner. It has come so straight that I believe it is beyond a doubt he was taken at Baskenridge last Thursday night. It seems he lodged three miles in the rear of the Army, and a Tory of that place went to the Regulars and told them of it, and piloted the Light-Horse to him, who took him prisoner. The time is now come that every one who is a friend to his country ought to stand forth, and in the situation our enemy is now, in the Jerseys, I think a fatal stroke may be struck. Let the people be called from all parts, and in the name of God cut them off from the face of the earth, with the damn'd Tories. The secret expedition the Convention has planned ought, in my opinion, to be drove on with all expedition. I think it is likely that General Lee had the last returns from Generals Heath and Spencer. If they are found with him, is it not likely that General Howe will muster what troops he can spare out of New-York, joined with the Tories and Rogers's Rangers, and scour this county, take the stores at North-Castle, and perhaps advance to this post.

I hear the fleet sent to the eastward has landed at New-Port. The inhabitants capitulated. About one third left the town, and two thirds staid.

I am, in haste, your sincere friend and humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL.

To John McKesson, Esq.

THOMAS MOFFAT TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Peeks-Kill, 17 December, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday, by order of Colonel Nicoll, I went on board the enemy's flag at Verplank's Point, and delivered the letter from Convention directed to Messrs. Inglis, Livingston, and Moore, who were all highly pleased with the favour granted them, and desired me to return their compliments to Convention for the polite usage they had received from that body. Mr. Inglis would have wrote them a note of compliments himself, but had unfortunately lost his inkstand.

Mr. Inglis and the other gentlemen expressed a desire of having another vessel with a flag from here, to assist them down to New-York with their families, as the vessel on board of which they are is small, and much cramped. If a matter of that kind should be granted, and a capable person put aboard, perhaps some important discovery might be made at this juncture.

I am, with respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

THOMAS MOFFAT.

To John McKesson, Esq., Fishkill.

---

COLONEL SWARTWOUT TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Constitution, December 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have the proceedings of a Court-Martial in consequence of Peter Harris's deserting twice, and his unbecoming behaviour since his return. Peter Harris, a soldier of Captain Veal's company, was brought here some time last week, by his father-in-law, Captain Reynolds, in order to get him clear from punishment. After his father's interceding a great while, I consented he should be brought in; would give him a smart reprimand, and all his former crimes should stand good against him, and should be put on duty every day, and for the same should receive no pay; but in case he should commit any crime, should be tried for old and new. Now, gentlemen, I send to you, by Lieutenant Platt, said Harris, for you to determine the matter with him, as you think most best.

I am, with the greatest respect, your very humble servant,

JACOBUS SWARTWOUT.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkills.

---

COURT-MARTIAL ON PETER HARRIS.

Fort Constitution, December 16th, 1776.

At a Regimental Court-Martial, held this day, Captain Barnardus Swartwout, President.

Lieut. Charles Platt, Lieut. Nathaniel Potter,
Lieut. Jacobus Horton, Lieut. Simeon Lefever.

Peter Harriss, soldier, of Captain Israel Veal's company, Colonel Jacobus Swartwout's regiment, being brought before this Court, and charged with desertion and threatening violence to his Captain and others—

The prisoner confesses the charge, and owns himself guilty, and prays the mercy of this Court.

This Court are of opinion that Peter Harriss is guilty of desertion and abuse in the grossest manner, and think the most proper step they can take with him is to recommend him to the Convention for their determination, and likewise to send a true state of his crime, which is as follows: He being a volunteer, and having deserted twice, and taken the full bounty, and never done one month's service, and behaved himself otherwise very bad, and now threatening violence to them who offered to apprehend him, as swearing he would be revenged as soon as he was discharged.

BERNARDUS SWARTWOUTT, Captain.

---

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

[Without date.]

SIR: Mr. Duer, with several other members of Convention, is now attending the Army raised within this State, on a secret expedition projected by this Convention, with a view to cooperate with your Excellency or attempt to create a diversion in your favour. For this reason your Excellency's letter of the 14th instant to that gentleman has been laid before the Committee of Safety. Anxious for the publick good, they have long viewed the want of clothing for the Army as a very capital misfortune. Unhappily deprived of all our sea-ports, the means of importation are totally cut off from this State, and we have in vain endeavoured to procure a supply from Congress and our sister States, or a part of the Continental bounty. The recruits are importunate, and express the utmost discontent that it is withheld. Discontent is increased by their being ordered to march to the Northern posts, which are in a manner destitute of garrison. A spirit of desertion is already prevailing; and the recruiting service, which in the beginning was uncommonly successful, now meets with discouragement. Perplexed with this difficulty, it was with the utmost satisfaction that we learned that a quantity of clothing for the Continental troops were stored at this place. They arrived at Peekskill about a month ago, remained there several days, were then sent to Fishkill Landing, about twenty miles north of Peekskill, stored for a week, and then transported by land to this town, six miles east of the landing, and stored there for several days, without any effort to have them made into clothes, or, according to our information, any order to forward them to your Excellency. Add to that, that the Deputy Quartermaster-General, Mr. Hughes, informed one of the members that part of the goods were to be left here for the use of the Continental troops within this State. From all these circumstances, Convention was led to conclude that there could be no impropriety in applying them accordingly. It is true that he was not inclined to deliver them without your Excellency's direction, though he finally consented, on the importunity of the Committee of Convention appointed to procure clothing for the Continental troops in this department. These are the facts; and if we have erred, it is from an earnest anxiety to promote the publick service, which was, and still is, suffering for want of compliance with the encouragement which Congress have ordered to the new levies.

You may be assured, sir, that nothing is further from our wishes than to interfere in the military line, or abridge your Excellency's unquestionable province; on the contrary, we lament it as a misfortune that from your late necessary retreat and remote situation, so great a share of the military operations in this quarter is cast upon us, and that we are compelled to turn our attention to matters out of the line of the civil power, and solely resting with your Excellency. The request communicated to Mr. Duer for forwarding such of the goods as have not been delivered to Continental recruits, shall be instantly complied with. Permit us to assure your Excellency that there is not the least room for apprehending that any stores of goods passing through this State will be detained. The respect we have always shown and sincerely feel for your person and office, our uniform and cheerful compliance with all your requisitions, and zeal for the common cause, and the great and continued exertions of this State, ought, we flatter ourselves, to secure us from such suspicion. In the instance of which your Excellency complains, we conceived we were serving the publick, though we were sensible that in that, as well as many other respects, we were acting out of our proper sphere. It is out of our power to clothe the quota of levies of this State: our Militia constantly employed in the field, are drawn from their ordinary business; the inhabitants themselves are destitute; we have few manufacturers, and cloth of every kind is scarce and dear beyond description. We have informed the Committee of our inability, as well as the Quartermaster-General. We have no answer or aid from either, but assure ourselves that when your Excellency's arduous situation shall permit, these circumstances, which give us unspeakable distress, will claim your attention. The First New-York Battalion, commanded by Colonel Van Schaick, and recruited to about four hundred men, is already marched to garrison Fort George or Ticonderoga, for the safety of which, against a winter campaign, we are not without strong apprehensions, as the troops stationed at those important fortresses march off immediately on the expiration of the term of their inlistment. Had this State been encumbered with raising only the five battalions assigned for its quota, we flatter ourselves that under every difficulty our engagements to Congress would soon have been complied with. But besides the battalion under our immediate direction, Colonel Hazen and Colonel James Livingston, and even Colonel Warner and numbers of their officers, are recruiting within a State already deprived of a great part of its territory. I have the honour to be, &c.

His Excellency General Washington.

JOS. TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Fishkills, 17th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I arrived at this place this morning. I went from Peekskill last Wednesday, intending to go to General Washington, at Philadelphia. I proceeded as far as Morristown, New-Jersey; there I found I could not get to the General, or to Philadelphia, without going round by Easton, and I was there also told Congress were going to Lancaster or Yorktown. This was not true. When at Morristown, I stopped for a guide, and while there came an account of the enemy's Light-Horse had taken General Lee, at White's Tavern, near Baskenridge, about seven miles from Morristown. This was soon confirmed by Major Bradford, one of his Aids-de-Camp, who came into Morristown, and says that General Lee was at White's, at about twelve o'clock; that a party of about sixty Light-Horse, led by a Tory, who was with the General complaining of the loss of a horse taken by the Army the evening before, he found where the General was to lodge and breakfast, and that he was to be at this tavern about noon. He left them, and rode eighteen miles in the night to Brunswick, and returned with the party of Light-Horse. They came up to the house before they were discovered, took away the General after some little opposition, and the loss of two Light-Horsemen killed. They went off in a great hurry; carried off the General without his great coat or hat. In about three hours after the cannon played furiously, rejoicing on the occasion.

General Sullivan now commands that party. He is to cross Delaware, and join General Washington. General Gates is at Easton, or thereabout. Brother John is with him. General Heath, with about three thousand men, is gone to Hackensack, and from thence to Newark, and so on, hanging upon the enemy's rear. General Washington is reinforced, and continually increasing in numbers. I expect to stay here and at Peekskill till after the first of January, unless the General orders otherwise, and then come to Hartford. I wait his orders. Mr. Sherbrook and Mr. Alexander Wallace are here; they beg their respects to you, and that I inform that they have obtained leave to go into New-York. Please to tell Colonel Dyer that his son, Major Dyer, was well last Thursday, near Head-Quarters, opposite Trenton.

I am, honoured sir, your dutiful son,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

Governour Trumbull.

---

WILLIAM GORDON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Jamaica Plain, December 17, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: I have been for some time past in pain for your Excellency, but still in hopes that you would receive a reinforcement sufficient and soon enough to prevent the enemy's crossing the Delaware, or marching down by it on the Jersey side toward Philadelphia. Accounts yesterday relieved us from our anxiety, and have given us reason to conclude that the Regulars have left Brunswick and gone down by water to Staten-Island. If so, we may consider the campaign as over; and upon a review, have reason to be thankful. Certain it is, that if we have not succeeded in every instance to the utmost of our wishes, 'tis no less so with the enemy, who, so far from having made a conquest of the Continent, have not completed the reduction of a single Province, not even that in which they had the most interest. Whatever puffs the Ministry may cook up and present to the publick, they that expected more solid doings and to have had matters settled, will find themselves wretchedly disappointed. Our friends in Europe will judge that, all things considered, we have made a glorious campaign. France and Spain will be likely to believe that we shall not be an incumbrance to them in case of their declaring war against Great Britain, but the contrary. I can heartily bless God for having carried us so well through the year, and thankfully make my acknowledgments, as an individual, to your Excellency and others, who have been used as instruments therein. Should a few prizes, whose arrival we have not yet heard of, get safe in, the balance will be much in our favour.

The Alfred is got to Boston harbour, designed for Rhode-Island; but the wind coming contrary, may have been the means of saving her. This day se'nnight, in thick stormy weather, she lost sight of her seven prizes, whom she meant to see safe in port. They are worth between two and three hundred thousand pounds sterling, prime cost, as I am informed. One has sixteen thousand full suits of clothes, designed for the soldiers in Canada, each suit, including shirts and two pair shoes, amounting to eight pounds sterling. This ship mounted sixteen guns, was pierced for twenty or one-and-twenty, bore down upon the Alfred, who concealed her lower ports, with a view of taking her, and was herself caught. She is a remarkable fine sailer. Captain Jones, of the Alfred, put in her full complements of guns, took out all her men, and manned her with a hundred of his own. Yesterday an armed vessel was to sail, and cruise off Nantucket Shoals for her, to give information of the enemy's being at Rhode-Island. The Council have also sent expresses directing that boats should keep a good look-out for her. I trust that Providence will make her a deodand (I mean a gift of God!) to us. We have our fears however. We have cause for hoping that she has not got into Newport, considering the weather and other circumstances. Am told that another of the prizes has bombs, mortars, &c., on board. The Captain has brought in all the prisoners, to the amount of one hundred and sixty; among them some officers, and the Judge, a nephew of Lord Effingham, of course of Lady Carleton. This gentleman may possibly induce the General to admit of a flag of truce going to him, though it is not to supplicate his Majesty's mercy, and may cure Howe's shuffling with, instead of exchanging, Carleton's prisoners.

Accounts were received yesterday from Rhode-Island that Carleton had been obliged to hang three or four soldiers for ravishing the women.

Would it not answer a valuable purpose, was an authentick account to be transmitted this way of the plunderings of the Regulars, without regard to Whig or Tory, in order to its being published? Your Excellency will be too much engaged to attend to such a matter, but you can prevail upon some of your suite to write to me.

At Salem a noble spirit was discovered in raising the troops for the three months. Gentlemen of considerable fortune turned out volunteers, several worth many thousand sterling. Should your Excellency visit their quarters, I am sure it will be a pleasure to you to see and take notice of them. The gentlemen of Boston expect to engage their proportion for the whole three years.

The Cadet company have furnished thirty-six gentlemen, who have signed a petition, to be presented this day to Council, requesting that they may be appointed officers in one of the battalions to be furnished by the Massachusetts State. They mean to wipe away the reproach that has lain long upon Boston for not furnishing the Army with more military men. I hope there will be no invincible obstacles in the way, preventing a compliance; for as they have been well educated, know more of the world than the country clowns, have a sense of honour, a spirit of emulation, and understand their exercise, expect that, should they have a regiment, it will be as fine and as well disciplined a corps as any upon the Continent.

When I acquaint your Excellency that I am preparing for that history in which you are so deeply concerned and make so eminent a figure, and in the forming of which you were so obliging as to assure me you would assist by furnishing materials, your Excellency will conclude that I do not despair of the commonwealth, but look for a happy conclusion to the present noble struggle. Should our cause miscarry, it will be owing to our own supineness and selfishness; but these, I flatter myself, are at their summit, and will abate shortly.

Your Excellency would do the country great service, would you urge it upon our General Court to fortify the harbour of Boston to the utmost, and make the necessary provision for its being effectually defended, that so, should the Ministry set on foot an expedition against it early the next spring, the same may not succeed.

Do me the favour, my dear sir, of making my respectful compliments to your suite, to Generals Putnam, Greene, Lord Stirling, &c. Mrs. Gordon joins in warmest wishes for your safety and success, and pray you, when you write to your lady, to transmit our respects, as also to Mr. and Mrs. Custis. The coldness of the weather has injured the writing, but my heart is warm and sincere, notwithstanding the coldness of my hand, while I subscribe myself your very affectionate friend, and most humble servant,

WILLIAM GORDON.

His Excellency George Washington, Generalissimo of the American forces.

---

J. WARREN TO MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR.

Plymouth, December 17, 1776.

SIR: This goes by Captain Bartlett, of the schooner Elizabeth, chartered on account of the Board, for South-Carolina, Maryland, or Pennsylvania. She is a fine schooner, of forty six tons; and I am told he is very capable of selling or purchasing a cargo in either of those places, if you think proper to consign to him. Month's wages are already paid; you will therefore furnish him with such stores and cargo as you shall think proper, and despatch him that he may go another trip if you want it. I have another schooner, of a smaller size, which I shall send up next week, unless you think best to order her from here. I shall either purchase or hire one more, perhaps this day, and shall hire one for the West-Indies if I can make a cargo, which I have some prospect of. When you don't approve of my conduct you will recall me.

I am your most humble servant, J. WARREN.

To the President of the Board of War.

---

ELLIS GRAY TO CAPTAIN STONE.

Boston, December 17th, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby empowered to charter a vessel that will sail well and is floaty, for North-Carolina, sufficient to carry six hundred barrels naval stores. The Board of War will allow eight shillings per month, and insure against the enemy.

Your humble servant, ELLIS GRAY.

The Board will allow you for the necessary expense in provisioning a vessel and hands; and your own pay of six pounds per month is to commence this day.

To Captain Nathaniel Stone.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO CAPTAIN JOHNSON.

War Office, Boston, December 17th, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War desire you to proceed to Beverly, and despatch the brig Ann to sea. You will agree with the master and hands on the best terms you can. You will take the bills of lading for the cargo assigned to yourself, and give orders to the Captain to proceed with all possible despatch to Baltimore, in Maryland, and back again.

By order of the Board:

S. P. SAVAGE, President p. t.

Captain Holten Johnson.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO JOHN BRADFORD.

War Office, Boston, December 17th, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War having intelligence by Captain Jones, of the Continental ship Alfred, that he left a very valuable prize five days since, and under the apprehension of her falling into the enemy's hands, we earnestly recommend to you to direct one or more of the Continental schooners now in port, to proceed to sea immediately, and if possible to give intelligence to the prize-master that the enemy's fleet have possession of the port of Newport and the Vineyard Sound.

By order of the Board.

S. PHIPS SAVAGE, President p. t.

John Bradford, Esq.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL GODFREY.

War Office, Boston, December 17, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to order of Court, the Board of War inform you that they have ordered a quantity of provisions to Providence, under the direction of the Commissary, Mr. Newman, which is ordered to be delivered agreeable to establishment; and also a quantity of powder, under the care of Major Thompson, of Rehoboth, which is ordered to be distributed to such General Officers of the State of Massachusetts-Bay as shall apply for it, or to such Captains as shall make return of a company, twenty-five rounds per man, said officers and men being in the service of this State. And in case Major Thompson leaves Rehoboth, he is directed to leave the powder with the Selectmen of Rehoboth, with the above directions.

We shall be glad to hear from you, and of a general return of our Militia round Rhode-Island. We think it expedient the powder should be made into cartridges, and recommend the doing this in various sizes; and the strictest care will be necessary to prevent waste and embezzlement of ammunition. Captain Melvil, of the train, is directed to assist in making up the cartridges.

By order of the Board:

S. PHIPS SAVAGE, President p. t.

Brigadier-General Godfrey.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO CAPTAIN MELVIL.

War Office, Boston, December 17th, 1776.

SIR: The Board find by your letter to Mr. Savage, you decline the appointment to the place of Commissary. We therefore desire you to pay the moneys remitted you, into the hands of Mr. H. Newman, and also deliver to him such provisions as you have belonging to this State. We shall expect you give all possible assistance to Mr. Newman in the discharge of his duty. We recommend the making the powder at Rehoboth into cartridges, put under the care of Major Thompson for that purpose.

By order of the Board:

S. P. SAVAGE, President p. t.

Captain Thomas Melvil.

---

AZOR ORNE TO THOMAS CUSHING.

Marblehead, December 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour I have before me, acquainting of the resolution of the honourable Board respecting the Committee attending at Providence, &c. I shall endeavour to be in Boston by Friday noon, and have thus advised Mr. Dalton. Hope you provide the carriage, that we may be able to get off on Saturday.

In haste, I am your most humble servant,

AZOR ORNE.

Hon. Thomas Cushing, Esq.

---

MEMORIAL OF COMMITTEE OF SUNBURY, NOVA-SCOTIA.

To the General Assembly of the State of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY:

The Memorial of the Committee of Safety in the County of SUNBURY, in NOVA-SCOTIA, humbly showeth:

That the Chiefs of the St. John's Indians having the summer past been to the General Assembly of the State of the Massachusetts, and there entered into an alliance or treaty with the States; which treaty was afterwards ratified by Colonel Francis Shaw, in behalf of the States, and the tribe of said Indians being in general assembled at St. John's; in which treaty the Indians say it was stipulated that they should be supplied with goods at a reasonable rate, and that Colonel Shaw promised them that goods should be sent them to St. John's immediately after his arrival at Boston, which goods have not yet arrived, and no intelligence received concerning them; and the Indians being in a naked, suffering condition, begin to accuse the States with the breach of faith.

They farther say that they were to be allowed a priest, to worship in their own way, and the French priests in Canada being almost universally in favour of the King's party, they do not choose to have any concern with them, not even to take absolution from such an one. We are convinced that it will not be possible to keep them long easy without a person to exercise the functions of a priest among them. But we recommend to your wise consideration whether there doth not now appear a favourable opportunity to bring them off from their superstitious errours; and as several of their warriours have lately been engaged in an expedition against Fort Cumberland, and others gone to the westward, the Committee have hitherto supplied their families with provision, but could not supply them with clothing, the Indians seem very uneasy at their disappointment.

The Committee therefore humbly beg your Honours would take some measures to satisfy the Indians in these matters, otherwise the States will be in danger of losing their friendship; and your memorialist, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c., &c., &c.

Signed by order of the Committee:

JACOB BARKER, Chairman.

Dated at Maugerville, in the County of Sunbury, December 17th, 1776.

---

Return of INDIANS present in the Expedition against FORT CUMBERLAND.

Governour Ambrose Bear, John Corlease, Att. Joennis, Tomo. Squatpan, Pierre Prugway, Newelis Newell, Lewis Newell, John Baptist, Pierre Tomo, Michael Baptist, Joseph Tomo, Joseph Tomo, Jun., Pierre Coleau, Abraham, Supabtist Le Port, Pazil;—St. John's Indians, who have lost in the aforesaid expedition five canoes and two guns.

Mickmac Indians—Captain Charles, Andrew, Pierre Paul, Nicholas.

This may certify all concered, that the Indians within mentioned were present in the expedition against Fort Cumberland, for the space of eight weeks, and met with the loss therein mentioned.

Witness my hand, at Maugerville, on the river St. John's, this 17th December, 1776.

JONATHAN EDDY,
Commanding the United Forces.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON, FROM PORTSMOUTH, ENGLAND, DATED DECEMBER 18, 1776.

This day arrived here the Fowey man-of-war, from New-York. She has brought some despatches from General Howe, among which, we hear, are the letters sent by General Washington to the Congress at Philadelphia, which were intercepted on the road and brought to General Howe. The purport of them is the present state of the Army under his command, and the improbability of his attacking the King's forces with any hopes of success, and also his inability of keeping his present hold much longer. He further says in them, that unless the Congress could furnish him with several more battalions against the opening of the next campaign, he should not be able to make head against the King's troops. The nomination of the officers, he remarks, must be left with him, as those he has already under his command were not fit to be trusted, both on account of their want of fidelity and military skill.

---

EXTRACT FROM SAMUEL CURWEN'S JOURNAL, EXETER, ENGLAND, DECEMBER 18, 1776.

By a Mr. Lloyd, of the Twentieth Regiment, just arrived in the Lord Howe frigate from Quebeck, and who was on the lake with Burgoyne and Carleton, a report is brought that a merchantman met the Active frigate at sea, and learned that General Washington had abandoned the lines at Kingsbridge, left his cannon and stores, and that his Army is mouldered away; that New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland, have deserted the Union, and declared for Government; speaks of the "Yankees," as he is pleased to call them, in the most contemptuous terms, as cowards, poltroons, cruel, and possessing every bad quality the depraved heart can be cursed with; and says the Regulars at Trois-Rivières took five hundred prisoners, killed one hundred, and lost only three men, who were killed by Yankees, who had got upon trees and fired down on them.

It is my earnest wish the despised Americans may convince these conceited Islanders, that without regular standing armies our Continent can furnish brave soldiers and judicious and expert commanders, by some knock-down, irrefragable argument; for then, and not till then, may we expect generous or fair treatment. It piques my pride, I confess, to hear us called "our Colonies, our Plantations," in such terms and with such airs as if our property and persons were absolutely theirs, like the "villains" and their cottages in the old feudal system, so long since abolished, though the spirit or leaven is not totally gone, it seems.

---

St. John's, Antigua, December 18, 1776.

An American agent arrived at St. Kitts a few days ago, with two thousand pounds in dollars, to buy woolen stuffs, &c., to send to America this winter. Our merchants, who, to a man, are all, by profession, opinionated in favour of Government, smiled at the sight of the dollars, which for a while suspending their loyalty, they supplied the American agent with every thing he wanted. Some days after the agent had safely landed his cargo at St. Eustatia, information was given to the Commander-in-Chief, who issued a proclamation, prohibiting the exportation of woolen stuff. Pray, whether is the policy of the Council, or the loyalty of the merchants, most visible?

---

GOVERNOUR OF VIRGINIA TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Williamsburgh, December 18th, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed is a list of necessaries wanted for the Cavalry of this Commonwealth, which are ordered to join General Washington, agreeable to a requisition of Congress. A few things comprised in this list have been furnished here; perhaps one hundred arms, or thereabouts, will be found the troops when they arrive with you.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most humble servant,

P. HENRY, Pt.

P. S. The prisoners of war are not yet sent. The operations your way may possibly induce some alterations of the former requisitions. Please to inform me. P. H.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary of the War Office, Philadelphia.

---

A General Return of Men, Horses, Arms, Accoutrements, and other necessaries, wanting for the Regiment of Horse commanded by THEODORICK BLAND, Major Commandant, now in the service of the Commonwealth of VIRGINIA.

December 11th, 1776.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 10 | To be recruited to full complement. | Men. | |
| 9 | Dead, strayed, and crippled horses. | Horses. | |
| 11 | Saddles. | Saddlery and Leathern Accoutrements. | |
| 115 | Bridles. | | |
| 30 | Halters. | | |
| 79 | Buckles and Straps. | | |
| 109 | Slings. | | |
| 180 | Pads. | | |
| 140 | Curry-combs. | | |
| 149 | Brushes. | | |
| 217 | Nose-bags. | | |
| 179 | Breast-plates. | | |
| 133 | Spurs—pairs. | | |
| 145 | Caps. | | |
| 107 | Cartridge-boxes. | | |
| 144 | Holsters. | | |
| 119 | Boots. | | |
| 13 | Coats—blue faced with red. | Clothing and Bedding. | |
| 12 | Coats—brown with green. | | |
| - | Leather breeches. | | |
| 199 | Blankets. | | |
| 207 | Canteens. | Utensils. | |
| 46 | Camp-kettles. | | |
| 18 | Axes. | | |
| 5 | Drums. | Instruments. | |
| 4 | Trumpets. | | |
| 179 | Pockets. | | |
| 213 | Carbines. | Arms. | |
| 178 | Pistols—pairs. | | |
| 215 | Spears. | | |
| 215 | Tomahawks. | | |
| 6 | Standards. | | |
| 6 | Camp colours. | | |

THEODORICK BLAND, Major Commandant.

Resolution of the House of Delegates of VIRGINIA, transmitted to the Delegates in Congress.

Whereas it is apprehended that there will be a great scarcity of Beef and Pork, and that the Contractors and Commissaries for the American Armies will be unable to provide sufficient magazines for the great number of troops now raising for the next campaign, unless a timely stop is put to the exportation; and as an embargo in the Commonwealth (unless similar measures are adopted by the other United States) will be inadequate to the purpose:

Resolved, That it be an instruction to the Virginia Delegates to apply to the honourable the American Congress, and use their utmost endeavours to procure that the exportation of Beef, Pork, and Bacon, may be immediately prohibited throughout the United American States, for such limited time and under such regulations as shall be judged proper; and that the Governour be desired to transmit to the said Delegates a copy of this resolve by the next post, or by the first safe conveyance.

1776, December 19th, agreed to by the House of Delegates:

JOHN TAZEWELL, C. H. D.

December the 19th, 1776, agreed to by the Senate:

J. PENDLETON, C. S.

---

BENJAMIN HARRISON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 18th, 1776.

SIR: The express delivered your favour of the 16th this morning, at nine o'clock. Your great willingness to serve the common cause shall never induce me to insist on any thing that may be prejudicial to the State of Maryland, particularly when I see no great injury can arise to America. The step you have taken in sending up the armed vessel will, I hope, fully answer my purpose.

Captain Martin is ordered to proceed on his voyage, which I hope will be attended with all the success you can expect.

I have the honour to be yours and the Council of Safety's most obedient and humble servant,

BENJ. HARRISON.

Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq.

---

JOHN BURNELL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, December 18th, 1776.

SIR: I am to inform you that last night Captain George Cook departed, with about sixty or seventy men, Mr. Auchenbick, his First Lieutenant, and other officers belonging to the ship Defence, under his command, for the Head of Elk, from whence they are to proceed to Philadelphia, with an intent to join the forces there.

I would have attended him, but was obliged to give place to my senior officer; wherefore I was left in command of the ship till Captain Cook's return from the expedition, which I expect will not be till Howe's expulsion from the Jerseys, which I'm in hopes will be soon.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN BURNELL.

The President of the honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

---

MAJOR DEAKINS TO RICHARD RIDGELY.

George-Town, December 18th, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer, Mr. John Youst, who has contracted with the Council of Safety for a number of muskets, now waits on them for cash to enable him to carry on his business. He has employed a number of hands, and is now in a good way of doing much work, if he is properly assisted with cash, without which he cannot go on; and you may assure the Council he is a man much to be depended on, and will not deceive them. I have been in his shop, and find him well prepared, as far as I can judge, to carry on the business extensively.

I wrote you some time past for commissions for the officers in a Militia company in the Twenty-Ninth Battalion, and they have not yet come to hand; therefore please send them by the bearer, and you will much oblige, dear sir, your humble servant,

WILL. DEAKINS, Jun.

To Mr. Richard Ridgely, Clerk of the Council of Safety, Annapolis.

Since writing the above, Colonel Murdock has received orders from Brigadier-General Johnson to call a meeting of the Twenty-Ninth Battalion, and hold them in readiness till further orders, to march to Philadelphia; and as the said battalion have very few effective arms, Colonel Murdock requests you will represent to the Council that Mr. Youst has fifty-three of the publick arms finished, which he would like to have orders for from the Council to receive.

---

COL. HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head of Elk, 18th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIRS: Having just returned from Philadelphia, am informed by Colonel Rumsey of your order to hold the battalion in readiness to march, which, I doubt not, will be obeyed with cheerfulness, so far as in our power. The want of arms is the only deficiency that at present appears, which I fear cannot be supplied but from your city, as I met a number of the Militia going to Philadelphia, all without arms.

Colonel Rumsey and myself yesterday examined some chests of arms said to belong to the Virginia State, but found them old, and much out of repair. Nor is there time at present to repair them, as orders are expected immediately for marching, in which case, at the request of Colonel Rumsey, and in behalf of the battalion, I am emboldened to solicit that arms be forwarded, unless there be a certainty of getting good ones at Philadelphia, or some post forward, as it will animate the battalion much to be assured of good arms.

I doubt not of your necessary credentials to some person forward (in authority) to enable us to obtain tents and every other necessary for the battalion; and am, with much esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

H. HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the honourable the Council of Safety, Maryland.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GEN. WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 18th, 1776.

SIR: We have to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's favour of the 16th and 17th instant, and shall be attentive to the subjects recommended.

Yesterday Captain John Rice, commander of a look-out vessel, which we stationed at Cape May, arrived here from his station, and informs us that five of the enemy's ships, with three tenders, are in our Capes. The Roebuck and Fowey are of the number. The names and force of the others we are ignorant of. We presume they do not intend up our river, unless General Howe's future movements should encourage them.

We have sent a quantity of old clothing by the bearer, which may be of some use to such of our fellow-countrymen who are in the Army and are necessitous for want of suitable covering at this inclement season of the year. We request your Excellency will give orders to have them distributed to such as most want them, particularly to the Southern troops, who, we are informed, are in great need.

By order of the Council. I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient servant,

DAVID RITTENHOUSE, Vice President.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GEORGE ROSS TO LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA, COMMITTEE.

Reading, 18th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: General Mifflin, at the request of Congress, will be at Lancaster on Saturday, to devise with you and the Associators the best mode of calling forth the strength of the country; and on consulting with him, this morning I wrote a circular letter, of which the enclosed is a copy, and have sent expresses to Colonels Grubb, Greenwalt, Burd, Green, and Galbreath, as we thought the notice this way would be earlier than to have troubled you to have sent them from Lancaster. You will, I doubt not, procure the attendance of the officers and privates from the other parts of the country to meet on Saturday, and if you please may send my letter, or conduct the matter in any manner you think proper.

I am, with esteem, gentlemen, yours, &c.,

Geo. Ross.

To the honourable Committee, Lancaster.

---

CIRCULAR.

Reading, 18th December, 1776.

Friends and Fellow-Countrymen: My knowledge of your zeal and affection for your country, and your animated resolution to defend every thing dear and valuable among men, induces me at this period, when all is lost without vigorous exertions of all the power and strength of this State, to call on you without delay to step forth into the field, under confidence in God of the uprightness of your cause, which will insure victory over enemies glorying in every act of outrage and impiety, and debauching your wives and daughters in the face of the sun, as if they were cursed of the Lord. The ravished maiden, the insulted parent, the buffeted hoary head, whose feeble arm cannot resent the injury, nay, their God and your God, call on you to drive from this once happy land those bold and impious invaders of our peace.

Our worthy countryman, General Mifflin, at the request of Congress, goes to Lancaster on Saturday, to assist in forming such measures as to enable you to exert your whole strength at this time. Therefore let as many of the officers and privates of every battalion as conveniently can repair there on that day, and in the mean time inform the whole battalion of the business, that they may be enabled immediately to execute whatever may be determined on in that meeting.

I am, with much esteem, your friend and servant,

G. Ross.

To Colonel , and the officers and privates of his battalion.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 18, 1776.

Sir: I this morning received the honour of your favour of the 8th instant, and beg leave to return your honourable body my warmest acknowledgments for their early attention to my requisition, and assurances of such support as shall be in their power. Circumstances having varied much since I addressed them upon this subject, and being far removed myself from the rendezvous intended for this reinforcement when it was applied for, I have wrote to Major-General Heath to concert a plan with Major-General Lincoln, and to form with him such dispositions of the troops as they may judge necessary and the exigencies of affairs require. Their arrival I hope will be in due time, and be attended with many important and happy consequences. Were it not for them, in a few days, by reason of the impolicy and fatal system of short inlistments, there would scarcely remain the least shadow of an Army to check the operations of the enemy.

I should be happy if there had been just grounds for the report of the success of our arms at Hackensack, but things have been entirely the reverse. By the expiration of the service of the troops denominated Flying-Camp men and their return home on the 1st instant, our force on this side Hudson's river, which before that period was unequal to any successful opposition, was reduced to a mere handful. With this small number I have been pushed through Jersey by the main body of the enemy's Army, without receiving the least aid from the Militia, notwithstanding the earliest and most pressing solicitations, and for want of their assistance a large part of the State has been exposed to all the effects of ravage and most wanton plunder. The Delaware now divides what remains of our little force from that of General Howe, whose object beyond all question is to possess himself of Philadelphia. They have been industrious in their efforts to procure boats for their transportation, but the precautions I have taken have hitherto rendered their attempts unsuccessful. How things will terminate I must leave to the event itself. As yet I have received but little or no augmentation, except that of the city Militia, who have turned out in a spirited manner.

Convinced that Philadelphia was the object of Mr. Howe's movements, and the fatal consequences that would attend the loss of it, I wrote for General Lee to reinforce me with the troops under his immediate command. By some means or other their arrival has been retarded, and unhappily, on Friday last the General, having left his division and proceeded on the flanks three or four miles nearer the enemy, (then eighteen miles from him,) of which they were informed by some Tories, was surprised and carried off, about eleven o'clock, by a party of about seventy Light-Horse. I will not comment upon this unhappy accident. I feel much for his misfortune, and am sensible that in his captivity our country has lost a warm friend and an able officer.

Upon the whole, our affairs are in a much less promising condition than could be wished, yet I think, under the smiles of Providence and by our own exertions, we shall be happy. Our cause is righteous, and must be supported. Every nerve should be strained to levy the new Army. If a respectable one can be procured in season, all may be well. The ensuing campaign will be an important one, and the issue may lead to happiness, or the most melancholy of all events.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

The Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq., President, &c.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 18th December, 1776.

Dear Sir: By a letter just received from the State of Massachusetts, (copy of which you have enclosed,) I find that they had ordered six thousand Militia to be immediately raised, and appointed the place of rendezvous at Danbury, in Connecticut, where they are to meet General Lincoln, who is to take the command. You will perceive from the tenour of the letter, that the appearance of the men-of-war and transports off the coast of New-England, did not seem to alter their intention of sending the Militia forward; but I am inclined to think, if the descent should really be made, they will find employ for them nearer home. If this considerable reinforcement should arrive with you, I don't know how you could better employ them, or render more essential service to the cause, than, after keeping a sufficient force to guard the passes of the Highlands, by throwing such a number over into Jersey as would cover the upper parts of that Province, and afford such support and assistance to the well-affected as would encourage them to join you, and keep the enemy within straiter bounds than they at present are. You may depend that the great end they have in view is, to spread themselves over as much country as they possibly can, and thereby strike a damp into the spirits of the people, which will effectually put a stop to the new inlistment of the Army, on which all our hopes depend, and which they will most vigorously strive to effect. To carry this plan into execution, they have already extended themselves as far westward as the Delaware; and if the whole of your Army continue on the east side of Hudson's river, they will have possession of all the country between that river and the Delaware, which includes the whole Province of Jersey and part of New-York. As soon as you find yourself in a situation to send a force into the upper parts of Jersey, I would have you immediately communicate your intentions to the people, with assurances that you will be ready to back and support them in any movements which they may make in your favour. I am certain that the defection of the people in the lower part of Jersey has been as much owing to the want of an army to look the enemy in the face, as to any other cause; though, to be sure, neither cost nor pains has been spared to influence them against us.

Whatever steps you take in this affair, I would wish you to consult and coöperate with General Lincoln, of whose judgment and abilities I entertain a very high opinion. I would just add, that your attention should likewise be paid to the country between Peeks Kill and Kingsbridge; by affording some protection and countenance to them, you may draw supplies, and perhaps some men for the new Army. Particular attention should be paid to the bridge at Croton's river, which secures your front. I enclose you a letter from General Lincoln, which please to forward to him wherever he may be.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Heath.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LINCOLN.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 18 h December, 1776.

Dear Sir: By a letter which I had this day the pleasure of receiving from the President of the Council of Massachusetts-Bay, I find that that State had, immediately upon my application, ordered a reinforcement of about six thousand Militia to the Continental Army, and that they had appointed you to the command. Give me leave, sir, to assure you that this appointment gives me the highest satisfaction, as the proofs you exhibited of your zeal for the service in the preceding part of this campaign, convinces me that the command could not have devolved upon a more deserving officer. If the particular circumstances of the Eastern Governments (who are threatened with an invasion themselves) should permit your proceeding on, you will join General Heath at Peekskill, with all expedition. I have given him directions how to dispose of your men, which is, to endeavour if possible to cover and afford protection to the upper parts of the Jerseys, and to the Province of New-York below the Highlands. But I have desired him to consult and co-operate with you in the steps necessary to carry this or any other plan into execution.

I am, dear sir, &c.,

Go. Washington.

To Major-General Lincoln, Massachusetts Militia.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOHN AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON.

Camp, near the Falls of Trenton, 18 December, 1776.

Dear Brother: Owing to the number of letters I write, the recollection of any particular one is effaced, but I think my last to you was from Hackinsac by Colonel Woodford. Since that time, and a little before, our affairs have taken an adverse turn, but not more than was to be expected from the unfortunate measures which had been adopted for the establishment of our Army. The retreat of the enemy from White Plains led me to think that they would turn their thoughts to the Jerseys, if not farther, and induced me to cross the North River with some of the troops, in order if possible to oppose them. I expected to meet at least five thousand men of the Flying-Camp and Militia; instead of which I found less than half of that number, and no disposition in the inhabitants to afford the least aid. This being perfectly well known to the enemy, they threw over a large body of troops, which pushed us from place to place, till we were obliged to cross the Delaware with less than three thousand men fit for duty, owing to the dissolution of our force by short inlistments; the enemy's numbers, from the best accounts, exceeding ten or twelve thousand men.

Before I removed to the south side of the river, I had all the boats and other vessels brought over, or destroyed, from Philadelphia upwards for seventy miles, and, by guarding the fords, I have, as yet, baffled all their attempts to cross. But, from some late movements of theirs, I am in doubt whether they are moving off for winter quarters, or making a feint to throw us off our guard. Since I came to this side, I have been joined by about two thousand of the city Militia, and I understand that some of the country Militia from the back Counties are on their way. But we are in a very disaffected part of the Province; and, between you and me, I think our affairs are in a very bad condition; not so much from the apprehension of General Howe's Army, as from the defection of New-York, the Jerseys, and Pennsylvania. In short, the conduct of the Jerseys has been most infamous. Instead of turning out to defend their country, and affording aid to our Army, they are making submissions as fast as they can. If the Jerseys had given us any support, we might have made a stand at Hackinsac, and after that at Brunswic; but the few Militia that were in arms disbanded themselves, and left the poor remains of our Army to make the best we could of it.

I have no doubt but General Howe will still make an attempt upon Philadelphia this winter. I foresee nothing to oppose him a fortnight hence, as the time of all the troops, except those of Virginia, now reduced almost to nothing, and Smallwood's regiment of Marylanders, equally as low, will expire before the end of that time. In a word, my dear sir, if every nerve is not strained to recruit the new Army with all possible expedition, I think the game is pretty nearly up, owing, in a great measure, to the insidious arts of the enemy, and disaffection of the Colonies before mentioned, but principally to the ruinous policy of short inlistments, and placing too great a dependence on the Militia, the evil consequences of which were foretold fifteen months ago, with a spirit almost prophetick. Before you receive this letter, you will undoubtedly have heard of the captivity of General Lee. This is an additional misfortune, and the more vexatious, as it was by his own folly and imprudence, and without a view to effect any good, that he was taken. As he went to lodge three miles out of his own camp, and within twenty of the enemy, a rascally Tory rode in the night to give notice of it to the enemy, who sent a party of Light-Horse that seized him, and carried him off, with every mark of triumph and indignity.

You can form no idea of the perplexity of my situation. No man, I believe, ever had a greater choice of difficulties, and less means to extricate himself from them. However, under a full persuasion of the justice of our cause, I cannot entertain an idea that it will finally sink, though it may remain for some time under a cloud.

My love and sincere regards attend my sister and the family, with compliments to all inquiring friends. With every sentiment of friendship, as well as love, I am your most affectionate brother.

---

COLONEL HARRISON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, at Keith's, December 18th, 1776.

Dear General: By Colonel Sheldon you will receive one hundred and fifty-six thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars, which I am directed by his Excellency to inform you is for the payment of the troops left at Peekskill and the neighbourhood of it, including General Wadsworth's brigade, and for recruiting and other necessary services. The demands of the Commissary or Quartermaster are not to be drawn from this sum. If Colonel Sheldon, who is appointed to raise a regiment of Cavalry, should stand in need of a further supply of money than he now has for that purpose, you will furnish him with such as he may apply for and the circumstances of your chest will allow you to grant.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

Rob't H. Harrison.

To the Hon. General Heath.

---

RICHARD DALLAM TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Bucks County, Pennsylvania, New-Town, December 18th, 1776.

Sir: Colonel Palfrey, the Paymaster-General, has joined the Army; and as the Flying-Camp will in a few days be discharged, my stay here will be but of little service, as the Militia may all be settled by the Paymaster-General; therefore beg the favour of you to let me know what orders Congress have for me. If they have any thing in Maryland, it would be most agreeable, as my family is there; though I shall, to render any material service to the States, give my domestick enjoyments up cheerfully.

The situation of the Flying-Camp has been such that it was impossible for the officers with regularity to draw pay for their men, which induced the General to draw several sums of money to be paid on account, which it was out of my power to settle with the officers at the time they were discharged, for then we were in the greatest confusion, and ever since I have been moving about, that I have not been able to do any thing; but I hope I shall have all ready for those that remain by the 1st January.

Our scouts bring accounts that the enemy are retreating to Brunswick, and propose going into winter quarters, but I fear it's too good news to be true. We are daily taking off some of the enemy's Light-Horse.

I beg your answer, and am, honourable sir, your Honour's most obedient,

Richard Dallam, D. P. M. Gen'l.

COLONEL HARCOURT TO ADMIRAL GEARY.

Brunswick, New-Jersey, in America, December 18, 1776.

Sir: It is with infinite reluctance I find myself under the very disagreeable necessity of communicating to you an event which must, I am persuaded, give you the utmost concern. Cornet Geary having been ordered to advance with a party some miles into the country to procure intelligence of the enemy's situation, was upon his return from that duty fired upon by a party of the Rebels, who had concealed themselves on each side of the road by which he proposed to have passed. Unfortunately a ball took place, which in one moment deprived you of a son, and the regiment of an officer, whose loss cannot be sufficiently lamented.

I have only to add, that I am, with very sincere regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

Wm. Harcourt.

---

RECOMMENDATION OF CAPTAIN PERRY.

To his Excellency General Washington, Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United Colonies of North-America:

We, the subscribers, two of the Field Officers of the regiment late the Twenty-Eighth, would inform your Excellency that James Perry was a Captain in the same regiment; and although in the arrangement of officers for the present year he has been left out, it was not owing to any dislike we had to him personally. On the contrary, we look on him to be an officer of merit, and one who has behaved highly becoming the character of an officer; and should there be a vacancy, and your Excellency think proper to appoint him, we can recommend him, and think he will prove worthy the commission he may sustain.

Paul Dudley Sargent,
Jon'a Williams Austin.

---

JONATHAN POLLARD TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Head-Quarters, Paramus, December 18th, 1776.

Sir: By order of Major-General Heath, I hereby send you a number of prisoners, four of which are prisoners of war, viz: two soldiers, one Light-Horseman, and five sailors. The rest are State prisoners. The General sends them forward, knowing this not to be a proper place for them, and begs the care of your Convention towards them.

I have the pleasure, by his desire, to inform you of the success of our march, which has already been attended with some good consequences, as there has fallen into our hands a large quantity of stores, besides arms, drums, &c.

I have the honour to be, with respect, sir, your most humble servant,

Jon'a Pollard, A. D. Camp.

To Colonel Pierre Van Cortlandt.

---

COLONEL FORD TO GENERAL HEATH.

Chatham, 18th December, 1776, 5 o'clock.

Sir: Since writing my last I have certain intelligence that the troops we engaged last night were General Leslie's brigade, who marched some few days since from Elizabeth-Town to the southard. They received an order to counter-march to the same place. That brigade is from twelve to thirteen hundred strong, and the Waldeckers upwards of four hundred. At Spank-Town, six miles to the southard of Elizabeth-Town, there is five hundred British troops. This is all the enemy you have to combat in this country at present. We are not certain whether the enemy who attacked us have or have not yet returned to Elizabeth-Town. Lord Stirling is on this side the river Delaware, with a small detachment joined to General Sullivan, with orders not to recross the river, if my intelligence be good, and I believe it is.

I am, your most obedient, Jacob Ford, Jun.

To Major-General Heath.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL FORD.

Pyramus, 18th December, 1776, 9 o'clock in y^e^ evening.

Dear Sir: Yours of the 17th and 18th I have just received. I have great expectations of Colonel Vose's remaining with you at least a few days, until he can receive express orders from General Washington, to whom I have desired to apply for further directions. I wish to afford you every assistance in my power, consistent with the general good of the country. The movement of our Army on this side the North river, I apprehend to be the reason of the return of Leslie's brigade. I have this day intelligence of the arrival of part of the King's troops at Hackensack; that a considerable number are at Fort Lee and that neighbourhood, and a large detachment gone up the North River, besides Leslie's brigade, who are said to have been this morning at Newark. My misfortune is to be in a country from which no intelligence can be relied on from the inhabitants. I have sent out scouts, which will return this night, and from whom I expect more certain accounts of the situation and numbers of the enemy at Fort Lee, if any there. If I find no enemy in that quarter, or at Hackensack, I shall be able to afford you some aid from the Continental troops of General Parsons's brigade, and the troops under General Clinton now with me. The number of the troops with me, and our particular intentions, may be explained more fully by the gentleman you entrusted with your express. As intelligence is the greatest difficulty I find in this part of the country, I wish you to establish a regular daily intelligencer from you to me, which will enable us to coöperate in any measures to defeat the intentions of our enemies. I shall wish to be informed as early to-morrow as possible, of the motions, number, and probable intentions of the enemy, as far as you have been able to ascertain them; and by the return of the express, I hope to be able to give you a more certain answer than at present is in my power.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

W. Heath.

Colonel Ford.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL M^c^DOUGALL.

Pyramus, 18th December, 1776.

Dear Sir: I acknowledge the receipt of your favour of yesterday. From the intelligence contained in it, and two letters from Colonel Ford of yesterday and this day's date, I think it most prudent and would advise you to detain the troops under the command of Colonel Vose until you shall know his Excellency General Washington's pleasure respecting them, after having given him a full account as well of your situation and strength as that of the enemy in your quarter. At the same time, I would not be understood as giving any positive order concerning them, as they do not belong to my division. I cannot at present move farther westward without risking a quantity of valuable stores, which I took at Hackinsack, and are now here, and leaving this part of the country entirely exposed to the ravages of the enemy; and if I may credit accounts received this day, which come very straight, I may soon expect a visit from the enemy, with much superiour numbers, from two quarters, to wit: by Tappan and Second river; and this evening I am informed, and have no reason to doubt, that a considerable party of them have crossed the ferry, about three miles below Hackinsack town. I am but about six hundred strong of my own division. General George Clinton, who has marched the whole of the Ulster and Orange Counties Militia to Haverstraw, and has this evening joined me with six hundred of them. This he has done contrary to a most express and positive order of the Convention of your State, making a justification of his conduct in this instance entirely upon the propriety and necessity of reinforcing me in this quarter and covering the stores we have removed from Hackensack; but the moment I move westward of this, unless he is well assured the enemy mean not to move up Hudson's river, he will retire to the passes in the Highlands, agreeable to his orders; indeed, were he not to do so, he would be censurable in my own opinion. It is evident to me that my entering Huckinsack in the manner I did, and the stand made by the Militia under Colonel Ford, has occasioned the calling back General Leslie's brigade, who were on their march to join the enemy's main army. This being the case, it can't remain a doubt but it is our interest to keep up a diversion, which detains numbers of them from joining their main army, far superiour to what we employ for the purpose. I could wish to hear from you and Colonel Ford every day, that I may know the situation and strength of the enemy in your quarter, as it may so happen that we may be able to attack them in different quarters at the same time to great advantage, without exposing this part of the country. I would only add, that my sentiments respecting the detaining of Vose's troops is strengthened by that of General Parsons's and Clinton's opinion on that subject; and that I am, with much esteem, your most obedient servant,

W. Heath.

General McDougall.

---

INVOICE OF EFFECTS TAKEN AT HACKENSACK, 1776.

An Inventory of Stores taken at Hackensack, and turned into the Continental Store, viz: Paramus, December 17th:

160 barrels flour.
7 firkins butter, from the brig.
13 old sacks, 7 coils rigging, from the sloop.
12 boxes cordials, do.
4 do. soap, do.
2 boxes spermaceti candles, do.
3 casks loaf sugar, do.
2 casks, partly full, brown sugar.
2 barrels New-England rum, do.
1 barrel crockery and china, do.
3 barrels and 1 qr. cask wine, uncertain out of which.
3 tierces and 2 barrels bottled liquor, do. do.
2 small boxes bottles, one empty, do. do.
1 barrel books, do. do.
2 small kegs ginger, - - - - Buskirk's store.
1 keg molasses.
8 hogsheads West-India rum, do.
2 hogsheads New-England, do. do.
7 hogsheads and 1 tierce gin, do.
1 bundle linen,
1 quarter-cask gin,
1 do. cherry rum, partly full, } do.
1 barrel books,
2 demijohns, 1 jug spirits,
1 box of preserved pickles,
3 pipes of wine, Anderson's store.

Elisha Brewster, Assistant Commissary.

---

JONATHAN POLLARD TO COMMISSARY CHEEVER.

Head-Quarters, Paramus, December 18th.

Sir: The General sends to you, to be received in the stores, arms, two drums, &c., which he desires may be marked and carefully placed by themselves, ready to be delivered when called for.

I am, sir, yours,

Jona. Pollard, A. D. Camp.

To Commissary Cheever.

---

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 18th December, 1776.

My Lord: By Major Cuyler's arrival in the Despencer packet, on the 15th instant, I had the honour of your Lordship's triplicate of the 22d August, and enclosure, with your letter of 30th September, and three of 18th October.

The King's most gracious approbation of the behaviour of his officers and soldiers, British and Hessians, is received by them with a sense of gratitude, equal to that zeal which they have demonstrated, and, I make no doubt, will continue to exert upon all occasions for his Majesty's service. The testimony also, which your Lordship has done me the honour to convey, of his Majesty's condescension in taking notice of my humble endeavours to discharge the duty I owe to my Royal master, being the height of my ambition, I humbly beg your Lordship will do me the honour to express my most grateful feelings for such unmerited goodness.

The exchange of prisoners by agreement with Mr. Washington has not been so generally complied with as I had reason to expect; but the officers and men of the Seventh and Twenty-Sixth Regiments are mostly returned, and several of those of the Forty-Second and Seventy-First. Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, with most of the officers and men taken with him, are still detained, which may make it necessary for me to send an officer purposely to remonstrate upon the injustice of this delay.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

W. Howe.

SAMUEL BREWSTER TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-Windsor, 18th December, 1776.

Gentlemen: It was suggested to this Committee yesterday evening that Thomas Ellison's sloop, of this place, was loading goods on board, the property of the Rev. Mr. Inglis, in order to be sent to New-York, on which the Committee gave orders that in case the sloop should move from the dock, a guard should take her into custody until they should be assured of the legality of such an act. This morning a guard took her into possession, on which Mr. Ellison showed the officer of the same an order from the honourable the Convention of this State, for transporting certain goods on board a flag of truce below the Highlands. The officer immediately informed the Committee of the aforesaid order, who were of opinion the order must be spurious, otherwise the honourable Convention would have advised this Committee of the matter, as it was to be transacted within their bounds; and as Committees exist by the election of the people and recommendations of the honourable Congress, they conceive themselves as a mere nullity, if they are not to take cognizance of such affairs, or be advised of them when determined on by their superiours. Farther, the Committee were induced to believe the aforesaid order to be spurious, as the property of many of their brethren is either taken from them by the rapacious hands of tyrants, or wantonly destroyed; they could not believe the honourable Convention would grant a permit to have the property of those whose characters are not only suspicious, but avowed enemies to the cause of American liberty, secured in a place of safety, (as they conceive,) while the property of some thousands of our brethren lies exposed to our unnatural enemy.

We therefore have taken the liberty to stop the sloop until one of our members wait on the honourable Convention to know the certainty of this matter.

We are, gentlemen, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

Sam'l Brewster, Chairman.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, } Fishkill, December 18th, 1776. }

Whereas information has this day been given to this Committee that it is probable that, under cover of the flag of truce on board of which the wives of Messrs. Inglis, Livingston, and Moore, with the families and effects of their husbands, are to be conveyed from New-Windsor, by Mr. Thomas Elliston's sloop, property to a considerable value belonging to other persons within this State may be conveyed in the said sloop:

Resolved, therefore, That Major Fish and the Committee at New-Windsor shall, and are hereby authorized to, to take such ways and means for preventing such conveyance of such property as aforesaid as they, or the majority of them, shall think proper.

---

THOMAS PALMER'S CERTIFICATE.

I hereby certify that the bearer hereof, Robert Carscadden, is an excellent workman at spinning-wheel making, and that he and his son is constantly and most necessarily employed in that business. The former resource to New-York and Long-Island being now cut off, and the many good crops of flax in this country, causes the call for wheels very great; and besides the call from the country, Mr. Scadden informs me that he is employed by an agent from the Convention of this State to make a number for them. He therefore thinks his son, who is now ordered to march with the rest of the Militia, can be of more real service to the country in staying at home and continuing at the business of wheel-making. I am also of his opinion; for in case he goes into the service their wheel-making business must cease. As Mr. Scadden has a large family, it commonly takes up the greatest part of one man's time at the business out-doors; I therefore think for the good of the country that Mr. Scadden's son should be excused.

Thos. Palmer.

New-Burgh, 18th December, 1776.

To all whom it may concern.

THADDEUS BURR TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Fairfield, 18th December, 1776.

Sir: This is to inform you, that I have in the gaol and under my care, seventeen prisoners, in close confinement, among whom are two regular soldiers, who were taken up by our guards. They say that they were taken in Boston harbour last spring, and made their escape from the Committee at Springfield. I have wrote to them, but cannot get any answer from them; think it my duty to let your Honour know that I have them; and should be glad of your Honour's directions what to do with them. Fourteen of the others are confined for being inimical to the States, and are bound over to the Superiour Court. It is extremely difficult to keep them in this cold weather. Would it not, therefore, be better to have a special Superiour Court, or bail some of them? One, viz: Mr. Joseph Hoit, was out upon bail, but the Government's Committee thought proper to send him to gaol; he is now very unwell, as are several of the others, and earnestly request that they may be enlarged.

Your Honour's directions in these matters will greatly oblige your real friend and very humble servant,

Thaddeus Burr.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

---

WILLIAM JUDD TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Westmoreland, December 18th, 1776.

Sir: By the hand of Jonathan Fitch, Esq., I was favoured with a certificate of my appointment to a Captaincy in the Continental service. The duty I owe my country, and the gratitude due to friends, are strong motives urging me to accept the appointment; but when I consider this infant country and settlement, and the probability of Colonel Butler's leaving it at so critical a season, rather consider it as my duty to remain here for the present. Captain Robert Durkee, who commands these two companies of troops stationed here, is very desirous of joining the Army. Could he be allowed to take my place in the Army, and I have his berth at this place, it would be agreeable to me, for the reasons aforementioned. My inclination strongly urges me to the service of my country; and were it not for the regard I have to this settlement, would immediately enter into the service. Should I be so happy as to succeed in my wish, I hope I may be allowed the rank of Major, though I expect to receive no more than Captain's pay or rations. My reasons are, that I may not be commanded by the other Captain stationed here, which will be the case provided I cannot obtain the rank of Major, as his commission will be older than mine. I have wrote to General Parsons to the same purpose. Captain Durkee is gone to the Army. I humbly hope for your Honour's influence with the Congress for that purpose.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

Wm. Judd.

To Governour Trumbull.

---

CAPTAIN BRAINERD TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Haddam, 18th December, 1776.

Sir: I beg leave to inform your Honour that I have served in the Militia for more than thirty years, and for some years past as Captain of the third company in the Seventh Regiment in this State; that I am advanced in age, being about fifty years old, and my health much impaired by a rheumatick disorder, which renders me very unfit for actual service. I therefore humbly desire your Honour to send me by Doctor Brainerd a dismission from said office, and orders to lead said company to a new choice; and hope I may be authorized to make return to the Assembly now sitting.

I am your Honour's most humble servant,

Eliakim Brainerd.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES.

Providence, December 18th, 1776.

Sir: I received yours of the 15th instant, and am very glad to hear you are safe arrived, as it would have been impossible for you to have got in here. I wish your prizes may get in safe. If you can, you may hire a pilot to go in some small vessel off, or about Nantucket, to give the prize-masters an account of our situation here, and order the prizes to Boston.

As to any alteration of the Alfred, I have received no orders from the Marine Committee about that matter, owing, I suppose, to the difficulty of the times. And as Captain Hinman has a commission for the Alfred, do not know at present but it may be best for him to take her, and for you to go on board the Columbus; however, shall write or come down to Boston soon. In the mean time you will get the ship along side the wharf and her stores secured. And as some of the men's times are out that they inlisted for, you may get their accounts settled and give them an order for the balance, taking care to charge what was advanced them in Philadelphia. Those who belong to Philadelphia, or have wives there, you will give an order on Mr. James Read for one half their wages, and pay the rest, and call on Mr. John Bradford for money to enable you so to do, who I have wrote to supply you.

If my son Esek wants to come home to see his friends, you will be kind enough to give him leave.

The owners of the privateer made a great noise about your taking the men out of her, and have brought an action; but I think they will make nothing of it. We have likewise brought an action against Captain Field for taking our men.

I am, sir, your friend and humble servant,

Esek Hopkins, Cr. in Chief.

P. S. You will deliver the prisoners you have on board the Alfred to the officers of the State you are in.

To John P. Jones, Esq., Commander of the Alfred, at Boston.

---

NOTE OF THE TIME OF MATERIAL OCCURRENCES DURING THE ALFRED'S CRUISE IN NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER, 1776.

1776, November 10. Took the brig Active, commanded by Isaac Fox, from Liverpool.

November 13. We took the Mellish, from London, commanded by Stevenson, bound to Quebeck.

November 16. Took the snow Hettey, from Gaspey, bound to Barbadoes, commanded by Charles Ross.

November 18. We had a strong gale from N. N. E., with rain and snow, and dark weather; lost sight of the sloop Providence.

November 22. Our boats was on shore at Canso; two men deserted.

November 24. Took the Betty, Polly, and the Surprise, all from Spanish river, with coals for New-York; lost Isaac Hart.

November 25. Sent our yawl after two ships in sight, but they made sail from the yawl, and being foggy, the boat returned.

November 26. We took the John, from Liverpool, bound to Halifax, Edward Watkins.

December 6. Lost sight of the prize Polly, James Buckup. Strong gale from the west.

December 8. Lost sight of the Mellish and Betsey.

December 9. Was chased by a large ship, which we supposed to be an English frigate. Parted with the John and Surprise.

---

ORDERS TO COMMANDERS OF PRIZES.

By J. P. Jones, Captain of the American ship-of-war the Alfred, senior officer in the original fleet, and commander of the present squadron off the coast of Newfoundland.

Sir: You are hereby appointed commander of our prize the ship Betty. You are required and directed to keep company with me, and obey all my future orders, and all signals made on board here, agreeable to the copy of signals which you receive herewith for your government. Should you unfortunately be separated from the squadron, you are to proceed with all possible despatch to the most convenient port within the United States of America. I would advise you to proceed through Nantucket Shoals to Rhode-Island. Be careful of the ship, with her cargo and stores. Let nothing under your care be wasted or misused. Your careful attention to these things will promote your future interest.

Given on board the Alfred, November 25th, 1776.

J. P. Jones.

To Samuel Tiley, Esq., Commander of the ship Betty.

N. B. Your station in the squadron is on the Alfred's larboard quarter. The day and night signals to be made with or without a gun. Meeting after separation: Those to windward shall clew up their main-top-sail, and spread an ensign on the main-top-mast backstay from the cross-trees downwards; and those to leeward shall answer by clewing up their fore-top-sail, and spreading an ensign on the fore-top-mast backstay.

---

ORDERS TO JOHN P. RATHBUN.

By John Paul Jones, Captain of the American ship of war the Alfred, senior officer in the original fleet, and commander of the present squadron off the coast of Newfoundland:

Sir: You are hereby appointed commander of our prize the ship John; and as she is armed for war, you are to keep company with me, and observe and obey all future directions from me, and all signals made on board here. You receive herewith a copy of signals for your government; and should we fall in with any of the enemy's ships of war, you are to give me all possible assistance. Should you unfortunately be separated from the squadron, you are to proceed with all possible despatch to the most convenient port within the United States of America. I would advise you to proceed through Nantucket Shoals to Rhode-Island. Your careful attention to these things will secure my regard and promote your own interest.

Given on board the ship Alfred, November 25th, 1776.

J. P. Jones.

To John P. Rathbun, Esq., Commander of the ship John.

N. B. Your station in the squadron is at the distance of two or three cables' lengths from the Alfred's starboard quarter, and you are at no time to leave that station without orders.

The day and night signals will be made with or without a gun. Meeting again after separation: Those to windward shall clew up their main-top-sail and spread an ensign on the main-top-mast backstay from the cross-trees downwards; and those to leeward shall answer by clewing up their fore-top-sail and spreading an ensign on the fore-top-mast backstay.

---

JOHN P. RATHBUN TO CAPTAIN JONES.

Monday, November the 25th.

Captain Jones:

Sir: As your orders by Lieutenant Hamilton works such an effect upon the Captain, and I can't find that he any ways encouraged the people to behave as they did, but on the contrary took a cutlass from one of them, I would beg it as a favour if your Honour would please to let him tarry on board, as he is unwell.

Sir, I have the honour to style myself your most obedient humble servant,

John P. Rathbun.

---

ORDERS TO PHILIP BROWN.

By John Paul Jones, Captain of the American ship of war the Alfred, senior officer in the original fleet, and commander in the present squadron off the coast of Newfoundland:

Sir: You herewith receive a general copy of signals for your government as commander of our prize the Mellish. You are to observe my former directions, and your station in the squadron shall now be on the Alfred's starboard quarter, at the distance of two or three cables' lengths; and you are hereby directed to continue in that station, and at no time leave it without orders, unless to prevent imminent danger.

Given on board the ship Alfred, November 25th, 1776.

J. P. Jones.

To Philip Brown, Esq., Commander of the ship Mellish.

ORDERS TO JOHN MARGERON.

By John Paul Jones, Commander of the American ship of war the Alfred, and senior officer in the original fleet.

Sir: You are hereby appointed commander of our prize the ship Betty. You are directed to keep company with me, and to obey all future orders from me, as well as all signals, agreeable to the copy now on board the Betty for your government. Should you unfortunately lose company with me, you are to proceed to the nearest safe port within the United States of America.

Given at sea, on board the Alfred, December 8th, 1776.

J. P. Jones.

To Mr. John Margeron, Commander of the ship Betty.

---

ORDERS TO ROBERT SAUNDERS.

By John Paul Jones, Commander of the American ship of war the Alfred, and senior officer of the original fleet.

Sir: You are hereby appointed commander of our prize the ship John. You are to use your utmost endeavours to navigate her with all possible expedition through the shoals of Nantucket to the State of Rhode-Island. If you find, from the situation of affairs, that it is unsafe to proceed to Rhode-Island, you may make the best of your way into any other port within the United States of America. You are to endeavour to keep company with the ship Surprise, and Mr. Tyler, the master, (who is a pilot,) will have orders to keep company with you.

Given at sea, on board the Alfred, December, 1776.

J. P. Jones.

To Robert Saunders, Esq., Commander of the ship John.

---

ORDERS TO THE COMMANDER OF THE SHIP PROVIDENCE.

By John Paul Jones, Captain of the American ship of war the Alfred, senior officer in the original fleet, and Commander of the present squadron off the coast of Newfoundland.

Sir: You are hereby appointed commander of our prize the ship Surprise; and as you are a professed pilot through Nantucket Shoals, you are to keep company with and assist Lieutenant Saunders to navigate our prize the ship John, through that channel into Rhode-Island, unless you find it unsafe to proceed there; and in that case you are to proceed to the nearest and safest port within the United States of America.

Given at sea, on board the Alfred, December, 1776.

J. P. Jones.

To Tyler, Commander of the ship Providence.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO JOHN BRADFORD.

On board the Warren, near Providence, December 18th, 1776.

Sir: I received a letter from Captain Jones, of the Alfred. If he should want any supplies you will supply him, and charge the same to the Continent. I have wrote my son, who is on board the Alfred, to call on you for what he wants, and if he is coming home you may pay him as much of my share of what prize money you have in your hands, and his receipt shall be your discharge.

I hope Captain Jones's prizes may get safe into your State, not so much on account of their value, as the want the country is in for the cargoes of some of them.

I am, sir, your friend and humble servant,

Esek Hopkins.

To John Bradford, Esq., Agent for the Continental Fleet at Boston.

---

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO ESEK HOPKINS, JUN.

Providence, December 18th, 1776.

Dear Son: I received yours, and have wrote to Mr. John Bradford, Agent, to pay you all my share of prize money in his hands, which you may receive and make use of as much as is necessary, and bring the rest home to me. I have wrote to Captain Jones to let you come home; but would have you get your account from the clerk stated, and get Captain Jones to sign it. Your mother, brothers, and sisters are well.

I am your affectionate father, Esek Hopkins.

To Mr. Esek Hopkins, Jun., on board the Alfred, at Boston.

GOVERNOUR OF RHODE-ISLAND TO THE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Providence, December 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The scarcity of intrenching tools within this State is such that many of the troops stationed here are quite unemployed. It will be not only for the health and advantage of the troops to keep them to moderate labour, but will likewise hasten the completing the works which are necessary for the defence of this State. The Hon. General Lincoln informs me that your State have a considerable quantity of intrenching tools. I have therefore sent Mr. Josiah Draper to request your Honours to deliver him two hundred and fifty pick-axes, two hundred and fifty iron shovels, fifty narrow axes, and twenty crowbars, for the use of the troops here. He will give his receipt for the same.

I have no doubt, from the ready assistance you have heretofore afforded us upon every occasion, that you will comply with his request; wherefore I have ordered Mr. Draper to proceed forthwith with a wagon to receive them.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

NICH'S COOKE.

To the honourable Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

---

Boston, 20 December, 1776.

Received of Richard Devens, Esq., Commissary-General for the Massachusetts State, the following intrenching tools, viz: twenty iron crowbars, fifty narrow axes, two hundred and fifty pick-axes, one hundred and eight spades, twenty Dutch spades, and one hundred and twenty-two iron-shod shovels; received in behalf of the State of Rhode-Island, for which have given another receipt.

ABIJAH DRAPER.

---

GENERAL LINCOLN TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Providence, December 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I arrived here this day, about noon. I find great want of intrenching tools. We have information that an attack is soon designed on this place. I hope it will not be immediately. We are not ready to receive the enemy. Matters are not in that state, nor are the troops so regulated, as to give any rational hopes of success. A little time will give a new face to affairs here, if the New-England States act like themselves, with fortitude and zeal, of which I can't doubt. In my opinion, it is absolutely necessary to forward the tools sent for by Governour Cooke; indeed somewhere they must be had. They are not here. From the Continental Army we cannot have them. The State of Massachusetts-Bay has them. They must exert themselves in this as in all other matters. A more particular state of affairs I will give by the next opportunity.

I am, with the most perfect regard, your Honour's most obedient servant,

BENJA. LINCOLN.

Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq. To be communicated.

P. S. If tools are not now in the Commissary's store, they may be collected from Hull, the Islands, &c., and if necessary replaced by the neighbouring towns.

---

JAMES BOWDOIN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, Boston, December 18th, 1776.

SIR: This State, agreeable to the recommendation of Congress, have some time since taken measures for raising their quota of the Continental Army. It appears, by a resolution passed by Congress the 16th of September last, that the moneys to be given for bounties is to be paid by the Paymaster in the department where the soldier shall inlist. A number of men have inlisted into the service, and the officers are at a loss of whom they are to receive the twenty dollars bounty for the men. General Ward informs us that the Paymaster has not as yet received any orders to pay this bounty money; and if he had, he has no money to pay it; neither has the General received any orders to draw upon the Paymaster for this purpose. As it is of the last importance to raise these men for the Continental Army without the least delay, we submit it to the consideration of Congress whether it will not be absolutely necessary to give orders for this purpose immediately, and to furnish the Paymaster with a sum sufficient to pay the bounties aforesaid.

While the General Court were contemplating upon measures for raising our quota of the new Army, General Washington, in consequence of the advice of a Council of War, requested that this State would, as soon as possible, send him a reinforcement of four thousand more from our Militia, to supply the place of those who were about returning home, to continue in the service till the first of March next, by which time he hoped the new Army would be levied; and this requisition from General Washington was soon after seconded by General Lee, who signified that a greater number would be necessary. In compliance with those requisitions, this State have ordered one quarter part of the able-bodied men in the Militia at home to march to reinforce the Army near New-York. In the midst of our executing this business, we have been called upon by the Governour of Rhode-Island to afford assistance to that State, to defend them against the enemy's fleet and army arrived in that State. They consist of above one hundred sail of ships, and, as Governour Cooke writes, with not more than seven nor less than five thousand troops. They have got possession of the island of Rhode-Island, and it is probable are meditating an impression into the country. We have, therefore, ordered the one quarter part of the Militia of the County of Barnstable (which was destined for New-York) to march to Providence; and have also ordered the whole of the Militia of the Counties of Plymouth and Bristol, together with one regiment from the County of Suffolk and two regiments from the County of Worcester, and a company of train from Boston, to march to the same place, for their relief and assistance. This will naturally lessen and impede the reinforcement designed for the Army near New-York.

We have also, in consequence of a letter from General Schuyler, ordered the one quarter part of the Militia of the County of Berkshire, and half the quarter part of the Militia of the County of Hampshire, (both of which were destined for the Army near New-York,) to march to Albany, there to follow the orders of General Schuyler.

Notwithstanding these several urgent calls, the General Court are fully impressed with the necessity of raising a new Army, and are determined vigorously to exert themselves in accomplishing this all-important measure.

This State, in pursuance of the recommendation of Congress, have appointed Nathaniel Appelton, Esq., Commissioner of the Loan Office, though they have little or no expectation of his borrowing any money upon the terms prescribed by Congress.

In the name and behalf of Council.

I am, respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO COLONEL CRAFTS.

War Office, Boston, December 18th, 1776.

SIR: By extracts from the commission of the Board of War, you will perceive that the command of all the forces in the pay of this State has devolved upon them. They therefore expect from you an obedience to such orders as they may issue from time to time; and relying upon your continued exertions in the duties of your department, they will make them as light to you, your officers, and men, as the necessity of the service will admit.

By order of the Board:

S. P. SAVAGE, President p. t.

Colonel Thomas Crafts.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO COMMISSARY NEWMAN.

War Office, Boston, December 18, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby acquainted that twenty casks of rice are this day to be forwarded to Rehoboth from Dartmouth, for the use of the troops now in the State of Rhode-Island, and which belong to this State. They are ordered to the care of Major Wm. Thompson there, and you will take care to supply yourself from thence, as often as exigencies require.

I'm your humble servant. By order of the Board:

JAMES SWAN, Secretary p. t.

Commissary Newman.

*

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO THE COUNCIL OF THE STATE.

War Office, Boston, December 18th, 1776.

Upon application to Colonel Orr, for a number of cannon, cannon-shot, and small-arms, he represents that though the materials and the furnace are in readiness, his armourers and workmen are all taken off in the late alarm. The Board of War take the liberty to suggest to your Honours the expediency of an order to the commanding officer of the Militia near Rhode-Island, for the discharge of so many of said workmen as may be necessary to improve works erected at a great publick expense; the Board of War being of opinion that the publick service will be more effectually prosecuted by the employment of the workmen in their several occupations than in the Militia.

We are your Honours' most humble servants.

By order of the Board:

S. P. Savage, President p. t.

To the honourable Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

---

TRISTRAM DALTON TO JOHN AVERY.

Newburyport, December 18, 1776.

Sir: I this morning received your favour of the 16th instant, covering a resolution of the honourable Board, directing the Committee appointed the 16th ultimo by the Court to proceed to Providence, there to meet, on the 23d instant, Committees from the other States of New-England, on affairs mentioned in said resolution.

Ever willing to serve my country, I shall endeavour to obey this new instruction from the honourable Council, of which I beg the favour of your acquainting them.

I am, with respect, sir, your most humble servant,

Tristram Dalton.

John Avery, Esq., Deputy Secretary.

---

RESOLUTION OF VIRGINIA ASSEMBLY FOR REMOVAL OF ENGLISH SUBJECTS FROM THE STATE.

In General Assembly, December 19, 1776.

Whereas the King of Great Britain hath waged war against this Commonwealth and the United American States, and there are within this Commonwealth divers merchants and others, subjects of the said King, who, while they remain here, have frequent opportunities of seducing and corrupting the minds of the people, and are suspected of holding correspondence with and giving intelligence to the enemy:

Resolved, nemine contradicente, That the Governour and Council be desired to cause all such persons to depart this Commonwealth, by immediately putting in execution the statute staple of the 27th of Edward III., chapter 17th, against all natives of Great Britain who were partners with, factors, agents, storekeepers, assistant storekeepers, or clerks here, for any merchant or merchants in Great Britain, at the time the act of the British Parliament for restraining the trade of America, and seizing our property upon the water, took place, except only such of them as has heretofore uniformly manifested a friendly disposition to the American cause, or are attached to this country by having wives or children here; and such subjects of the said King, as shall satisfy the Governour and Council that they have not been able to procure other means of departure, may have their passage to any foreign port, in such vessels employed in the service of this Commonwealth as the Governour and Council shall direct. And that all, or any of them, who shall be found here after the time respectively allowed them to depart, shall be confined as enemies and prisoners of war. And for furnishing the Governour and Council with proper information, the Justices of the several County Courts are empowered and required immediately to make inquiry for all such subjects of the said King residing within their respective Counties, and, after due examination had, to cause a list of their names to be entered upon record, and direct their clerk to transmit a copy thereof to the Governour. And that a copy of this resolve, together with a copy of the aforesaid statute staple, be forthwith printed in the Virginia Gazette.

Arch. Cary, Sp. Senate.

Edm. Pendleton, Sp. H. D.

27*th of* Edward III., Chapter XVII.

A merchant stranger shall not be impeached for another's debt, but upon good cause. Merchants of enemies countries sell their goods in convenient time, and depart.

(Item.) That no merchant stranger be impeached for another's trespass, or for another's debt, whereof he is not debtor, pledge, nor mainpernor. Provided always, That if our liege people, merchants or others, be endamaged by any Lords of strange lands, or their subjects, and the said Lords (duly required) fail of right to our said subjects, we shall have the law of marque, and of taking them again, as hath been used in times past, without fraud or deceit; and in case that debate do rise (which God defend!) betwixt us and any Lords of strange lands, we will not that the people and merchants of the said lands be suddenly subdued in our said realm and lands because of such debate, but that they be warned, and proclamation thereof published, that they shall void the said realm and lands, with their goods, freely, within forty days after the warning and proclamation so made; and that, in the mean time, they be not impeached, not let of their passage, or of making their profit of the same merchandises, if they will sell them. And in case that for default of wind or of ship, or for sickness, or for other evident cause, they cannot avoid our said realm and lands within so short a time, then they shall have other forty days, or more, if need be, within which they may pass conveniently with selling their merchandise as afore is said.

---

FREDERICK-TOWN, MARYLAND, COMMITTEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 23d.]

Frederick-Town, December 19th, 1776.

Sir: The resolve of Congress of the 9th instant came to hand this evening, and has since been under the consideration of the Committee. The resolutions they have taken are enclosed for the perusal of Congress.

From present appearances, the Committee expect that the Militia will march pretty generally, perhaps one thousand or twelve hundred men, from the district, provided that money is lodged in the hands of a Paymaster speedily, with directions to advance small sums to such as are indigent, and to furnish necessaries for the march of the troops.

I am directed by the Committee to urge the necessity of this step, and to submit to the consideration of Congress whether it might not be of real service to advance a month's pay to each man, if required.

There are three battalions in Washington County and two in Montgomery. It is imagined that they were intended to be included in the request of Congress; if so, and they should march, (which is not doubted,) it is highly probable they will likewise want money. The Committee will be as expeditious as possible in sending forward the men, and will pay strict attention to any further directions that Congress may think proper to give.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

Christ'r Eddelen, Chairman.

P. S. We shall not have more guns than will arm one-fifth of the men. C. E.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress.

---

In Committee, December 19th, 1776.

A resolve of Congress, of the 9th instant, directed to the Committee of Frederick County, requesting the Militia of said County to march to Philadelphia, for the defence of that city, and to reinforce our Army, was read: Whereupon it was

Resolved unanimously, That the Militia of this County ought to equip themselves in the best manner they are able, and march with all possible speed to Philadelphia, there to be subject to the directions of the Commander-in-Chief.

That Brigadier-General Johnson, and the Field Officers of the several Battalions, exert themselves in forwarding the march of the Militia in the most convenient and expeditious manner.

But as prudence directs that some should be left behind,

Resolved, That the Field Officers select a few from each Battalion, whose circumstances may render it most inconvenient to leave home, to be kept on duty as a guard, and that they enroll under such officers as the Committee may appoint.

That every person capable of bearing arms hitherto exempt from mustering on account of age, or other infirmities, &c., also enroll into Companies to keep guard during the absence of the Militia.

That this Committee will use their utmost endeavours to furnish the Militia with every thing necessary to facilitate their march.

That expresses be sent to the Colonels of the several Battalions of this County, and to the Committees of Washington and Montgomery Counties, acquainting them with the resolve of Congress and the resolutions of this Board respecting the marching of the Militia, &c.

Extract from the Minutes. P. Thomas.

---

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Frederick-Town, 19th December, 1776.

Gentlemen: This evening an express came to town from Baltimore, with the resolution of Congress on the 9th instant, requesting the Militia of Baltimore, Harford, Cecil, and Frederick Counties, to march to reinforce General Washington. I do not know what could have delayed the messenger between Philadelphia and Baltimore. The resolution was enclosed to the Committee of this County. They have resolved that the Militia ought to march, and I believe in very great proportions will, though, as you must imagine, many of them are very ill provided for a winter's campaign. It is intended, if possible, to get some in motion on Monday.

I do not know whether it is intended that I should command the whole Militia, or any part of them, or not; if it is, I think some special authority for that purpose will be necessary, and I shall cheerfully execute it as well as I can. But in a matter of so much consequence, I shall frankly give my opinion at every hazard, that it is best not to let our Militia go out under any Provincial Brigadier. General Beall's commission, I suppose, has expired; and if not, many of the Flying-Camp speak of him so far from respectfully, that you may be assured that many from here would but half obey him, and so far with all ill-will. None of the rest of us have seen service, and I fear we are not so competent, nor will the men have the same confidence in either of us as in one who has had experience. General Smallwood, and several others, I believe, have but very small brigades, but if any gentleman goes from here as Brigadier, he must have a great stock of philosophy to give up his brigade to another, though superiour in abilities, and having nothing to do when he foresees the general, however unjust, imputations which will be thrown upon him. If these reasons appear to you in the same strength they do to me, I imagine our Militia might be put under the immediate command of Smallwood, by a request to Congress or General Washington. I have seen a good many of the Flying-Camp who speak well, and some who speak ill, of Smallwood.

If you have any stock of shoes, stockings, or blankets, that you can spare, to be forwarded to York immediately, and there sold to the men at moderate prices, or sent after them, it would be a great relief.

I shall expect to hear from you; and am, gentlemen, with very great respect, your obedient servant,

Th. Johnson, Jun.

The honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

If there's no immediate good opportunity, Mr. Chase is desired to forward this by express.

---

CAPTAIN COOK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Christiana Bridge, December 19th, 1776.

Honoured Gentlemen: I received yours, dated the 15th, and on the 17th left Baltimore, with seventy-six in number, all hearty and in high spirits. Agreeable to yours to me, waited on some of the honourable Congress at Baltimore. To them I showed your letter, and have one from them to the honourable commanding General at Philadelphia, where I shall apply for further orders; where I hope for that rank due to my station; and no distinction as being a Provincial officer I hope will take place.

I expect to leave this about three o'clock, when the tide will answer to proceed by water for Philadelphia. Captain Patterson has got charge of the vessel I came up in. I had not time to write you by him. I desired him to inform you of my march to this place. I shall write you from Philadelphia by the first opportunity; and should we be called to action I have not the least doubt but we shall support that honour which our Province already have acquired.

I am, honoured gentlemen, your very humble servant,

Geo. Cook.

The honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

P. S. Since I wrote the above, I find myself disappointed in a vessel, so that I intend immediately to set off for New-Castle.

---

JOHN M'KINLY TO COMMITTEE OF KENT COUNTY, DELAWARE.

Wilmington, the 19th of December, 1776.

Gentlemen: The branch of the Council of Safety for this County has met almost every day since their return from Dover. The business of their meetings has been principally to procure and provide for the marching of the Militia of this County, to reinforce the Army under General Washington. Several companies have already marched; several others are getting ready to march, and sundry others are expected very soon to follow their example. This business appears to be of such importance, and this critical and alarming situation of our affairs, as to require the closest attention of the Council, and is likely to engage this branch for some considerable time longer. These considerations, as likewise that nothing material has happened since the last meeting of the General Council, as also that the meeting of the General Assembly is so near, have prevailed with the members of the Council in this County to resolve not to attend the proposed meeting at Dover, on the 23d instant; and I am ordered by them to inform you of their said resolution, and the real motives which induced them thereto, so as to prevent any misapprehension, trouble, or disappointment. I am further ordered earnestly to recommend that the most speedy and effectual measures be taken to procure and provide for as many as possible of the Militia of your County, to march and join in the American Army. As so much depends on a timely reinforcement for these purposes, I have sent this by express, who will likewise deliver to you a similar letter to the branch of this Council in Sussex County, which I would request you would be pleased to forward by express as speedily as possible.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

Jno. McKinly.

To the Hon. Brigadier-General Rodney, Richard Bassett, Esq., and others, the Council of Safety of Kent County, at Dover.

---

THE AMERICAN CRISIS.—NUMBER ONE.

These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap we esteem too lightly. 'Tis dearness only that gives every thing its value. Heaven knows how to set a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange, indeed, if so celestial an article as Freedom should not be highly rated. Britain, with an army to enforce her tyranny, has declared that she has a right not only to tax, but "to bind us in all cases whatsoever;" and if being bound in that manner is not slavery, then is there not such a thing as slavery upon earth. Even the expression is impious, for so unlimited a power can belong only to God.

Whether the independence of the Continent was declared too soon, or delayed too long, I will not now enter into as an argument. My own simple opinion is, that had it been eight months earlier, it would have been much better. We did not make a proper use of last winter; neither could we, while we were in a dependent state. However, the fault, if it were one, was all our own; we have none to blame but ourselves.* But no great deal is lost yet; all that Howe has been doing for this month past is rather a ravage than a conquest, which the spirit of the Jerseys a year ago would have quickly repulsed, and which time and a little resolution will soon recover.

I have as little superstition in me as any man living; but my secret opinion has ever been, and still is, that God Almighty will not give up a people to military destruction, or leave them unsupportedly to perish, who had so earnestly and so repeatedly sought to avoid the calamities of war, by every decent method which wisdom could invent. Neither have I so much of the infidel in me as to suppose that He has relinquished the government of the world, and given us up to the care of devils; and as I do not, I cannot see on what grounds the King of Britain can look up to Heaven for help against us. A common murderer, a highwayman, or a housebreaker, has as good a pretence as he.

'Tis surprising to see how rapidly a panick will sometimes run through a country. All nations and ages have been subject to them. Britain has trembled like an ague at the report of a French fleet of flat-bottomed boats; and in the fourteenth century, the whole English Army, after ravaging the kingdom of France, was driven back like men petrified with fear; and this brave exploit was performed by a few broken forces, collected and headed by a woman, Joan of Arc. Would that Heaven might inspire some Jersey maid to spirit up her countrymen, and save her fair fellow-sufferers from ravage and ravishment! Yet panicks, in some cases, have their uses. They produce as much good as hurt. Their duration is always short; the mind soon grows through them, and acquires a firmer habit than before. But their peculiar advantage is, that they are the touchstones of sincerity and hypocrisy, and bring things and men to light which might otherwise have lain forever undiscovered. In fact, they have the same effect on secret traitors which an imaginary apparition would upon a private murderer. They sift out the hidden thoughts of man, and hold them up in publick to the world. Many a disguised Tory has lately shown his head, that shall penitentially solemnize with curses the day on which Howe arrived upon the Delaware.

As I was with the troops at Fort Lee, and marched with them to the edge of Pennsylvania, I am well acquainted with many circumstances which those who lived at a distance know but little or nothing of. Our situation there was exceedingly cramped, the place being on a narrow neck of land between the North River and the Hackensack. Our force was inconsiderable, being not one fourth so great as Howe could bring against us. We had no army at hand to have relieved the garrison, had we shut ourselves up and stood on the defence. Our ammunition, light-artillery, and the best part of our stores, had been removed, upon the apprehension that Howe would endeavour to penetrate the Jerseys, in which case Fort Lee could be of no great use to us; for it must occur to every thinking man, whether in the army or not, that these kind of field forts are only for temporary purposes, and last in use no longer than the enemy directs his force against the particular object which such forts are raised to defend. Such was our situation and condition at Fort Lee, on the morning of the 20th of November, when an officer arrived with information that the enemy, with two hundred boats, had landed about seven or eight miles above. Major-General Greene, who commanded the garrison, immediately ordered them under arms, and sent express to his Excellency General Washington, at the town of Hackensack, distant, by the way of the ferry, six miles. Our first object was to secure the bridge over the Hackensack, which laid up the river between the enemy and us, about six miles from us and three from them. General Washington arrived in about three-quarters of an hour, and marched at the head of the troops towards the bridge, which place I expected we should have a brush for; however, they did not choose to dispute it with us, and the greatest part of our troops went over the bridge, the rest over the ferry, except some which passed at a mill on a small creek, between the bridge and the ferry, and made their way through some marshy grounds up to the town of Hackensack, and there passed the river. We brought off as much baggage as the wagons could contain; the rest was lost. The simple object was to bring off the garrison, and to march them on till they could be strengthened by the Jersey or Pennsylvania Militia, so as to be enabled to make a stand. We staid four days at Newark, collected in our outposts, with some of the Jersey Militia, and marched out twice to meet the enemy on information of their being advancing, though our numbers were greatly inferiour to theirs. Howe, in my little opinion, committed a great errour in generalship in not throwing a body of forces off from Staten-Island, through Amboy, by which means he might have seized all our stores at Brunswick, and intercepted our march into Pennsylvania. But, if we believe the power of hell to be limited, we must likewise believe that their agents are under some providential control.

I shall not now attempt to give all the particulars of our retreat to the Delaware. Suffice it for the present to say, that both officers and men, though greatly harassed and fatigued, frequently without rest, covering, or provision, the inevitable consequences of a long retreat, bore it with a manly and a martial spirit. All their wishes were one, which was, that the country would turn out and help them to drive the enemy back. Voltaire has remarked that King William never appeared to full advantage but in difficulties and in action. The same remark may be made on General Washington, for the character fits him. There is a natural firmness in some minds which cannot be unlocked by trifles, but which, when unlocked, discovers a cabinet of fortitude; and I reckon it among those kind of publick blessings which we do not immediately see, that God hath blest him with uninterrupted health, and given him a mind that can even flourish upon care.

I shall conclude this paper with some miscellaneous remarks on the state of our affairs, and shall begin with asking the following question: Why is it that the enemy have left the New-England Provinces, and made these middle ones the seat of war? The answer is easy: New-England is not infested with Tories, and we are. I have been tender in raising the cry against these men, and used numberless arguments to show them their danger, but it will not do to sacrifice a world to either their folly or their baseness. The period is now arrived in which either they or we must change our sentiments, or one or both must fall. And what is a Tory? Good God! what is he? I should not be afraid to go with an hundred Whigs against a thousand Tories, were they to attempt to get into arms. Every Tory is a coward, for a servile, slavish, self-interested fear is the foundation of Toryism; and a man under such influence, though he may be cruel, can never be brave.

But before the line of irrecoverable separation be drawn between us, let us reason the matter together. Your conduct is an invitation to the enemy, yet not one in a thousand of you has heart enough to join him. Howe is as much deceived by you as the American cause is injured by you. He expects you will all take up arms, and flock to his standard, with muskets on your shoulders. Your opinions are of no use to him, unless you support him personally; for 'tis soldiers, and not Tories, that he wants.

I once felt all that kind of anger which a man ought to feel against the mean principles that are held by the Tories. A noted one, who kept a tavern at Amboy, was standing at his door, with as pretty a child in his hand, about eight or nine years old, as most I ever saw, and after speaking his mind as freely as he thought was prudent, finished with this unfatherly expression: "Well, give me peace in my day!" Not a man lives on the Continent but fully believes that a separation must some time or other finally take place, and a generous parent would have said, "If there must be trouble, let it be in my day, that my child may have peace;" and this single reflection, well applied, is sufficient to awaken every man to duty. Not a place upon earth might be so happy as America. Her situation is remote from all the wrangling world, and she has nothing to do but to trade with them. A man may easily distinguish in himself between temper and principle; and I am as confident as I am that God governs the world, that America will never be happy till she gets clear of foreign dominion. Wars, without ceasing, will break out till that period arrives, and the Continent must in the end be conqueror; for though the flame of liberty may sometimes cease to shine, the coal never can expire.

* "The present winter is worth an age, if rightly employed; but if lost or neglected, the whole continent will partake of the evil; and there is no punishment that man does not deserve, be he who, or what, or where he will, that may be the means of sacrificing a season so precious and useful."—Common Sense.

America did not, nor does not, want force; but she wanted a proper application of that force. Wisdom is not the purchase of a day, and it is no wonder that we should err at first setting off. From an excess of tenderness, we were unwilling to raise an army, and trusted our cause to the temporary defence of a well-meaning Militia. A summer's experience has now taught us better; yet with those troops, while they were collected, we were able to set bounds to the progress of the enemy, and, thank God! they are again assembling. I always considered a Militia as the best troops in the world for a sudden exertion, but they will not do for a long campaign. Howe, it is probable, will make an attempt on this city; should he fail on this side the Delaware, he is ruined; if he succeeds, our cause is not ruined. He stakes all on his side against a part on ours; admitting he succeeds, the consequence will be, that armies from both ends of the Continent will march to assist their suffering friends in the Middle States; for he cannot go every where—it is impossible. I consider Howe as the greatest enemy the Tories have; he is bringing a war into their country, which, had it not been for him and partly for themselves, they had been clear of. Should he now be expelled, I wish, with all the devotion of a Christian, that the names of Whig and Tory may never more be mentioned; but should the Tories give him encouragement to come, or assistance if he comes, I as sincerely wish that our next year's arms may expel them from the Continent, and the Congress appropriate their possessions to the relief of those who have suffered in well-doing. A single successful battle next year will settle the whole. America could carry on a two years' war by the confiscation of the property of disaffected persons, and be made happy by their expulsion. Say not that this is revenge; call it rather the soft resentment of a suffering people, who, having no object in view but the good of all, have staked their own all upon a seemingly doubtful event. Yet it is folly to argue against determined hardness; eloquence may strike the ear, and the language of sorrow draw forth the tear of compassion, but nothing can reach the heart that is steeled with prejudice.

Quitting this class of men, I turn with the warm ardour of a friend to those who have nobly stood, and are yet determined to stand the matter out; I call not upon a few, but upon all; not on this State or that State, but on every State; up and help us; lay your shoulders to the wheel; better have too much force than too little, when so great an object is at stake. Let it be told to the future world, that in the depth of winter, when nothing but hope and virtue could survive, that the city and the country, alarmed at one common danger, came forth to meet and to repulse it. Say not that thousands are gone, turn out your tens of thousands; throw not the burthen of the day upon Providence, but "show your faith by your works," that God may bless you. It matters not where you live, or what rank of life you hold, the evil or the blessing will reach you all. The far and the near, the home counties and the back, the rich and the poor, will suffer or rejoice alike. The heart that feels not now, is dead. The blood of his children will curse his cowardice, who shrinks back at a time when a little might have saved the whole, and made them happy. I love the man that can smile in trouble, that can gather strength from distress, and grow brave by reflection. 'Tis the business of little minds to shrink; but he whose heart is firm, and whose conscience approves his conduct, will pursue his principles unto death. My own line of reasoning is to myself as straight and clear as a ray of light. Not all the treasures of the world, so far as I believe, could have induced me to support an offensive war, for I think it murder; but if a thief break into my house, burn and destroy my property, and kill or threaten to kill me, or those that are in it, and to "bind me in all cases whatsoever" to his absolute will, am I to suffer it? What signifies it to me, whether he who does it, is a king or a common man; my countryman or not my countryman? Whether it is done by an individual villain, or an army of them? If we reason to the root of things we shall find no difference; neither can any just cause be assigned why we should punish in the one case, and pardon in the other. Let them call me Rebel, and welcome, I feel no concern from it; but I should suffer the misery of devils, were I to make a whore of my soul by swearing allegiance to one, whose character is, that of a sottish, stupid, stubborn, worthless, brutish man. I conceive likewise a horrid idea in receiving mercy from a being who, at the last day, shall be shrieking to the rocks and mountains to cover him, and fleeing with terrour from the orphan, the widow, and the slain of America.

There are cases which cannot be overdone by language, and this is one. There are persons, too, who see not the full extent of the evil that threatens them; they solace themselves with hopes that the enemy, if they succeed, will be merciful. It is the madness of folly to expect mercy, from those who have refused to do justice; and even mercy, where conquest is the object, is only a trick of war. The cunning of the fox is as murderous as the violence of the wolf; and we ought to guard equally against both. Howe's first object is, partly by threats and partly by promise, to terrify or seduce the people to deliver up their arms, and receive mercy. The Ministry recommended the same plan to Gage, and this is what the Tories call making their peace; "a peace which passeth all understanding" indeed! A peace which would be the immediate forerunner of a worse ruin than any we have yet thought of. Ye men of Pennsylvania, do reason upon these things! Were the back Counties to give up their arms, they would fall an easy prey to the Indians, who are all armed. This perhaps is what some Tories would not be sorry for. Were the home Counties to deliver up their arms, they would be exposed to the resentment of the back Counties, who would then have it in their power to chastise their defection at pleasure. And were any one State to give up its arms, that State must be garrisoned by all Howe's army of Britons and Hessians to preserve it from the anger of the rest. Mutual fear is a principal link in the chain of mutual love, and woe be to that State that breaks the compact. Howe is mercifully inviting you to barbarous destruction, and men must be either rogues or fools that will not see it. I dwell not upon the vapours of imagination; I bring reason to your ears; and in language as plain as A, B, C, hold up truth to your eyes.

I thank God that I fear not. I see no real cause for fear. I know our situation well, and can see the way out of it. While our Army was collected, Howe dared not risk a battle, and it is no credit to him that he decamped from the White-Plains, and waited a mean opportunity to ravage the defenceless Jerseys; but it is great credit to us, that, with an handful of men, we sustained an orderly retreat for near an hundred miles, brought off our ammunition, all our field pieces, the greatest part of our stores, and had four rivers to pass. None can say that our retreat was precipitate, for we were near three weeks in performing it, that the country might have time to come in. Twice we marched back to meet the enemy and remained out till dark. The sign of fear was not seen in our camp, and had not some of the cowardly and disaffected inhabitants spread false alarms through the country, the Jerseys had never been ravaged. Once more we are again collected and collecting; our new Army at both ends of the Continent is recruiting fast, and we shall be able to open the next campaign with sixty thousand men, well armed and clothed. This is our situation, and who will may know it. By perseverance and fortitude we have the prospect of a glorious issue; by cowardice and submission, the sad choice of a variety of evils—a ravaged country—a depopulated city—habitations without safety, and slavery without hope—our homes turned into barracks and bawdy-houses for Hessians, and a future race to provide for whose fathers we shall doubt of. Look on this picture and weep over it! and if there yet remains one thoughtless wretch who believes it not, let him suffer it unlamented.

Philadelphia, December 19, 1776.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 19th December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am favoured with yours of the 17th, enclosing the resolution of your Board respecting the Militia of Bucks and Northampton Counties. I shall, in consequence of it, immediately order the Colonels to summon their regiments to attend upon a certain day, and I shall treat the defaulters in the manner pointed out by the resolve, unless a good and sufficient cause of absence is assigned.

Nothing ever amazed me more than the note said to be wrote by John Dickinson, Esq., to his brother, the General.

If he applies to me to show him the contents, I see no reason for refusing it, because he may easily be informed by applying to the writer.

The enemy having made no move of any consequence since I wrote to you last, I have only to recommend your continuing to exert yourselves in stirring up the spirits of your people, and making every necessary preparation for the defence of your city, while the enemy leaves it in your power to do it without interruption.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania.

---

ORDERS TO COLONEL KIRKBRIDE, OF BUCKS COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA, MILITIA.

Sir: The honourable the Council of Safety of the State of Pennsylvania having, by a resolve passed the 17th day of this instant, December, authorized me to call forth the Militia of the County of Bucks to the assistance of the Continental Army under my command, I hereby require you immediately to issue orders to the Captains of your regiment, to summon the officers and privates of their companies to meet on the 28th day of this instant, at the usual place, for their joining in battalion, with their arms and accoutrements in good order; and when so met, march immediately to the city of Philadelphia, and there put yourself under the command of Major-General Putnam; and you are further required to make me an exact return of the names and places of abode of such officers and privates as refuse to appear, with their arms and accoutrements, at the time and place appointed, that they may be dealt with as the resolve above referred to directs.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, this 19th day of December, 1776.

Go. Washington.

[The same to Colonel Hart; to Colonel Andrew Kachlein; to Colonel Arthur Ewing; to Colonel Joseph Sabitts.]

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A FRIEND IN CONNECTICUT, FROM AN OFFICER IN THE AMERICAN ARMY, DATED BUCKS COUNTY, DECEMBER 19, 1776.

Since my last we have received intelligence from Philadelphia that nine British men-of-war have entered Delaware Bay. No doubt these movements to Rhode-Island, Philadelphia, and the Jerseys, at this season of the year, is intended to divide our force, and if possible distract our councils, and discourage our people from inlisting in the new army. Heaven grant their designs may be defeated! Now, my friend, is the crisis for you in the country to exert yourselves. Use your influence, and let us have an army. Every good man and well-wisher to his country will exert himself. If he is a lover of this once happy land, he will exhort one and all to lend their aid to do the needful to save this injured, bleeding, distressed land. Was you to behold the Jerseys, to see the distresses would bring tears into your eyes. Now is the time for us to be in earnest. As for what few troops we have, you would be amazed to see what fine spirits they are in; and the Continental troops are really well disciplined, and you may depend will fight bravely, and I doubt not before one week you will hear of an attack somewhere, when I trust we shall do honour to ourselves. I well know both officers and men are determined to check the pride of the red-coats. They at present are flushed with their successes, which perhaps may lull them into too much security for themselves. I think it likely they will endeavour to penetrate your State in the spring; I am confident they cannot penetrate far; but be sure that you advise old and young to be in readiness. Push the affair of good muskets; let them carry a full ounce ball; but I think a three-and-half-feet barrel is long enough, with a good bayonet. Depend upon it, to avoid the worst, it's necessary to be well and martially equipped. In short, if any one will but suffer himself to reflect but for a moment, he must own that we are not in earnest enough.

Consider, O my countrymen, the distresses gasping for you, ready to devour you all. Liberty calls aloud to save yourselves. But I am not in the least doubtful but that America will rouse. Choose good young officers, that will not think of home only when they can think of returning as conquerors. You shall hear from me soon again.

---

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Chatham, in East Jersey, 19 December, 1776.

Sir: The rheumatism and other disorders detained me at Haverstraw, and separated me from my brigade. Eight days since I found myself much better, and followed General Lee's division to Morris-Town, where I arrived the day after he was unfortunately taken. This catastrophe determined me, by the advice of friends, not to proceed unless I had a guard. The three regiments from the northward, under Colonel Vose, were hourly expected to Morris-Town. They did not arrive until the day before yesterday, late in the evening. Provisions and other necessaries were prepared for their march next morning to join you; but an express arrived at night, with information that Colonel Ford's Militia had an engagement with the enemy at Springfield, and that he expected it would be renewed the next morning, to gain the pass of the mountains. The country in general being greatly discouraged, and on the eve of making a surrender of this State, I judged it my duty to order those regiments to march at four a. m. to support Colonel Ford. The enemy early next morning retired towards Spank-Town.

When Colonel Vose this morning was preparing to march to Morris-Town, the Militia and principal gentlemen were much dejected, and assured me if those troops were not left here to countenance them, the Militia could not be collected to make any opposition to the enemy, and those who were imbodied would disband, which would eventually end in a submission of this State. Indeed, some of the most important, sensible, and zealous of the people, declared they would provide for their own safety, as they had no hopes of being able to assemble the Militia if those Continental troops were removed. They asserted that General Lee gave them assurance that those troops should be left here for their protection, which was countenanced in some measure in a letter of General Heath's to Colonel Ford; and to remove them after so many of the troops passed through the State, would be to abandon them to the enemy, which is the idea generally held by too many of the friends of the country; but if the troops stay, they were in no doubt of collecting a respectable number of the Militia. In this state of things, I feared if I advised Colonel Vose to proceed to the Delaware, I should be chargeable with all the bad consequences. These facts will be authenticated to you by the Committee of Morris-Town.

The submission of this State would draw after it consequences easier to conceive than express, and are too obvious to render an enumeration necessary. To prevent an event so fatal to our common cause, I have ventured to advise Colonel Vose to remain in this State, and shall post his troops, with the Militia, in the best manner to cover the country not in the hands of the enemy. It is the only chance we have for retaining it. Orders for him will readily find him by applying to Colonel Remsen, at Morris-Town, or Colonel Ford. I find by Colonel Vose that those troops are determined to go home at the expiration of their time, which would nearly be accomplished before they could reach you, which was a consideration that induced me to advise his stay, and as their assistance to you would not bear any proportion to the prospect of their service here. I hope these considerations will justify me to your Excellency, as the service and the safety of the common cause were the only motives which determined my advice.

I am greatly mortified that I have no reason to expect I shall be able to do duty in the course of the winter in the manner I could wish, from the complication of disorders that afflict me. If the time was not so critical to the country I would resign, as I do not wish to be a burthen to it. But as this might at this crisis be a prejudice to the cause, subject to the abuse of our enemies, I decline it; but wish to be favoured with the General's advice for my future conduct. If I stay here, unless I am with some detachment of the Army, I shall be exposed to the like misfortune that befell General Lee. If I am with the Army, the houses are so necessary to them that I cannot be accommodated; I shall, however, endeavour to remain in this neighbourhood till General Heath arrives at Morris-Town, which I have reason to expect will be in a few days.

I am, with earnest wishes for your success and happiness, your Excellency's very humble servant,

ALEX. McDOUGALL.

His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. The enemy are changing their troops so often from Hancinsak to Elizabeth-Town, that it is impossible to give a true state of their numbers in frontier towns of this State. Colonel Ford has had from eight hundred to one thousand of the Militia collected. Now about seven hundred.

Greaton's regiment, about 250; Bond's, do. 100; Porter's, do. 170;—520.

I have taken the liberty to transmit to you a letter of General Heath's, approving of my advice in detaining that corps.

—

Morris-Town, December 19, 1776.

SIR: The distressed situation of this State, and the imminent danger of this country, filled at present with most of the persons and property of the well-affected people of this part of the Province, induces us most earnestly to request you to detain the troops now in this neighbourhood on their march from Ticonderoga. We had General Lee's express promise that this detachment should be detained here for the protection of this State. And although his letter to the commanding officer does not contain so explicit an order for that purpose as we would wish, yet there is sufficient evidence that this was his intention, from a full view of the necessity and importance of such a measure. You are also sensible that this is the desire of General Heath. And from what you, sir, see and hear, we cannot doubt but it appears in the same light to yourself.

We are truly sensible of the necessity of a large force with General Washington. But while the enemy are so dispersed, it cannot be expected the whole body of our troops can be all at one place. Part of our Militia have been called out of our Province; and if we had the whole, what could they do against the enemy, the main body of which is in this State? Yet with the support of these troops we hope to collect a larger body of the Militia than we have at present, and by defending important passes secure a great part of this State, and it may be in time regain the whole.

But, sir, we must speak the painful truth. If these troops are not detained, the Militia collected will grow dispirited, soon dwindle away, and this State be lost. We beseech you, consider these things, and grant us such relief as is in your power. We honestly declare, that so far as we know our hearts, we speak not from a partial regard to one part of the Continent, but as if the whole was our own.

We are, sir, with all due respect, your most obedient and very humble servants,

JACOB FORD, one of the Judges.
SILAS CONDIT, one of the Council.
CALEB CAMP, one of the Assembly.
ALEX'R CARMICAEL, Chairman of the Committee.
TIMO. JOHNES,
BEN. HAIT,
A. MAINHORTE,
JACOB VAN ARSDALEN, } Ministers.
JACOB FORD, Jun., Col. Commandant of the Militia.
JAMES CALDWELL.

To General MacDougall.

—

COLONEL MALCOM TO GENERAL HEATH.

Chatham, December 19, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I got to this place this moment. General McDougall most providentially was before me. An order from Head-Quarters for the Ticonderoga detachment to join the grand Army, had almost lost this State. The Militia, who are numerous and brave in this quarter, finding themselves abandoned, came to a resolution to save themselves and families by dispersing. The principal people supposing themselves forsaken by the Army, were also dejected, and would have retired. To avert so capital a blow, General McDougall hath detained Colonel Vose until further orders; but this leaves the issue doubtful. A repeated order may arrive next moment, and the State lost. For this weighty consideration, surely it will be advisable that you move this way. Suppose Tappan and the vicinity is exposed, the enemy cannot approach the forts by land (with artillery) but through the pass of the Clove; and surely General Clinton's Army is competent to defend that ground, perhaps to do more.

I am informed you can expect to be joined here by about one thousand good Militia. This will enable you to cover this valuable country, which abounds with forage, and which must expect the vengeance of the enemy. From their attachment to their country and their zeal, they are remarkably obnoxious. In proportion are their fears; and therefore they ought to be supported. This quarter is capable of being easily defended, and much benefit arise thereby. I hope to meet you on Saturday at Morris-Town, or a shorter road which Mr. Sanford will show you. Time is precious; I can only offer my respects to General Parsons, General Clinton if with you, and your suite; and that with much respect and esteem I am, dear General, your much obliged and very humble servant,

W. MALCOM.

To Major-General Heath, Pyramus.

The facts contained in this are true.

ALEX. McDOUGALL.

—

DR. SHIPPEN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, 19th September, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The department under my direction has been, and continues to be, very healthy, and our treatment of the sick very successful, not having lost more than ten or twelve men out of the twenty or thirty thousand that have passed through this camp. I have met with much difficulty in procuring houses and nurses, particularly the latter; and in order to engage any of them in the service, have been obliged to deviate from the regulation of the honourable Congress, and allow them ten shillings per week, instead of three shillings nine pence. The most ordinary woman here is able to earn much more, as there are so few women and so many men to wash for, &c. I flatter myself this deviation will be forgiven, as the sick must suffer much unless well nursed and kept clean.

I must also inform you, sir, that the many posts we have to maintain makes it necessary to have more Surgeons than are allowed by the Congress, one being necessary to each post. But you may be assured in this, as well as every other part of my conduct, the necessary good of the whole shall be my guide; and when I do not strictly comply with the rules of the Congress, necessity only shall compel me to deviate. This increase of expense I shall amply make up to you by making the Surgeons and Mates of the Hospital act as Surgeons and Apothecary to seven or eight battalions at each post, who came without any Surgeon or medicine, and whose very short, and I had almost said useless, stay here would make the appointment of either for them improper and expensive. This is the case now at Amboy, where I act myself not only as Director, but as Surgeon to the Hospital and Apothecary to nine battalions, who are unprovided; but this will not be the case long, as we flatter ourselves we have almost done with Militia.

I have the pleasure to inform you that all the wounded from Long-Island are recovered, and well disposed to revenge the blood of their brave fellow-soldiers who fell on that day.

I have the honour to be, dear sir, your and the Congress's most obedient and humble servant,

W. SHIPPEN, Jr., S. G. and D. H.

—

GENERAL HEATH TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Paramus, December 19th, 1776.

SIR: I have just received a line from a gentleman, (Mr. Robert Morris,) in which he acquaints me that a person in New-York, who has an opportunity of being acquainted with the motions of the enemy, had advised a friend to move her effects from Fishkill to some place of safety. Mr. Morris acquaints me in his letter that he is not at liberty to mention names, but makes no doubt that such message was sent, and that the person sending might be acquainted with their motions. That this was done before my leaving of

Peekskill. I do not give much credit to the report, but think that every hint of this kind should make us watchful.

I have been fortunate at Hackensack; have taken four or five prisoners of war, besides a number of disaffected persons. These I am sending to Fishkills, as I cannot find any place of safety for them on this side. We have also taken upwards of eighty muskets, and secured about one hundred and fifty barrels of flour, a quantity of rum, wine, and hay, which was going to New-York. It is said that part of those articles belong to our friends; but that property should be sent into the hands of our enemies for safety seems to be a paradox.

The enemy the last night advanced to Aquachannock Bridge, when they halted. General Leslie's brigade, which a few days since marched from Elizabeth-Town to the southward, has received orders to march back immediately. They entered Newark on yesterday morning, I suppose in consequence of our moving this way. It was some of his troops most probably that advanced to Acquachannock the last night. I shall carefully watch their motions, and if possible give them a blow. I consider the passes of the Highlands of so much consequence that I shall keep a watchful eye on those on this side. It is reported here that two ships have lately sailed up the river. We expect this day to know the truth of it.

I am, with respect and esteem, your obedient servant,

W. Heath.

President of the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, Fishkill.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Paramus, December 19, 1776.

Sir: Since I wrote you in the morning, I have received despatches from his Excellency General Washington, in which he is pleased to signify his pleasure that I should return to my former post at Peekskill, (after having attempted what I have been so happy as to effect already,) there to exert my utmost endeavours to secure the post, cover the country, and curb the insolent. I shall return very soon. Nothing will retard me but the making another attempt, where I think there is a prospect of success, and to secure my stores, &c. The enemy, by his Excellency's letter, are about to return towards Brunswick and the vicinity of that place.

I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your most humble servant,

W. Heath.

Honourable President of the honourable Convention of the State of New-York.

---

COMMISSARY HUGHES TO GENERAL HEATH.

Peekskill, Wednesday morning, 19th December, 1776.

Dear General: The despatches for Convention I sent off immediately by a rider just come in, as I received them; which was at dusk last evening.

Forty barrels of pork have been sent to Colonel Hays, three days ago, which is more than you have mentioned; and as to rum, if I understand Mr. Paulding rightly, he does not intend to send any more, but let that be used which is taken there.

A day or two after you went away, sir, I went to North-Castle, and procured a party of men and officers, whom I gave an impress warrant to, and sent them after teams, which has enabled the Commissary to get all his pork up, and considerable of other stores, many of which are now on the road. Part of the pork for both garrisons went off yesterday, but was obliged to put back on account of a squall. This day the whole will set out, and if something does not prevent, I intend to see it there, as no dependence can be put on any thing but what is seen. I ought to have told you, sir, that one hogshead of rum was sent along with the forty barrels of pork.

Major Bradford passed through yesterday, and confirms the unfortunate account of General Lee, whom I greatly lament, but am not the least discouraged. I sympathize with him as a person of the greatest sensibility, and over whom the enemy will exult with insolence.

For Heaven's sake don't release any of those scoundrels that you have taken; but let them be well secured, and feel the effects of their treachery.

I congratulate you on the success of your expedition, sir.

I am, dear General, your most obedient and very humble servant,

Hugh Hughes.

The Hon. Major-General Heath.

---

JOHN SCHENCK TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

In Committee, Poughkeepsie, December 19, 1776.

Gentlemen: We send in an account by Mr. Elias Van Bunscoten, being for preparing five sloops and five scows ordered made by his Excellency General Washington. As we imagine this account may be annexed to the other account of building five rafts by your body, we have sent this in, and desiring you will be pleased to pay the same to the bearer.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your very humble servant,

John Schenck, Chairman.

Honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

---

ROBERT YATES TO JAMES DUANE.

Claverack, December 19th, 1776.

Dear Sir: The bearer hereof, Captain Barent Ten Eyck, is on his way to Fishkill, in order to solicit the interest of the Committee of Arrangement to be appointed a Captain on the present establishment. In the year 1775 he was one of the Captains in the Second Regiment. At the close of that year, he was continued a Captain by General Montgomery, in Canada. At Laprairie he behaved with remarkable spirit, activity, and experience, particularly in bringing up and directing the cannon against General Carleton's attempt to land at that place. During the last campaign he has acted as Lieutenant-Colonel to the drafts of Militia out of the Counties of Albany, Tryon, and Charlotte. His courage and experience cannot be doubted; but I must leave it to the consideration of the Committee whether these qualifications will counterbalance the exceptions which you know have been made against him. Considering the extensive influence of his family and friends in the County of Albany, I could wish him gratified in his request, particularly as he possesses two essential requisites of a soldier; and his failings, with proper admonitions, might be cured.

I beg leave to recommend to you, Jeremiah C. Muller, for an ensigncy in Colonel Van Schaick's battalion. He is a young gentleman of this place, and has acted as First Lieutenant in a Minute company. He has never been in actual service, but I believe will make a good officer.

A few days ago I have had the misfortune, in walking through some brush, to be poisoned by touching some wild shumac, and my hands are in such a situation that it is with the utmost difficulty I have been able to write this letter.

I should be extremely happy if you would at times favour me with a few lines upon such occurrences as you may judge worthy of notice; and I remain, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servant,

Robt. Yates.

To the Hon. James Duane, Esq., and the other members of the Committee of Arrangement, Fishkill.

---

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON.

Fishkill, 19th December, 1776.

Sir: Your favour of the 17th instant being laid before the Convention, I am directed to acquaint you that they approve of the measures you have adopted, and of the orders you have given to Colonel Allison for promoting the utility and success of the expedition under your command. They flatter themselves that the valuable ends which were proposed by this enterprise will be happily effectuated. Relying on your zeal and abilities, they do not think it necessary to give you any directions in addition to those with which you are furnished. A retreat to the passes of the Highlands being secured, every thing else is left to your prudence. An express is despatched to Colonel Allison with your orders.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant.

By order.

Brigadier-General George Clinton.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GOUVERNEUR MORRIS TO HIS MOTHER, DATED FISHKILL, DECEMBER 19TH, 1776.

It is with inexpressible concern that I am this day informed of the death of my sister. We all sustain in her a great loss; but you in particular, who are thus bereft of the companion of your age, must feel it most severely. Would to God it were in my power to alleviate the pangs of a sorrowing parent. But this is not my lot. My friend Wilkins will, I am sure, on this occasion, do the duties of a child and a friend. There is one Comforter, who weighs our minutes and numbers out our days. It is He who has inflicted upon us the weight of publick and private calamities, and He best knows when to remove the burthen. I am sorry it is not in my power to see you at present. I know it is your wish that I were removed from publick affairs; indeed, as far as relates to my own ease and enjoyments, I wish so too. But I know it is the duty of every good citizen or man to preserve that post in which, by a superiour order, he is placed. Where the happiness of a considerable part of our fellow-creatures is deeply concerned, we soon feel the insignificancy of an individual. And whatever lot that individual shall experience, while a conscious rectitude of conduct inspires and supports him, though he may be unfortunate, he cannot be miserable.

What may be the event of the present war, it is not in man to determine. Great revolutions of empire are seldom achieved without much human calamity; but the worst which can happen, is to fall on the last bleak mountain of America, and he who dies there, in defence of the injured rights of mankind, is happier than his conqueror, more beloved by mankind, more applauded by his own heart.

---

RESOLUTION OF NEW-YORK CONVENTION FOR A SECRET EXPEDITION.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, } December 19th, 1776. }

Whereas the condition of the inhabitants of the County of Westchester, exposed to the ravages of a cruel and merciless enemy, loudly calls for assistance and protection: And whereas the main body of the enemy have penetrated, and are now employed in the western parts of the State of New-Jersey; and the operations of the troops under the command of Generals Heath and George Clinton, in Orange and Bergen Counties, have diverted the enemy's forces, which were left at Fort Washington and New-York, to that quarter; and it being therefore conceived that an expedition into the County of Westchester and the Island of New-York promises success, provided it can be conducted with secrecy, vigour, and despatch:

Resolved, therefore, That General George Clinton, General Scott, Mr. Duer, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Landon, be, and they hereby are, authorized and directed to pursue all such ways and means as to them shall appear proper and necessary for carrying on such expedition, harassing and destroying the enemy, and protecting the persons and property of the good subjects of this State, and for securing the effects of all those who have fled to or joined the enemy. And for the purpose aforesaid, to levy and draw out such parts of the Militia of the Counties of Dutchess and Westchester as they may think necessary, and also to apply to the commanding officer of the Continental Army for the aid of Continental troops and every other assistance which the said Committee shall judge expedient.

---

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, December 19th, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Babcock delivered me your favour last night. I continue greatly distressed with the situation of our affairs to the northward. Every letter from thence advises me that the troops will leave it immediately after their term of inlistment is expired. Between two and three hundred recruits are raised in this quarter for the regiments of this State, but not a single blanket, or substitute for one, is to be had; and it will be impossible to send them across the lakes without some kind of covering. Colonel Elmore with his corps occupies the fortresses and posts on the Mohawk's river, from whence I dare not move them,

Colonel Warner has got recruiting money, and his officers are employed in that service; but I do not expect much assistance from that quarter, and none from the Militia; nor will any of the men inlisted, or that still may inlist at Ticonderoga, be of any service, for the recruiting officers are obliged to promise them a month's furlough, which I have been under the necessity of countenancing, by a general order, to encourage the men to reengage. My whole dependence must therefore be on troops from the Eastern States.

I was in hopes that experience would have taught us not to depend on the patriotism of our common men—they left both armies last year at very critical moments, as soon as the time for which they were engaged was expired—and that measures would have been taken in a more early day for inlisting troops. I urged it warmly in August, and pointed out a mode which would have succeeded in a very great measure, before the periodical American distemper took place. As soon as the first cold is felt, we are seized with the home-sickness, and it increases with the severity of the weather.

Although our chest is far from being well replenished, yet I doubt not we shall be able to discharge the bounties due for such troops as may come to this department. I have already given warrants for very considerable sums to the Colonels of the Massachusetts and New-Hampshire regiments. If you think it necessary to have the money, I will, whenever you request it, issue a warrant for the bounty of one regiment, and if more can be spared, it shall be sent.

I am, sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Hon. Jon'n Trumbull, Esq., &c.

---

J. TRUMBULL, JUN., TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, 19th December, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Yours per Mr. Babcock, came to hand last evening. The passing from here to Tyconderoga is so exceeding difficult, (it being between ice and water,) that Babcock is determined to return without attempting that part of his route. I shall forward the letter to Major Sedgwick as soon as possible.

I fear also for the recruiting our Army; and it seems General Howe is taking his opportunity, and pushing hard at this critical juncture. The Army must be recruited, or the cause (humanly speaking) is gone. What do the people in Jersey mean? It seems their spirit falls prostrate at the approach of danger. If the southern spirit does not maintain itself with dignity, Philadelphia must fall. I feel for the poor fellows who are now exposed to the inclemency of this season, with no other covering than the heavens. Recruiting, however, goes on very well here. Those officers in the Northern Army who knew their appointment on the new arrangement, and had recruiting orders, have been supplied with money here. This has been the case with all but Connecticut. That State, it seems, took no notice of their officers this way, and neither sent them appointments or orders, for which reason they could have no right to take money, and did not apply. Our chest begins to run low; it may, however, supply some yet, if the General gives orders.

At present there is no danger at Ty and Independence; nor will there be any till the lakes are taken with ice, which will not be, according to their common course, until the middle of February, and then oftentimes not to be trusted with loads till the latter end of that month. The enemy may think of coming over the ice. To me it is only a may be. We ought, however, by all means to provide against such an event. It seems the enemy are determined to push hard. The regiments who are now there are such whose times are the latest expired—some of them not till April. Before the expiration of their times it is hoped the new recruits may be there. If the enemy do not come over the ice, they cannot be there till May. Our reports from the Southern Army are various, but all seem bad enough. The last accounts that we credit leave General Howe, with seventeen thousand, at Trenton, and General Washington on the other shore of the Delaware, with too small a number of men, Philadelphia in consternation, the Army reinforcing and determined to stand. What shelter can they have? What can support them in this inclement season, without beds or covering? Providence is wise: it has its designs.

*

I wish the people would learn that wisdom, and suffer that instruction which God intends. If I could see this to be the case my tears would vanish; but we are as unteachable as the Jews of old; and until this temper is meliorized, our distresses will continue. They will increase, our help will be delayed. O that God would heal our sins and reconcile us to his pleasure!

I am, with all respect, honoured sir, your dutiful and affectionate son,

J. Trumbull, Jun.

P. S. In the appointment of Regimental Paymaster, I cannot do justice to merit without mentioning Mr. Jonathan Burrell, a young gentleman who sustains an excellent character for probity, integrity, and ability. He has been employed by my Assistant at Ty all the last season, and has approved himself to great acceptance. I wish he may be provided for. It will suit him to be in some regiment likely to serve in this department. He is nephew to Colonel Burrell, and has indeed filled his station.

Hon. Governour Trumbull.

---

THADDEUS BURR TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Fairfield, 19th December, 1776.

Sir: Agreeable to the directions given by your Honour and your Council of Safety, the Authority and Selectmen of this town met, and made choice of the bearer hereof, Mr. Isaac Burr, Lieutenant of the battery at Grover's Hill Point; and he now waits upon your Honour for his commission and directions. The Authority and Selectmen have encouraged the officers and men that this State will furnish them with fuel.

I am, with due respect, sir, your friend and humble servant,

Thaddeus Burr.

---

LIEUTENANT HURLBUT TO COLONEL PARSONS.

New-London, December 19th, 1776.

Sir: At your desire we have sent you a copy of the charter of our company, the most material rules and regulations come into by said company, and our proceedings relative to Captain Starr, viz:

At a General Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut, in New-England, held at Hartford, on the second Thursday of May, A. D. 1762:

Upon the Memorial of Gordon Saltonstall, of New-London, in the County of New-London, and others, inhabitants of the said town of New-London, representing said town of New-London as being much exposed to the enemy in the time of war; that for the attainment of military skill a number of the inhabitants of said town had voluntarily formed themselves into an Artillery Company; that the First and Second Companies in said town, out of which said Artillery Company is chiefly formed, are large enough for three companies, and to divide said companies by certain lines would not so fully promote military skill as the memorialists propose: Praying that said Artillery Company be made and established, according to the regulations and articles of agreement concluded upon by them and presented to this Assembly, into a separate and independent company:

It is enacted and ordered, That said Artillery Company be established, to be, and it is hereby made, a separate independent company, subjected to, and under the regulations of the Third Regiment, as the other companies are by law; and that said company during their continuance, according to the regulations and articles of agreement concluded by them as aforesaid, shall be, and they are hereby, exempted from doing duty in other companies to which they belonged before their inlistment into said Artillery Company, provided that said inlistment shall not at any time exceed sixty-four men, including officers; and that neither of said military companies be reduced by such inlistment into said Artillery Company to a less number than sixty-four men, exclusive of officers.

Copied by J. Hallam, Clerk.

A true copy. Examined by George Wyllys, Sec'y.

The most material articles, as follows:

That no person be admitted into said company but by the major part of the votes of said company. That said company have all officers proper and necessary for a Captain's company, and that the clerk be sworn according to law. That said company meet annually at such times and places as shall be hereafter agreed upon. That the first Monday in June, annually, be the day of election for officers, which officers shall continue for one year. That such other and further regulations as said company think proper to be added for the better attaining the aforesaid ends, shall be made by the vote of the major part of said company. Whereupon, in July, 1762, voted, that for the time to come no member of the company be dismissed from said company, unless he apply to the commissioned officers at the head of said company, and by a vote of the major part of said company.

Several unworthy members refusing to do duty in said company, and likewise refusing to apply for dismission, and poverty screening them from the fines and forfeitures, making it impossible to collect them, and not wanting the trouble of them, and that the Militia might take charge of them; and the former rules not giving us the power we wanted, we voted to come into the following regulation: "That for the future this company have a right to dismiss any person from being a member of said company by a vote of the majority of said company, and without their application."

We shall now proceed to state the matters relating to Captain Starr. You may remember, on the first appearance of the fleet, you sent Captain Starr orders to call his company together immediately, and in what order they were in, and hold themselves in readiness to oppose the enemy, if (as was then expected) they attempted to land, which in justice to Captain Starr we must say he complied with, and dismissed us to appear at a moment's warning, (most of us living in the street.) On a further alarm we appeared, as ordered, but Captain Starr being dilatory and backward in taking charge of his company, a few of us undertook to talk with him, when he declared his sentiments to be, what will be hereafter shown you. Whereupon the company was warned to appear a few days after to examine Captain Starr. When met, Captain Starr being called upon, declared publickly, what he before had done in private, viz: That he never would take up arms in support of independency; that at the time he was choosed, independency was not declared, or he would not have accepted the office; that he thought us aggrieved by the acts of Parliament, and would have fought in defence of our liberties. To give you an account of any more of his principles, and the long disputes they consequently led us into, would be needless. Whereupon the company, taking the matter into their consideration, were unanimously of opinion, that Captain Starr, by his late conduct and the confession of his principles this day, has made himself unworthy of being a member of said company; therefore voted, nemine contradicente, that Captain Starr be immediately dismissed from said company.

Now, as it has been hinted to us that there is a design on foot of disannulling our charter, we must beg, if that is the case, to have an opportunity of defending ourselves, as we think we have in no one instance forfeited it, and we think charters ought to be esteemed sacred unless forfeited by misconduct.

We are, sir, in behalf of the company, yours,

George B. Hurlbut, Lieutenant.
Silas Church, Jun., Ensign.

Per order: J. Hallam, Clerk.

Colonel Marsf'd Parsons.

---

Worcester, Massachusetts, December 19, 1776.

By a gentleman of distinction who passed through this town last evening, we have the following articles of intelligence, viz:

That the Alfred man-of-war, with the sloop Providence, sailed from Rhode-Island, 2d December, on a private expedition. She took a valuable merchant ship from Liverpool, and a fine transport laden with clothing for Canada, off Louisbourg; she took also a snow laden with fish off Cape North, and was then parted from the Providence in a light gale of wind; the Alfred then proceeded off Canso, and burnt a large transport with provisions that had got aground in that harbour; she then proceeded off Louisbourg, and took three ships that were then under convoy of the Flora frigate; she also took a ship of ten guns from England for Halifax. She now proceeded, with her prizes under convoy, to the westward, and being chased by a large ship on the east side of St. George's Bank, she sent her prizes ahead, and on the 9th December got clear of the enemy by carrying sail in a severe gale of wind, and arrived safe in Nantasket Road on the 16th December, having on board no more than two days' provision. She brought in one hundred and fifty prisoners, and carried out only one hundred and forty men when she left Rhode-Island. Among the prisoners are the Chief Justice of the Province of Canada, a Lieutenant of the Thirty-Third Regiment, and a Lieutenant of the Navy.

In the transport above-mentioned, bound for Canada, were taken six thousand suits of clothes, with a great variety of other articles well adapted to the demands of the American Army.

---

NATHANIEL CARTER TO MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR.

Newburyport, December 19, 1776.

SIR: Yours of 3d came to hand 6th instant. The furs requested were the same day inspected by a person provided by Messrs. Jackson, Tracy & Tracy, and delivered them, with a bill at the prices you proposed, viz: what they gave for parcels they bought in Boston, copy of which will be delivered you by my son, the bearer. The amount being £145 11*s.* 8*d.*, you'll please to pay him, as I have directed him to pay it to the State Treasurer. It's probable it may in that way be easily negotiated.

This compliance was greatly repugnant to my views and interest, but your request in its connections has irresistible considerations that could not be rejected.

I have fully noticed that you are now well convinced of my strong attachment to my country in its present dispute.

I am your humble servant,

NATH. CARTER.

Hon. J. Warren, President of the Board of War.

---

Newburyport, Massachusetts, December 19, 1776.

The truth of the following extraordinary affair may be relied on, viz:

Captain Eda, with seventy men, who, about two months since, left St. John's in order to take Fort Cumberland, seven days after his departure, took a scouting party of twelve men from the fort, who have some time since arrived in this place. Five days after taking the aforesaid party, as they were lying in ambush near the fort, they discovered a frigate and a sloop, both which went up as far as the fort, and the frigate, leaving the sloop behind, departed. About forty-eight hours after, in the night, seventeen of Captain Eda's men determined to take the sloop; they accordingly went and boarded her. A Sergeant on board, who was made acquainted with the affair by the watch, ordered them to fire; but upon being told by Captain Eda's men, if they did they should all be put to the sword, they thought proper to desist, and accordingly resigned themselves and vessel (the cargo of which was valued at Halifax at five thousand pounds sterling) into the hands of the brave Americans. The next morning, the Captain of the aforesaid sloop, a Doctor and Chaplain, (not knowing what had happened,) came on board, and, in a short time after, fifteen men in a yawl, in order to unload the vessel, then seven in a two-mast boat, all which are taken proper care of, and are, together with the sloop, which is laden with beef, pork, flour, peas, candles, blankets, iron, steel, nails, &c., &c., &c., brought into a safe port.

It is supposed that by this time Captain Eda, with the remainder of his men, is in possession of Fort Cumberland.

---

MESHECH WEARE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

State of New-Hampshire, Exeter, December 19, 1776.

SIR: I received your letter of the 13th instant, and laid the same before our General Assembly at their first meeting this day; in consequence of which, a Committee is appointed to repair immediately to Providence, and there to act in conjunction with the Committees from the other New-England States, on such matters as may be by them thought necessary for the defence of your State.

I am, sir, with all due respect, your humble servant,

M. WEARE, President.

Governour Cooke.

ENGLISH ORDER IN COUNCIL.

At the Court at St. James's, the 20th day of December, 1776: Present, the King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas his Majesty was graciously pleased, by his Royal Proclamation, bearing date the twenty-fifth day of October last, to promise and declare that the bounties of five pounds for every able seaman, and of two pounds ten shillings for every ordinary seaman fit for his Majesty's service, should be paid in the manner thereby directed, to every such able and ordinary seaman, not above the age of fifty, nor under the age of eighteen years, who should, on or before the thirty-first of December then following, enter themselves to serve in his Majesty's Royal Navy, either with the Captains or Lieutenants of his Majesty's ships, or the chief officers on board such tenders as should be employed for raising men for the service of the Royal Navy: And whereas his Majesty was likewise pleased, by his Royal Proclamation bearing date the eighth day of November last, to promise and declare that a reward of two pounds for every able, and thirty shillings for every ordinary seaman, should be paid in the manner thereby directed, to any person who should discover any seaman or seamen who might secrete themselves, that so such seaman or seamen should be taken for his Majesty's said service by any of his Majesty's sea officers employed for raising men on or before the said thirty-first day of this instant, December: And whereas the time limited by the said proclamations for payment of the said bounty and rewards is near expiring, and it being judged expedient for his Majesty's service that the said bounties and rewards should be continued to be paid for some time longer, his Majesty, with the advice of his Privy Council, doth therefore order, and it is hereby accordingly ordered, that the time limited for payment of the said bounties and rewards be prolonged and extended from the said thirty-first day of this instant, December, to the twenty-eighth day of February next inclusive. Whereof all persons concerned are to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

STEPH. COTTRELL.

---

SAMUEL CURWEN TO GEORGE RUSSELL.

Exeter, England, December 20, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have delayed answering you till this time, from an hourly expectation of hearing some important advices from New-York: but in this I have been hitherto mistaken, the season having too far advanced to expect any military achievements by the British forces, and the Americans, you know, have formed no active plan of operation by land, confining their views of activity to the depredatory naval department. As to a treaty, I am without the smallest hopes of its taking place at present; the Americans do not despair of maintaining their independence, and the Court, I am told, has not given up its view of laying America at its feet, for such is and has been the Court language, and the intention to force her to submit to the unconditional authority of Parliament; however, should General Washington be beaten out of his intrenchments, it would be but one advantage out of a score that must be gained to make them "lower their top-sails." The Americans are not without resources, whatever may be thought on that subject in England.

Among others, France and Spain are no idle lookers-on; resentment as well as political reasons influence them to keep the trammels on the neck of our Court, which shall effectually humble the pride of Great Britain, perhaps destroy her independence, or at best reduce her to a state of as little importance in the grand political balance as Portugal or Genoa now does; and that is the general opinion here, whatever may be the opinion elsewhere. As to the objects of the impolicy of our Court, we know from history that statesmen, to gain a present purpose, sometimes disregard the true interests and honour of the nation and all distant consequences. The King of Spain is England's avowed enemy; the Court owes this country a grudge for her success against her commerce and garrisons last war; nor does France love her better; and ever since her open opposition to the ambitious views of that Court in the beginning of Louis XIVth's reign, who aimed at universal empire, has looked on her rising greatness with a jealous, not to say envious eye. It is no proof of want of bravery in the Americans not to face the regulars; many good reasons may be assigned to justify their conduct; and though it be the ground of much reproach here, I see in it the effect of sound judgment—that little dependence can be placed on newly-raised troops is well known the world over. On account of the amazing expense with which Great Britain carries on a land war in America, unless she can command the troops of Europe and the wealth of the Indies, men and money must in a few campaigns be wanting. With regard to the insidious offers made to America, as the warm partisans against the Court call them, I pretend not to such acquaintance with Court measures to determine about it; if they be so, the greater is the pity. They may, however, if that should be the case, be taken in the snares laid for others; and if good be derived from evil, thanks to an over-ruling Providence, who sometimes makes itself subservient to the happiness of society. That more treasure must be consumed and more blood spilled before this impolitick, destructive, and fatal war is ended, will, I trust, not prove a melancholy truth.

The accounts of the burning of the city of New-York in the Gazette, are full, explicit, and intelligible; more than one fourth is destroyed, beginning at the fort and all along the Broadway, taking in the College, &c.; and that it was fired by some Northern man is undoubted. A Mr. Smith, son of a clergyman of Weymouth, in Massachusetts-Bay, whom and whose family I knew very well, was concerned, taken, and I believe executed on due proof.

I remain, truly yours, S. Curwen.

To Mr. George Russell, at Moseley Wake Green, near Birmingham.

---

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Frederick-Town, 20th December, 1776.

Gentlemen: Some time ago the Committee of this County formed James Wells, William Reggles, Henry Stevenson, Lucian Meredith, Henry Butler, Basil Dorsey, William Bresstedan, and David Moore's companies into a battalion, and recommended Upton Sheredine Colonel, David Steiner Lieutenant-Colonel, David Moore 1st Major, Ephraim Howard 2d Major, and Charles Warfield Quartermaster. It is said here that the recommendation was sent to the Council of Safety, and is lost. Afterwards, as it is said, and on the countenance of some of the Committee, and after a very general agreement on time and place, and two or three weeks intervening, (most of the officers and some of the men, though from what I understand not a majority of the privates,) met and voted for Field Officers to be recommended, who were recommended according to the vote: James Wells Colonel, David Moore Lieutenant-Colonel, Ephraim Howard 1st Major, Joseph Wells 2d Major, and Henry Stevenson Quartermaster. This recommendation was forwarded to Mr. Sheredine, in the time of the last Convention, but he says on receiving a letter from Captain Moore, who was present and did not vote, suggesting the election was not fair, he did not get any order for the commissions. I see neither set of Field Officers will entirely please the battalion, and yet if Field Officers are not appointed to that battalion, I fear little may be expected from it. I wish, therefore, commissions were immediately sent me. William Winchester is First Lieutenant of James Wells's company. Ephraim Howard is First and Upton Sheredine Second Lieutenants, of David Moore's company. Charles Stevenson is First Lieutenant of Henry Stevenson's company. David Steiner is an infirm man, and though enrolled, never musters, so that there can be no use in appointing him a Field Officer.

I am told that Field Officers were some time ago recommended for the upper battalion of all, Lemuel Barnett, Colonel. The rest I either did not hear, or have forgot, but I understand the commissions have not come up. If the recommendation is before you and not very exceptionable, I would wish the commissions were sent up. What few people may on any occasion be got from that quarter, will tell for so many at least.

23d.—I have had no opportunity of sending the above away. This afternoon the Committee received money from the Congress. None have yet marched, but are very busy in preparing. If you can possibly supply shoes, stockings, tents, or blankets, especially the last, it may save a good many poor fellows. If you can spare any, do hurry them to this place or Taney-Town, and advise us of it.

I took the freedom to mention my sentiment, that if General Beall's commission had not expired, it would not do to give him the command of the Militia. The prejudice is so strong against him, that many of the officers say they will not go under him. As I hear this sentiment so general I think it my duty to mention it to you. I wish to be ascertained whether I am to go or not. I am heartily willing to exert myself in the military line, if you think it may possibly gain to the service.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

Th. Johnson, Jun.

The honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

---

BENJAMIN RUSH TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Philadelphia, December 20, 1776.

My dear Sir: An officer, (a German by birth,) who has served in Russia and Hanover several campaigns, called upon me a few hours ago, and after producing certificates, &c., that he now holds a Captain's commission under the Empress of Russia, gave me the following information in confidence. He says that he is personally acquainted with many of the Hessian officers and privates now in Howe's Army; that as they serve for pay only, he thinks the bounty, pay, and clothing offered by Congress, so much above what they now enjoy, that if they were properly tendered to them they would serve us with more cheerfulness than the King of Great Britain. He offers to go in person into Howe's Army, at the risk of his life, and is sanguine enough to think he could immediately bring off two hundred recruits with him. He demands Continental money only to pay the bounties; if he fails, he will return the money; he very justly objected to taking gold or silver, as it might be useful to them in Howe's camp. I submit these hints to your consideration. I am bound to inform you, that the Captain (who, from his certificates, is a Baron) appears very modest, and possesses the manners and address of a gentleman. He added, in the course of our conversation, that we had many warm friends in Russia, and that a majority of that nation expressed a dislike at the thoughts of being employed to fight against us. He thinks there is no probability of any troops being procured from that quarter next summer. If you think the above scheme practicable, please mention it in Congress. I am at a loss what to advise in the affair; at any rate, communicate your opinion, or the determination of Congress, to Mr. Philip Bochm, in Philadelphia, who will communicate it to the Baron. If he is encouraged, he will wait upon Congress, and receive his instructions from them.

We are much blamed by the Whigs, and ridiculed by the Tories, for leaving Philadelphia so suddenly. All the back Counties near Philadelphia are in motion. Several hundreds of the Militia join General Washington daily; I refer you to Mr. Samuel Purviance for particulars. I have a thousand things to say to you. Vigour, firmness, and decisive measures, are more necessary than ever. Dispute less, and do more, in Congress, or we are undone. Compliments to your brother, and the worthy members of the weekly club. I am on my way to Bristol, being summoned to attend the Philadelphia Militia for a few weeks.

Yours sincerely,

Benjamin Rush.

P. S. I need not suggest the necessity of secrecy, if the Baron's scheme is adopted.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 24.]

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 20th, 1776.

Sir: The Council of Safety is under an absolute necessity of expending large sums of money daily, or of totally deserting the publick cause. The demand of the Militia now arriving in considerable numbers; the recruiting service, which goes on successfully; the purchasing of clothing for the troops, and many other unavoidable expenses, arising from the exigencies of our affairs, have nearly exhausted our Treasury, and we have no resource but a loan from Congress. We therefore most earnestly entreat you to apply to that honourable body for two hundred thousand dollars, to be immediately transmitted to us by the bearer, Captain Casdrop, who we send to conduct them up. We are informed by Mr. Eswick, Wagonmaster, that several Continental wagons are at Baltimore. We therefore request you will please to order one of them for the purpose of conveying the money, and afford Captain Casdrop a guard of men to protect it.

By order of Council. I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your obedient servant,

THOS. WHARTON, Jun., President.

The sick of the Continental Army has greatly increased the business and the necessity of money, which this Board complains of.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

---

ADDRESS OF MEETING OF SUFFERINGS OF THE QUAKERS.

To our Friends and Brethren in religious profession, in these and the adjacent Provinces.

DEARLY BELOVED FRIENDS AND BRETHREN: Our minds being renewedly impressed with a fervent religious concern for your spiritual welfare, and preservation in the love and fellowship of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, by the constrainings of his love, we are engaged to salute you in this time of deep exercise, affliction, and difficulty; earnestly desiring that we may, by steady circumspection and care in every part of our conduct and conversation, evidence that under the close trials which are and may be permitted to attend us, our faith and reliance is fixed on Him alone for protection and deliverance, remembering His gracious promise to his faithful followers, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."—(Matt. xxviii, 20.)

And "as it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings," (Heb. ii, 10.) let us not be dismayed, if we are now led in the same path.

As we keep in the Lord's power and peaceable truth, which is over all, and therein seek the good of all, neither outward sufferings, persecutions, nor any outward thing that is below, will hinder or break our heavenly fellowship in the light and spirit of Christ.—(G. Fox's Epistle, 1685.)

Thus we may, with Christian fortitude and firmness, withstand and refuse to submit to the arbitrary injunctions and ordinances of men, who assume to themselves the power of compelling others, either in person or by other assistance, to join in carrying on war, and in prescribing modes of determining concerning our religious principles, by imposing tests not warranted by the precepts of Christ, or the laws of the happy Constitution under which we and others long enjoyed tranquillity and peace.

We, therefore, in the aboundings of that love which wisheth the spiritual and temporal prosperity of all men, exhort, admonish, and caution, all who make religious profession with us, and especially our beloved youth, to stand fast in that liberty wherewith, through the manifold sufferings of our predecessors, we have been favoured, and steadily to bear our testimony against every attempt to deprive us of it.

And, dear friends, you who have known the truth, and the powerful operations thereof in your minds, adhere faithfully thereto, and by your good examples and stability, labour to strengthen the weak, confirm the wavering, and warn and caution the unwary against being beguiled by the snares of the adversaries of truth and righteousness. Let not the fear of suffering, either in person or property, prevail on any to join with or promote any work or preparation for war.

Our profession and principles are founded on that spirit which is contrary to, and will in time put an end to all wars, and bring in everlasting righteousness; and by our constantly abiding under the direction and instruction of that spirit, we may be endued with that "wisdom from above, which is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy."—(James iii, 17.) That this may be our happy experience is our fervent desire and prayer.

Signed, in and on behalf of the meeting for Sufferings held in Philadelphia, for Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, the 20th day of the 12th month, 1776.

JOHN PEMBERTON, Clerk.

---

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, December 20, 1776.

SIR: The pressing necessities of our troops induce the Council to send persons round the city of Philadelphia to demand blankets and stockings for their use, with authority to take them when refused, paying a reasonable price for the same. Should your Excellency approve of the measure, we would recommend it to you to send out detachments through the Counties of Bucks and Philadelphia, and take blankets, stockings, and such other necessaries as the inhabitants can spare, on the same terms. By these means many articles of immediate necessity may doubtless be procured in the neighbourhood of the Army, without distressing the inhabitants in the least.

The Militia comes in very fast, and the Council find it difficult to find them in arms. We would be glad to know whether there are any at camp which they can be furnished with.

We have the pleasure to inform your Excellency that a sloop is arrived at Chester, with upwards of nine hundred stand of arms, and a large quantity of blankets and other woolens, on account of Congress. We shall apply to the Committee of Congress in this city to have the clothing forwarded to Head-Quarters immediately.

At the request of Congress for a number of wagons to remove the publick stores, and at a time when the inhabitants of the city were distressed for the want of means to remove their families, this Board gave a general invitation for wagons to come in from the country; in consequence whereof many more attend at present than can be immediately employed. Your Excellency will be pleased to let us know whether wagons are wanted for the use of the Army at present, and what number, that so many may be retained as are necessary, and the rest discharged.

By order of the Council. I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

OWEN BIDDLE, Chairman.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Camp above Trenton Falls, December 20th, 1776.

SIR: I have waited with much impatience to know the determinations of Congress on the propositions made some time in October last, for augmenting our corps of Artillery and establishing a corps of Engineers. The time is now come when the first cannot be delayed without the greatest injury to the safety of these States, and therefore, under the resolution of Congress, bearing date the 12th instant, at the repeated instance of Colonel Knox, and by the pressing advice of all the General Officers now here, I have ventured to order three battalions of Artillery to be immediately recruited. These are two less than Colonel Knox recommends, as you will see by his plan enclosed; but then this scheme comprehends all the United States, whereas some of the States have a corps already established, and these three battalions are indispensably necessary for the operations in this quarter, including the Northern Department.

The pay of our Artillerists bearing no proportion with that in the English or French service, the murmurings and dissatisfaction thereby occasioned, and the absolute impossibility, as I am told, of getting them upon the old terms, and the unavoidable necessity of obtaining them at all events, have induced me (also by advice) to promise officers and men that their pay should be augmented twenty-five per cent., or that their engagements shall become null and void. This may appear to Congress premature and unwarrantable; but, sir, if they view our situation in the light it strikes their officers, they will be convinced of the utility of the measure, and that the execution could not be delayed till after their meeting at Baltimore. In short, the present exigency of our affairs will not admit of delay, either in council or the field; for well convinced I am, that if the enemy go into quarters at all, it will be for a short season; but I rather think the design of General Howe is to possess himself of Philadelphia this winter if possible, and in truth, I do not see what is to prevent him, as ten days more will put an end to the existence of our Army. That one great point is to keep us as much harassed as possible, with a view to injure the recruiting service, and hinder a collection of stores and other necessaries for the next campaign, I am as clear in as I am of my existence. If, therefore, we have to provide in this short interval, and make these great and arduous preparations, every matter that in its nature is self-evident is to be referred to Congress, at the distance of one hundred and thirty or forty miles, so much time must necessarily elapse as to defeat the end in view.

It may be said that this is an application for powers that are too dangerous to be entrusted. I can only add, that desperate diseases require desperate remedies; and with truth declare, that I have no lust after power, but wish with as much fervency as any man upon this wide-extended Continent for an opportunity of turning the sword into a ploughshare; but my feelings as an officer and a man have been such as to force me to say, that no person ever had a greater choice of difficulties to contend with than I have. It is needless to add, that short inlistments, and a mistaken dependence upon Militia, have been the origin of all our misfortunes, and the great accumulation of our debt.

We find, sir, that the enemy are daily gathering strength from the disaffected. This strength, like a snow-ball by rolling, will increase, unless some means can be devised to check effectually the progress of the enemy's arms. Militia may possibly do it for a little while; but in a little while also, the Militia of those States which have been frequently called upon, will not turn out at all; or if they do, it will be with so much reluctance and sloth as to amount to the same thing. Instance New-Jersey; witness Pennsylvania. Could any thing but the river Delaware have saved Philadelphia? Can any thing (the exigency of the case, indeed, may justify it) be more destructive to the recruiting service than giving ten dollars bounty for six weeks' service of the Militia, who come in, you cannot tell how, go, you cannot tell when, and act, you cannot tell where, consume your provisions, exhaust your stores, and leave you at last at a critical moment?

These, sir, are the men I am to depend upon ten days hence; this is the basis on which your cause will and must forever depend, till you get a large standing army sufficient of itself to oppose the enemy. I therefore beg leave to give it as my humble opinion, the eighty-eight battalions are by no means equal to the opposition you are to make, and that a moment's time is not to be lost in raising a greater number, not less, in my opinion, and the opinion of my officers, than one hundred and ten. It may be urged, that it will be found difficult enough to complete the first number. This may be true, and yet the officers of one hundred and ten battalions will recruit many more men than those of eighty-eight. In my judgment, this is not a time to stand upon expense; our funds are [not] the only objects of consideration. The State of New-York have added one (I wish they had made it two) battalions to their quota. If any good officers offer to raise men upon Continental pay and establishment in this quarter, I shall encourage them to do so, and regiment them when they have done it. If Congress disapprove of the proceeding, they will please to signify it, as I mean it for the best.

It may be thought I am going a good deal out of the line of my duty to adopt these measures, or to advise thus freely. A character to lose, an estate to forfeit, the inestimable blessing of liberty at stake, and a life devoted, must be my excuse.

I have heard nothing of the Light-Horse from Virginia, nor the regiment from the Eastern Shore. I wish to know what troops are to act in the different departments, and to have those from the southward designed for this place ordered on as fast as they shall be raised. The route should be pointed out by which they are to march; assistant Commissaries and Quartermasters upon the communication to supply their wants; the first or second officer of each battalion to forward them, and the other to come on, receive, and form them at their place of destination. Unless this is immediately set about, the campaign, if it should be closed, will be opened in the spring, before we have any men in the field. Every exertion should be used to procure tents. A Clothier-General should be appointed without loss of time for supplying the Army with every article in that way; he should be a man of business and abilities. A Commissary of Prisoners must be appointed to attend the Army; for want of an officer of this kind, the exchange of prisoners has been conducted in a most shameful and injurious manner. We have had them from all quarters pushed into our camps at the most critical junctures, and without the least previous notice. We have had them traveling through the different States, in all directions, by certificates from Committees, without any kind of control; and have had instances of some going into the enemy's camp without my privity or knowledge, after passing in the manner before mentioned. There may be other officers necessary, which I don't recollect at this time, and which, when thought of, must be provided; for this, sir, you may rely on, that the commanding officer, under the present establishment, is obliged to attend to the business of so many different departments, as to render it impossible to conduct that of his own with the attention necessary; than which nothing can be more injurious.

In a former letter I intimated my opinion of the necessity of having a Brigadier for every three regiments, and a Major-General to every three brigades, at most. I think no time is to be lost in making the appointments, that the arrangements may be consequent. This will not only aid the recruiting service, but will be the readiest means of forming and disciplining the Army afterwards, which in the short time we have to do it is of amazing consequence. I have laboured, ever since I have been in the service, to discourage all kinds of local attachments and distinctions of country, denominating the whole by the greater name of American; but I found it impossible to overcome prejudices; and under the new establishment, I conceive it best to stir up an emulation; in order to do which, would it not be better for each State to furnish, though not to appoint, their own Brigadiers? This, if known to be part of the establishment, might prevent a good deal of contention and jealousy; and would, I believe, be the means of promotions going forward with more satisfaction, and quiet the higher officers.

Whilst I am speaking of promotions, I cannot help giving it as my opinion, that, if Congress thinks proper to confirm what I have done with respect to the corps of Artillery, that Colonel Knox, at present at the head of that department, (but who, without promotion, will resign,) ought to be appointed to the command of it, with the rank and pay of Brigadier. I have also to mention, that for want of some establishment in the department of Engineers, agreeable to the plan laid before Congress in October last, Colonel Putnam, who was at the head of it, has quitted, and taken a regiment in the State of Massachusetts. I know of no other man tolerably well qualified for the conducting of that business. None of the French gentlemen, whom I have seen with appointments in that way, appear to me to know any thing of the matter. There is one in Philadelphia, who, I am told, is clever; but him I have never seen. I must also once more beg leave to mention to Congress the expediency of letting promotions be in a regimental line. The want of this has already driven some of the best officers that were in your Army, out of the service. From repeated and strict inquiry, I am convinced you can adopt no mode of promotion that will be better received, or that will give more general satisfaction. I wish, therefore, to have it announced.

The casting of cannon is a matter that ought not to be one moment delayed; and, therefore, I shall send Colonel Knox to put this in a train, as also to have travelling-carriages and shot provided. Elaboratories to be established, one in Hartford, and another in York. Magazines of provisions should also be laid in. These I shall fix with the Commissary. As our great loss last year proceeded from a want of teams, I shall direct the Quartermaster-General to furnish a certain number to each regiment to answer the common purposes thereof, that the Army may be enabled to remove from place to place differently from what we have done, or could do, this campaign. Ammunition carts, and proper carts for intrenching tools, should also be provided; and I shall direct about them accordingly. Above all, a store of small-arms should be provided, or men will be of little use. The consumption and waste of these, this year, have been great; Militia, Flying-Camp men, &c., coming in without, were obliged to be furnished, or become useless. Many of these threw their arms away, some lost them, whilst others deserted, and took them away. In a word, although I used every precaution to preserve them, the loss has been great; and this will forever be the case, in such a mixed and irregular army as ours has been.

If no part of the troops already embarked at New-York has appeared in Virginia, their destination doubtless must be to some other quarter; and that State must, I should think, be freed from any invasion, if General Howe can be effectually opposed in this. I therefore enclose a memorandum, given me by Brigadier Stephen, of Virginia, which Congress will please to adopt in the whole, in part, or reject, as may be consistent with their plans and intelligence.

That division of the Army late under the command of General Lee, now General Sullivan, is just upon the point of joining us. A strange kind of fatality has attended it. They had orders on the 17th of November to join, now more than a month. General Gates, with four Eastern regiments, are also near at hand; three others from those States were coming on, by his order, by the way of Peekskill, and had joined General Heath, whom I had ordered on with Parsons's brigade, to join me, leaving Clinton's brigade, and some Militia that were at forts Montgomery and Constitution, to guard those important passes of the Highlands. But the Convention of the State of New-York, seeming to be much alarmed at Heath's coming away, a fleet appearing off New-London, and some part of the enemy's troops retiring towards Brunswick, induced me to countermand the order for the march of Parsons's brigade, and to direct the three regiments from Ticonderoga to halt at Morristown, in Jersey, (where I understand about eight hundred Militia had collected,) in order to inspirit the inhabitants, and, as far as possible, cover that part of the country. I shall send General Maxwell this day to take the command of them, and if to be done, to harass and annoy the enemy in their quarters, and cut off their convoys. The care and vigilance which were used in securing the boats on this river has hitherto baffled every attempt of the enemy to cross; but, from concurring reports and appearances, they are waiting for ice to afford them a passage.

Since writing the foregoing, I have received a letter from Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, of which the enclosed is a copy. Previous to this, and immediately upon the first intelligence obtained of a fleet's going through the Sound, I despatched orders to Generals Spencer and Arnold to proceed without the least delay to the eastward. The first, I presume, is gone; the latter, not getting my letter till he came to a place called Easton, was, by advice of General Gates, who also met my letter at the same place, induced to come on hither before he proceeded to the eastward. Most of our Brigadiers are laid up. Not one has come on with the division under General Sullivan, but are left sick at different places on the road.

By accounts from the eastward, a large body of men had assembled in Rhode-Island from the States of Massachusetts and Connecticut. I presume (but I have no advice of it) that the Militia ordered from the first to rendezvous at Danbury, six thousand in number, under the command of Major-General Lincoln, for supplying the place of the disbanded men of that State in the Continental Army, will now be ordered to Rhode-Island. In speaking of General Lincoln, I should not do him justice were I not to add, that he is a gentleman well worthy of notice in the military line. He commanded the Militia from Massachusetts last summer, or fall rather, and much to my satisfaction, having proved himself, on all occasions, an active, spirited, sensible man. I do not know whether it is his wish to remain in the military line, or whether, if he should, any thing under the rank he now holds in the State he comes from would satisfy him. How far an appointment of this kind might offend the Continental Brigadiers, I cannot undertake to say; many there are over whom he ought not to be placed, but I know of no way to discriminate. Brigadier Read, of New-Hampshire, does not, I presume, mean to continue in service. He ought not, as I am told, by the severity of the small-pox, he is become both blind and deaf.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

P. S. Generals Gates and Sullivan have this instant come in. By them I learn that few or no men are recruited out of the regiments coming on with them. There is very little reason to expect that these regiments will be prevailed upon to continue after their term of service expires. If Militia then do not come in, the consequences are but too evident.

A Plan for the establishment of a Continental Artillery, Magazines, Laboratories, &c.

In the modern mode of carrying on a war, there is nothing which contributes more to make an army victorious than a well-regulated and well-disciplined Artillery, provided with a sufficiency of cannon and stores. The battles which have lately been fought in Europe have, generally, been with cannon; and that army which has had the most numerous and best-appointed artillery has commonly been victorious.

The experience of this campaign shows how much the enemy depend upon the superiority of their artillery. They scarcely or ever detach a single regiment without two or three field pieces. The regulations of their artillery are founded upon the most convincing experience of their utility, and we shall have no reason to blush by imitating them in those particulars.

Considering the exigencies of an active and extensive campaign, and the common accidents of war, the establishment here proposed will not be superiour, if equal, to the service. The genius, industry, and care requisite in the preparation of all kinds of military stores, and the management of cannon, render it necessary that the best men should be employed in this service; and as the generally detached state of the artillery subjects them to much greater expense than if they were together, their pay ought to be twenty-five per cent. more than the marching regiments. In the British and French service it is double.

It will be necessary to have five Battalions; each Battalion to consist of one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, and twelve Companies; each Company one Captain, one Captain-Lieutenant, four Lieutenants, six Sergeants, six Corporals, six Gunners, six Bombardiers, and twenty-eight Matrosses.

That after the appointment of the officers, they be permitted to recruit in any of the United States of America.

One Commissary of Military Stores, and as many Deputy Commissaries and Conductors as the nature of the service may require, and the Commander-in-Chief thinks necessary.

That a company of Artificers be with the Artillery in the field, for various contingent services.

It will be necessary to have magazines and laboratories, for the reception and preparation of military stores of every species, formed at Hartford, in Connecticut, and York, in Pennsylvania; and that to each laboratory, besides the persons that are to prepare the stores, there be a sufficient number of able artificers to make ammunition-wagons, tumbrils, spare carriages for cannon, &c., &c.

That each laboratory have a Director, whose rank and pay be equal to that of a Lieutenant-Colonel, and a Sub-Director, with the rank and pay of a Captain.

That two persons be employed to get cast, or otherwise procure, one hundred and fifty brass pieces of cannon, of such sizes as the commanding officer of Artillery shall direct, and the Commander-in-Chief approve.

That the persons appointed for this purpose be instructed to spare neither pains or expense in getting the cannon cast and mounted as soon as possible.

That the commanding officer of Artillery be empowered to form the magazines, laboratories, and artificers, immediately.

—

Plan of General Stephen.

The Second and Seventh Virginia Regiments, with all the convalescents from the other corps left in Virginia, and now fit for duty, to be immediately ordered to join the Army under his Excellency General Washington.

All recruits inlisted on the new establishment, to the eastward of the Blue Ridge, to join them at places most convenient, and march along with them to the Army. The whole to march by companies, for the better accommodation on the road.

The Quartermasters, Commissaries, and an officer of address, to march before, to provide quarters and provisions.

The new inlisted troops, in Fincastle, Bottetourt, Augusta, Hampshire, Dunmore, Frederick, and Berkeley, to march immediately by Bottetourt Court-House, Staunton, Woodsbury, Strasburg, Winchester, and Martinsburg, the nearest way to Lancaster, having provisions laid in for them at the different places above-mentioned.

The troops under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Nevil, except the company posted at the mouth of the Kanaway, and the Pennsylvania regiment, commanded by Colonel McRay, in Westmoreland, to march immediately by Ligonier, Bedford, and Carlisle, having provisions laid in for them at these places.

The new recruits of the seven companies to be raised in Youghyougawia, Monongalia, and Ohio, to be marched by Fort Cumberland, the nearest way to Lancaster. The Commissaries and men best acquainted with the country to lay in provisions for them at Speirs, Redstone, The Great Meadows, Great Crossing, and Fort Cumberland.

An officer, with two Light-Horse, to be forwarded over the mountains, with cash to purchase blankets, arms, and other necessaries, to facilitate the march, and with peremptory orders to make despatch.

In order to prevent neglect of duty in the recruiting service, every recruiting officer to make a weekly report to the commander of the Militia of his County, in Virginia; and if the officer is found indolent, the Militia officer, by a late regulation, can appoint another who will be more active.

—

Providence, December 8th, 1776, past 10 o'clock, P. M.

SIR: It is with great concern I give you the disagreeable intelligence that the enemy, with a fleet consisting of seventy-eight ships-of-war and transports, entered the harbour of New-Port yesterday. We had about six hundred men upon Rhode-Island, who were obliged to evacuate it, with the loss of about fifteen or twenty heavy cannon, having taken off the ammunition and stores, and the greatest part of the stock. The enemy have full possession of the island. I am informed by General West and Lieutenant Barron, of the Providence, that they landed this morning, about eight o'clock, with eight thousand men, who marched in three divisions, one towards New-Port, the second towards Howland's Ferry, and the third to Bristol Ferry, where they arrived time enough to fire upon the boats that brought over our last men, but without doing damage. I have sent repeated expresses to the Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut. The forces of the former are upon the march, as I believe the latter are also.

In great haste, I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To his Excellency General Washington.

---

ORDERS TO CARPENTER WHARTON, ASSISTANT COMMISSARY-GENERAL.

SIR: It being represented to me that the millers, either from an unwillingness to part with their flour, or the difficulty of obtaining wheat from the farmers, do not employ their mills, by which means the Army under my command is like to suffer for want of bread; I do hereby authorize and instruct you to inquire into the state of this matter, with full powers, if it should be found that the default is in the miller, to seize the mill and grain, and employ it for the use of the publick; and if it arises from any defect in the farmer, to take his grain for the publick service; in either case paying the full value of such flour or wheat at the mill where it is manufactured.

Given under my hand at Head-Quarters, in Bucks County, this 20th day of December, 1776.

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Chatham, 20 December, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I was honoured with your favour of the 18th. It came very seasonable. I was happy to find you and the other General Officers considered it advisable to detain Colonel Vose's corps. It was a measure absolutely necessary to prop the drooping spirits of the Militia. This moment Colonel Vose received General Washington's orders of the 18th, to tarry in this State, which has relieved me from many embarrassments. The enclosed is the last intelligence we have of the state of the enemy. Whenever the service will permit your advancing to Morris-Town, it will be of great importance in protecting this distressed State. As this is to accompany a letter to you, which we suppose to be from General Washington, and forwarded by express, time will only permit me to add, that I am, with great respect, your very humble servant,

ALEX. McDOUGALL.

To Major-General Heath, Pyramus.

—

Intelligence by JOHN HALSTEAD, from ELIZABETH-TOWN.

John Halstead left Elizabeth-Town this morning about eight o'clock. Says there is no troops in Elizabeth-Town but Waldeckers, the same that has been there for two weeks past. Says the drums beat this morning, about daybreak, and he understood they were to have marched; but that they did not, and the reason why, as he understood, was the badness of the weather. Knows not which way they were to march, but it was said they were to have a little march out o' town; that he thinks six or seven hundred British troops went through town the day before yesterday, near twelve o'clock, towards New-Ark, and that they have not as yet returned.

Chatham, 20th December, 1776.

---

CAPTAINS OF COLONEL MAXWELL'S REGIMENT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The Captains of the late Colonel Maxwell's regiment, in behalf of their men, have thought it necessary to lay before your Excellency the charge brought against them of cartouch-boxes, cross-belts, tomahawks, haver-sacks, priming-wires and brushes, canteens, gauntlines, camp-kettles, and Canada caps. The men have been taught to believe that they would not have to pay for those things enumerated. General Gates, while at Ticonderoga, gave them assurances that they would not; since which they think themselves exempted from the payment. We hope your Excellency will consider it. This charge, if permitted to stand, will retard the present service, and injure our characters. Relying on the justness of the case, and the impartiality with which justice is administered where you preside, are in full assurances that our request will be complied with.

If the hardships these men have gone through would be any argument for the remitting these things mentioned, we would have no doubt of their being excluded. We will freely submit it to your Excellency and General Gates; and are your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servants,

H. BREARLY, Captain,
In behalf of the whole.

December 20th, 1776.

SIR: I am fully of opinion that the above requests of the Captains is very reasonable, both from the promise of General Gates, and the extraordinary campaign they have undergone.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

WM. MAXWELL, Brigadier-General.

---

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 20th December, 1776.

I have the honour to enclose an extract of a letter from Lieutenant-General Clinton, containing advice of his being in possession of Rhode-Island, without any loss to his Majesty's troops. The season may be found too far advanced for him to proceed to Providence, but, if practicable, I am confident the attempt will be made. The advantages to be derived from this acquisition are nevertheless very important.

In Jersey, upon the approach of the van of Lord Cornwallis's corps to Brunswick, by a forced march on the 1st instant, the enemy went off most precipitately to Princetown; and had they not prevented the passage of the Raritan, by breaking a part of Brunswick bridge, so great was the confusion among them, that their Army must inevitably have been cut to pieces.

My first design, extending no further than to get and keep possession of East-Jersey, Lord Cornwallis had orders not to advance beyond Brunswick, which occasioned him to discontinue his pursuit; but finding the advantages that might be gained by pushing on to the Delaware, and the possibility of getting to Philadelphia, the communication leading to Brunswick was reinforced, and on the 6th I joined his Lordship with the Fourth Brigade of British, under the command of Major-General Grant. On the 7th Lord Cornwallis's corps, the Guards excepted, who were left at Bruns- wick, marched to Princetown, which the enemy had quitted on the same day. This corps marched in two divisions on the 8th: the first advancing to Trenton, reached the Delaware soon after the enemy's rear guard had crossed. Their main Army having passed the preceding day and night, took post on the other side of the river.

Lord Cornwallis, with the rear division, halted at Maidenhead, six miles from Trenton, and marched at one o'clock next morning to Corriel's Ferry, thirteen miles higher up the Delaware, in some expectation of finding boats there, and in the neighbourhood, sufficient to pass the river; but in this he was disappointed, the enemy having taken the precaution to destroy, or to secure on the south side, all the boats that could possibly be employed for that purpose.

The passage of the Delaware being thus rendered impracticable, his Lordship took post at Pennington, in which place and Trenton the two divisions remained until the 14th, when the weather having become too severe to keep the field, and the winter cantonments being arranged, the troops marched from both places to their respective stations. The chain, I own, is rather too extensive, but I was induced to occupy Burlington to cover the County of Monmouth, in which there are many loyal inhabitants; and trusting to the almost general submission of the County to the southward of this chain, and to the strength of the corps placed in the advanced posts, I conclude the troops will be in perfect security. Lord Cornwallis having desired to return to Britain, the command in Jersey is given to Major-General Grant, in whose approved good conduct I have the greatest confidence.

I cannot too much commend Lord Cornwallis's good services during this campaign; and particularly the ability and conduct he displayed in the pursuit of the enemy from Fort Lee to Trenton, a distance exceeding eighty miles, in which he was well supported by the ardour of his corps, who cheerfully quitted their tents and heavy baggage, as impediments to their march.

By pressing the Rebels so close they had not time to destroy the country, as they intended, or to remove their stores; by which a large quantity of provisions and plenty of forage have been secured.

During Lord Cornwallis's stay at Pennington, a patrol of thirty Dragoons from the Sixteenth Regiment was sent out to gain intelligence of a corps under the command of General Lee, reported to be in Morris County, on their way to cross the Delaware at Alexandria. Lieutenant-Colonel Harcourt desired the direction of this detachment, and learning, as he proceeded, the situation of this corps, consisting of two thousand men, and of General Lee's Head-Quarters, he contrived, by infinite address and gallantry, to get to his house undiscovered by the guard, surrounded it, and overcoming all their resistance, made the General a prisoner. Being confident this gallant action will not escape his Majesty's gracious attention, it is needless for me to recommend Lieutenant-Colonel Harcourt to the King's notice upon this occasion.

I must also mention the signal services of Sir William Erskine, in his department of Quartermaster-General, whose indefatigable zeal has eminently contributed to the success of this campaign; nor must I omit Major Maitland, of the corps of Marines, who has the command of the Second Battalion of Light-Infantry, in which he has distinguished himself much to his honour.

The time of service for which most of the enemy's troops were engaged being expired, their present strength, from a review of the latest intelligence received, is about eight thousand on the south side of the Delaware and in Philadelphia, five hundred Militia embodied in Morris County, New-Jersey, and about three thousand at Peek's Kill, North-Castle, and the smaller posts in this Province.

Major-General Robertson, who served the campaign by his Majesty's permission, will return to Britain by the earliest opportunity.

---

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN, DATED NEW-YORK, 20TH DECEMBER, 1776.

In my separate letter by the Tamer, No. 32, I mentioned my ideas for the several operations in the course of the ensuing campaign, and proposed a defensive corps in Jersey, for the early part of the year; but the opinions of people being much changed in Pennsylvania, and their minds in general, from the late progress of the Army, disposed to peace, in which sentiment they would be confirmed by our getting possession of Philadelphia, I am from this consideration fully persuaded the principal Army should act offensively on that side, where the enemy's chief strength will certainly be collected.

By this change, the offensive plan towards Boston must be deferred until the proposed reinforcements arrive from Europe, that there may be a corps to act defensively upon the lower part of Hudson's river, to cover Jersey on that side, as well as to facilitate, in some degree, the approach of the Army from Canada.

The arrangement I would humbly propose for the execution of this plan is, that only two thousand men should remain at Rhode-Island, with a proper number of ships; four thousand men on York Island and posts adjacent, and three thousand men on Hudson's river; which will leave about ten thousand men for Pennsylvania, including, on a rough computation, that the extent of our strength at the opening of the campaign will not exceed nineteen thousand men.

But as those operations, perhaps of the last importance to the nation, may depend upon the exigencies of the moment, I request your Lordship to point out any general plans that may be thought most advisable, both with respect to the present strength of this Army and on the event of reinforcements, remarking the periods of time in which these troops may be expected. I would further propose, that every augmentation of troops should come to this port in the first instance, from whence they can be readily disposed of as may be found requisite.

We must not look for the Northern Army to reach Albany before the middle of September. Of course the subsequent operations of that corps will depend upon the state of things at the time.

Clothing, tents, and every species of camp equipage, will be wanted for the Hessian troops and regiment of Waldeck.

The enclosed return will show the number of men wanting to complete these corps, and if two hundred were added to the Hessian quota, and thirty to that of Waldeck, I think the casualties of the winter may reasonably be computed to amount to that number.

The Seventh and Twenty-Sixth Regiments being mostly exchanged, and the season not admitting of their going to Canada before the spring, I beg to have his Majesty's commands for the disposal of those battalions.

I cannot close this letter without making mention of the good services rendered in the course of the campaign by Cortland Skinner, Esq., Attorney-General in the Jerseys, who has been indefatigable, and of infinite service, since the Army entered those Provinces; I therefore humbly recommend him as a gentleman meriting the Royal favour.

---

JONATHAN HALLET TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Peekskill, December 20, 1776.

Yesterday I saw Mr. Peter Benedict, who was appointed First Lieutenant under me. He informs me that he continues in the service. He is much obliged to the honourable Convention for their appointment; but his circumstances are such that he can by no means serve. I should be very glad if I could have an officer appointed in his stead, as I labour under great disadvantages in my recruiting, by not having my complement of officers, and being very lame at present myself.

I am, your very humble servant,

JONATHAN HALLET.

To the honourable Convention, Fishkill.

---

COLONEL SWARTWOUT TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Constitution, December 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Whereas the limited time we engaged in the service will expire by the last day of this month, which is nigh at hand, except we are relieved or stay longer than our times this garrison will be left vacant; but in all probability you have provided a relief, to relieve us at that day; but on the contrary, if you have not, it would be best to let me know per first opportunity in what manner to act. It is very reasonable to think that the greatest part of the men will be very anxious to get home when their time expires; notwithstanding, believe, with the other officers, might prevail with a sufficient number to garrison this fort till a proper relief might be procured of the Continental troops. But if you have already a sufficient number of Continental troops, will be saving money by sending them, as they are under pay. Should be loth to leave this garrison with my regiment till I heard from you, gentlemen, as there are many things here which will not admit of leaving without a guard, such as cannon, ammunition, &c.

Captain Bratt's and Captain Balding's companies of Rangers arrived here the other day, from Albany. Say they were sent here by the Committee of that place, and their instructions are to come here to this fort and stay till the first of January, which will be just the time we have to stay. In my opinion, they are of no service here for the present, nor would they, if they should be ordered to guard this fort this winter, for I ordered them to furnish their proportion of guards, upon which the two Captains came to me and told me their men was not listed to mount guard, but were willing to turn out their men for fatigue; upon which I have kept them in getting of firewood, together with our men.

We have had no boats from New-Windsor these two days, to be loaded with stone, I suppose by reason of the severity of the weather. All the timber handy here for rafts we have cut and sent up. Here is still a great plenty of pine timber, in a swamp, on this island, which might be got out with sleighs in the winter, when the ice is hard, to be ready for rafting in the spring.

I am, gentlemen, with esteem, your very humble servant,

JACOBUS SWARTWOUT, Colonel.

To the honourable Convention at Fishkill.

---

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO COLONEL DUBOIS.

Fishkill Landing, December 20, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have been these three days past at Fishkill, where I thought to have had the pleasure of seeing you, but was disappointed. I would have been glad to have seen the arrangement of your regiment, but as it was not made out properly, I could not. The members of the Committee of Arrangement showed me part of it, wherein I noticed one John McClaghry appointed your Quartermaster. He is a good young man, and a good scholar; but as he is unacquainted with the business, I recommend him for an Ensign, and Nehemiah Carpenter, who has served this last year a Quartermaster in my regiment, to be your Quartermaster. He is well-deserving of it. I have likewise recommended Andrew Harkness for an Ensign in your brigade. He is a good clerk and a lively young man.

If there be a vacancy for Captain Increase Childs and Ensign Ponduson, of my regiment, I would be glad they were appointed, if you see it in your way. I make no doubt you will mention them, and believe they would answer well.

Samuel Lewis, who is Sergeant-Major in my regiment, I would recommend for an Ensign, if there should be a vacancy, either in your regiment or any other.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To Colonel Lewis Dubois.

---

CAPTAIN ROSEKRANS TO COLONEL DUBOIS.

Fishkill, December 20, 1776.

COLONEL DUBOIS: I was yesterday at Congress, when I was informed that I had choice either to be in your regiment or Colonel Livingston's; which in choice do choose to be in yours; but, however, am now in company with Lieutenant Lee, who informs me that he has an offer of a Captain in your regiment, with the proviso I do not accept the berth; if I do, that he must continue as a Lieutenant, which I think need not be the case, for if I am appointed in your regiment, there must be a vacancy in Livingston's, which I think can be procured for Lieutenant Lee, with your assistance. However, if not, I shall not be the means of being detrimental to Lee. Shall take it as a particular favour if you would assist Lee in getting the commission, as I think him highly worthy of the berth; and likewise, I expect there will be a vacancy for an Ensign in my company, and shall be very happy if you could see it in your way to appoint Henry Swartwout, who is now my Ensign, and worthy of the berth.

I am, and remain, sir, your real friend and most humble servant,

JAS. ROSEKRANS.

Colonel Duboys.

N. B. Captain Rosekrans showed me the above letters, and I recommend the same.

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

---

RESOLUTION OF NEW-YORK CONVENTION REVIVING COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Friday morning, December 20th, 1776.

The Convention met. Present: General Ten Broeck President.

Resolved, That the last Committee of Safety be revived in the same words, with this addition, "That it continue until further orders, and meet in the recess of Convention and transact business."

A Copy. JOHN MCKESSON.

---

PAROLE OF MILES SHERBROOKE.

Dutchess County, ss.

I, Miles Sherbrooke, of the city of New-York, Merchant, and now, by leave of the Convention of the State of New-York, about to repair to the said city, do swear upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that I will not give or convey any verbal or written intelligence whatsoever, in any wise respecting the controversy now subsisting between Great Britain and the United States of North-America, to any person or persons whatsoever, until leave for that purpose by the Convention or future Legislature of this State unto me be given.

MILES SHERBROOKE.

Sworn of the 20th day of December, 1776, before me,

ABM. TEN BROECK, Pres't.

—

I, Miles Sherbrooke, do promise, upon my parole of honour as a gentleman, that I will return from the city of New-York to the town of Middletown, in the State of Connecticut, on or before the last day of May, 1777, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention or future Legislature of the State of New-York, and that I will there abide the further orders of such Convention or Legislature; and that I will not in any wise aid, abet, advise, or assist, any person or persons acting under any authority derived from the King and Parliament of Great Britain in any act, matter, or thing whatever, against the said State of New-York, or the United States of America.

MILES SHERBROOKE.

—

Fishkill, Dutchess County:

I, Alexander Wallace, of the city of New-York. Merchant, and now, by leave of the Convention of the State of New-York, about to repair to the city of New-York, do swear upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that I will not give or convey any verbal or written intelligence whatsoever, in any wise respecting the controversy now subsisting between Great Britain and the United States of North-America, to any person or persons whatsoever, until leave for that purpose by the Convention or future Legislature of this State unto me be given.

ALEXANDER WALLACE.

Sworn the 20th day of December, 1776, before me,

ABM. TEN BROECK, Pres't.

—

I, Alexander Wallace, do promise, upon my parole of honour as a gentleman, that I will return from the city of New-York to the town of Middletown, in the State of Connecticut, on or before the last day of May, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven, unless otherwise ordered by the Convention or future Legislature of the State of New-York, and that I will there abide the further order of said Convention or future Legislature; and that I will not in any wise aid, abet, advise, or assist, any person or persons acting under any authority derived from the King or Parliament of Great Britain, in any act, matter, or thing whatsoever, against the said State of New-York, or the United States of America.

ALEXANDER WALLACE.

ROBERT YATES TO COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Claverack, December 20th, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In the arrangement of officers lately made in the Massachusetts-Bay upon the new establishment, I have been informed that they have excluded all those who do not actually reside within the limits of that State. In consequence whereof, John McKinster and Thomas McKinster, the first a Captain and the other his First Lieutenant, who have served two campaigns with a company raised in this County, in Colonel Patterson's regiment, are omitted, because they reside in Claverack, upon the eastern bounds of this State. I have understood they behaved (particularly at the Cedars, where the Captain was wounded) with distinguished bravery. Would it not, therefore, be politick to take them into the service of the State? The advantages resulting from such a measure I conceive are evident. You would attach to the interest of this State two useful officers, and at the same time they would in their neighbourhood raise a company of men who otherwise will probably inlist among their eastern brethren; without, however, knowing whether you have room on the arrangement for their admission, in case you should concur with me in sentiment, I thought it my duty to lay these facts before you.

One Joshua Whitney, from Noble-Town, has requested me to recommend him for a Lieutenancy. I have but a slight acquaintance with him. I must, therefore, (in case you should be inclined to put him on,) refer you to Colonel Van Rensselaer, under whom he has served.

I am, with the greatest esteem, your humble servant,

ROBT. YATES.

To Robert Harper, Esq., Deputy Chairman of the Committee of Arrangement, Fishkill.

---

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, Middletown, December 20th, 1776—

Present: His Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, Titus Hosmer, Benjamin Huntington, William Hillhouse, Thomas Seymour, Esquires.

Voted, That Colonel Philips, Mr. Jauncey, and his two sons, viz: James and William Jauncey, Mr. Miller, Mr. Walton, and Mr. Hugh Wallace, in Middletown, and Messrs. Reed and Palmer, in Windham, all from the State of New-York, be permitted to return home upon their giving their parole not to give any intelligence from us to the enemy; not to take up arms; not to do or say any thing against the United States of America; and to return back to this State upon being requested or called for, and remain under the direction of the Governour and Council of Safety.

Voted, That Mr. Munro, who was sent here by the Albany Committee, be permitted to return to his family, upon his giving his written parole not to give any intelligence, nor do or say any thing against the United States of America, and that he will return to this State again by the first day of March next, and remain under the directions of the Governour and Council of Safety.

---

M. MALMEDY TO GENERAL LEE.

[Translation.]

Providence, December 20th, 1776.

SIR: On my arrival hither, I delivered your letter to the Governour, and, without soliciting any promotion, offered him my services. The Congress of the State have immediately granted me the rank of Colonel, which gave me great satisfaction. Two hours after, having more attentively perused your letter, and being determined by another circumstance, they conferred upon me the rank of Brigadier-General, which I acknowledged was yet unmerited.

Is there any reason to fear, sir, that the promotion, which is an act of mere favour, contains but the seeds of my disgrace, and that those gentlemen, if the Continental Congress should hesitate, have prepared for me but an humiliating situation, at the very time they intended to load me with their favours? Is there a probability of my not keeping that rank? If I do my duty, it would seem somewhat unjust. That promotion was entirely unsolicited by me.

Fondly believing the Congress will attend to those observations, I entreat you will point them out to that body in a striking manner.

I am, with respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

MALMEDY.

To his Excellency General Lee, at the Army of the United States of America, in the Jerseys or elsewhere.

---

Providence, 10th December, 1776.

MY GENERAL: I could not arrive till the 6th, owing to the difficulty I met with in some places to procure horses. As soon as I arrived, I sent the letter with which you intrusted me, to the Governour. Accept, sir, my warmest thanks for the recommendation with which you have honoured me, and be assured I shall exert my utmost endeavours to render myself worthy the opinion and goodness you have expressed in my behalf.

The Governour desired me to view the lines of circumvallation, which were opened on the right bank of the river by Mr. Crow. They are drawn on that side quite around the town. They appeared to me to be at too great a distance from the town, and too extensive; and from the difficulty of defending them, on a sudden emergency, and by reason of the great number of men requisite for their defence, you know, my General, how dangerous such lines are. They have heretofore been found useless in many places, although traced out with great judgment. I proposed to the gentlemen to draw others within them. I perceived they were satisfied with the utility of this, and agreed to it. I changed the defences, and brought the posts nearer; and possibly, my General, when they are finished, you will think them capable of being defended. They were desired by the people to quiet their fears. I asked last night for orders to see Holan's Ferry, which you particularly recommended to me. This morning I wait for instructions.

I cannot give you a true idea of the distribution and arrangement of the troops; they are not yet settled. I always view with pleasure the great number of beautiful towns, which every moment present themselves to view. I can never believe the enemy will be able to overrun this country, without great difficulty. You have doubtless an account of their numbers and positions.

You were pleased, my General, to request these gentlemen to give me the rank of a Colonel; which they immediately granted to me. It is very flattering to me to owe my promotion to you. The qualities you possess, and the deserved reputation which you enjoy, render this infinitely precious to me.

It is of great importance, my General, to me, to be commissioned by Congress, if you desired it, before the first of January, in order to be older in rank than a number of others. Permit me this morning, I beseech you, to beg the favour of you to make this demand for me as soon as possible. My acknowledgments for the favour shall equal the respect with which I am, my General, your most humble and most obedient servant,

MALMEDY.

---

Providence, 20th December, 1776.

MY GENERAL: I had in your orders on the 1st, that I should go to Holan's Ferry, which you particularly recommended to me. The gentlemen of the Committee imagined that Warrick Neck was more important, since the enemy are in Rhode-Island. I returned the same evening. I have traversed all near to the point of Connecticut, all the neck of Warrick. I cannot perceive in all that part the possibility of hindering the enemy from making a descent. The banks throughout are easy of access, and the vessels can come close to the land. There is, however, an advantageous situation for a camp upon the high ground, from whence we can hinder the enemy from forming, and withdrawing themselves from the fire of their cannon. It might serve as a camp of observation. On my return I gave a particular account of this matter.

You knew, my General, the situation of the town of Warwick. It is mere folly to attempt to defend it, in case the enemy makes a descent in its neighbourhood. I there found some works begun. I thought it my duty not to oppose the desire of the commandant. We have therefore continued and prolonged them, with some regularity, adapted to the ground. The same night I returned to Providence, and gave an account to the Governour of the difficulty of defending that town, and that the post ought to be evacuated. I have sent him an order of retreat for the detachment with the out-guards, and requested him to drive from Patuxet a great number of cattle and forage, which are on the neck. I cannot doubt but from its situation, that is the place where the enemy will make their descent, if they land. I think, my General, that after making efforts at Patexet, and all along the river, we ought to defend Providence, and there engage them. I presented to the Governour four reasons to support this determination. I believe the place where I am will, in a month, be out of danger of a coup de main. In that case, the General who shall command the forces, supporting his left and extending obliquely on the right, will cover Boston, and that Province; and I do not believe the enemy dare enter Connecticut, and by that means separate themselves from their vessels, which is their place of arms; nor are they so numerous as to render themselves masters of the river. I beg pardon, my General, for giving you this account of arrangements, especially in a country where you are much better acquainted with. Allow me the indulgence granted to a scholar, who makes essays on your pieces, and whose feeble observations you can easily rectify.

The County of Patexet is, and will always be, interesting. I pray you to assemble some troops there, and to order a number of fascines, which can readily be found at hand, where occasion requires.

The Governour appears to approve my opinion, and has requested me to continue to give it on all military matters. The little disposition I have seen in this town, relative to troops, in this time of perplexity and danger, when all ought to be in a state of activity, has determined me to present a regular distribution of regiments, and an order of service. I thought it necessary to send them accompanied with letters, and some sentiments in honour of this country. I here enclose you a copy of my first letter, and the order of service.

The gentlemen here are polite. I cannot but think myself honoured with the testimonies they have given of satisfaction on my conduct, and I am particularly flattered with the rank they have given me. But, my General, I do not see that they have done the smallest thing in the matter I proposed to them, nor even in those things which ought not to be deferred a moment. Be pleased to put a favourable interpretation on what I have the honour to say, and believe I give this detail only from the desire I have to see proper dispositions made for the defence of this country. Notwithstanding the proximity of the enemies, and the ease with which they may land, I do not see above six or seven hundred men at Warwick, one thousand or eleven hundred here, four hundred citizens at the most ready to take arms, and only one company of Artillery. The Colonels of the regiments do not know where to rendezvous in case of alarm. I see no posts established; I see no artillery in motion, nor any preparations for that purpose; no exercise at cannon, notwithstanding the great want of instruction. In the mean time the enemy are ten thousand. They do not make any general movement; but they can in one tide embark in flat-bottomed boats and land at Warwick-Neck, and arrive at Providence in four hours. That town is worth such an attempt at this moment. It is very important on account of the great quantity of merchandise and ships in its port. I cannot account for the conduct of the English Generals, if they have good intelligence. The people here give themselves up to a lethargick idea, because they are not numerous, and because they serve as a defensive post to Rhode-Island. The Americans ought to fear the illusion; for these two months past it has been very destructive. General Lincoln arrived here the evening before last. I hope he will put things in order. The next day, at ten o'clock, he set out for Bristol and Holan's Ferry, without my knowing of his journey. I am sensibly affected with the disappointment, not having yet a lodging or a horse. I waited on the Committee. My interpreter informed them of my sensibility of not knowing of the departure of General Lincoln, and that I had not yet taken a view of what I proposed. They answered with the same politeness as usual, that he desired me to see the place, and proposed to make the tour with me, and that he desired Mr. Vernum to inform me of this. However, I was not informed as to what I proposed; they were absorbed in business. It is a misfortune in a Government, when military affairs are in the hands of the legislative authority. These are related, but ought in their particular execution, to be independent of each other. I have been well satisfied as to a lodging, but I cannot be supplied with horses. I thought it my duty, sir, to give you a particular account. You have sent me with letters of business and confidence. You have perhaps informed Congress, and have possibly a reliance on my zeal and good will. I will be very unfortunate if in the execution of what I am charged with, I find them useless; and this cannot but appear by the actual situation of things. I fear I shall not hereafter be thought worthy of any confidence, and I am particularly jealous of losing yours and that of the Congress. I beg you will inform Congress of the true situation of affairs. If, my General, I have expressed too great a degree of sensibility in this portrait, I know the goodness with which you have honoured me, and I beg you will correct any thing amiss, or which may displease. "Honi soit qui mal y pense."

I cannot too often repeat, my General, the civilities I have received from these gentlemen. I owe them all my services, and they are but a small mark of my gratitude. I do not know how I shall be employed here. I beg you to recollect the expressions in your letter and your pleasure when you sent me here. I have not yet had a word of orders. To-day Mr. Lincoln is arrived. Mr. Varnum is a Brigadier-General. I have rank of him in this Province. I should be very glad to know the line of service to which I ought particularly to be destined. I am no engineer by profession. I have some knowledge and some little abilities. I will finish the open lines with diligence, because they are useful, and because there is but one man here who knows that kind of work. I shall apply myself to every thing that depends upon me in this country; but I beg you will not confine me to that profession; I can execute another with more advantage. Be so kind, my General, as to consult Congress, and inform me what is your and their intention respecting my services, and inform the Governour, to whom you have recommended me here. In whatever manner you dispose of me, I will not neglect any of the duties which my condition, emulation, and honour prescribe. These are the pretensions, these the reasons to which I resign myself.

I should go to-day to Bristol and Holan's Ferry, but it snows to such a degree that there is no traveling. I should be glad to be under your immediate orders, if there is any operations this spring. I am told half of the fleet is in Virginia; perhaps you are there. I am sorry to be at such a distance from you.

I am, &c.

---

My General: Upon my arrival here, I sent your letter to the Governour, and offered them my services, without asking any rank. The Assembly of this Province immediately granted me that of Colonel, with which I was flattered and well satisfied. Two hours after, the Assembly having read your letter a second time more attentively, and being determined by some other circumstances, gave me the rank of Brigadier-General, which I acknowledge I have not yet deserved.

Ought I not to fear, my General, that this promotion, which is an act of favour, will be a kind of disgrace to me, and that these gentlemen, by loading me with favours, have only prepared me for humiliation, if the Continental Congress should hesitate? Is there not a probability of my not keeping this rank? If I do my duty, it would seem somewhat unjust. That promotion was entirely unsolicited by me. I hope the Congress will attend to these observations, and I beg you would set them in the strongest point of view.

I am, with respect, my General,

MALMEDY.

Providence, December 20th, 1776.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Boston, December 20, 1776.

SIR: The Council have received your favour of the 18th instant, and, agreeable to your request, have given orders to the Commissary-General of this State to supply Mr. Josiah Draper with two hundred and fifty pick-axes, two hundred and fifty iron shovels, fifty narrow axes, and twenty crowbars. They will be charged to the State of Rhode-Island, for the use of the troops in your State. We heartily wish that they may be so employed as, if possible, to drive the enemy from your State.

In the name and behalf of Council,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

---

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL LINCOLN.

Boston, December 20, 1776.

SIR: The Board have received your letter of 18th instant, and the intrenching tools are sent forward, and I am directed by the Council to inform you that it is their opinion, that it is of the greatest importance to the United States of America, that you should immediately proceed with the troops destined to reinforce the Army near New-York, to Danbury, in Connecticut, and order them to proceed from thence to such place as the commanding officer may direct.

To General Lincoln, Providence.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO NATHANIEL TRACY.

War Office, Boston, December 20th, 1776.

SIR: The Board have been made acquainted that you have a quantity of linen, &c., in your hands, and the reason they do not contract for the same is, Messrs. Livingston and Thornbull are sent from Congress to purchase all the linens, &c., which can be spared for the Army. Not doubting your publick spirit will induce your putting them as low as possible, the Board refer them to you, and are your most humble servants. By order of the Board,

S. P. SAVAGE, Pres't p. t.

Nathaniel Tracy, Esq.

---

MASSACHUSETTS BOARD OF WAR TO JAMES RUSSELL.

War Office, Boston, December 20th, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War having occasion for a quantity of pork for the service of this State, and being informed that it is highly probable you would contract to supply them with some, do now request to know from you whether you would undertake the same, and for what quantity and for what price per pound, or per barrel of two hundred and twenty pounds. Your answer as soon as possible will oblige us.

By order of the Board,

S. P. SAVAGE, Pres't p. t.

James Russell, Esq.

---

Boston, December 20, 1776.

Commodore Manly, in the Continental ship Hancock, of thirty-two guns, is come round to Newbury-Port.

Last Thursday arrived in town from the Continental camps at New-York, the Honourable Major-General Lincoln, who commanded the Militia of this State which were sent as a reinforcement for two months. His established good character as a civilian at the Board of Council, actuated Colonel Crafts to meet him a few miles out of town, accompanied by many of his officers on horseback, who escorted him into Congress street, in imitation of the Romans, there to join the supreme Senate of the State.

Last Sunday a number of prisoners (marines and sailors) arrived in town, from the interiour parts of this State and Connecticut, and on Monday set off for Marblehead, in order to be exchanged for a number of our men, who lately arrived in the cartel vessels there.

---

COMMITTEE OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS TO B. FRANKLIN, SILAS DEANE, AND ARTHUR LEE.

Baltimore, in Maryland, December 21, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: After expressing our hopes that this will find you all three safely fixed at Paris, we proceed with pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Deane's letter of the 1st October.

When we reflect on the character and views of the Court of Loudon, it ceases to be a wonder that the British Ambassador, and all other British agents, should employ every means that tended to prevent European Powers, but France more especially, from giving America aid in this war. Prospects of accommodation, it is well known, would effectually prevent foreign interference; and therefore, without one serious design of accommodating on any principles but the absolute submission of America, the delusive idea of conciliation has been industriously suggested on both sides the water, that, under cover of this dividing and aid-withholding prospect, the vast British force sent to America might have the fairest chance of succeeding. And this policy hath, in fact, done considerable injury to the United States, as we shall presently show by a just detail of this campaign, for it is not yet ended.

You know, gentlemen, that at the moment a potent land and marine force was preparing to be sent here, an act was passed for appointing Commissioners, who, too many expected, were to give peace to America. As, therefore, the war might be soon concluded, so were our military arrangements accommodated, and the troops taken into service the last spring, consisting of regular corps and bodies of Militia, were all engaged for short periods. With these the campaign began in various parts of North-America. Dr. Franklin is so well acquainted with the progress of the war in Canada previous to his departure, that we need only observe, the campaign has ended as favourably for us in that quarter as we could reasonably expect. The enemy having been able to pierce no further than Crown-Point, after a short stay and reconnoitring General Gates's Army at Ticonderoga, thought proper to recross the lake, and leave us in quiet possession of those passes. General Gates having left a proper force at Ticonderoga and on the communication, retired with the rest of his troops.

New-York and its neighbourhood, not being defensible by an army singly against a strong land and sea force acting in conjunction, was of necessity yielded to the enemy, after some contest, General Washington retiring, until the situation of the country above King's Bridge no longer enabled the enemy to receive aid from their ships. General Howe having stopped here, and General Carleton at Crown-Point, effectually disappointed the great object of joining the two armies. The latter, as we have said, returning to Canada, and the former retreating from the White-Plains towards New-York, gave us a favourable prospect of seeing a happy end put to this dangerous campaign. However, many causes have concurred in producing an unlucky reverse of fortune—the nature of the country, the uncommon fineness of the weather, even to this day, and, above all, the short inlistments, which gave the soldiery an opportunity of going home, tired as they were with the operations of an active summer.

When General Howe retreated from the White-Plains, he halted his whole Army on the North River, between Dobbs's Ferry and Kingsbridge, where he remained for some time. Having effected so little of the great business that brought him here, and the season allowing time for it, most men were of opinion that the next attempt would be to get possession of Philadelphia, by a forced march through the Jerseys, whilst a fleet should be sent up the Delaware to facilitate the enterprise. To guard against such a manœuvre, General Washington crossed the North River, with all the battalions that had been raised to the northward of it, leaving General Lee, with the Eastern troops, to guard the pass of the Highlands, on Hudson's River. In this situation of things, Mr. Howe made a sudden attack upon Fort Washington, with the greatest part of his Army, and carried it, with considerable loss. Here he made near three thousand of our men prisoners. By this event it became unnecessary longer to hold Fort Lee, (or Fort Constitution, as it was formerly called,) which is on the west side of North River, nearly opposite to Fort Washington. It had therefore been determined to abandon Fort Lee; but before the stores could be all removed, the enemy came suddenly upon it, and the garrison retreated, leaving some of their baggage and stores behind. About this time General Howe became possessed of a letter (by the agency of some wicked person, who contrived to get it from the express) written by General Washington to the Board of War, in which he had given an exact account when the time of service of all our battalions would expire, and his apprehensions that the men would not reinlist without first going home to see their families and friends. Possessed of this intelligence, the opportunity was carefully watched, and a vigourous impression actually made at the very crisis when our Army in the Jerseys was reduced to three thousand men, by the retiring of numbers and the sickness of others, and before Militia could, in this extensive country, be brought up to supply their places. The enemy marched rapidly on through the Jerseys, whilst our feeble Army was obliged to retreat from post to post, until it crossed the Delaware, at Trenton, where about two thousand five hundred Militia, from the city of Philadelphia, joined the General. Since General Howe's arrival on the borders of the Delaware, various manœuvres and stratagems have been practised to effect a passage over the river, but they have hitherto failed. General Washington's small Army is placed along the west side of Delaware, to within fourteen miles of Philadelphia, from above Coryell's Ferry, which, with the gondolas, one frigate of thirty-two guns, and other armed vessels in the river, above the chevaux-de-frise, cover the passage of it.

General Lee, who has crossed the North River with as many of the Eastern troops as could be spared from the defence of the Highlands, (either to join General Washington or to act on the enemy's rear, as occasions might point out,) was the other day surprised and made prisoner by a party of seventy Light-Horse, who found him in an house a few miles in rear of his Army, with his domesticks only. This loss, though great, will in some degree be repaired for the present by General Gates, who, we understand, has joined the Army commanded by General Lee, and who, we have reason to think, has by this time effected a junction of his force with that of General Washington.

As the Militia are marching from various quarters to reinforce the General, if the enemy do not quickly accomplish their wishes of possessing Philadelphia, we hope not only to save that city, but to see General Howe retreat as fast as he advanced through the Jerseys.

General Clinton, with a fleet in which it is said he carried eight thousand men, has gone from New-York, through the Sound, some suppose for Rhode-Island; but neither his destination or its consequences are yet certainly known to us.

Thus, gentlemen, we have given you a true detail of the progress and present state of our affairs, which, although not in so good a posture as they were two months ago, are by no means in so bad a way as the emissaries of the British Court will undoubtedly represent to them. If the great land and sea force with which we have been attacked be compared with the feeble state in which the commencement of this war found us, with respect to military stores of all kinds, soldiers' clothing, navy and regular force; and if the infinite art be considered, with which Great Britain hath endeavoured to prevent our getting these necessaries from foreign parts, which has in part prevailed, the wonder will rather be that our enemies have made so little progress, than that they have made so much.

All views of accommodation with Great Britain, but on principles of peace, as independent States, and in a manner perfectly consistent with the treaties our Commissioners may make with foreign States, being totally at an end since the declaration of independence and the embassy to the Court of France, Congress have directed the raising of ninety-four battalions of infantry with some cavalry. Thirteen frigates, from twenty-four to thirty-six guns, are already launched and fitting; and two ships-of-the-line, with five more frigates, are ordered to be put on the stocks. We hear the levies are going on well in the different States. Until the new Army is collected, the Militia must curb the enemy's progress.

The very considerable force that Great Britain has already in North-America, the possibility of recruiting it here within their own quarters by force and fraud together, added to the reinforcements that may be sent from Europe, and the difficulty of finding funds in the present depressed state of American commerce, all conspire to prove, incontestably, that if France desires to preclude the possibility of North-America being ever reunited with Great Britain, now is the favourable moment for establishing the glory, strength, and commercial greatness of the former kingdom, by the ruin of her ancient rival. A decided part now taken by the Court of Versailles, and a vigourous engagement in the war, in union with North-America, would with ease sacrifice the fleet and army of Great Britain, at this time chiefly collected about New-York. The inevitable consequence would be, the quick reduction of the British Islands in the West-Indies, already bared of defence by the removal of their troops to this Continent.

For reasons herein assigned, gentlemen, you will readily discern how all-important it is to the security of American independence, that France should enter the war as soon as may be; and how necessary it is, if it be possible, to procure from her the line of battle-ships you were desired in your instructions to obtain for us; the speedy arrival of which here, in the present state of things, might decide the contest at one stroke.

We shall pay proper attention to what Mr. Deane writes concerning Dr. Williamson and Mr. Hopkins, and we think the ill-treatment this country and Mr. Deane have received from these men, strongly suggest the necessity of invincible reserve with persons coming to France as Americans and friends to America, whom the most irrefragable proofs have not removed all doubt about.

The British recall of their Mediterranean passes is an object of great consequence, and may require much intercession with the Court of France to prevent the mischiefs that may be derived to American commerce therefrom; but this subject has been already touched upon in your instructions on the sixth article of the treaty proposed to be made with France. As all affairs relative to the conduct of commerce and remittances pass through another department, we beg leave to refer you to the Secret Committee, and Mr. Thomas Morris, their agent in France, for every information on those subjects.

The neighbourhood of Philadelphia having, by the enemy's movements, become the seat of war, it was adjudged that Congress should adjourn to this town, where the publick business may be attended with the undisturbed deliberation that its importance demands. The Congress was accordingly opened here on the 20th instant.

As it is more than probable that the conference with Lord Howe, on Staten-Island, may be misrepresented to the injury of these States, we do ourselves the pleasure to enclose you an authentick account of the whole business, which the possibility of Dr. Franklin's not arriving renders proper. This step was taken to unmask his Lordship, and evince to the world that he did not possess powers which, for the purposes of delusion and division, had been suggested.

Mr. Deane's proposition of loan is accepted by Congress, and they have desired two millions sterling be obtained if possible. The necessity of keeping up the credit of our paper currency, and the variety of important uses that may be made of this money, have induced Congress to go so far as six per cent.; but the interest is heavy, and it is hoped that you may be able to do the business on much easier terms. The resolves of Congress on this subject are enclosed, and your earliest attention to them is desired, that we may know as soon as possible the event of this application.

Another resolve enclosed will show you, that Congress approve of armed vessels being fitted out by you on Continental account, provided the Court of France dislike not the measure; and blank commissions for this purpose will be sent you by next opportunity. Private ships of war, or privateers, cannot be admitted where you are, because the securities necessary in such cases to prevent irregular practices, cannot be given by the owners and commanders of such privateers.

Another resolve of Congress, which we have the honour to enclose you, directs the conduct to be pursued with regard to Portugal.

We have nothing further to add at present, but to request that you will omit no good opportunity of informing us how you succeed in your mission; what events take place in Europe, by which these States may be affected; and that you contrive to send to us, in regular succession, some of the best London, French, and Dutch newspapers, with any valuable political publications that may concern North-America.

We have the honour to be, &c., with great respect and esteem, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servants,

B. Harrison, J. Witherspoon,
R. H. Lee, W. Hooper.

P. S. The American captures of British vessels at sea have not been less numerous or less valuable than before Dr. Franklin left us. The value of these captures have been estimated at two millions.

To B. Franklin, S. Deane, and A. Lee, at Paris.

GENERAL LEWIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburg, December 21st, 1776.

SIR: Intelligence from some of the members of the honourable Continental Congress to their correspondents at this place, informing of the near approach of the enemy to Philadelphia, has occasioned me to give the part of the Second Regiment that is raised, and those of the Seventh Regiment that are fit for duty, orders to hold themselves in readiness to march on the shortest notice. This step I thought necessary, respecting orders (as my wish is) to join General Washington, if the honourable Congress should think our assistance at this time necessary. I send herewith a return of the above-mentioned regiments. I have some days since sent off one hundred and fifty men, belonging to the regiments from this State, now under the immediate command of General Washington. There are likewise upwards of one hundred of the Eighth Regiment at Fredericksburg, who have orders to march to the northward as soon as they can be provided with some necessary clothing.

I am, honourable sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General.

Honourable John Hancock, President of Continental Congress.

---

CHARLES CARROLL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Mount Clare, December 21st, 1776.

DEAR SIR: By direction of the Congress I send you the enclosed resolves. The last letters brings us a piece of intelligence that it may be material for you to know. One Mr. Bevan, a person that may be depended on, who was taken by Captain Hammond, informed Mr. Morris that Hammond told him they were now determined to put a total stop to our trade, and for that purpose six frigates were to be stationed off Georgia and the Carolinas; six off the Capes of Virginia, and six off Delaware. Their signals and their stations were fixed so as to form a complete line along the coast, and that they have determined to keep their stations during the whole winter. This I fancy it will be difficult for them to do; however, I thought it necessary the Board should know their plan.

I am, with most sincere respects to you all, dear sirs, your most humble servant,

CHARLES CARROLL.

To the Council of Safety of Maryland.

I have not as yet seen here any of your Delegates. Questions of the greatest magnitude every day agitated and resolves entered into, and this State without a representative or voice.

---

STEPHEN STEWARD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

December the 21st, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your order I have sent an anchor to Captain Martin, of six hundred and seventeen pounds. I have no anchor of eight hundred weight, which was the size he sent for. I have one of one thousand pounds. The anchor I now send him is full large enough for the brig. There is but one full Captain that now goes to sea that knows what weight anchor suits them without seeing the anchor. I detained the boat till the anchor was stocked, as there might be some difficulty in getting it stocked in Annapolis. You are now breaking into the materials I have provided for your little Navy, which I have spared no pains to get, and have got almost every kind for them. It don't appear to me that I am like to be rewarded for my trouble. Whenever you want ship, brig, schooner or sloop, bought for the use of the State, the commission is given to some body that perhaps don't merit the advantage more than myself. Since I have undertaken this business for you, I have been offered a commission from a neighbouring State, a commission to buy three ships, which would been to me at least one hundred and fifty pounds in my way. The whole reason my not accepting of this commission was, I was employed by the Council of Safety for the Province. You have employed three other yards to do your business in. Have any one of them turned you off on a single vessel but myself? I have built, rebuilt, rigged, fitted, and been in all the trouble for four fine vessels for you, without the assistance of a Captain's even provided men and provisions, and have the fifth and sixth vessel almost ready for you. I intend to Baltimore, next Tuesday, to attend Mr. Lux's rope-walk for cables and other cordage. I shall take a Province boat with me, the finest in this bay, to bring down materials with me. If you have any commands that way I shall call on you on Tuesday. Where am I to get guns for the galley? It is impossible to make the carriages without the guns.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

For the honourable Council of Safety.

---

CAPTAIN DEMS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, the 21st December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As I have not at present a First Lieutenant in my company, I would in the warmest terms recommend Mr. John McCabe, of Baltimore, to be by you appointed my First Lieutenant, as I know him to be an active good officer, and a man who has been exceedingly active in a military company in this town, and likewise know he has a good deal of interest, so as to enable him to assist me in raising the company. I therefore hope you will indulge me in this request.

By complying you will, honourable sirs, oblige your ready servant to command,

FRETRICK DEMS.

To the honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

---

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COMMITTEE OF FREDERICK, IN MARYLAND.

Baltimore, December 21st, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I was duly honoured with your favour of the 19th instant, which I immediately communicated to Congress, who highly approve your zeal and activity for the promotion of the American cause.

In consequence of your letter, the Congress passed the foregoing resolution, and by this opportunity I forward you the eighteen thousand dollars, which you will please to apply agreeable to the terms of the resolve, and will please also to transmit to General Washington a particular state of the payments to the several Militia.

In confidence that you will expedite the march of the Militia as early as possible, I add not, but that I am, with every sentiment of esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient, and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

Honourable Committee of Frederick, in Maryland.

---

ROBERT MORRIS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, December 21st, 1776.

SIR: Notwithstanding there are several British men-of-war cruising in our bay, the Continental sloop Independence, commanded by Lieutenant Robinson, has pushed through and got up here yesterday afternoon. There are on board eight hundred and fifty-six blankets, which were intended, with many others now expected in, for the use of the new inlistments; but the inclement weather and the severe duty the troops now under your command have to perform, induces me to think these blankets should be applied to their use. In this matter, however, you will please to judge and act as you see fit; for I shall send them to the camp for your orders so soon as the weather will permit them to be landed. There is also arrived in this sloop a quantity of cloths, which I shall put into the hands of Mr. Mease, Commissary, to have made up immediately. There are also nine hundred and nineteen muskets on board. These, I suppose, you do not want; and I will send them out of town, to the other stores, unless you signify a desire for any other application of them.

I have the pleasure to inform you that Mr. Deane, in his letter of the 30th September, received by this sloop, says he looks upon a French war as inevitable. He expects to furnish us with ample supplies for thirty thousand men, and a noble train of artillery, mortars, &c., so that, if you can but drive our enemies back to New-York for this winter, we may hope for much better things next spring than we have experienced of late.

I find my presence so necessary here in several departments, that I shall stay as long as I can with safety; but as I am possessed of publick papers that must never fall into the hands of the enemy, I should be glad of a line from you whenever you think it would be best for me to retire; and if you have any commands here, in which I can be serviceable, be assured of my ready attention. Your several despatches to Congress have passed through my hands, and I have informed them fully of such things as have come to my knowledge respecting publick matters. Poor Lee, I pity him exceedingly, and feel much for the publick loss in him. Should you hear any thing of the treatment he meets with, I should thank you or Mr. Tilghman for a line on that subject. I fear he will meet with insupportable insults, and if so, his situation must be worse than that of the damned. I have been told to-day that you are preparing to cross into the Jerseys. I hope it may be true, and promise myself joyful tidings from your expedition. You have my sincere prayers for success, as nothing would give me greater pleasure than to hear of such occurrences as your exalted merit deserves.

I have the honour to remain, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

To his Excellency General Washington.

—

Philadelphia, December 21st, 1776.

SIR: This attends the blankets mentioned in my letter of this date, and underneath is an account of the bales and their contents, with the wagoner's receipt.

I ever remain your Excellency's obedient servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

To his Excellency General Washington.

—

Invoice of Blankets.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1 to 5. | 5 | bales, containing 20 pieces, and each piece 22 blankets, - - - - - | make 440 |
| 22 to 26, | 5 | bales, containing - - - - - - - | 180 |
| 8, | 1 | do. containing - - - - - - - | 45 |
| 11, | 3 | do. containing - - - - - - - | 66 |
| 13, | 2 | do. containing - - - - - - - | 125 |
| | 16 | bales, containing in the whole - - | 856 |

Received, December 21st, 1776, of Willing, Morris, & Co., sixteen bales, marked and numbered as above, said to contain eight hundred and fifty-six blankets, which I promise to see delivered to the order of General Washington, having signed two receipts for the same.

HUGH PEDEN.

To his Excellency General Washington.

—

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read December 24, 1776.]

Philadelphia, December 21, 1776.

SIR: The express that carries you this letter has just called on me, saying that he came from the Convention of New-York. I thought it prudent to open the letter, and know whether the business it respected could be done here, or whether it must be sent forward; and finding it must go forward, and only detain him to make this apology, and to inform you that the sloop Independence, commanded by Lieutenant Robinson, (Captain Young being left behind sick,) pushed out from Chincoteague, where she first put in, and notwithstanding she was chased by six of the enemy's cruisers at our Capes, she got safe up here, and is now landing the cargo. I have determined to send eight hundred and fifty-six blankets that came in her, to General Washington, and have informed him they were imported for the use of the new recruits; but as the inclemency of the weather and the exceeding severe duty of the troops now with him entitles them to every comfort we can afford, I submit to him whether to make use of them for their use or not. The cloths I will deliver to Mr. Mease, with orders to have them made up fast as possible. Nine hundred and nineteen muskets shall be delivered to Mr. Commissary Towers, to wait the orders of General Washington, or of the Board of War, and I hope one or other of them will send orders soon as possible.

The Council of Safety want money, and have sent an express for a supply. I have borrowed sufficient for the Marine Department, although the disbursements are considerable. Captain Biddle will get more seamen than we expected. The Delaware is getting ready, and I have ordered the Fly, Captain Warner, down the bay, to watch the enemy's ships, and bring us word if they should quit that station. I have sent an express across the Jerseys to Captain Baldwin, of the Wasp, to cruise outside of them, to give notice to inward-bound ships; and have stationed the Hornet, Captain Nicholson, (who attempted to get out but could not,) in Christeen Creek, to act in conjunction with a large galley of this State, in defence of that creek, as there are many valuable stores up it. I shall get the sloop Independence hove down, and some little damage she received at Chincoteague repaired, and then send her also to watch the enemy's ships.

There are a large number of wagons in the city, and as I fear General Howe does not yet give up his plan of getting possession of it this winter, I will order a good part of the salt provisions now in the Commissary's care to be carried up to Lancaster, as we certainly ought to have inland magazines of provisions and of military stores; but I long to hear from you, that I may judge whether Congress approve of these things, which I have undertaken for the sake of serving my country.

Mr. Smith is not yet returned, and am very sorry for it, as I do think a good deal of money might have been borrowed by this time. I am very fearful that this bad weather will sicken the Associators and break up our campaign, whatever may be its effect on the enemy. There are some prisoners on board the enemy's ships at our Capes, that have wrote to me to procure their release. Amongst the rest Captain Morgan, of the Bermuda sloop, that carried Mr. Deane to France, who was returning here with despatches and some goods, and was unfortunately taken near Cape May. I will send a letter for Captain Hammond, of the Roebuck, open, to Henry Fisher, at Lewis-Town, to be sent off by a flag, in which I shall assure him that we have suffered great numbers of masters, mates, and men, belonging to merchant ships taken by our cruisers, to depart without thinking of detaining them for an exchange, and recommend his releasing these people, or he will oblige us to alter that part of our conduct. As this is strictly true in a number of instances that have come under my notice, I hope Congress will approve the design.

I am, with great regard and esteem, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

ROBT. MORRIS.

The Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

—

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE COMMISSIONERS IN FRANCE.

Philadelphia, 21st December, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am now the only member of Congress in this city, unless Mr. Walton, of Georgia, and Mr. Clymer, my colleague, still remain, which I am not sure of. I cannot pretend to give you a regular detail of our manifold misfortunes, because my books and papers are all gone into the country, as is my family. But these unfortunate events commenced with the loss of Fort Washington, by the reduction of which, the enemy made about two thousand seven hundred prisoners, and at this critical time, they, by treachery, bribery, or accident, intercepted some despatches from General Washington to Congress, also some of the General's private letters, particularly one to Mr. Rutledge, in which he had fully laid open the unfortunate situation he was then involved in, by the short inlistments of our Army; for the times of most of them expired on the 1st of December, and the rest on the 1st of January, when the whole army would leave him, as they had undergone great fatigue during the whole of the campaign; had suffered amazingly by sickness and the approach of winter, added to an appearance of much suffering for want of clothes.

All these things he stated fully, and the enemy became possessed of a most authentick account of his real situation. They determined to take advantage of it, and before General Washington had time to make any new arrangements at Fort Lee, on the west side of the North River, to which he had crossed, with about eight thousand men, a large body of troops landed above, and another below him, so that he was near being enclosed with a force vastly superiour. In this situation, he had nothing left for him, but to retire directly off the neck of land, on which that fort stands, leaving behind him considerable baggage and stores, with most of our large cannon and mortars. He retreated to Hackensack, and was there in hopes of making a stand, until the Militia of the country should come to his assistance, but the vigilance of the enemy did not give him time for this. They pursued, and he retreated all the way through the Jerseys to Trenton, and from thence they forced him across the Delaware, where he still remains, to oppose their passage across the river.

Lord Cornwallis commanded the British forces in the Jerseys, until they reached Brunswick, where General Howe joined them with reinforcements, and determined to make his way to this city, without further loss of time. You may be sure the Militia of New-Jersey and this State were called upon to turn out, and defend their country in this hour of distress. Alas, our internal enemies had, by various arts and means, frightened many, disaffected others, and caused a general languor to prevail over the minds of almost all men, not before actually engaged in the war. Many are also exceedingly disaffected with the constitutions formed for their respective States, so that from one cause or other, no Jersey Militia turned out to oppose the march of an enemy through the heart of their country; and it was with the utmost difficulty that the Associators of this city could be prevailed on to march against them. At length, however, it has been effected; they have been up with the General about two weeks, and the example is likely to produce its effect in the country, as they are now pretty generally on their march towards Trenton.

During General Washington's retreat through the Jerseys, he wrote for General Lee, who was left to command on the east side of the North River, with about ten to eleven thousand men, most of whose inlistments are now expired, or near it. He obeyed the summons, and brought with him about three thousand men; with whom he followed the enemy's rear, but was obliged to make slow marches, as his people were in great want of shoes, stockings, and other necessaries, which he was obliged to collect from the Tories in the neighbourhood of his route. After he had passed a place called Chatham, near Elizabethtown, he lodged at a farm house. Some treacherous villain gave notice to the enemy, and the General's ill fate, or some other cause I am not acquainted with, delayed him there, until near ten o'clock on Friday morning, his army having marched, and their rear about three miles from him, when he was surprised by about seventy Light-Horse, who made him prisoner, and bore him off in triumph. This is an event much to be lamented. I sincerely pity Lee, and feel for the loss my country sustains; his abilities had frequently been immensely useful; the want of them will be severely felt.

The command of this party devolved on General Sullivan, who continued his route, fell in with General Gates, with five hundred men, returning from the lakes, and both joined General Washington yesterday. This junction is what we have long impatiently wished for, but still I fear our force is not equal to the task before them, and unless that task is performed, Philadelphia, nay, I may say Pennsylvania, must fall. The task I mean, is to drive the enemy out of New-Jersey, for at present they occupy Brunswick, Princeton, Trenton, Pennytown, Bordenton, Burlington, Morristown, Mount Holly, and Haddonfield, having their main body about Princeton, and strong detachments in all the other places, it is supposed with a design of attacking this city, whenever they can cross the Delaware on the ice, for they have only been kept from it by our sending up the gondolas and bringing off or destroying all the boats along the Jersey shore.

You will think the enemy are now in a situation for us to attack their scattered parties, and cut them off. This we think too, and are preparing to do it, but it will be a work of extreme difficulty to get at them; they have excellent intelligence of all our motions; we can hardly come at any certainty about theirs, for Lord Howe and General Howe issued a proclamation on the 30th of November, offering pardon to all who should submit within sixty days, and subscribe a declaration, that they will not hereafter bear arms against the King's troops, nor encourage others to do it. This has had a wonderful effect, and all Jersey, or far the greater part of it, is supposed to have made their submission, and subscribed the declaration required; those who do so, of course become our most inveterate enemies; they have the means of conveying intelligence, and they avail themselves of it.

In this perplexing situation of things, the Congress were informed, this day week, that an advanced party of Hessians and Highlanders had taken possession of Burlington; that they were pushing for Cooper's Ferry, opposite the city, and it was thought had the means of crossing the river. There were no troops to oppose them; our whole force, both by land and water, was above; it was therefore deemed unsafe for Congress to remain here, and absolutely necessary that they should be in a place of safety, where they could deliberate coolly and freely without interruption, and last Saturday they adjourned to Baltimore, where they are now sitting. This city was, for ten days, the greatest scene of distress that you can conceive; every body but Quakers were removing their families and effects, and now it looks dismal and melancholy. The Quakers and their families pretty generally remain; the other inhabitants are principally sick soldiers, some few effective ones, under General Putnam, who is come here to throw up lines, and prepare for the defence of the place, if General Washington should be forced to retreat hither. You may be sure I have my full share of trouble on this occasion, but having got my family and books removed to a place of safety, my mind is more at ease, and my time is now given up to the publick, although I have many thousand pounds' worth of effects here, without any prospect of saving them.

We are told the British troops are kept from plunder; but the Hessians and other foreigners, looking upon that as the right of war, plunder wherever they go, from both Whigs and Tories, without distinction, and horrid devastations they have made on Long-Island, New-York Island, White-Plains, and New-Jersey, being the only parts they have yet set foot on. Should they get this fine city, they will be satiated, if the ruin of thousands of worthy citizens can satisfy their avarice.

This is not the only part of the Continent that now feels the weight of their resentment. General Clinton, with from three to six thousand men, has invaded Rhode-Island, and it is said has taken possession of it. Whether he will make any attempt on the main, during this severe, inclement season, I do not know, but if he does, I hope he may find cause to repent it.

I must add to this gloomy picture one circumstance, more distressing than all the rest, because it threatens instant and total ruin to the American cause, unless some radical cure is applied, and that speedily; I mean the depreciation of the Continental currency. The enormous pay of our Army, the immense expenses at which they are supplied with provisions, clothing, and other necessaries, and, in short, the extravagance that has prevailed in most departments of the publick service, have called forth prodigious emissions of paper money, both Continental and Colonial. Our internal enemies, who, alas! are numerous and rich, have always been undermining its value by various artifices, and now that our distresses are wrought to a pitch by the success and near approach of the enemy, they speak plainer, and many peremptorily refuse to take it at any rate. Those that do receive it, do it with fear and trembling; and you may judge of its value, even amongst those, when I tell you that £250 Continental money, or 666 2-3 dollars, is given for a bill of exchange of £100 sterling, sixteen dollars for a half-johannes, two paper dollars for one of silver, three dollars for a pair of shoes, twelve dollars for a hat, and so on; a common labourer asks two dollars a day for his work, and idles half his time.

All this amounts to real depreciation of the money. The war must be carried on at an expense proportioned to this value, which must inevitably call for immense emissions, and, of course, still further depreciations must ensue. This can only be prevented by borrowing in the money now in circulation. The attempt is made, and I hope will succeed by loan or lottery. The present troubles interrupt those measures here, and as yet I am not informed how they go on in other States, but something more is necessary; force must be inevitably employed, and I dread to see that day. We have already calamities sufficient for any country, and the measure will be full when one part of the American people is obliged to dragoon another, at the same time that they are opposing a most powerful external foe.

For my part, I see but two chances for relief; one is from you. If the Court of France open their eyes to their own interest, and think the commerce of North-America will compensate them for the expense and evil of a war with Britain, they may readily create a diversion, and afford us succours that will change the fate of affairs; but they must do it soon; our situation is critical, and does not admit of delay. I do not mean by this that instant submission must ensue if they do not directly afford us relief; but there is a great difference between the benefits they will derive from a commercial connection with this country, in full health and vigour, and what they can possibly expect, after it is exhausted by repeated efforts during the precarious process of a tedious war, during which its cities will be destroyed, the country ravaged, the inhabitants reduced in numbers, plundered of their property, and unable to reap the luxuriant produce of the finest soil in the world. Neither can they, after a tedious delay in negotiation, expect that vigorous assistance from us in prosecuting the war that they may be assured of if they join us in its infancy. If they join us generously in the day of our distress, without attempting undue advantages because we are so, they will find a grateful people to promote their future glory and interest with unabating zeal; and from my knowledge of the commerce of this country with Europe, I dare assert, that whatever European Power possesses the preëmption of it, must of consequence become the richest and most potent in Europe. But should time be lost in tedious negotiations, and succours be withheld, America must sue for peace from her oppressors.

*

Our people knew not the hardships and calamities of war when they so boldly dared Britain to arms. Every man was then a bold patriot, felt himself equal to the contest, and seemed to wish for an opportunity of evincing his prowess; but now, when we are fairly engaged—when death and ruin stare us in the face, and when nothing but the most intrepid courage can rescue us from contempt and disgrace, sorry am I to say it, many of those who were foremost in noise, shrink, coward-like, from the danger, and are begging pardon without striking a blow. This, however, is not general; but dejection of spirits is an epidemical disease, and unless some fortunate event or other gives a turn to the disorder, in time it may prevail throughout the community. No event would give that turn so soon as a declaration of war on the part of France against Great Britain; and I am sure if they lose this golden opportunity, they will never have such another.

You will doubtless be surprised that we have not made better progress with our Navy, because you are unacquainted with the many difficulties and causes of delay that have encountered us. The want of sea-coal for our anchor-smiths has been a great bar to our progress, the disappointment in our first attempts to cast cannon has been another, but above all, we have been hindered by the constant calling out of our Militia, in a manner that did not admit of the necessary tradesmen being exempted. You will wonder at this; it would be a long story to unfold the reasons, therefore suffice that it is so. Doctor Franklin can inform you of many particulars respecting the Flying-Camp; therefore, I shall give you the present state of our Navy, according to the best of my knowledge at this time.

The frigate in New-Hampshire is a very fine ship, completed in every particular, except the want of cannon, which was to have been cast in Rhode-Island, but the spirit of privateering has prevailed so eminently there, that they have sacrificed every other pursuit to it, both publick and private, as I am informed; and we have ordered the guns cast in Connecticut for that frigate to be sent to Portsmouth. As soon as they arrive, the Raleigh will be manned, and sail on a cruise.

At Boston they have also two fine frigates. The Boston, of twenty-four guns, I expect is at sea before this time, commanded by Captain McNeil, a very clever officer. The other is nearly ready, commanded by Captain Manly.

In Rhode-Island were built the two worst frigates, as I have been informed by those that have seen the whole. These two are completely fitted, and were partly manned when we last heard from them; so that I hope they are now at sea.

In Connecticut, the frigate is said to be a fine ship; but she cannot get to sea this winter for want of cordage and other stores.

In New-York, two very fine frigates are blocked up by the enemy, and hauled into Esopus Creek for safety.

At this place, we have four very fine ships. One of them, the Randolph, Captain Biddle, of twenty-six twelve-pounders, will, I hope, go to sea in company with this letter; another, the Delaware, Captain Alexander, is getting ready, and I hope will get out this winter. The other two want guns, anchors, and men.

At Baltimore, is a fine frigate, now only waiting for an anchor and men.

Besides these, we have in service, the Alfred, Columbus, and Reprisal, ships from sixteen to twenty-four guns, the brigantines Cabot, Camden, Andrew Doria, and Lexington, of twelve to sixteen guns; the sloops Providence, Hornet, Fly, Independence, Sachem; and schooners Wasp, Musquito, and Georgia Packet, all in actual service; and they have had great success in taking valuable prizes, as indeed have numbers of privateers from all parts of America. We have besides, two very fine row-galleys, built here, of ninety feet keel, but they are not yet rigged; and it has lately been determined by Congress to build some line-of-battle ships, and at all events to push forward and pay the utmost attention to an American Navy.

The greatest encouragement is given to seamen, which ought to be made known throughout Europe. Their pay in our Navy is eight dollars per month, with the best chance for prize money that men ever had, and liberty of discharges after every cruise, if they choose it. In the merchant service they now get from thirty to forty dollars per month; and this leads me to the state of our commerce.

In the Eastern States they are so intent on privateering that they mind little else. However, there is some exportation of produce from thence, and as to imports, they are the best supplied of any part of America, having been surprisingly successful in captures. New-York being in the hands of the enemy, we have nothing to say to it; and the produce of New-Jersey will be totally consumed by their army and ours. In this State, (Pennsylvania,) we had last season the worst crop of wheat ever known, both as to quantity and quality. This being our staple commodity, and stores prohibited, our merchants have been led to purchase much tobacco in Maryland and Virginia, and their ships are employed in the export of this article, with some flour, boards, beeswax, &c. We have a good many imports, but as fast as goods arrive, they are bought up for the Army, or for the use of neighbouring States, and therefore continue to bear high prices.

The value of ships has risen in the same enormous proportion with every thing else, and ships that were deemed worth £1,000 twelve months ago, now sell for £3,000, or upwards. Every article belonging to them is also excessively dear, and hard to be got, and the insolence and difficulty of seamen is beyond bearing. In Maryland, Virginia, South-Carolina, and Georgia, they have plenty of valuable produce on hand, but no ships to carry it away, and constant cruisers all along the coast make it very dangerous to send ships from one port to another; so that look which way you will, you find us surrounded with difficulties—in the land service, in the sea service, and in our commerce.

Agriculture and mechanicks have their impediments, by the inlisting of soldiers, and frequent calls on the Militia. In short, nothing but the most arduous exertions, and virtuous conduct in the leaders, seconded by a spirited behaviour in the Army, and a patient endurance of hardships by the people in general, can long support the contest; therefore the Court of France should strike at once, as they will reap an immediate harvest. They may sell their manufactures for any price they please to ask; they will get in payment tobacco, rice, indigo, deer-skins, furs, wheat, flour, iron, beeswax, lumber, fish, oil, whalebone, pot and pearl ashes, and various other articles, and, if they please, here is an ample field to employ their shipping, and raise seamen for their Navy.

I will not enter into any detail of our conduct in Congress, but you may depend on this, that so long as that respectable body persist in the attempt to execute, as well as to deliberate on their business, it never will be done as it ought, and this has been urged many and many a time, by myself and others, but some of them do not like to part with power, or to pay others for doing what they cannot do themselves.

I have Mr. Deane's favour of the 30th of September, to myself, now before me. The letter by the same conveyance from Martinico, under cover of Mr. Bingham's, I sent down to the Committee at Baltimore, and wrote them my mind on the justice of your complaints, for want of intelligence. I had often told it to them before. You know well I was not put in that Committee to carry on the correspondence, but to find out the conveyances. However, I have been obliged to write all the letters that have been written for some time past, but as Colonel Lee, Mr. Hooper, and the Rev. Dr. Witherspoon are now added to the Committee, I shall excuse myself from that task, although I have thought it proper to give you a just state of our affairs at this time, because I do not suppose the Committee will be got fairly together in Baltimore yet, and when they do, it is probable they may not be fond of laying things before you so fully as I have done. Some of us are of very sanguine complexions, and are too apt to flatter ourselves that things are not so bad as they appear to be, or that they will soon mend, &c. Now my notion is, that you, gentlemen Commissioners, should be fairly and fully informed of the true state of affairs, that you may make a proper use of that knowledge, keeping secret what ought to be so, and promulgating what should be known.

Doctor Franklin will see this letter, for whose safe arrival my best wishes have often gone forth; and I embrace this opportunity of assuring him of the high respect and esteem I entertain for him. I also beg my compliments to Mr. Lee, if he is with you; tell him I have the commission, in which he is nominated, ready to send, but it is gone into the country with my papers, or I would send it by this conveyance. My own affairs necessarily detained me here after the departure of Congress, and it is well I staid, as I am obliged to set many things right, that would otherwise be in the greatest confusion. Indeed, I find my presence so very necessary, that I shall remain here until the enemy drive me away.

I have the honour to be, &c., ROBERT MORRIS.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL M'DOUGALL.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 21st December, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am this evening favoured with yours of the 19th, from Chatham. I not only approve of the disposition you made of the three regiments under Colonel Vose, because I think it was a very judicious one, but I had, previous to the receipt of your letter, determined upon exactly the same plan, and had sent orders to Colonel Vose to halt at Morris-Town, that he might afford protection to the well-affected in that neighbourhood, and give spirits to the Militia. If you find your health such that you cannot take an active part where you are, or stay there without further prejudice to it, I would have you return to Peeks-Kill, and there, in conjunction with General George Clinton, take charge of that department, as I have ordered General Heath to join me with as many of the Connecticut and Massachusetts Militia as can be spared.

I think, with you, that though your state of health may require a resignation, that this is not a proper time to make it; our enemies would probably attribute it to the late unfavourable aspect of our affairs, and therefore I would advise you to try whether a little rest might not contribute to the cure of a disorder which is generally brought on by colds and fatigue.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General McDougall.

---

ORDERS TO BRIGADIER-GENERAL MAXWELL.

SIR: Having countermanded the march of the three Eastern regiments under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Vose, and directed them to halt at Morris-Town, in the Jerseys, where I am informed that Colonel Ford, at the head of a body of Militia, has taken post; you are to repair immediately to that place, and take upon you the command, not only of the above regiments, but of the Militia also, and therewith to give all the protection you can to the country, and distress to the enemy, by harassing of them in their quarters, and cutting off their convoys.

You are to be extremely vigilant and watchful to guard against surprises, and to use every means in your power to obtain a knowledge of the enemy's numbers, situations, and designs. If at any time you should discover that they are moving from Brunswick, and that quarter, towards Trenton, or the Delaware in other parts, endeavour, if it can be attempted with a probability of success, to fall upon their rear, and, if nothing more can be done, annoy them in their march. Every piece of intelligence which you may think of importance for me to know, communicate it without loss of time. Keep up the spirits of the Militia as much as possible, and use your influence with the Eastern regiments to continue in service after the term for which they stand engaged expires. If in this you should fail, still keep the Militia together, and render what service you can with them; prevent all you can from joining the enemy, and receiving protections from them, which, from experience, have been found to afford no relief from the rapacious, plundering, ravishing soldier.

Give every encouragement and aid to the recruiting service; let all those who are engaged in that business, above the road leading from Trenton to Brunswick, make your Head-Quarters their place of rendezvous; and that men may be raised as soon as possible, besides the officers appointed by the State of New-Jersey for the established regiments, if you can meet with active, sprightly men, who you think could raise companies, and are fit to command them afterwards, you may authorize them to engage men upon the same terms and for the same time the Continental regiments are raised; but then I cannot agree to take them into pay, or be at any expense, till they have got at least fifty privates, besides non-commissioned officers, inlisted. When this happens, and a certificate of it produced to me from you, the bounty shall be drawn, and the pay of officers and men commence.

To encourage the Captains in this business, they shall have the nominating of their own subalterns, subject, however, to my negative, if I find they have made an improper choice, from local attachments and connections rather than publick good. They will be allowed a dollar and one-third for every recruit for whom certificates are obtained. Fix with the Commissary and Quartermaster upon the modes of supplying your troops with provisions and necessaries before you go.

Given at Head-Quarters, in Bucks County, this 21st day of December, 1776.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Maxwell.

---

ORDERS TO CARPENTER WHARTON, ESQ., ASSISTANT COMMISSARY-GENERAL.

SIR: Lay in provisions for twenty thousand men, at the following places, and in the following quantities: At York, four months; at Lancaster, two ditto; at Mill-Town, ten days.

Besides the provisions at these places, which are to be considered as magazines, you should have some deposited on the roads leading from Lancaster to Winchester, in Virginia, and from the head of the bay to Alexandria, in the same State, for the accommodation of the troops in their march from the Southern Colonies.

You should also so far look round you as to know that there are in the vicinity of Philadelphia, and in the city itself, provisions enough to serve ten thousand men at least six weeks; but there will be no occasion as yet for large purchases or large deposits in this quarter.

Given at Head-Quarters, Bucks County, this 21st December, 1776.

GO. WASHINGTON.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Bucks County, 21st December, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your favours of the 7th and 12th of this instant. The first chiefly relates to your wishes that the troops of the State of Connecticut, whose time expires on the first of January, may, by entreaties and promises of reward, be induced to stay beyond their term. Past experience has repeatedly convinced us that troops, at the most favourable season of the year, and well supplied with every necessary, cannot be prevailed upon to stay a day longer than what they engage for. If that has been the case under the circumstances I have mentioned, it cannot be expected that men worn out with a fatiguing campaign, and in want of even necessary clothing, at the most inclement season of the year, will or can stay beyond their engagement. Indeed, except they would inlist anew, or consent to stay a considerable time, I think they had better go home as fast as possible; for thereby they will have time to have refreshed themselves; and when they have forgot their fatigue, they will probably inlist again time enough to take the field in the spring.

I have felt for our unhappy prisoners all that you express n yours of the 12th, and I have done all in my power to alleviate their distresses. Colonel Miles procured a supply of eight thousand dollars from Congress, to be laid out in necessaries for them, which I hope would afford them some relief in that respect; but whether General Howe can accommodate them better in point of room, I will not determine. To be sure he cannot safely trust them abroad in a country which he has but just taken possession of. I have already sent in all or most of the prisoners that were in the States of Pennsylvania, Jersey, and Maryland, and made a demand of such officers in exchange as I thought were best entitled to a preference, beginning with those taken at Quebeck under Generals Montgomery and Arnold. But General Howe, without paying any regard to my request, sent out such as best pleased him, or who made the most urgent application. I have remonstrated sharply upon this head, and told General Howe, in express terms, that unless he will agree to send out such only as I name, I will not send any more of his prisoners in; but to this letter I have received no answer.

However, that we may lose no time in getting a total exchange carried into execution, I would recommend it to you to send all those in your State immediately to the commanding officer of the British troops at Rhode-Island; taking lists of the names, corps, and ranks of the officers, and number of the privates, which lists must be certified and signed by the eldest prisoner officer, and sent in by him; one of these lists to be immediately after transmitted to me, that I may make a demand of an equal number, and a line should be wrote by you, or some person deputed by you, to General Howe, desiring him not to send any of our people out in exchange for them till I make a requisition.

When I reflect upon what our situation in this quarter will be in ten days from this time, I am almost led to despair. As I said before, I cannot count upon those troops whose time is to expire on the first of January. I am then left with a few Southern regiments, almost reduced to nothing by sickness and fatigue, to oppose the main body of General Howe's Army, laying close upon my front, and most assuredly waiting for the dissolution of our Army to make as easy a conquest of the Province of Pennsylvania as they have done of Jersey. I do not find the Militia of Pennsylvania inclined to give me as much assistance as they are able to do, were they willing; though I am endeavouring to bring them out by every means, and am making use of both threats and persuasions to gain my end. I shall draw the new-inlisted troops together as fast as they can be collected, armed, and accoutred; but much cannot be expected from that source for some time. If the four regiments of Militia from your State, and the six thousand men ordered in by the State of Massachusetts, should arrive at Peekskill, General Heath will have a much larger body of men than he will have any occasion for at that place; and I had determined that they should cover the upper parts of Jersey; but under my present difficulties, I shall order as many as can be spared to proceed this far. The necessity of the times must plead my excuse for calling men so far from home, and at this season of the year, who have an enemy just landed upon their own coasts, and have not even a Continental regiment to assist them; but I trust they will undertake this cheerfully, when they reflect that they cannot insure that liberty which they have so nobly contended for, while our common enemy maintains any footing upon any part of this Continent.

I have the honour to be, &c., Go. Washington.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Camp above Trenton Falls, December 21st, 1776.

Sir: I have been honoured with your favour of the 8th instant. The loss of Rhode-Island gives me much concern, though an event that could not be well guarded against. I am happy that most of the stock had been removed, and wish the cannon could have also been brought away, our want of them being great by reason of our late losses. Notwithstanding this descent, and the intelligence of more ships going down the Sound, I cannot persuade myself that the enemy will attempt any thing capital upon the main; they will most probably confine themselves to the island. But if they have other views, I trust that the succours from the two neighbouring States, with your own force, will be able to baffle their most vigorous efforts and prevent the progress of their arms. It would give me infinite pleasure if the situation of our affairs in this quarter would allow me to afford you the assistance I could wish; but it will not. All in my power to do, I have done. Upon the first intelligence that a fleet was going down the Sound with troops on board, I wrote to Generals Spencer and Arnold to repair to the eastward, and to pursue such measures as circumstances should seem to require. My letter to General Arnold did not get to hand, owing to the uncertainty of his route, till he had almost reached this. He sets out to-morrow morning, and I doubt not these two gentlemen will render you many essential services. In respect to the other aid, I cannot give you. The Delaware now divides our small force from General Howe's Army, a large part of which is cantoned in the neighbouring towns, which, from appearances and many concurring reports, is only waiting an opportunity to pass. As soon as the ice is formed they will try to effect it. General Howe's object, beyond all question, is to possess Philadelphia; and I could heartily wish there was not too much grounds for some disagreeable apprehensions on that head. Without more vigourous exertions on the part of the people than what have appeared of late, I see but little to prevent him from accomplishing his purposes. In the course of a few days, the last of this month, the force I now have, by no means equal to his, will, by the impolicy and fatal system of short inlistments, be reduced to a mere handful, unless the Militia can be prevailed on to give their aid. As yet but very few, those of the city excepted, have got in motion, notwithstanding the most pressing solicitations, and apparent intentions of the enemy to invade their State and seize their capital. How things will turn out, the event must determine; at present the prospect is gloomy.

I have the honour to be, &c., Go. Washington.

To Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.

---

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Camp above Trenton Falls, December the 21st, 1776.

Sir: I have been honoured with your favour of the 8th instant. The loss of the island of Rhode-Island gives me much concern, though an event that could not be well guarded against. I am happy that most of the stock had been removed, and wish the cannon had been also brought away, our want of 'em, by reason of our great losses, being great. Notwithstanding this descent, and the intelligence of more ships going down the Sound, I incline to think the enemy will not attempt any thing capital upon the main; they will most probably confine themselves to the island. But if they have other views, I trust that the succours from the two neighbouring States, with your own force, will be able to baffle them, or prevent the progress of their arms, their most vigourous efforts. It would give me infinite pleasure if the situation of our affairs in this quarter would allow me to afford you the assistance I could wish, but it will not. All in my power to do, I have done. Upon the first intelligence that a fleet was going down the Sound with troops on board, I wrote to Generals Spencer and Arnold to repair to the eastward, and to pursue such measures as circumstances should seem to require. My letter to General Arnold did not get to hand, owing to the uncertainty of his route, till he had almost reached this. He sets out to-morrow morning, and I doubt not these two gentlemen will render you many essential services. Other aid I cannot give you. The Delaware now only divides our small force from a large part of General Howe's Army, cantoned in the neighbouring towns, and which, from appearances and many concurring reports, is only waiting an opportunity to pass. As soon as the ice is formed they will try to effect it. General Howe's object, beyond all doubt, is to possess Philadelphia; and I heartily wish there was not too much ground for some disagreeable apprehensions on that head. Without more vigourous exertions on the part of the people than what have appeared of late, I see but little to prevent him from accomplishing his purposes. In the course of a few days, the last of this month, the force I now have, by no means equal to his, will, by the impolicy and fatal system of short inlistments, be reduced to a mere handful, unless the Militia can be prevailed on to give their aid. As yet but very few, those of the city excepted, (and who have turned out in a spirited manner,) have got in motion, notwithstanding the most pressing solicitations, and apparent intention of the enemy to invade their State and seize their capital. How things will turn out, the event must determine; at present the prospect is gloomy.

The distresses of our prisoners in the hands of the enemy give me much concern; their sufferings, by all accounts, are very great. Ever since a cartel was settled between General Howe and myself, I have been endeavouring to effect an exchange as far as circumstances would admit of; but my attempts on this head have been attended with but little success. For the prisoners belonging to the British Army, and who have been sent in from Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Maryland, General Howe, or rather his Commissary, has undertaken, of his mere motion, and contrary to my express requisition, to return a number belonging to us who were not called for, and whose releasement should have been postponed till after that of many others. I have wrote to General Howe upon the subject, and presume in future that none will be sent out but those who are named by me. That this business may not remain an object of further delay, I would take the liberty of recommending that all the prisoners in your State be immediately sent in to the commanding officer of the British troops on Rhode-Island, taking two exact lists of the names, corps, and ranks of the officers, and the number of privates, signed by the officer of the highest rank, one to be sent in with him, accompanied by a line to General Howe, that the particular prisoners belonging to us, and to be received in exchange, will be required by me. The other list you will transmit me immediately, that I may make the requisition.

I have the honour to be, with much respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. Washington.

To the General Court of Massachusetts-Bay.

[The same to the New-Hampshire Convention.]

---

GENERAL GREENE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 26th.]

Corell's Ferry, December 21st, 1776.

Sir: Although I am far from thinking the American cause desperate, yet I conceive it to be in a critical situation. The enemy in the heart of the country; the disaffected daily increasing; the Continental money losing its currency; the time for which the troops stand engaged almost ready to expire; very few inlisted upon the new establishment; the tide of publick sentiment at a stand, and ready to run through different channels; the people refusing to supply the Army, under various pretences, but evidently from a disaffection to the cause and to the currency, are combined evils, calculated to pave the way for General Howe's advances; who, having cantoned his troops advantageously, stands prepared to take advantage of those circumstances which, I am sorry to say, afford him but too favourable a prospect. It is necessary, in addition to this disagreeable train of evils, that the different corps of officers who are discontented and unsatisfied, either from a real or supposed injury in their appointments from the different States, should be reconciled, that recruiting may go on with spirit, that there should be an augmentation of our force and a larger train of artillery.

Effectually to remedy those evils, and oppose the enemy; to put the recruiting service in a favourable train; to establish the artillery and elaboratory upon a proper footing; to check the disaffected, and call out assistance; to give a currency to the Continental money, and form the necessary magazines, greater powers must be lodged in the hands of the General than he has ever yet exercised. It is impossible, in his present situation, and the short time he has to prepare for the ensuing campaign, for him to be in readiness so early as General Howe will take the field, unless you delegate to him full power to take such measures as he may find necessary to promote the establishment of the new Army. Time will not admit nor circumstances allow of a reference to Congress.

I can see no evil nor danger to the States in delegating such powers to the General, reserving to yourselves the right of confirming or repealing the measures. The General should have power to appoint officers to inlist at large. This is no time to be particular about proportions, or attentive to economy. The measure of our force should be the extent of our funds.

We have a formidable enemy to oppose, whose progress can only be checked by a superiour force; and however disagreeable the reflections, this is a serious truth, that the present existence of the civil depends upon the military power. I am no advocate for the extensions of military power; neither would I advise it at present, but from the fullest conviction of its being absolutely necessary. Remember the policy of the Romans, a people as tenacious of their liberties as any on earth. When their State was invaded, they delegated full powers to exert their whole forces. The state of war is so uncertain, dependent upon so many contingencies, a day, nay, an hour, is so important in the crisis of publick affairs, that it would be folly to wait for relief from the deliberative councils of legislative bodies. The virtue of the people, at such an hour, is not to be trusted; and I can assure you that the General will not exceed his powers, although he may sacrifice the cause. There never was a man that might be more safely trusted, nor a time when there was a louder call. If you intend to support your independence, you must not be too delicate in the choice of means.

Examples are daily made by General Howe, of our friends who fall in his way, while those who are disaffected to our cause are suffered to remain in peace and quiet amongst us. Many who are now well affected will be induced, from the risk and danger on the one side, and the apparent security on the other, to change their sentiments. A discretionary power to punish the disaffected is necessary. The Militia have refused to turn out, when there has been the greatest want of their assistance, and nothing but such a power can ever compel them. If the refusal of the Continental money, and the withholding of the necessary supplies from the Army, for want of such a power in the General, are to pass unfurnished, the one will put it out of our power to pay, and the other to support, the troops, and consequently must lay the foundations of all oppositions.

I am, with due respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

Nath. Greene.

---

GENERAL GREENE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Coryell's Ferry, December 21st, 1776.

Dear Sir: By your letter to General Washington, I find the British troops have landed on Rhode-Island. Although I am sorry my own country should be subject to their ravages, yet I rejoice that they are surrounded by a people who are united, and firmly determined in opposition. You may be subject to a partial evil, but America cannot fail to reap the advantage. You think you are greatly infested with Tories and disaffected, but there is but the shadow of disaffection with you to what there is here. The Friends, or Quakers, are almost to a man disaffected. Many have the effrontery to refuse the Continental currency. This line of conduct cannot fail of drawing down the resentment of the people upon them. The fright and disaffection was so great in the Jerseys, that in our retreat of one hundred and odd miles, we were never joined by more than a hundred men. I dare say, had that Army been in New-England, we should not have been under the necessity of retreating twenty miles. We are now on the west side of the Delaware, our force, though small, collected together; but small as it is, I hope to give the enemy a stroke in a few days. Should fortune favour the attack, perhaps it may put a stop to General Howe's progress. His ravages in the Jerseys exceed all description. Men slaughtered; women ravished; mothers and daughters ravished in presence of the husbands and sons, who were obliged to be spectators to their brutal conduct. I thereby, notwithstanding the general disaffection of a certain order of people, the Army will fill up. Should that be the case, nothing is to be feared.

By a vessel just arrived from France, with a valuable cargo, we learn a French war is inevitable. Short inlistments has been, in a great measure, the source of all the misfortunes that we labour under, though, thank God! but few to what we at first expected. The Congress, in the infancy of politicks, could not be brought to believe many serious truths. By attending to speculative principles rather than real life, their maxims in war have been founded in folly. However, experience ripens judgment, and enables us to correct many an errour in business that at first we could not conceive of; and I don't doubt the Congress in time will be as able politicians in military matters as they are in civil government.

The Eastern Delegates made application to General Washington for me to come to Rhode-Island, but the General would not consent. He thinks more is to be trusted to the virtue of your people than to the force of this country. As the enemy have got possession of Rhode-Island, and done all the mischief they can, it will not be bad policy to let them remain in quiet until spring. To attempt any against them, unless you are sure of success, will be a very dangerous manœuvre. 'Tis an endless task to attempt to cover all the country. You must drive back the stock from the shores, and make a disposition to cover capital objects. By too great a division of your force, you'll be incapable of making any considerable opposition whenever they may think proper to make a descent. But it is my opinion they will be peaceable if you will; for, from the best accounts we can get, they consist of the invalids of the Army. They may attempt to plunder the shores, but nothing more than that this winter; for I am confident they have no hopes of penetrating into the country. If they make any descent, it will be against Providence, to seize the stores and burn the town. This is very probable, as the Tories will endeavour, in Newport, to spirit them on to such an attempt; but unless it is already done, you have nothing to fear.

I am told some malicious reports propagated industriously about me, respecting the loss of the baggage and stores at Fort Lee. They are as malicious as they are untrue. I can bring very good vouchers for my conduct in every instance; and have the satisfaction to have it approved by the General under whom I serve. Every thing was got off from that place that could be, with the roads and wagons we had to move the stores with. The evacuation of Fort Lee was determined upon several days before the enemy landed above us, and happily all the most valuable stores were away. The enemy's publication of the cannon and stores then taken is a grand falsehood; not an article of military stores was left there, or nothing worth mentioning.

The Congress have removed to Baltimore. General Spencer and General Arnold are coming to take the command at Rhode-Island. Arnold is a fine, spirited fellow, and an active General. I hope they keep the enemy at bay. My respects to your family, and all my Providence friends.

Believe me to be, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

NATH. GREENE.

---

GENERAL DICKINSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Yardly's Farm, 21 December, 1776.

SIR: Two persons returned yesterday from the Jerseys, who inform me that there is a very great body of the enemy in and around Brunswick, but they could not ascertain the number. One of them says they were sending off provisions, &c., towards New-York. They made strict inquiry about boats, but could not hear of any preparations of the kind.

Another person from Crosswicks informs me that he saw a scow and four batteaus above the bridge, belonging to Lewis's Mill, which he should have brought off with a small party, but that there was a guard of one hundred Hessians posted at the bridge. He is of opinion those boats were not collected by the enemy, but accidentally left there. A negro fellow, whose master lives in Trenton, whom I have just seen, informs me they are building boats at Henry's Mills, a mile from town, and that he was told by the soldiers there were many boats coming from Brunswick. What degree of credibility is to be given to this information I will not determine. I have endeavoured to prevail with some intelligent person to go down into Trenton, but hitherto without success. If 'tis agreeable to your Excellency, I will offer fifteen or twenty dollars to a good hand, who will undertake it, if such a one can be found. People here are extremely fearful of the inhabitants at Trenton betraying them.

I have delivered your Excellency's message (communicated to me by Colonel Cary) to the officers and men within my department, and hope it will have the desired effect.

Captain Anderson, with his party, returned yesterday, with the loss of one man taken, and two or three missing. Nothing material. The snow hastened his return.

I have the honour to be, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

PHILEMON DICKINSON.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Paramus, December 21st, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have received the honour of yours of the 16th and 18th instant.

I have the pleasure to acquaint your Excellency that on the 19th instant, a detachment of our troops, consisting partly of Continental troops, and partly of the Militia of Orange and Ulster Counties, having marched down to the English Neighbourhood in the night, deceived the sentinel, and surprised the out-guard of Colonel Buskirk's regiment of new-raised troops, took a Sergeant and seventeen men prisoners, and sixteen new King's muskets, which have been brought safely to this place; after which they repulsed their main guard. We lost one man, and the enemy are supposed to have lost four. I shall order these rascally prisoners under close confinement.

The same evening, one Mr. Honeywell, of Philipsburgh, who was lately taken prisoner by the enemy, came from New-York. He is a gentleman of credit, and one of the Committee of the town. He informs us that General Howe is lately returned to New-York, as are the Hessians who lately went to Rhode Island. But that the British troops are still there; that there are a great many troops now in the city; that an embarkation of a body of them is soon to take place, and that it was supposed that General Howe was returned on that account; that they talk of making a movement to Courtlandt's Manor and Peekskill. This corresponds with a line which I lately received, which I take the liberty to enclose.

I am very glad that your Excellency has thought fit to order Colonel Vose to remain in the neighbourhood of Chatham. It was highly necessary. A body of the enemy are at Aquackanuck, said to be from two hundred and fifty to four hundred, with two pieces of cannon.

I shall march for Peekskill to-morrow morning. General George Clinton, with about one thousand of the Militia of Orange and Ulster Counties, ordered out by the Convention of the State of New-York, is to guard for the present at this post and the passes of the Highlands on this side of Hudson's river.

The brigantine which I mentioned in my last to have sailed from the dock at Hackensack, came to anchor about seven miles below the town; a party of our men went down and boarded her, and attempted to bring her up, but the wind being fresh it could not be effected. They then began to unload her into the boats; seven firkins of butter, one or two trunks, some wine, &c., were brought off; and upon return of the boats a body of the enemy came down, fired upon, and drove our people off, and took possession of the vessel. We took three or four seamen. I had given orders to the officer, in case of necessity, to set her on fire, but in the hurry and confusion he did not do it. She had on board a great variety of furniture, hay, &c. On opening one of the trunks, we find it to contain sundry articles of plate, inventory of which is enclosed. It is said to belong to one Mr. Yates, and that he is friendly. The same is said as to the effects which were on board the other vessels; but it seems a little extraordinary that our friends should convey their treasure into the hands of our enemies. I did not encumber myself with the furniture, as we had not wagons to fetch it away; but the provisions and liquors I have secured, and the sails and cordage of the vessels. The plate I shall deliver into the hands of the Assistant Quartermaster-General. I solicit your Excellency's opinion and direction respecting it. I also found Continental property scattered in divers houses, and at a store where it was deposited, as I was informed, for the enemy, about one hundred and sixty barrels of flour. In another store, twenty-one barrels of pork, and in another, about thirty hogsheads of rum, gin, &c. The last two articles is said to be private property. I have brought off about one half of it. There are three or four claimers, one of whom we have in custody. But be the property whose it may, I thought it my duty to secure it. The remainder I fear will fall into the hands of the enemy, as we have not teams to secure it. I have sent the flour and pork to Ramapaugh.

The Colonels of the regiments here are uneasy on account of the pay of their regiments, as the hazard of getting their abstracts to your Excellency (one of which has been already taken) and the money back from the Paymaster is very great. They request me to lay the matter before your Excellency, and crave some mode of relief.

Upon my arrival at Peekskill, I shall endeavour to make such a disposition of the troops which I may have the honour to command, as may appear most expedient to answer the purposes which your Excellency is pleased to point out, and hope it will be such as may be approved by you. I shall cheerfully consult and coöperate with General Lincoln in all matters of importance.

Mr. Honeywell further informs that the talk in New-York was that Russia, Hanover, and Portugal, would aid Great Britain; but that they were doubtful of France; that they thought they should greatly distress, but never subdue America; that the great numbers of prisoners in the city and their extreme sufferings will induce your Excellency to submit to terms of accommodation; that three rooms in the old City Hall are fitting up for General Lee, with locks and bars, &c.

I have the honour to be, with great respect and esteem, your Excellency's most humble servant,

W. Heath.

His Excellency General Washington.

---

Inventory of Sundries taken at Hackensack, in a large chest going to New-York.

December 17th, 1776.

4 French plated candlesticks, with sockets.
1 very large silver tureen.
3 large silver cake-dishes.
3 silver salvers.
1 silver beaker, very large.
1 pair silver cups.
1 pair do. gilt.
1 handsome silver branch.
1 large handsome silver tankard.
1 large silver coffee-pot.
1 do. do. butter-boat.
4 silver pickle-stands.
1 sugar-dish.
2 small silver salvers.
1 complete silver standish.
4 silver labels for wine.
1 large tureen.
1 silver trowell.
6 silver skewers.
2 silver beer-cups.
2 do. gilt do.
4 large soup-spoons.
4 gravy do.
8 silver salts.
8 salt-spoons, and 1 pair sugar-tongs.
A red case, supposed to contain a silver-plated tea-urn.

---

The bearer hereof, Mr. Sobriski, is a most staunch friend, and has suffered much. He was the guide to our detachment that went to English Neighbourhood, and is well acquainted with all parts of this country, and is deserving of notice and respect.

W. Heath.

---

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.

New-York, 21st December, 1776.

My Lord: Captain Emmerick, who has been very useful to me in the course of this campaign, will have the honour of presenting this letter to your Lordship, on his return to Britain, in order to raise a corps of German Chasseurs.

If your Lordship is pleased to recommend such a measure to his Majesty, and it should meet with approbation, I have reason to believe the corps would be well commanded by Captain Emmerick, and can assure that troops of this class are much wanted, and would render essential services in the course of the war.

I have the honour to be, your Lordship's most faithful and most obedient servant,

W. Howe.

---

GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

At a General Court-Martial, held by order of Major-General Heath, to try Lieutenant Nowell, of Colonel Prescott's regiment, arrested for unlawfully taking seven dollars in paper currency from a traveller, on the publick road near Pirammus Church, in the evening following the 19th of instant, December, and such other prisoners as shal be brought before them. Colonel Wyllys, President.

Members.

| | |
|---|---|
| Lieut. Col. Prentice, | Capt. Patch, |
| Major Holdrage, | Capt. Wright, |
| Capt. Petibone, | Capt. Mills, |
| Capt. Sill, | Capt. Ealy, |
| Capt. Derby, | Capt. Galop, |
| Capt. Barns, | Capt. Brewster. |

Captain Hyde, Judge Advocate.

The prisoner, Lieutenant Nowell, being arraigned to the crime, plead Not guilty.

Benjamin Lee, witness, being produced, under oath saith, that John Bardan (the traveller from whom Lieutenant Nowell had taken the money) being asked what he intended to do with the Rebels, said he intended to kill them as fast as he could; but being stopped, said he would give him any thing to make up; further, said Lee says he heard the said Lieutenant Nowell tell said Bardan that he might go if he would give him twenty or twenty-four shillings, and that he see said Bardan give said Nowell money, and that said Nowell hurried said Bardan away. Further said Lee saith not.

